Or it will ſeek me in another place,
And find me worſe provided.

Wife. O flye to Scotland,
Till that the Nobles, and the armed Commons,
Have of their Puiſſance made a little taſte.

Lady. If they get ground, and vantage of the King,
Then joyn you with them, like a Rib of Steel,
To make Strength ſtronger. But, for all our loves,
Firſt let them try themſelves. So did your Son,
He was ſo ſuffer'd; ſo came I a Widow:
And never ſhall have length of Life enough,
To rain upon Remembrance with mine Eyes,
That it may grow, and ſprout, as high as Heaven,
For Recordation to my Noble Husband.

Nor. Come, come, go in with me: 'tis with my Mind
As with the Tyde, ſwell'd up unto his height,
That makes a ſtill-ſtand, running neither way.
Fain would I go to meet the Arch-Biſhop,
But many a thouſand Reaſons hold me back.
I will reſolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till Time and Vantage crave my company. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter two Drawers.

1. Drawer. What haſt thou brought there? Apple-Johns? Thou know'ſt Sir John cannot endure an Apple-John.

2. Draw. Thou ſay'ſt true: the Prince once ſet a Diſh of Apple-Johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns: and, putting off his Hat, ſaid, I will now take my leave of theſe ſix drie, round, old-wither'd Knights. It anger'd him to the heart: but he hath forgot that.

1. Draw. Why then cover, and ſet them down: and ſee if thou canſt finde out Sneaks Noyſe; Miſtris Tear-ſheet would fain have ſome Muſick.

2. Draw. Sirra, here will be the Prince, and Maſter Poins, anon: and they will put on two of our Jerkins, and Aprons, and Sir John muſt not know of it. Bardolph hath brought word.

1. Draw. Then here will be old Utis: it be an excellent ſtratagem.

2. Draw. I'le ſee if I can find out Sneak. Exit.

Enter Hoſteſſe, and Dol.

Hoſt. Sweet-heart, me thinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your Pulſidge beats as extraordinarily, as heart would deſire; and your Colour (I warrant you) is as red as any Roſe: But you have drunk too much Canaries, and that's a marvellous ſearching Wine; and it perfumes the blood, ere we can ſay what's this. How do you now?

Dol. Better then I was: Hem.

Hoſt. Why that was well ſaid: A good heart's worth Gold. Look, here comes Sir John.

Enter Falſtaffe.

Fal. When Arthur firſt in Court--(empty the Jordan) and was a worthy King: How now Miſtris Dol.

Hoſt. Sick of a Calme: yea, good-ſooth.

Falſt. So is her Sect: if they be once in a Calme, they are ſick.

Dol. You muddy Raſcall, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat Raſcalls, Miſtris Dol.

Dol. I make them? Gluttony and Diſeaſes make them, I make them not.

Fal. If the Cook make the Gluttony, you help to make the Diſeaſes (Dol) we catch of you (Dol) we catch of you: Grant that, my poor Vertue, grant that.

Dol. I marry, our Chains, and our Jewels.

Falſt. Your Brooches, Pearls, and Owches: For to ſerve bravely, is to come halting off: you know to come off the Breach, with his Pike bent bravely, and to Surgery bravely; to venture upon the charg'd-Chambers bravely.

Hoſt. Why is this the olde faſhion: you two never meet, but you fall to ſome diſcord: you are both (in good troth) as Rheumatick as two drie Toſtes, you cannot one bear with anothers Confirmities. What the good-yere? One muſt bear, and that muſt be you: you are the weaker Veſſell, as they ſay, the emptier Veſſell.

Dol. Can a weak empty Veſſell bear ſuch a huge full Hogs-head? There's a whole Merchants Venture of Burdeux ſtuffe in him: you have not ſeen a Hulk better ſtuft in the Hold. Come, I'le be friends with thee, Jack: Thou art going to the Warrs, and whether I ſhall ever ſee thee again, or no, there is no body cares.

Enter Drawer.

Draw. Sir, Ancient Piſtol is below, and would ſpeak with you.

Dol. Hang him, ſwaggering Raſcall, let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouth'dſt Rogue in England.

Hoſt. If he ſwagger, let him not come here: I muſt live amongſt my Neighbours, I'le no ſwaggerers: I am in good name, and fame, with the very beſt: ſhut the door, there comes no ſwaggerers here: I have not liv'd all this while, to have ſwaggering now: ſhut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Do'ſt thou hear, Hoſteſſe?

Hoſt. 'Pray you pacifie your ſelf (Sir John) there comes no Swaggerers here.

Fal. Do'ſt

Falſt. Do'ſt thou hear? it is mine Ancient.

Hoſt. Tilly-fally (Sir John) never tell me, your ancient Swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Maſter Tiſick the Deputy, the other day: and as he ſaid to me, it was no longer ago then Wedneſday laſt: Neighbour Quickly (ſaies he;) Maſter Domb, our Miniſter, was by then: Neighbour Quickly (ſaies he) receive thoſe that are Civill; for (ſaith he) you are in an ill Name: now he ſaid ſo, I can tell whereupon: for (ſaies he) you are an honeſt Woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what Gueſts you receive: Receive (ſaies he) no ſwaggering Companions. There comes none here. You would bleſſe you to hear what he ſaid. No, I'le no Swaggerers.

Falſt. He's no Swaggerer (Hoſteſs:) a tame Cheater, he: you may ſtroke him as gently, as a Puppy Greyhound: he will not ſwagger with a Barbary Hen: if her feathers turn back in any ſhew of reſiſtance. Call him up (Drawer.)

Hoſt. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honeſt man my houſe, nor no Cheater: but I do not love ſwaggering; I am the worſe when one ſayes, ſwaggerer: Feel Maſters, how I ſhake: look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, Hoſteſſe.

Hoſt. Do I? yea, in very truth do I, if it were an Aſpen Leafe: I cannot abide Swaggerers.

Enter Piſtoll, and Bardolph, and his Boy.

Piſt. 'Save you, Sir John.

Fal. Welcome Ancient Piſtol. Here (Piſtol) I charge you with a Cup of Sack: do you diſcharge upon mine Hoſteſſe.

Piſt. I will diſcharge upon her (Sir John) with two Bullets.

Falſt. She is Piſtoll-proof (Sir) you ſhall hardly offend her.

Hoſt. Come, I'le drink no Proofs, nor no Bullets: I will drink no more then will do me good, for no mans pleaſure, I.

Piſt. Then to you (Miſtris Dorothie) I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me; I ſcorn you (ſcurvy Companion) What? you poor, baſe, raſcally, cheating, lack-Linnen-Mate: away you mouldy Rogue, away, I am meat for your Maſter.

Piſt. I know you, Miſtris Dorothy.

Dol. Away you Cut-purſe Raſcall, you filthy Bung, away: By this Wine, I'le thruſt my Knife in your mouldy Chaps, if you play the ſawcy Cuttle with me. Away you Bottle-Ale Raſcall, you Basket-hilt ſtale Jugler, you. Since when, I pray you, Sir? what, with two Points on your ſhoulder? much.

Piſt. I will murther your Ruffe, for this.

Hoſt. No, good Captain Piſtol: not here, ſweet Captain.

Dol. Captain? thou abominable damn'd Cheater, art thou not aſham'd to be call'd Captain? If Captains were of my mind, they would trunchion you out, for taking their Names upon you, before you have earn'd them. You a Captain? you ſlave, for what? for tearing a poor Whores Ruffe in a Bawdy-houſe? He a Captain? hang him Rogue, he lives upon mouldy ſtew'd-Pruines, and dry'd Cakes. A Captain? Theſe Villains will make the word Captain odious: Therefore Captains had need look to it.

Bard. Pray thee go down, good Ancient.

Fal. Hark the hither Miſtris Dol.

Piſt. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporall Bardolph, I could tear her: I'le be reveng'd on her.

Piſt. I'le ſee her damn'd firſt: to Pluto's damn'd Lake, to the Infernall Deep, where Erebus and Tortures vilde alſo. Hold Hook and Line, ſay I: Down: down Doggs, down Fates: have we not Hiren here?

Hoſt. Good Captain Peeſel be quiet, it is very late: I beſeek you now, aggravate your Choler.

Piſt. Theſe be good humors indeed. Shall Pack-Horſes, and hollow-pamper'd Jades of Aſia, which cannot go but thirty miles a day, compare with Cæſar, and with Canniball, and Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus, and let the Welkin roar: ſhall we fall foul for Toyes?

Hoſt. By my troth, Captain, theſe are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good Ancient: this will grow to a Brawl anon.

Piſt. Die men, like Dogs; give Crowns like Pinns: Have we not Hiren here?

Hoſt. On my word (Captain) there's none ſuch here. What the good-yere, do you think I would deny her? I pray be quiet.

Piſt. Then feed, and be fat (my fair Calipolis.) Come, give me ſome Sack, Si fortune me tormente, ſperato me contente. Fear we broad-ſides? No, let the Fiend give fire: Give me ſome Sack: and Sweet-heart lye thou there: Come we to full Points here; and are &cetera's nothing?

Fal. Piſtol, I would be quiet.

Piſt. Sweet Knight, kiſſe thy Neaffe: what? we have ſeen the ſeven ſtarrs.

Dol. Thruſt him down ſtayers, I cannot endure ſuch a Fuſtian Raſcall.

Piſt. Thruſt him down ſtayers? know we not Galloway Naggs?

Fal. Quoit him down (Bardolph) like a ſhove-groat ſhilling: nay, if he do nothing but ſpeak nothing, he ſhall be nothing here.

Bard. Come get you down ſtayers.

Piſt. What ſhall we have Inciſion? ſhall we embrew? then Death rock me aſleep, abridge my dolefull dayes: why then let grievous, gaſtly, gaping Wounds, untwine the Sifters three: Come Atropos, I ſay.

Hoſt. Here's good ſtuff toward.

Fal. Give me my Rapier, Boy.

Dol. I prethee, Jack, I prethee do not draw.

Falſt. Get you down ſtayers.

Hoſt. Here's a goodly tumult: I'le forſwear keeping houſe, before I'le be in theſe tirrits, and frights. So: Murther I warrant now. Alas, put up your naked Weapons put up your naked Weapons.

Dol. I prethee, Jack, be quiet, the Raſcall is gone: ah, you whorſon little valiant Villain, you.

Hoſt. Are you not hurt i'th' Groyn? me thought he made a ſhrewd Thruſt at your Belly.

Fal. Have you turn'd him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, Sir, the Raſcall's drunk: you have hurt him (Sir) in the ſhoulder.

Fal. A Raſcall to brave me.

Dol. Ah, you ſweet little Rogue, you: alas, poor Ape, how thou ſweat'ſt? come, let me wipe thy Face: Come on, you whorſon Chops: Ah Rogue, I love thee: Thou art art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon; and ten times better then the nine Worthies: ah Villain.

Falſt. A raſcally Slave, I will toſſe the Rogue in a Blanket.

Dol. Do, if thou dar'ſt for thy heart: if thou doo'ſt i'le canvas thee between a pair of ſheets.

Enter Muſick.

Pag. The Muſick is come, Sir.

Fal. Let them play; play Sirs. Sit on my Knee, Dol. A Raſcall, bragging Slave: the Rogue fled from me like Quick-ſilver.

Dol. And thou followd'ſt him like a Church: thou whorſon little tydie Bartholmew Bore-pigge, when wilt thou leave fighting on dayes, and foyning on nights, and begin to patch up thine old Body for Heaven?

Enter the Prince and Poins diſgnis'd.

Fal. Peace (good Dol) do not ſpeak like a Deaths-head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the Prince of?

Fal. A good ſhallow young-fellow: he would have made a good Pantler, he would have chipp'd Bread well.

Dol. They ſay Poins hath a good Wit.

Fal. He a good Wit? hang him Baboon, his Wit is as thick as Tewksbury Muſtard: there is no more conceit in him, then is in a Mallet.

Dol. Why doth the Prince love him ſo then?

Fal. Becauſe their Legs are both of a bigneſſe: and he playes at Quoits well, and eats Conger and Fennell, and drinks of Candles ends for Flap-dragongs, and rides the wild-Mare with the Boyes, and jumps upon Joyn'd-ſtooles, and ſwears with a good grace, and wears his Boot very ſmooth, like unto the Signe of the Legge; and breeds no bate with telling of diſcreet ſtories: and ſuch other Gamboll faculties he hath, that ſhew a weak Minde, and an able Body, for the which the Prince admits him; for the Prince himſelf is ſuch another: the weight of an hair will turn the Scales between their Haberde pois.

Prince. Would not this Nave of a Wheel have his Ears cut off?

Poin. Let us beat him before his Whore.

Prin. Look, if the wither'd Elder hath not his Poll claw'd like a Parrot.

Poin. Is it not ſtrange, that Deſire ſhould ſo many years out-live performance?

Fal. Kiſſe me Dol.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in Conjunction? What ſayes the Almanack to that?

Poin. And look whether the fiery Trigon, his Man, be not liſping to his Maſters old Tables, his Note-Book, his Counſell-keeper?

Fal. Thou do'ſt give me flatt'ring Buſſes.

Dol. Nay truly, I Kiſſe thee with moſt conſtant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better, then I love ere a ſcurvy young Boy of them all.

Fal. What Stuffe wilt thou have a Kirtle of? I ſhall receive Money on Thurſday: thou ſhalt have a Cappe to morrow. A merry Song, come: it grows late, we will to Bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. Thou wilt ſet me a weeping, if thou ſay'ſt ſo: prove that ever I dreſſe my ſelf handſome, till thy return: Well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some Sack, Francis.

Prin. Poin. Anon, anon, Sir.

Fal. Ha? a Baſtard Son of the Kings? And art not thou Poins, his Brother?

Prin. Why thou Globe of ſinfull Continents, what a Life doſt thou lead?

Fal. A better then thou: I am a Gentleman, thou art a Drawer.

Prin. Very true, Sir: and I come to draw you out by the Ears.

Hoſt. Oh, the Lord preſerve thy good Grace: Welcome to London. Now heaven bleſſe that ſweet Face of thine: What are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whorſon mad Compound of Majeſty: by this light Fleſh, and corrupt Bloud, thou art welcome.

Prin. How? you fat Fool, I ſcorn you.

Poin. My Lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prin. You whorſon Candle-myne you, how vilely did you ſpeak of me even now, before this honeſt, vertuous civill Gentlewoman?

Hoſt. 'Bleſſing on your good heart, and ſo ſhe is by my troth.

Fal. Didſt thou hear me?

Prince. Yes: and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gads-hill: you knew I was at your back, and ſpoke it on purpoſe, to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no: not ſo: I did not think, thou waſt within hearing.

Prin. I ſhall drive you then to confeſſe the wilfull abuſe, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuſe (Hal) on mine Honor, no abuſe,

Prin. Not to diſpraiſe me? and call me Pantler, and Bread-chopper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abuſe (Hal.)

Poin. No abuſe?

Fal. No abuſe (Ned) in the World: honeſt Ned, none. I diſprais'd him before the Wicked, that the Wicked might not fall in love with him: In which doing, I have done the part of a carefull Friend, and true Subject, and thy Father is to give me thanks for it. No abuſe (Hal:) none (Ned) none; no Boyes none.

Prin. See now whether pure Fear, and entire Cowardiſe, doth not make thee wrong this vertuous Gentlewoman, to cloſe with us? Is ſhe of the Wicked? Is thine Hoſteſſe here, of the Wicked? Or is the Boy of the Wicked? Or honeſt Bardolp (whoſe Zeal burns in his Noſe) of the Wicked?

Poin. Anſwer, thou dead Elme, anſwer.

Fal. The Fiend hath prickt down Bardolph irrecoverable, and his face is Lucifers Privy-Kitchin, where he doth nothing but roaſt Mault-Wormes: for the Boy, there is a good Angell about him, but the Devill out-bids him too.

Prin. For the Women?

Fal. For one of them, ſhe is in Hell already, and burnes poore ſouls: for the other, I owe her Money; and whether ſhe be damn'd for that, I know not.

Hoſt. No I warrant you.

Fal. No,

Falſt. No. I think thou art not: I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another Indictment upon thee, for ſuffering fleſh to be eaten in thy houſe, contrary to the Law, for the which I think thou wilt howle.

Hoſt. All Victuallers do ſo: What is a Joynt of Mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prin. You, Gentlewoman.

Dol. What ſayes your Grace?

Falſt. His Grace ſayes that, which his fleſh rebells againſt.

Hoſt. Who knocks ſo loud at the door? Look to the door there, Francis?

Enter Peto.

Prin. Peto, how now? what news?

Peto. The King, your Father, is at Weſtminſter,
And there twenty weak and wearied Poſts,
Come from the North: and as I came along,
I met, and over-took a dozen Captains,
Bare-headed, ſweating, knocking at the Taverns,
And asking every one for Sir John Falſtaffe.

Prin. By Heaven (Poins) I feele me much to blame,
So idly to prophane the precious time,
When Tempeſt of Commotion, like the South
Borne with black Vapour, doth begin to melt,
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.
Give me my Sword, and Cloak:
Falſtaffe, good night. Exit.

Falſt. Now comes in the ſweeteſt Morſell of the night, and we muſt hence, and leave it unpickt. More knocking at the door? How now? what's the matter?

Bard. You muſt away to the Court, Sir, preſently,
A dozen Captains ſtay at the door for you.

Falſt. Pay the Muſitians, Sirra: farewell Hoſteſſe, farewell Dol. You ſee (my good Wenches) how men of Merit are ſought after: the undeſerver may ſleep, when the man of Action is cal'd on. Farewell, good Wenches: if I be not ſent away poſt, I will ſee you again, ere I goe.

Dol. I cannot ſpeak: if my heart be not ready to burſt. Well (ſweet Jack) have a care of thy ſelf.

Falſt. Farewell, farewell. Exit.

Hoſt. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee theſe twenty nine years, come Peſcod-time: but an honeſter, and true-hearted man-Well, fare thee well.

Bard. Miſtris Tear-ſheet.

Hoſt. What's the matter?

Bard. Bid Miſtris Tear-ſheet come to my Maſter.

Hoſt. Oh run, Dol, run: run, good Dol.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, with a Page.

King. Go, call the Earls of Surrey, and Warwick:
But ere they come, bid them o're-read theſe Letters,
And well conſider of them: make good ſpeed. Exit.

How many thouſand of my pooreſt Subjects
Are at this houre aſleep? O ſleep, O gentle Sleep,
Natures ſoft Nurſe, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eye-lids down,
And ſteep my Sences in Forgetfullneſſe?
Why rather (Sleep) lyeſt thou in ſmoaky Cribs,
Upon uneaſie Pallads ſtretching thee,
And huſht with buzzing Night, flyes to thy ſlumber,
Then in the perfum'd Chambers of the Great?
Under the Canopies of coſtly ſtate,
And lull'd with ſounds of ſweeteſt Melody?
O thou dull god, why lyeſt thou with the vilde,
In loathſum Beds, and leav'ſt the Kingly Couch,
A watch-caſe, or a common Larum-Bell?
Wilt thou, upon the high and giddy Maſt,
Seal up the Ship-boyes Eyes, and rock his Brains,
In Cradle of the rude imperious Surge,
And in the viſitation of the Windes,
Who take the Ruffian Billows by the top,
Curling their monſtrous heads, and hanging them
With deaff'ning Clamors in the ſlip'ry Clouds,
That with the hurley, Death it ſelf awakes?
Canſt thou (O partiall Sleep) give thy Repoſe
To the wet Sea-boy in an houre ſo rude:
And in the calmeſt, and moſt ſtilleſt Night,
With all appliances, and means to boot,
Deny it to a King? Then happy Low, lye down,
Uneaſie lyes the Head, that wears a Crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good-morrows to your Majeſty.

King. It is good-morrow, Lords?

War. 'Tis one a Clock, and paſt.

King. Why then good-morrow to you all (my Lords:)
Have you read o're the Letters that I ſent you?

War. We have (my Liege.)

King. Then you perceive the body of our Kingdome,
How foul it is: what rank Diſeaſes grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it?

War. It is but as a Body, yet diſtemper'd,
Which to the former ſtrength may be reſtor'd,
With good advice, and little Medicine;
My Lord, Northumberland will ſoon be cool'd.

King. Oh Heaven, that one might read the Book of Fate,
And ſee the revolution of the times
Make Mountains levell, and the Continent
(Weary of ſolid firmneſſe) melt it ſelf
Into the Sea: and other Times, to ſee
The beachy Girdle of the Ocean
Too wide for Neptunes hipps; how Chances mocks
And Changes fill the Cup of Alteration
With divers Liquors. 'Tis not ten years gone.
Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends,
Did feaſt together; and in two years after,
Were they at Warrs. It is but eight years ſince,
This Percie was the man, neareſt my Soul;
Who like a Brother, toyl'd in my Affairs,
And laid his Love and Life under my foot:
Yea, for my ſake, even to the eyes of Richard
Gave him defiance. But which of you was by
(You Couſin Nevil, as I may remember)
When Richard, with his Eye, brim-full of Tears:
(Then check'd, and rated by Northumberland)
Did ſpeak theſe words (now prov'd a Prophecie:)
Northumberland, thou Ladder, by the which

My

My Cousin Bullinbrook ascends my Throne:
(Though then, Heaven knows, I had no such intent,
But that necessity so bow'd the State,
That I and Greatnesse were compell'd to kiss:)
The time shall come (thus did he follow it)
The time will come, that foul Sin gathering head,
Shall break into Corruption: so went on,
Fore-telling this same Times Condition,
And the division of our Amity.

War. There is a History in all mens Lives,
Figuring the nature of the Times deceas'd.
The which observ'd, a man may prophecie
With a neer aim, of the main chance of things,
As yet not come to Life, which in their Seeds
And weak beginnings lye entreasured:
Such things become the Hatch and Brood of Time;
And by the necessary forme of this,
King Richard might create a perfect guess,
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that Seed, grow to a greater falsenesse,
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

King. Are these things then Necessities?
Then let us meet them like Necessities;
And that same word, even now cryes out on us:
They say the Bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be (my Lord:)
Rumor doth double, like the Voice, and Eccho,
The numbers of the feared. Please it your Grace
To go to bed, upon my Life (my Lord)
The Pow'rs that you already have sent forth,
Shall bring this Prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your Majesty hath been this fort-night ill,
And these unseasond hours perforce must adde
Unto your Sickness.

King. I will take your counsell:
And were these inward Warrs once out of hand,
We would (dear Lords) unto the Holy-Land.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Shallow and Silence, with Mouldy, and Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calfe.

Shal. Come-on, come-on, come-on: give me your Hand Sir, give me your Hand, Sir: an early stirrer, by the Rood. And how doth my good Cousin Silence?

Sil. Good-morrow, good Cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my Cousin, your Bed-fellow? and your fairest Daughter, and mine my God-Daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black Ouzell (Cousin Shallow.)

Shal. By yea and nay, Sir, I dare say my Cousin William is become a good Scholler? he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, Sir, to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the Inns of Court shortly: I was once of Clements Inne; where (I think) they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd lusty Shallow then (Cousin.)

Shal. I was call'd any thing: and I would have done any thing indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Bare, and Francis Pick-bone, and Will Squele a Cot-sal-man, you had not four such Swinge-bucklers in all the Inns of Court again: And I may say to you, we know where the Bona-Roba's were, and had the best of them all at commandement. Then was Jack Falstaffe (now Sir John) a Boy, and a Page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John (Cousin) that comes hither anon about Souldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same: I saw him break Schoggan's Head at the Court-Gate, when he was a Crack, not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a Fruiterer, behind Greys-Inne. Oh the mad dayes that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old Acquaintance are dead?

Sil. We shall all follow (Cousin.)

Shal. Certain: 'tis certain: very sure, very sure: Death is certain to all, all shall dye. How a good Yoke of Bullocks at Stamford Fair?

Sil. Truly Cosun, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your Town living yet?

Sil. Dead, Sir.

Shal. Dead? See, see: he drew a good Bow: and dead? he shot a fine shoot. John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much Money on his head. Dead? he would have clapt in the Clowt at Twelve-score, and carryed you afore-hand Shaft at fourteen, and fourteen and a halfe, that it would have done a mans heart good to see. How a score of Ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good Ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Enter Bardolph and his Boy.

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaffe's Men (as I think.)

Shal. Good-morrow, honest Gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow (Sir) a poor Esquire of this County, one of the Kings Justices of the Peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My Captain, (Sir) commends him to you: my Captain, Sir John Falstaffe: a tall Gentleman, and a most gallant Leader.

Shal. He greets me well: (Sir) I knew him a good Back-Sword-man. How doth the good Knight? may I ask, how my Lady his Wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon: a Souldier is better accommodated, then with a Wife.

Shal. It is well said, Sir; and it is well said indeed, too: Better accommodated? it is good, yea indeed is it: good phrases are surely, and every where very commendable. Accommodated, it comes of Accommodo: very good, a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon, Sir, I have heard the word. Phrase call you it? by this day, I know not the Phrase: but I will maintain the Word with my Sword, to be a Souldier-like Word, and a Word of exceeding good Command. Accommodated: that is, when a man is (as they say) accommodated: or, when a man is, being whereby whereby he thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaffe.

Shal. It is very just: Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your hand, give me your Worships good hand: Trust me, you look well: and bear your yeares very well. Welcome, good Sir John.

Falst. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow: Master Sure-card as I think?

Shal. No, Sir John, it is my Cousin Silence: in Commission with me.

Falst. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good Worship is welcome.

Falst. Fie, this is hot weather (Gentlemen) have you provided me here half a dozen of sufficient men?

Shal. Marry have we sir: Will you sit?

Falst. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see: so, so, so, so: yea marry, Sir, Ralph Mouldy: let them appear as I call: let them do so, let them do so: Let me see, Where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, if it please you.

Shal. What think you (Sir John) a good limb'd fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Falst. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, if it please you.

Falst. 'Tis the more time thou were us'd.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, most excellent. Things that are mouldy, lack use: very singular good. Well said, Sir John, very well said.

Falst. Prick him.

Moul. I was prickt well enough before, if you could have let me alone: my old Dame will be undone now, for one to do her Husbandry, and her Drudgery; you need not to have prickt me, there are other men fitter to go out then I.

Falst. Go to: peace Mouldy, you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent?

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: Know you where you are? For the other, Sir John: Let me see: Simon Shadow.

Falst. I marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold souldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, Sir.

Falst. Shadow, whose Son art thou?

Shad. My Mothers Son, Sir.

Falst. Thy Mothers Son: like enough, and thy Fathers shadow: so the Son of the Female, is the shadow of the Male: it is often so indeed, but not of the fathers substance.

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Falst. Shadow will serve for Summer: prick him: For we have a number of shadows to fill up the Muster-Book.

Shal. Thomas Wart.

Falst. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Falst. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Falst. Thou art a very ragged Wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him down, Sir John?

Falst. It were superfluous: for his apparell is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, you can do it, sir: you can do it: I commend you well.

Francis Feeble.

Feeble. Here, sir.

Shal. What Trade art thou Feeble?

Feeble. A Womans Taylor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Falst. You may: But if it had been a Mans Taylor, he would have prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemies Battell, as thou hast done in a Womans Petticoat?

Feeble. I will do my good will, sir, you can have no more.

Falst. Well said, good Womans Taylor: Well said Couragious Feeble: thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathfull Dove, or most magnanimous Mouse. Prick the womans Taylor well, Master Shallow, deep, Master Shallow.

Feeble. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Falst. I would thou wert a Mans Taylor, that thou might'st mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private souldier, that is the Leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most Forcible Feeble.

Feeble. It shall suffice.

Falst. I am bound to thee reverend Feeble. Who is the next?

Shal. Peter Bulcalfe of the Green.

Falst. Yea marry, let us see Bulcalfe.

Bul. Here, sir.

Falst. Trust me, a likely Fellow. Come prick me Bulcalfe till he roar again.

Bul. Oh, good my Lord Captain.

Fal. What? do'st thou roar before th'art prickt.

Bul. Oh sir, I am a diseased man.

Falst. What disease hast thou?

Bul. A whorson cold, sir; a cough, sir, which I caught with Ringing in the Kings affaires, upon his Coronation day, sir.

Falst. Come, thou shalt go to the Warrs in a Gown: we will have away thy Cold, and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all?

Shal. There is two more called then your number: you must have but four here, sir, and so I pray you go in with me to dinner.

Falst. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you in good troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, doe you remember since we lay all night in the Wind-mill in Saint George's Field?

Falst. No more of that, good Master Shallow: No more of that.

Shal. Ha? it was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Falst. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Falst. Never, never: she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. I could anger her to the heart: she was then a Bona-Roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay she must be old, she cannot chuse but be old: certain he's old: and had Robin Night-work, by old Night-work, before I came to Clements Inne.

Sil. That's fifty five yeares ago.

Shal. Hah, Cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that, that this Knight and I have seen: hah, Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the Chimes at mid-night, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have: our watch-world was, Hem Boyes. Come, let's to Dinner; come, let's to Dinner: Oh the dayes that we have seen. Come, come.

Bul. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here is four Harry ten shillings in French Crowns for you: in very truth, sir, I had as lief be hang'd, sir, as go? and yet for mine own part, sir, I do not care, but rather, because I am unwilling, and for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bar. Go to: stand aside.

Moul. And good Master Corporall Captain, for my old Dames sake, stand my friend: she hath no body to do any thing about her, when I am gone: and she is old and cannot help her self: you shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to: stand aside.

Feeble. I care not, a man can die but once: we owe a death. I will never bear a base mind: if it be my destiny, so: if it be not, so: no man is too good to serve his Prince: and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year, is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said, thou art a good fellow.

Feeble. Nay, I will bear no base mind.

Falst. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I have three pound, to free Mouldy and Bulcalfe.

Falst. Go to: well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you chuse for me.

Shal. Marry then, Mouldy, Bulcalfe, Feeble, and Shallow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bulcalfe: for you Mouldy, stay at home, till you are past service: and for you part, Bullcalfe, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not your self wrong, they are your likeliest men, and I would have you serv'd with the best.

Falst. Will you tell me (Master Shallow) how to chuse a man? Care I for the Limb, the Thewes, the Stature, Bulk, and big assemblance of a man? give me the spirit (Master Shallow.) Where's Wart? you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a Pewterers Hammer: come off, and on, swifter then he that gibbets on the Brewers Bucket. And this same half fac'd fellow, Shadow, give me this man, he presents no mark to the Enemy, the fo-man may with as great ayme levell at the edge of a Pen-knife: and for a Retreat, how swiftly will this Feeble, the womans Taylor, run off. O give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a Calyver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold Wart, Traverse: thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come manage me your Calyver: so, very well, go to, very good, exceeding good. O give me alwayes a little, lean, old, chopt, bald Shot. Well said Wart, thou art a good Scab: hold, there is a Tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his Craft-master, he doth not doe it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clements Inne, I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's Show, there was a little quiver fellow, and he would manage you his Piece thus: and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: Rah, tah, tah, would he say, Bownce would he say, and away again would he go, and again would he come: I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. Farewell Master Silence, I will not use many words with you: fare you well, Gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to night. Bardolph, give the Souldiers Coats.

Shal. Sir John, Heaven blesse you, and prosper your Affaires, and send us Peace. As you return, visit my house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with you to the Court.

Falst. I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well. Exit

Falst. Fare you well, gentle Gentlemen. On Bardolph, lead the men away. As I return, I will fetch off these Justices: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. How subject we old men are to this vice of Lying! This same starv'd Justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildenesse of his Youth, and the Feats he hath done about Turnbull-street, and every third word a Lye, duer paid to the hearer, then the Turks Tribute. I do remember him at Clements Inne, like a man made after supper, of a Cheese-paring. When he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked Radish, with a Head fantastically carv'd upon it with a Knife: He was so forlorn, that his Dimensions (to any thick sight) were invincible. He was the very Genius of Famine: he came ever in the rear-ward of the Fashion: And now is the Vices Dagger become a Squire, and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn Brother to him: and I'le be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head, for crowding among the Marshals men. I saw it, and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own Name, for you might have truss'd him, and all his apparell into an Eele-skinne: The Case of a Treble Hoe-boy was a Mansion for him: a Court: and now hath he Land, and Beeves. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return: and it shall go hard, but I will make him a Philosophers two Stones to me. If the young Dace be a Bait for the old Pike, I see no reason, in the Law of Nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Arch-Bishop, Mowbray, Hastings, Westmerland, Colevile.

Bish. What is the Forrest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gualtree Forrest, and't please your Grace.

Bish. Here stand (my Lords) and send discoveries forth To know the number of our Enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Bish.

Biſh. 'Tis well done.
My friends and brethren (in theſe great Affaires)
I muſt acquaint you, that I have receiv'd
New-dated Letters from Northumberland:
Their cold intent, tenure, and ſubſtance thus.
How doth he wiſh his Perſon, with ſuch Powers
As might hold fortance with his Quality,
The which he could not levy: whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing Fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty Prayers,
That your Attempts may over-live the hazard,
And fearfull meeting of their Oppoſite.
Mow. Thus do the hopes we have in him, touch ground,
And daſh themſelves to pieces.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Haſt. Now? what newes?
Meſſ. Weſt of this Forreſt, ſcarcely off a mile,
In goodly form, comes on the Enemy:
And by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thouſand.
Mow. The juſt proportion that we gave them out.
Let us ſway on, and face them in the Field.

Enter Weſtmerland.

Biſh. What well appointed Leader fronts us here?
Mow. I think it is my Lord of Weſtmerland.
Weſt. Health, and fair greeting from our Generall,
The Prince, Lord John, and Duke of Lancaſter.
Biſh. Say on (my Lord of Weſtmerland) in peace:
What doth concern your comming?
Weſt. Then (my Lord)
Unto your Grace do I in chief addreſſe
The ſubſtance of my Speech. If that Rebellion
Came like it ſelf, in baſe and abject Routs,
Led on by bloody Youth guarded with Rage,
And countenanc'd by Boyes, and Beggery:
I ſay if damn'd Commotion ſo appear,
In his true, native, and moſt proper ſhape,
You (Reverend Father, and theſe Noble Lords)
Had not been here, to dreſſe the ugly form
Of baſe, and bloody inſurrection,
With your fair Honours. You, Lord Arch-Biſhop,
Whoſe Sea is by a Civil Peace maintain'd,
Whoſe Beard, the Silver Hand of Peace hath touch'd,
Whoſe Learning, and good Letters, Peace hath tutor'd,
Whoſe white Inveſtments figure Innocence,
The Dove, and very bleſſed Spirit of Peace.
Wherefore do you ſo ill tranſlate your ſelf,
Out of the ſpeech of Peace, that bears ſuch grace,
Into the harſh and boyſtrous Tongue of War?
Turning your Books to Graves, your Ink to Blood,
Your Pens to Launces, and your Tongue divine
To a low Trumpet, and a Point of War?
Biſh. Wherefore do I this? ſo the queſtion ſtands.
Briefly to this end: We are all diſeas'd,
And with our ſurfetting, and wanton hours,
Have brought our ſelves into a burning Feaver,
And we muſt bleed for it: of which Diſeaſe,
Our late King Richard (being infected) dy'd.
But (my moſt Noble Lord of Weſtmerland)
I take not on me here as a Phyſitian,
Nor do I, as an Enemy to Peace,
Troop in the Throngs of Military men:
But rather ſhew a while like fearfull Warre,
To dyet rank Mindes, ſicke of happineſſe;
And purge th'obſtructions, which begin to ſtop
Our very Veins of Life: hear me more plainly.
I have in equall ballance juſtly weigh'd,
What wrongs our Armes may do, what wrong we ſuffer,
And find our griefs heavier then our offences.
We ſee which way the ſtream of Time doth run,
And are enforc'd from our moſt quiet there,
By the rough Torrent of Occaſion,
And have the ſummary of all our Griefs
(When time ſhall ſerve) to ſhew in Articles;
Which long ere this, we offer'd to the King,
And might by no Suit, gain our Audience:
When we are wrong'd and would unfold our Griefs,
We are deny'd acceſſe unto his perſon,
Even by thoſe men, that moſt have done us wrong.
The dangers of the dayes but newly gone,
Whoſe memory is written on the Earth
With yet appearing blood; and the examples
Of every Minutes inſtance (preſent now)
Hath put us in theſe ill-beſeeming Armes:
Not to break Peace, or any Branch of it,
But to eſtabliſh here a Peace indeed,
Concurring both in Name and Quality.
Weſt. When ever yet was your Appeal deni'd?
Wherein have you been galled by the King?
What Peer hath been ſubborn'd, to grate on you,
That you ſhould ſeal this lawleſſe bloody Book
Of forg'd Rebellion, with a Seal divine?
Biſh. My brother Generall, the Common-wealth,
I make my quarrell in particular.
Weſt. There is no need of any ſuch redreſſe;
Or if there were, it not belongs to you.
Mow. Why not to him in part, and to us all,
That feell the bruizes of the dayes before,
And ſuffer the Condition of theſe Times
To lay a heavy and unequall Hand upon our Honours?
Weſt. O my good Lord Mowbray,
Conſtrue the Times to their Neceſſities,
And you ſhall ſay (indeed) it is the Time,
And not the King, that doth you injuries.
Yet for your part, it not appeares to me,
Either from the King, or in the preſent Time
That you ſhould have an inch of any ground
To build a Grief on: were you not reſtor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolk's Seignories,
Your Noble, and right well remembred Fathers?
Mow. What thing, in Honour, had my Father loſt,
That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in me?
The King that lov'd him, as the State ſtood then,
Was forc'd, perforce compell'd to baniſh him:
And then, that Henry Bullingbrook and he
Being mounted, and both rowſed in their Seats,
Their neighing Courſes daring of the Spurre,
Their armed Staves in charge, their Beavers down,
Their eyes of fire, ſparkling through ſights of Steel,
And the loud Trumpet blowing them together:
Then, then, when there was nothing could have ſtay'd
My Father from the Breaſt of Bullingbrook;
O, when the King did throw his Warder down.
(His own Life hung upon the Staffe he threw)
Then threw he down himſelf, and all their Lives,
That by Indictment, and by dint of Sword,
Have ſince miſcarried under Bullingbrook.
Weſt. You ſpeak (Lord Mowbray) now you know not what.

The Earl of Hereford, was reputed then
In England the most valiant Gentleman.
Who knows, on whom Fortune would then have smil'd?
But if your Father had been Victor there,
He ne're had born it out of Coventry.
For all the Countrey, in a generall voyce,
Cry'd hate upon him: and all their prayers, and love,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And blest'd, and grac'd, and did more then the King.
But this is meer digression from my purpose.
Here comes from our Princely Generall,
To know your Griefs; to tell you from his Grace,
That he will give you Audience: and wherein
It shall enjoy them, every thing set off,
You shall appear, that your demands are just,
That might might so much as think you Enemies.
Mow. But he hath forc'd us to compell this Offer,
And it proceeds from Policy, not Love.
West. Mowbray, you over-ween to take it so:
This Offer comes from Mercy, not from Fear.
For lo, within a Ken our Army lies,
Upon mine Honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our Battell is more full of Names then yours,
Our Men more perfect in the use of Armes,
Our Armour all as strong, our Cause the best;
Then Reason will, our hearts should be as good.
Say you not then, our Offer is compell'd.
Mow. Well, by my will, we shall admit no Parley.
West. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten Case abides no handing.
Hast. Hath the Prince John a full Commission,
In very ample virtue of his Father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what Conditions we shall stand upon?
West. That is intended in the Generalls Name:
I muse you make so slight a Question.
Bish. Then take (my Lord of Westmerland) this Sche-
For this contains our generall Grievances: (dule,
Each severall Article herein redress'd,
All members of our Cause, both here, and hence,
That are insinewed to this Action,
Acquitted by a true substantiall form,
And present execution of our wills,
To us, and to our purposes confin'd,
We come within our awfull Banks again,
And knit our Powers to the Arm of Peace.
West. This will I shew the Generall. Please you Lords
In sight of both our Battels, we may meet
At either end in peace: which Heaven so frame,
Or to the place of difference call the Swords,
Which must needs decide it.
Bish. My Lord, we will do so.
Mow. There is a thing within my Bosome tells me,
That no condition of our Peace can stand.
Hast. Fear you not that, if we can make our Peace
Upon such large termes, and so absolute,
As our Conditions shall consist upon,
Our Peace shall stand as firm as Rocky Mountains.
Mow. I, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight, and false-derived Cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton Reason,
Shall to the King, taste of this Action:
That were our Royall faiths, Martyrs in Love,
We shall be winnowed with so rough a wind,
That even our Corn shall seem as light as Chaffe,
And good from bad find no partition.
Bish. No, no (my Lord) note this: the King is weary
Of dainty, and such picking Grievances:
For he hath found, to end one doubt by Death,
Revives two greater in the Heirs of Life.
And therefore will he wipe his Tables clean,
And keep no Tell-tale to his Memory,
That may repeat, and History his losse,
To new remembrance. For full well he knows,
He cannot so precisely weed this Land,
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That plucking to unfix an Enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.
So that this Land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on, to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd Correction in the Arm,
That was uprear'd to execution.
Hast. Besides, the King hath wasted all his Rods,
On late Offenders, that he now doth lack
The very Instruments of Chastisement:
So that his power, like to a Fangless Lyon
May offer, but not hold.
Bish. 'Tis very true:
And therefore be assur'd (my good Lord Marshall)
If we do now make our attonement well,
Our Peace will (like a broken Limb united)
Grow stronger, for the breaking.
Mow. Be it so:
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmerland.

Enter Westmerland.

We. The Prince is here at hand: pleaseth your Lordship
To meet his Grace, just distance 'tween our Armies?
Mow. Your Grace of York, in heavens name then forward.
Bish. Before, and greet his Grace (my Lord) we come.

Enter Prince John.

John. You are well encountred here (my cousin Mow-
Good day to you, gentle Lord Arch-Bishop, (bray)
And so to you Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better shew'd with you,
When that your Flock (assembled by the Bell)
Encircled you, to hear with reverence
Your Exposition on the holy Text,
Then now to see you here an Iron man,
Cheering a rout of Rebels with your Drumme,
Turning the Word, to Sword; and Life, to Death.
That man that sits within a Monarchs heart,
And ripens in the Sun-shine of his favour,
Would he abuse the Countenance of the King,
Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroach,
In shadow of such greatnesse? With you, Lord Bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the Books of Heaven?
To us, the Speaker in his Parliament;
To us, the imagine voyce of Heaven it self:
The very Opener, and Intelligencer,
Between the Grace, the Sanctities of Heaven,
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your Place,
Employ the Countenance and Grace of Heaven,
As a false Favourite doth his Princes Name,
Inde eds dishonourable? You have taken up,

Under

Ur der the counterfeited zeal of Heaven,
Th e Subjects of Heavens Substitute, my Father,
An d both against the Peace of Heaven, and him,
H ve here up-swarmed them.
Bish. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your Fathers Peace:
B t (as I told my Lord of Westmerland)
T he time (misorder'd) doth in common sence
C rowd us, and crush us, to this monstrous Form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace
The parcels, and particulars of our Grief,
The which hath bin with scorn shov'd from the Court:
Whereon this Hydra-Son of War is born,
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep,
With grant of our most just and right desires;
And true Obedience, of this Madnesse cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of Majesty.
Mow. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes,
To the last man.
Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have Supplies to second our Attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them.
And so, succesſe of mischief shall be born,
And Heir from Heir shall hold this Quarrell up,
Whiles England shall have generation.
John. You are too shallow (Hastings)
Much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after-times.
West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly,
How far-forth you do like their Articles:
John. I like them all, and do allow them well:
And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My Fathers purposes have been mistook,
And some, about him, have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning, and Authority.
My Lord, these Griefs shall be with speed redrest:
Upon my life, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your Powers unto their severall Counties,
As we will ours: and here between the Armies,
Let's drink together friendly, and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those Tokens home,
Of our restored Love, and Amity.
Bish. I take your Princely word, for these redresses.
John. I give it you, and will maintain my word;
And thereupon I drink unto your Grace.
Hast. Go Captain, and deliver to the Army
This newes of Peace; let them have pay, and part:
I know it will well please them.
High thee Captain. Exit.
Bish. To you, my Noble Lord of Westmerland.
West. I pledge your Grace:
And if you knew what pains I have bestow'd,
To breed this present Peace,
You would drink freely: but my love to ye,
Shall shew it self more openly hereafter.
Bish. I do not doubt you.
West. I am glad of it.
Health to my Lord, and gentle Cousin Mowbray.
Mow. You wish me health in very happy season;
For I am on the sudden, something ill.
Bish. Against ill Chances men are ever merry,
But heavinesse fore-runs the good event.
West. Therefore be merry (Coz) since sudden sorrow
Serves to say thus: some good thing comes to morrow.
Bish. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.
Mow. So much the worse, if your own Rule be true.
John. The word of Peace is render'd: hark how they shout.
Mow. This had been cheerfull after Victory.
Bish. A Peace is of the nature of a Conquest:
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser.
John. Go (my Lord)
And let our Army be discharged too:
And good my Lord so (please you) let our Trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men Exit.
We should have cop'd withall.
Bish. Go, good Lord Hastings:
And ere they be dismiss'd let them march by. Exit.
John. I trust (Lords) we shall lie to night together.
Enter Westmerland.
Now Cousin, wherefore stands our Army still?
West. The Leaders having charge from you to stand,
Will not go off untill they hear you speak.
John. They know their duties. Enter Hastings.
Hast. Our Army is dispers'd:
Like youthfull Steers, unyoak'd, they took their course
East, West, North, South: or like a School broke up,
Each hurries towards his home, and sporting place.
West. Good tidings (my Lord Hastings) for the which
I do arrest thee (Traytor) of high Treason:
And you Lord Arch-Bishop, and you Lord Mowbray,
Of Capitall Treason, I attach you both.
Mow. Is this proceeding just and honourable?
West. Is your Assembly so?
Bish. Will you thus break your faith?
John. I pawn'd thee none:
I promis'd you redresse of these same Grievances
Whereof you did complain; which by mine Honour,
I will perform, with a most Christian care.
But for you (Rebels) look to taste the due
Meet for Rebellion, and such Acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these Armes commence,
Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.
Strike up our Drummes, pursue the scatter'd stray,
Heaven, and not we, have safely fought to day.
Some guard these Traitors to the block of Death,
Treasons true bed, and yielder up of breath. Exeunt.
Enter Falstaffe, and Coleville.
Falst. What's your Name, Sir? of what Condition are you? and what place, I pray?
Col. I am a Knight, Sir:
And my Name is Colleville of the Dale.
Falst. Well then, Colleville is your Name, a Knight is your Degree, and your Place, the Dale. Colleville shall still be your Name, a Traitor your Degree, and the Dungeon your Place, a place deep enough: so shall you be still Colleville of the Dale.
Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaffe?
Falstaffe. As good a man as he, sir, who e're I am: do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? if I do sweat, they are the drops of thy Lovers, and they weep for thy death, therefore rowze up Fear and Trembling, and do observance to my mercy.
Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaffe, and in that thought yield me.
Fal. I have a whole School of Tongues in this belly of mine, and not a Tongue of them all speaks any other word but my Name: and I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undo's me. Here comes our Generall.

Enter Prince John and Westmerland.

John. The heat is past, follow no farther now,
Call in the Powers, good Cousin Westmerland.
Now Falstaffe, where have you been all this while?
When every thing is ended, then you come.
These tardy tricks of yours will (on my life)
One time or other, break some Gallows back.

Falst. I would be sorry (my Lord) but it should be thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of Valour. Do you think me a Swallow, an Arrow, or a Bullet? Have I, in my poor and old Motion, the expedition of Thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility. I have foundred nine score and odde Posts: and here (travell-tainted as I am) have, in my pure and immaculate Valour, taken Sir John Colleville of the Dale, a most furious Knight, and valorous Enemy: But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say with the hook-nos'd fellow of Rome, I came, saw, and over-came.

John. It was more of his Courtesie, then your deserving.

Falst. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your Grace, let it be book'd with the rest of this dayes deeds; or, I swear, I will have it in a particular Ballad, with mine own Picture on the top of it (Colleville) kissing my foot: To the which course, if I be enforc'd, if you do not all shew it like gilt two-pences to me; and I, in the clear Sky of Fame, o're-shine you as much as the full Moon doth the Cynders of the Element (which shew like Pins Heads to her) believe not the word of the Noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

John. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Falst. Let it shine then.

John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Falst. Let it do something (my good Lord) that may do me good, and call it what you will.

John. Is thy Name Colleville?

Col. It is (my Lord.)

John. A famous Rebel art thou, Colleville.

Falst. And a famous true Subject took him.

Col. I am (my Lord) but as my Betters are,
That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me,
You should have won them dearer then you have.

Falst. I know not how they sold themselves, but thou like a kind fellow, gav'st thy self away; and I thank thee, for thee.

Enter Westmerland.

John. Have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and Execution stay'd.

John. Send Colleville, with his Confederates,
To York, to present Execution.
Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.

Exit Colleville.

And now dispatch we toward the Court (my Lords)
I hear the King, my Father is sore sick,
Our Newes shall go before us, to his Majesty,
Which (Cousin) you shall bear, to comfort him:
And we with sober speed will follow you.

Falst. My Lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Glocestershire; and when you come to Court, stand my good Lord, 'pray, in your good report.

John. Fare you well, Falstaffe: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you, then you deserve. Exit.

Falst. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your Dukedome. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded Boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvell, he drinks no Wine. There's never any of these demure Boyes come to any proof: for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many Fish-Meals, that they fall into a kind of Male Green-sickness: and then, when they marry, they get Wenches. They are generally Fools, and Cowards; which some of us should be too, but for inflamation. A good Sherris-Sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the Brain, dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudy Vapours, which environ it: makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which deliver'd o're to the Voyce, the Tongue, which is the Birth, becomes excellent Wit. The second property of your excellent Sherris, is, the warming of the Blood: which before (cold, and setled) left the Liver white, and pale: which is the Badge of Pusillanimity, and Cowardize: but the Sherris warmes it, and makes it course from the inwards, to the parts extreme: it illuminateth the Face, which (as a Beacon) gives warning to all the rest of this little Kingdome (man) to Arm: and then the Vital Commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their Captain, the Heart; who great, and puft up with his retinue, doth any deed of Courage: and this Valour comes of Sherris. So, that skill in the Weapon is nothing, without Sack (for that sets it a work:) and Learning, a meer Hoard of Gold, kept by a Devil, till Sack commences it, and sets it in act, and use. Hereof comes it, that Prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his Father, he hath, like lean, sterill, and bare Land, manured, husbanded, and till'd, with excellent endeavour of drinking good, and good store of fertil Sherris, that he is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first Principle I would teach them, should be to forswear thin Potations, and to addict themselves to Sack.

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardoph.

Bard. The Army is discharged all, and gone.

Falst. Let them go: I'le through Glocestershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Warwick, Clarence, Glocester.

King. Now Lords, if heaven doth give successefull end
To this Debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our Youth lead on to higher Fields,
And draw no Swords, but what are sanctifi'd.
Our Navy is addressed, our Power collected,
Our Substitutes, in absence, well invested,
And every thing lies levell to our wish;
Onely we want a little personall strength:
And pawse us, till these Rebels, now a foot,
Come underneath the yoak of Government.

War. Both which we doubt not, but your Majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

King.

King. Humphrey (my Son of Glouceſter) where is the Prince, your Brother?

Glo. I think he's gone to hunt (my Lord) at Windſor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glo. I do not know (my Lord.)

King. Is not his Brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

Glo. No (my good Lord) he is in preſence here.

Clar. What would my Lord, and Father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence, How chance thou art not with the Prince, thy Brother? He loves thee, and thou do'ſt neglect him (Thomas.) Thou haſt a better place in his Affection, Then all thy Brothers: Cherriſh it (my Boy) And Noble Offices thou may'ſt effect Of Mediation (after I am dead) Between his Greatneſs, and thy other Brethren. Therefore omit him not: blunt not his Love, Nor looſe the good advantage of his Grace, By ſeeming cold, or careleſs of his will. For he is gracious if he be obſerv'd: He hath a Tear for Pitty, and a Hand Open (as Day) for melting Charity: Yet notwithſtanding, being incens'd, he's Flint, As humorous as Winter, and as ſudden, As Flaws congealed in the Spring of day. His temper therefore muſt be well obſerv'd: Chide him for faults, and do it reverently, When you perceive his bloud inclin'd to mirth: But being moody, give him Line, and ſcope, Till that his paſſions (like a Whale on ground) Confound themſelves with working. Learn this Thomas, And thou ſhalt prove a ſhelter to thy friends, A Hoop of Gold to bind thy Brothers in: That the united Veſſell of their Bloud (Mingled with Venome of Suggeſtion, As force, perforce, the Age will pour it in) Shall never leak, though it do work as ſtrong As Aconitum, or raſh Gun-powder.

Clar. I ſhall obſerve him with all care, and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windſor with him (Thomas?)

Clar. He is not there to day: he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? Canſt thou tell that?

Clar. With Poins, and other his continuall followers.

King. Moſt ſubject is the fatteſt Soyl to Weeds: And he (the Noble Image of my Youth) Is over-ſpread with them: therefore my grief Stretches it ſelf beyond the hour of death. The bloud weeps from my heart, when I do ſhape (In formes imaginary) th'unguided Dayes, And rotten Times, that you ſhall look upon, When I am ſleeping with my Anceſtors. For when his head-ſtrong Riot hath no Curb, When Rage and hot-bloud are his Counſellors, When Means and laviſh Manners meet together, Oh, with what Wings ſhall his Affections flye Towards fronting Peril, and oppos'd decay?

War. My gracious Lord, you look beyond him quite: The Prince but ſtudies his Companions, Like a ſtrange Tongue: wherein, to gain the Language 'Tis needfull, that the moſt immodeſt word Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attain'd, Your Highneſs knows, comes to no farther uſe, But to be known, and hated. So, like groſs terms, The Prince will, in the perfectneſs of time, Caſt off his followers: and their memory Shall as a Pattern, or a Meaſure live, By which his Grace muſt mete the lives of others, Turning paſt evills to advantages.

King. 'Tis ſeldome, when the Bee doth leave her Comb In the dead Carrion.

Enter Weſtmerland.

Who's here? Weſtmerland?

Weſt. Health to my Soveraign, and new happineſs Added to that, that I am to deliver. Prince John, your Son, doth kiſſe your Graces hand: Mowbray, the Biſhop, Scroop, Haſtings, and all, Are brought to the Correction of your Law. There is not now a Rebels Sword unſheath'd, But Peace puts forth her Olive every where: The manner how this Action hath been borne, Here (at more leiſure) may your Highneſs read, With every courſe, in his particular.

King. O Weſtmerland, thou art a Summer Bird, Which ever in the haunch of Winter ſings The lifting up of day.

Enter Harcourt.

Look, here's more news.

Har. From enemies, Heaven keep your Majeſty: And when they ſtand againſt you, may they fall, As thoſe that I am come to tell you of. The Earle Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolfe, With a great Power of Engliſh, and of Scots, Are by the Sheriff of Yorkſhire overthrown: The manner, and true order of the fight, This Packet (pleaſe) you contains at large.

King. And wherefore ſhould theſe good news Make me ſick? Will fortune never come with both hands full, But write her fair words ſtill in fouleſt Letters? She either gives a Stomack, and no food, (Such are the poor, in health) or elſe a Feaſt, And takes away the Stomack (Such are the Rich, That have abundance, and enjoy it not. I ſhould rejoyce now, at this happy news, And now my Sight fails, and my brain is giddy. O me, come near me, now I am much ill.

Glo. Comfort your Majeſty.

Cla. Oh, my Royall Father.

Weſtmer. My ſoveraign Lord, chear up your ſelf, look up.

War. Be patient (Princes) you do know, theſe Fits Are with his Highneſs very ordinary. Stand from him, give him aire: He'll ſtraight be well.

Clar. No, no, he cannot long hold out: theſe pangs, Th'inceſſant care, and labour of his mind, Hath wrought the Mure, that ſhould confine in it, So thin, that life looks through, and will break out.

Glo. The people fear me: for they do obſerve Unfather'd Heirs, and loathly Births of Nature: The ſeaſons change their manners, as the year Had found ſome monthes aſleep, and leap'd them over.

Clar. The River hath thrice flow'd, no ebbe between: And the old tolk (Times doting Chronicles) Say it did ſo, a little time before That our Grand-ſire Edward ſick'd, and dy'd.

War.

War. Speak lower (Princes) for the King recovers.

Glo. This Apolpexy will (certain) be his end.

King. I pray you take me up, and bear me hence
Into ſome other Chamber: ſoftly 'pray.
Let there be no noyſe made (my gentle friends)
Unleſſe ſome dull and favourable hand
Will whiſper Muſick to my weary Spirit.

War. Call for the Muſick in the other Room.

King. Set me the Crown upon my Pillow here.

Clar. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Leſs noyſe, leſs noyſe.

Enter Prince Henry.

Prin. Hen. Who ſaw the Duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here (Brother) full of heavineſs.

Prin. Hen. How now? Rain within doors, and none abroad? How doth the King?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

Prin. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

Glo. He alter'd much, upon the hearing it.

Prin. Hen. If he be ſick with Joy,
He'l recover without Phyſick.

War. Not ſo much noyſe (my Lords)
Sweet Prince ſpeak low.
The King, your father, is diſpos'd to ſleep.

Clar. Let us with-draw into the other Room.

War. Wil't pleaſe your Grace to go along with us?

Prin. Hen. No: I will ſit, and watch here, by the King.
Why doth the Crown lye there, upon his Pillow,
Being ſo troubleſome a Bed-fellow?
O poliſh'd Perturbation! Golden Care!
That keeep'ſt the Ports of ſlumber open wide,
To many a watchfull Night: ſleep with it now,
Yet not ſo ſound, and half ſo deeply ſweet,
As he whoſe Brow (with homely Biggen bound)
Snores out the Watch of Night. O Majeſty!
When thou do'ſt pinch thy Bearer, thou do'ſt ſit
Like a rich Armor, worne in heat of day,
That ſcald'ſt with ſafety: by his Gates of breath,
There lyes a downey feather, which ſtirs not:
Did he ſuſpire, that light and weightleſs downe
Perforce muſt move. My gracious Lord, my Father,
This ſleep is ſound indeed: this is a ſleep,
That from this Golden Rigoll hath divorc'd
So many Engliſh Kings. Thy due from me,
Is Tears, and heavy Sorrows of the Bloud,
Which Nature, Love, and filiall tenderneſs,
Shall (O dear father) pay thee plenteouſly.
My due, from thee, is this imperiall Crown,
Which (as immediate from thy place, and bloud)
Derives it ſelf to me. Lo, here it ſits,
Which heaven ſhall guard:
And put the worlds whole ſtrength into one gyant arme,
It ſhall not force this Lineall Honor from me.
This, from thee, will I to mine leave,
As 'tis left to me. Exit.

Enter Warwick, Glouceſter, Clarence.

King. Warwick, Glouceſter, Clarence.

Clar. Doth the King call?

War. What would your Majeſty? how fares your Grace?

King. Why did you leave me here alone (my Lords?)

Cla. We left the Prince (my Brother) here (my Liege)
Who undertook to ſit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales? where is he? let me ſee him.

War. This door is open, he is gone this way.

Glo. He came not through the Chamber where we ſtaid.

King. Where is the Crown? who took it from my Pillow?

War. When we with-drew (my Liege) we left it here.

King. The Prince hath ta'ne it hence:
Go ſeek him out.
Is he ſo haſty, that he doth ſuppoſe
My ſleep, my death? Find him (my Lord of Warwick)
Chide him hither: this part of his conjoyns
With my diſeaſe, and helps to end me.
See Sonns, what things you are:
How quickly Nature falls into revolt,
When Gold becomes her object?
For this, the fooliſh over-carefull fathers
Have broke their ſleeps with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with induſtry.
For this, they have ingroſſed and pyl'd up
The canker'd heaps of ſtrange-atchieved Gold:
For this, they have been thoughtfull, to inveſt
Their Sonns with Arts, and Martiall Exerciſes:
When, like the Bee, culling from every flower
The vertuous Sweets, our Thighes packt with Wax,
Our Mouths with Honey, we bring it to the Hive;
And like the Bees, are murthered for our pains.
This bitter taſte yields his engroſsments,
To the ending father.

Enter Warwick.

Now where is he, that will not ſtay ſo long,
Till his friend ſickneſs hath determin'd me?

War. My Lord, I found the Prince in the next Room,
Waſhing with kindly Tears his gentle Cheeks,
With ſuch a deep demeanour, in great ſorrow,
That Tyranny, which never quafft but bloud,
Would (by beholding him) have waſh'd his Knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away the Crown?

Enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me (Harry,)
Depart the Chamber, leave us here alone. Exit.

Prin. Hen. I never thought to hear you ſpeak again.

King. Thy wiſh was father (Harry) to that thought:
I ſtay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Do'ſt thou ſo hunger for my empty Chair,
That thou wilt needs inveſt thee with mine Honors,
Before thy hour be ripe? O fooliſh youth!
Thou ſeek'ſt the Greatneſs, that will over-whelm thee:
Stay but a little: for my Cloud of Dignity
Is held from falling, with ſo weak a winde,
That it will quickly drop: my Day is dimme.
Thou haſt ſtoln that, which after ſome few hours
Were thine, without offence: and at my death
Thou haſt ſeal'd up my expectation.
Thy life did manifeſt, thou lov'd'ſt me not,
And thou wilt have me dye aſſur'd of it.
Thou hid'ſt a thouſand Daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou haſt whetted on thy ſtony heart,
To ſtab at half an hour of my fraile life.
What? canſt thou not forbear me half an hour?

Then

Then get thee gone, and dig thy grave thy self,
And bid the merry Bels ring to thy ear
That thou art Crowned, not that I am dead,
Let all the Tears, that should bedew my Herse
Be drops of Balme, to sanctifie thy head:
Onely compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that, which gave thee life, unto the Wormes:
Pluck down my Officers, break my Decrees;
For now a time is come, to mock at forme.
Henry the fift is Crown'd: Up Vanity,
Down Royall State: All you sage Counsellors, hence:
And to the English Court, assemble now
From ev'ry Region, Apes of Idlenes.
Now Neighbour-Confines, purge you of your Scum:
Have you a Ruffian that will swear? drink? and dance?
Revell the night? Rob? Murder? and commit
The oldest sins, the newest kind of wayes?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England, shall double gill'd, his trebble guilt.
England, shall give him Office, Honor, Might:
For the Fift Harry, from curb'd License plucks
The muzzle of Restraint, and the wilde Dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every Innocent.
O my poor Kingdome (sick with civill blowes)
When that my Care could not with-hold thy Ryots,
What wilt thou do, When Ryot is thy Care?
O, thou wilt be a Wildernes again,
Peopled with Wolves (thy old Inhabitants.)

Prin. O pardon me (my Liege)
But for my Tears,
The most Impediments unto my Speech,
I had fore-stall'd, and deep rebuke,
Ere you (with grief) had spoke, and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your Crown,
And he that wears the Crown immortally,
Long guard it yours: If I affect it more,
Then as your Honour, and as your Renown,
Let me no more from this Obedience rise,
Which my most true, and inward duteous spirit
Teacheth this prostrate, and exteriour bending.
Heaven witness with me, when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your Majesty,
How cold it struck my heart. If I do fain,
O let me, in my present wildeness, dye,
And never live, to shew th'incredulous World,
The Noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead
(And dead almost (my Liege) to think you were)
I spake unto the Crown (as having sense)
And thus upbraided it. The Care on thee depending,
Hath fed upon the body of my Father,
Therefore, thou best of Gold, art worst of Gold.
Other, less fine in Charract, is more precious,
Preserving life, in Med'cine potable:
But thou, most Fine, most Honour'd, most Renown'd,
Hast eat the Bearer up.
Thus (my Royall Liege)
Accusing it, I put it on my Head,
To try with it (as with an Enemy,
That had before my face murdred my father)
The Quarrell of a true inheritor,
But if it did infect my bloud with joy,
Or swell my Thoughts to any strain of Pride,
If any Rebell, or vain spirit of mine,
Did, with the least Affection of a Welcome,
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let heaven, for ever, keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest Vassall is,
That doth with awe, and terrour kneel to it.

King. O my Son!
Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st joyn the more, thy Fathers love;
Pleading so wisely, in excuse of it.
Come hither Harry, sit thou by my bed,
And hear (I think the very latest Counsell
That ever I shall breath:) Heaven knowes, my Son,
By what by-pathes, and indirect crook'd-wayes
I met this Crown: and I my self know well
How troublesome it sate upon my head.
To thee, it shall descend with better Quiet,
Better Opinion, better Confirmation:
For all the soyle of the Atchievement goes
With me, into the Earth. It seem'd in me,
But as an Honor snatch'd with boy'strous hand,
And I had many living, to upbraid
My gain of it, by their assistances,
Which daily grew to a Quarrell, and to Bloud-shed,
Wounding supposed Peace.
All these hold Fears,
Thou seest (with perill) I have answered:
For all my Reign, hath been but as a Scene
Acting that argument. And now my death
Changes the Mode: For what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee, in a more Fairer sort.
So thou, the Garland wear'st successively,
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure, then I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green:
And all thy Friends, which thou must make thy friends
Have but their stings, and teeth, newly taken out,
By whose fell working, I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power, I well might lodge a Fear
To be again displac'd. Which to avoid,
I cut them off: and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land;
Least rest, and lying still, might make them look
Too near unto my State.
Therefore (my Harry)
Be it thy course to busie giddy Minds
With Forraign Quarrels: that Action hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former dayes.
More would I, but my Lungs are wasted so,
That strength of Speech is utterly deni'd me.
How I came by the Crown, O heaven forgive:
And grant it may, with thee, in true peace live.

Poin. My gracious Liege:
You won it; wore it, kept it, gave it me,
Then plain and right must my possession be;
Which I, with more, then with a common pain,
'Gainst all the World, will rightfully maintain.

Enter Lord John of Lancaster, and Warwick.

King. Look, look,
Here comes my John of Lancaster:

John. Health, Peace, and Happines,
To my Royall Father:

King. Thou bring'st me happinesse,
(Son John,)
But health (alack) with youthfull wings is flown
From this bare, wither'd Trunk. Upon thy sight
My worldly busines makes a period.

Where

Where is my Lord of Warwick?
Prin. My Lord of Warwick.
King. Doth any name particular, belong
Unto the Lodging, where I first did swoun'd?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my Noble Lord.
King. Laud be to heaven:
Even there my life must end.
It hath been propheſi'd to me many years,
I ſhould not dye, but in Jeruſalem:
Which (vainly) I ſuppos'd the Holy-Land.
But bear me to that Chamber, there Ile lye:
In that Jeruſalem, ſhall Harry dye. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Shallow, Silence, Falſtaffe, Bardolfe. Page, and Davy.

Shal. By Cock and Pye, you ſhall not away to night. What, Davy, I ſay.
Fal. You muſt excuſe me, Maſter Robert Shallow.
Shal. I will not excuſe you: you ſhall not be excuſed. Excuſes ſhall not be admitted: there is no excuſe ſhall ſerve: you ſhall not be excus'd.
Why Davy.
Dav. Here ſir.
Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, let me ſee (Davy) let me ſee: William Cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you ſhall not be excus'd.
Davy. Marry, ſir, thus: thoſe Precepts cannot be ſerv'd: and again, ſir, ſhall we ſow the head-land with Wheat?
Shal. With red Wheat, Davy. But for William Cook: are there no young Pigeons?
Dav. Yea, Sir.
Here is now the Smith's note, for Shooing,
And Plough-Irons.
Shal. Let it be caſt, and paid: Sir John, you ſhall not be excus'd.
Dav. Sir, a new link to the Bucket muſt needs be had: And, Sir, do you mean to ſtop any of Williams Wages, about the Sack he loſt the other day, at Hinckley Faire?
Shal. He ſhall anſwer it:
Some Pigeons, Davy, a couple of ſhort legg'd Henns: a joint of Mutton, and any pretty little tine Kickſhawes, tell William Cook.
Davy. Doth the man of War, ſtay all night, ſir?
Shal. Yes, Davy:
I will uſe him well. A friend i'th Court, is better then a penny in purſe. Uſe his men well, Davy, for they are arrant Knaves, and will back-bite.
Davy. No worſe then they are-bitten, ſir: For they have marvellous foul linnen.
Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy buſineſſe, Davy.
Davy. I beſeech you, ſir,
To countenance William Viſor of Woncot, againſt Clement Perkes of the hill.
Shal. There are many Complaints, Davy, againſt that Viſor, that Viſor is an arrant Knave, on my knowledge.
Davy. I grant your Worſhip, that he is a knave, Sir; But yet heaven forbid, ſir, but a Knave ſhould have ſome Countenance, at his Friends requeſt. An honeſt man, ſir, is able to ſpeak for himſelf, when a Knave is not. I have ſerv'd your Worſhip truly, ſir, theſe eight years: and if I cannot once or twice in a Quarter bear out a knave, againſt an honeſt man, I have but a very little credit with your Worſhip. The Knave is mine honeſt friend, Sir, therefore I beſeech your Worſhip, let him be Countenanc'd.
Shal. Go too,
I ſay he ſhall have no wrong: Look about, Davy.
Where are you, Sir John? Come, off with your Boots.
Give me your hand, Maſter Bardolfe.
Bard. I am glad to ſee your Worſhip.
Shal. I thank thee, with all my heart, kind Maſter Bardolfe, and welcome, my tall Fellow:
Come, Sir John.
Falſt. I'le follow you, good Maſter Robert Shallow. Bardolfe, look to our Horſes. If I were ſaw'd into Quantities, I ſhould make four dozen of ſuch bearded Hermites ſtaves, as Maſter Shallow. It is a wonderfull thing to ſee the ſemblable Coherence of his mens ſpirits, and his: They, by obſerving of him, do bear themſelve like fooliſh Juſtices: He, by converſing with them, is turn'd into a Juſtice-like Servingman. Their ſpirits are ſo married in Conjunction, with the participation of Society, that they flock together in conſent, like ſo many Wilde-Geeſe. If I had a ſuit to Maſter Shallow, I would humour his men, with the imputation of being near their Maſter. If to his Men, I would curry with Maſter Shallow, that no man could better command his Servants. It is certain, that either wiſe bearing, or ignorant Carriage is caught, as men take diſeaſes, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their Company. I will deviſe matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep Prince Harry in continuall Laughter, the wearing out of ſix faſhions (which is four Tearms) or two Actions, and he ſhall laugh with Intervallums. O it is much that a Lye (with a ſlight oath) and a jeſt (with a ſad brow) will do with a Fellow, that never had the Ache in his ſhoulders. O you ſhall ſee him laugh, till his Face be like a wet Cloak, ill laid up.
Shal. Sir John.
Fal. I come, Maſter Shallow, I come, Maſter Shallow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Earle of Warwick, and the Lord Chief Juſtice.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Juſtice, whither away?
Chei. Juſt. How doth the King?
War. Exceeding well: his Cares
Are now, all ended.
Chei. Juſt. I hope, not dead.
War. He's walk'd the way of Nature,
And to our purpoſes, he lives no more.
Chei. Juſt. I would his Majeſty had call'd me with him,
The ſervice, that I truly did his life,
Hath left me open to all injuries.

War.

War. Indeed I think the young King loves you not.
Chei. Just. I know he doth not, and do arme my self
To welcome the condition of the Time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me.
Then I have drawn it in my fantasie.

Enter John of Lancaster, Gloucester, and Clarence.

War. Here comes the heavy issue of dead Harry:
O, that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three Gentlemen:
How many Nobles then, should hold their places,
That must strike saile, to spirits of vild sort?
Chei. Just. Alas, I fear, all will be over-turn'd.
Joh. Good morrow, Cosin Warwick, good morrow.
Glou. Clar. Good morrow, Cosin.
Joh. We meet, like men, that had forgot to speak.
War. We do remember: But our Argument
Is all too heavy, to admit much talk.
Joh. Well: Peace be with him, that hath made us heavy.
Chei. Just. Peace be with us, least we be heavier.
Glou. O, good my Lord, you have lost a friend indeed:
And I dare swear, you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow, it is sure your own.
Joh. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,
You stand in coldest expectation.
I am the sorrier, would 'twere otherwise.
Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaffe fair,
Which swim's against your stream of Quality.
Chei. Just. Sweet Princes: what I did, I did in Honor,
Led by th'Imperiall Conduct of my Soul,
And never shall you see, that I will begge
A ragged and forestall'd Remission.
If Troth, and upright Innocency fail me,
I'le to the King (my Master) that is dead,
And tell him, who hath sent me after him.
War. Here comes the Prince.

Enter Prince Harry.

Ch. Just. Good morrow: and heaven save your Majesty.
Prin. This new, and gorgeous Garment, Majesty,
Sits not so easie on me, as you think.
Brothers, you mix your Sadness with some Fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish Court:
Not Amurah, an Amurah succeeds,
But Harry, Harry: Yet be sad (good Brothers)
For (to speak truth) it very well becomes you:
Sorrow, so Royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart. Why then be sad,
But entertain no more of it (good brothers)
Then a joint burthen, laid upon us all.
For me, by Heaven (I bid you be assur'd)
I'le be your Father, and your Brother too:
Let me but bear your Love, I'le bear your Cares;
But weep that Harry's dead, and so will I.
But Harry lives, that shall convert those Tears
By number, into hours of happinesse.
Joh. &c. We hope no other from your Majesty.
Prin. You all look strangely on me: and you most.
You are (I think) assur'd, I love you not.
Chei. Just. I am assur'd (if I be measur'd rightly)
Your Majesty hath no just cause to hate me.
Prin. No? How might a Prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What? Rate? Rebuke? and roughly send to Prison
Th'immediate Heir of England? Was this easie?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?
Chei. Just. I then did use the Person of your Father;
The Image of his power lay then in me,
And in th'administration of his Law,
Whiles I was busie for the Commonwealth,
Your Highness pleased to forget my place,
The Majesty, and power of Law, and Justice,
The Image of the King, whom I presented,
And struck me in my very Seat of Judgment:
Whereon (as an Offender to your Father)
I gave bold way to my Authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the Garland,
To have a Son, set your Decrees at naught?
To pluck down Justice from your awfull Bench?
To trip the course of Law, and blunt the Sword
That guards the peace, and safety of your Person?
Nay more, to spurn at your most Royall Image,
And mock your workings, in a Second body?
Question your Royall Thoughts, make the case yours:
Be now the Father, and propose a Son:
Hear your own dignity so much prophan'd,
See your most dreadfull Lawes, so loosely slighted;
Behold your self, so by a Son disdained:
And then imagine me, taking your part,
And in your power, soft silencing your Son:
After this cold consiederance, sentence me;
And, as you are a King, speak in your State,
What I have done, that misbecame my place,
My person, or my Lieges Soveraignty.
Prin. You are right Justice, and you weigh this well:
Therefore still bear the Ballance, and the Sword:
And I do wish your Honors may encrease,
Till you do live, to see a Son of Mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my Fathers words:
Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do Justice, on my proper son;
And no lesse happy, having such a Son,
That would deliver up his greatness so,
Into the hands of Justice, You did commit me:
For which I do commit into your hand,
Th'unstained Sword that you have us'd to bear:
With this Remembrance; That you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartiall spirit
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand,
You shall be as a Father to my Youth:
My voice shall sound, as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will stoop, and humble my intents,
To your well practis'd, wise Directions.
And Princes all, believe me, I beseech you:
My father is gone wilde into his Grave,
(For in his Tomb, lye my Affections)
And with his Spirit, sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the World:
To frustrate Prophesies, and to race out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The Tide of Blood in me,
Hath proudly flow'd in Vanity, till now.
Now doth it turn, and ebbe back to the Sea.
Wherein it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formall Majesty.
Now call we our High Court of Parliament:
And let us choose such Limbs of Noble Counsell,

That

That the great Body of our State may go
In equall rank with the best govern'd Nation,
That War, or Peace, or both at once may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us,
In which you (father) shall have formost hand,
Our Coronation done, we will accite
(As I before remembred) all our State,
And heaven (consigning to my good intents)
No Prince, nor Peer, shall have just cause to say,
Heaven shorten Harries happy life, one day. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Silence, Bardolfe, Page, Davy and Pistoll.

Shal. Nay; you shall see mine Orchard, where in an Arbor we will eat a last years Pippin of my own graffing, with a dish of Carrawayes, and so forth: Come cosin Silence, and then to bed.

Fal. You have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren: Beggers all, beggers all, Sir John: Marry, good aire. Spread Davy, spread Davy: Well said Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses: he is your Servingman, and your Husbandman.

Shal. A good Varlet, a good Varlet, a very good Varlet, Sir John: I have drunk too much Sack at Supper. A good Varlet. Now sit down, now sit down: Come Cousin.

Sil. Ah sirra (quoth-a) we shall do nothing but eat, and make good cheer, and praise heaven for the merry year: when flesh is cheap, and Females dear, and lusty Lads more here and there: so merrily, and ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart, good Master Silence. I'le drink your health for that anon.

Shal. Good Master Bardolfe: some wine, Davy.

Dav. Sweet sir, sit: I'le be with you anon: most sweet sir, sit. Master Page, sit: good Master Page, sit: Proface. What you want in meat, we'll have in drink: but you bear, the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolfe, and my little Souldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife ha's all.
For women are shrews, both short and tall:
'Tis merry in Hall, when Beards wag all:
And welcome merry Shrovetide. Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this Mettle.

Sil. Who I? I have been merry twice and once, ere now.

Dav. There is a dish of Lether-coats for you.

Shal. Davy.

Dav. Your Worship: I'le be with you straight. A cup of Wine, sir?

Sil. A Cup of Wine, that's brisk and fine, and drink unto the Leman mine: and a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. If we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health, and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. Fill the Cup, and let it come. I'le pledge you were't a mile to the bottome.

Shal. Honest Bardolfe, welcome: If thou want'st any thing, and will not call, beshrew thy heart. Welcome my little tyne thief, and welcome indeed too: I'le drink to Master Bardolfe, and to all Cavileroes about London.

Dav. I hope to see London, once ere I dye.

Bar. If I might see you there, Davy.

Shal. You'll crack, a quart together? Ha, will you not, Master Bardolfe?

Bar. Yes Sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thank thee: the knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. He will not out, he is true bred.

Bard. And I'le stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why there spoke a King: lack nothing, be merry. Look, who's at door there, ho: who knocks?

Fal. Why now you have done me right.

Sil. Do me right, and dub me Knight, Samingo. Is't not so.

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't? Why then say an old man can do somewhat.

Dav. If it please your Worship, there's one Pistoll come from the Court with news.

Fal. From the Court? Let him come in.

Enter Pistoll.

How now Pistoll?

Pist. Sir John, save you sir.

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistoll?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows none to good, sweet Knight: Thou art now one of the greatest men in the Realm.

Silen. Indeed, I think he be, but Goodman Puffe of Barson.

Pist. Puffe? puffe in thy teeth, most recreant Coward base. Sir John, I am thy Pistoll, and thy friend: helter skelter have I rode to thee, and tydings do I bring, and lucky joyes, and golden Times, and happy News of price.

Fal. I prethee now deliver them, like a man of this World.

Pist. A footra for the World, and Worldlings base,
I speak of Affrica, and Golden Joyes.

Fal. O base Assyrian Knight, what is thy news?
Let King Covitha know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin-hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill Currs confront the Hellicon?
And shall good news be baffel'd?
Then Pistoll lay thy head in Furies lap.

Shal. Honest Gentleman,
I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, Sir.
If sir, you come with news from the Court, I take it, there is but two wayes, either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am Sir, under the King, in some Authority.

Pist. Under which King?
Bezonian, speak, or dye.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fift?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A footra for thine Office.
Sir John, thy tender Lamb-kin, now is King,
Harry the Fift's the man, I speak the truth.
When Pistoll lyes, do this, and fig-me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Falst.

Fal. What, is the old King dead?
Pist. As nail in door.
The things I speak are just.
Fal. Away Bardolph, Saddle my Horse,
Master Robert Shallow, choose what Office thou wilt
In the Land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double charge thee
With Dignities.
Bard. O joyfull day:
I would not take a Knighthood for my Fortune.
Pist. What? I do bring good news.
Fals. Carry Master Silence to bed: Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortunes Steward. Get on thy Boots, we'll ride all night. Oh sweet Pistoll: Away Bardolfe: Come Pistoll, utter more to me: and withall devise something to do thy self good. Boot, Boot, Master Shallow, I know the young King is sick for me. Let us take any mans Horses: The Lawes of England are at my commandment. Happy are they, which have been my Friends: and woe unto my Lord Chief Justice.
Pist. Let Vultures vild seize on his Lungs also:
Where is the Life that late I led, say they?
Why here it is, welcome those pleasant dayes. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Hostesse Quickly, Doll Tear-sheet, and Beadles.

Hostesse. No, thou arrant knave: I would I might die, that I might have thee hang'd: Thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joynt.
Off. The Constables have deliver'd her over to me: and she shall have Whipping cheer enough, I warrant her. There hath been a man or two (lately) kill'd about her.
Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lye: Come on, I'le tell thee what, thou damn'd Tripe-visag'd Rascall, if the Child I now go with, do miscarry, thou had'st better thou had'st strook thy Mother, thou Paper-fac'd Villain.
Host. O that Sir John were come, he would make this a bloody day to some body. But I would the Fruit of her Womb might miscarry.
Officer. If it do, you shall have a dozen of Cushions again, you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me: for the man is dead, that you and Pistoll beat among you.
Dol. I'le tell thee what, thou thin man in a Censor; I will have you as soundly swing'd for this, you blew-Bottl'd Rogue: you filthy famish'd Correctioner, if you be not swing'd, I'le forswear half Kirtles.
Off. Come, come, you she-Knight-arrant, come.
Host. O, that right should thus o'recome might. Well, of sufferance comes ease.
Dol. Come you Rogue, come:
Bring me to a Justice.
Host. Yes, come, you starv'd Blood-hound.
Dol. Goodman Death, goodman Bones.
Host. Thou Anatomy, thou.
Dol. Come, you thin Thing:
Come, you Rascall.
Offi. Very well. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter two Grooms.

1. Groom. More Rushes, more Rushes.
2. Groom. The Trumpets have sounded twice.
1. Groo. It will be two of the Clock ere they come from the Coronation. Exeunt Grooms.

Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Pistoll, Bardolfe, and Page.

Falstaffe. Stand here by me, M. Robert Shallow, I will make the King do you Grace. I will leer upon him, as he comes by: and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.
Pistoll. Blesse thy Lungs, good Knight.
Falst. Come here Pistoll, stand behind me. O, if I had had time to have made new Liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But it is no matter, this poor shew doth better: this doth inferre the zeal I had to see him.
Shal. It doth so.
Falst. It shewes my earnestnesse in affection.
Pist. It doth so.
Fal. My devotion.
Pist. It doth, it doth, it doth.
Fal. As it were to ride day and night,
And not to deliberate, not to remember,
Not to have patience to shift me.
Shal. It is most certain.
Fal. But to stand stained with Travell, and sweating with desire to see him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affaires in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done, but to see him.
Pist. 'Tis semper idem: for absque hoc nihil est. 'Tis all in every part.
Shal. 'Tis so indeed.
Pist. My Knight, I will enflame thy Noble Liver, and make thee rage. Thy Dol, & Hellen of thy noble thoughts is in base Durance, and contagious prison: Hal'd thither by most Mechanicall and durty hands. Rowze up Revenge from Ebon den, with fell Alecto's Snake, for Dol is in. Pistoll speaks nought but troth.
Fal. I will deliver her.
Pist. There roar'd the Sea: and Trumpet Clangour sounds.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry the Fift, Brothers, Lord Chief Justice.

Falst. Save thy Grace, King Hall, my Royall Hall.
Pist. The heavens thee guard, and keep, most royall Imp of Fame.
Fal. 'Save thee my sweet Boy.
King. My Lord Chief justice, speak to that vain man.
Ch. Just. Have you your wits?
Know you what 'tis you speak?
Falst. My King, my Jove; I speak to thee, my heart.
King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy Prayers:
How ill white hairs become a Fool, and Jester?

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
So surfet-swell'd, so old, and so prophane:
But being awoke, I do despise my dream.
Make less thy body, (hence) and more thy Grace,
Leave gormand-ding; Know the Grave doth gape
For thee, thrice wider then for other men.
Reply not to me, with a Fool-born Jest,
Presume not, that I am the thing I was,
For heaven doth know (so shall the world perceive)
That I have turn'd away my former Self,
So will I those that kept me Company.
When thou dost hear I am, as I have bin,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou was't
The Tutor and the Feeder of my Riots:
Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,
As I have done the rest of my Misleaders,
Not to come near our Person, by ten mile.
For competence of life, I will allow you,
That lack of means enforce you not to evil:
And as we hear you do redeem your selves,
We will according to your strength, and qualities,
Give you advancement. Be it your charge (my Lord)
To see perform'd the tenure of our word. Set on.
Exit King.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. I marry, Sir John, which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be M. Shallow, do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him: Look you, he must seem thus to the world: fear not your advancement: I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceive how, unless you should give me your Doublet, and stuffe me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour I fear, that you will dye in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours, go with me to dinner:
Come Lieutenant Pistol, come Bardolfe,
I shall be sent for soon at night.

Ch. Just. Go carry Sir John Falstaffe to the Fleet,
Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My Lord, my Lord.

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak, I will hear you soon:
Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormento, spera me contento.
Exit Manet Lancaster, and Chief Justice.

John. I like this fair proceeding of the Kings,
He hath intent his wonted Followers
Shall be very well provided for:
But are banisht, till their conversations
Appear more wise, and modest in the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

John. The King hath call'd his Parliament,
My Lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

John. I will lay odds, that ere this year expire,
We bear our Civil Swords, and Native fire
As far as France. I heard a Bird so sing,
Whose Musick (to my thinking) pleas'd the King.
Come, will you hence? Exeunt.

FINIS.

EPILOGUE.

IIrſt, my Fear; then, my Curteſie; laſt, my Speech. My Fear, is your Diſpleaſure, my Curteſie, my Duty; and my Speech, to beg your Pardons. If you look for a good Speech now, you undoe me: for what I have to ſay, is of mine own making and what (indeed) I ſhould ſay, will (I doubt) prove mine own marring. But to the Purpoſe, and ſo to the Venture. Be it known to you (as it is very well) I was lately here in the end of a diſpleaſing Play, to pray your Patience for it, and to promiſe you a better. I did mean (indeed) to pay you with this, which if (like an ill Venture) it come unluckily home, I break; and you, my gentle Creditors loſe: Here I promiſt you I would be, and here I commit my Body to your Mercies: Bate me ſome, and I will pay you ſome, and (as moſt Debtors do) promiſe you infinitely.

If my Tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to uſe my Legs? And yet that were but light payment, to Dance out of your debt: But a good Conſcience will make any poſſible ſatisfaction, and ſo will I. All the Gentlewomen here have forgotten me; ; if the Gentlewomen will not, then the Gentlemen do not agree with the Gentlewomen, which was never ſeen before in ſuch an aſſembly.

One word more, I beſeech you: if you be not too much cloid with Fat meat, our humble Authour will continue the ſtory (with Sir Iohn in it) and make you merry with fair Katherine of France: where (for any thing I know) Falſtaffe ſhall die of a Sweat, unleſſe already he be kill'd with your hard Opinions: For Old-caſtle died a Martyr, and this is not the man. My Tongue is weary, when my Legs are too, I will bid you good night; and ſo kneel down before you: (But indeed) to pray for the Queen.

The

The Life of King HENRY the Fifth.

Enter Prologue.

O, For a Muſe of Fire, that would aſcend
The brighteſt Heaven of Invention
A Kingdome for a Stage, Princes to act,
And Monarchs to behold the ſwelling Scene.
Then ſhould the Warlike Harry, like himſelf,
Aſſume the Port of Mars, and at his heels
(Leaſht in, like hounds) ſhould Famine, Sword, and Fire
Crouch for employment. But pardon, Gentles all:
The flat unraiſed Spirits, that hath dar'd,
On this unworthy Scaffold, to bring forth
So great an Object. Can this Cock-Pit hold
The vaſty Field of France? Or may we cramme
Within this Wooden O, the very Caſket
That did affright the Aire at Agincourt?
O pardon: ſince a crooked Figure may
Atteſt in little place a Million,
And let us, Cyphers to this great Accompt,
On your imaginary Forces work.
Suppoſe within the Girdle of theſe Walls
Are now confin'd two mighty Monarchs,
Whoſe high, up-rear'd, and abutting Fronts,
The perilous narrow Ocean parts aſunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts:
Into a thouſand parts divide one Man,
And make imaginary Puiſſance.
Think when we talk of Horſes, that you ſee them
Printing their proud Hoofs ith' receiving Earth:
For 'tis your thoughts that now muſt deck our Kings,
Carry them here and there: jumping o're Times;
Turning th'accompliſhment of many yeares
Into an Hour-glaſſe: for the which ſupply,
Admit me Chorus to this Hiſtory;
Who Prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge our Play. Exit.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Biſhops of Canterbury, and Ely.

Biſh. Cant.

MY Lord, I'le tell you, that ſelf Bill is urg'd,
Which in th'eleventh year of the laſt Kings reign
Was like, and had indeed againſt us paſt,
But that the ſcambling and unquiet time
Did puſh it out of farther queſtion.

Biſh. Ely. But how, my Lord, ſhall we reſiſt it now?

Biſh. Cant. It muſt be thought on: if it paſſe againſt us,
We loſe the better part of our Poſſeſſion:
For all the Temporall Lands which men devout
By Teſtament have given to the Church,
Would they ſtrip from us; being valu'd thus,
As much as would maintain, to the Kings honour,
Full fifteen Earles, and fifteen hundred Knights,
Six thouſand and two hundred good Eſquires:
And to relief of Lazars, and weak age
Of indigent faint Souls, paſt corporall toyl,
A hundred Almes-houſes, right well ſuppli'd:
And to the Coffers of the King beſide,
A thouſand pound by th' year. Thus runs the Bill.

Biſh. Ely. This would drink deep.

Biſh. Cant. 'Twould drink the Cup and all.

Biſh. Ely. But what prevention?

Biſh. Cant. The King is full of grace, and fair regard.

Biſh. Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.

Biſh. Cant. The courſes of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no ſooner left his Fathers body,
But that his wildneſſe mortifi'd in him,
Seem'd to die too: yea at that very moment,
Conſideration like an Angel came,
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his Body as a Paradiſe,
T'invelope and contain Celeſtiall Spirits.
Never was ſuch a ſudden Schollar made:
Never came Reformation in a Flood,
With ſuch a heady currant ſcowring faults:
Nor never Hydra-headed Wilfulneſs
So ſoon did loſe his Seat; and all at once;
As in this King.

Biſh. Ely. We are bleſſed in the Change.

Biſh. Cant. Here him but reaſon in Divinity:
And all-admiring, with an inward wiſh
You would deſire the King were made a Prelate.
Hear him debate of Common-wealth affaires;
You would ſay, it hath been all in all his ſtudy:
Liſt his diſcourſe of War, and you ſhall hear
A fearfull Battell rendred you in Muſick.

Turn him to any Cauſe of Pollicy,
The Gordian Knot of it he will unlooſe,
Familiar as his Garter: that when he ſpeaks,
The Aire, a Charter'd Libertine, is ſtill,
And the mute Wonder lurketh in mens eares,
To ſteal his ſweet and honied Sentences:
So that the Art and Practick part of Life,
Muſt be the Miſtreſſe to his Theorique.
Which is a wonder how his Grace ſhould glean it,
Since his addiction was to Courſes vain,
His companies unletter'd, rude, and ſhallow,
His Houres fill'd up with Riots, Banquets, Sports;
And never noted in him any ſtudy,
Any retirement, any ſequeſtration,
From open Haunts and Popularity.

B. Ely. The Strawberry grows underneath the Nettle,
And wholeſome Berries thrive and ripen beſt,
Neighbour'd by fruit of baſer quality:
And ſo the Prince obſcur'd his Contemplation
Under the vail of wildneſſe, which (no doubt)
Grew like the Summer Graſſe, faſteſt by Night,
Unſeen, yet creſſive in his faculty.

B. Cant. It muſt be ſo; for Miracles are ceas'd:
And therefore we muſt needs admit the means,
How things are perfected.

B. Ely. But my good Lord:
How now for mittigation of this Bill,
Urg'd by the Commons? doth his Majeſty
Incline to it, or no?

B. Cant. He ſeems indifferent:
Or rather ſwaying more upon our part,
Then cheriſhing th'exhibiters againſt us
For I have made an offer to his Majeſty,
Upon our Spirituall Convocation,
And in regard of Cauſes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater Summe,
Then ever at one time the Clergy yet
Did to his Predeceſſors part withall.

B. Ely. How did this offer ſeem receiv'd, my Lord?

B. Cant. With good acceptance of his Majeſty:
Save that there was not time enough to hear,
As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have done,
The ſeverall's and unhidden paſſages
Of his true Titles to ſome certain Dukedomes,
And generally, to the Crown and ſeat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great Grandfather.

B. Ely. What was th'impediment that broke this off?

B. Cant. The French Ambaſſador upon that inſtant
Crav'd audience; and the hour I think is come,
To give him hearing: Is it four a Clock?

B. Ely. It is.

B. Cant. Then go we in, to know his Embaſſie:
Which I could with a ready gueſſe declare,
Before the Frenchman ſpeaks a word of it.

B. Ely. I'le wait upon you, and I long to hear it.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, Humfrey, Bedford, Clarence, Warwick, Weſtmerland, and Exeter.

King. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exeter. Not here in preſence.

King. Send for him, good Unckle.

Weſtm. Shall we call in th'Ambaſſadour, my Liege?

King. Not yet, my Couſin: we would be reſolv'd,
Before we hear him, of ſome things of weight,
That taske our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter two Biſhops.

B. Cant. God and his Angels guard your ſacred Throne,
And make you long become it.

King. Sure we thank you,
My learned Lord, we pray you to proceed,
And juſtly and religiouſly unfold,
Why the Law Salike, that they have in France,
Or ſhould, or ſhould not bar us in our claim:
And God forbid, my dear and faithfull Lord,
That you ſhould faſhion, wreſt, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your underſtanding Soul,
With opening Titles miſcreate, whoſe right
Sutes not in native colours with the truth:
For God doth know, how many now in health,
Shall drop their blood, in approbation
Of what your reverence ſhall incite us to.
Therefore take heed how you impawn our Perſon,
How you awake our ſleeping Sword of War;
We charge you in the name of God take heed:
For never two ſuch Kingdomes did contend,
Without much fall of blood, whoſe guiltleſſe drops
Are every one, a woe, a ſore complaint,
'Gainſt him, whoſe wrong gives edge unto the Swords,
That makes ſuch waſte in brief mortality.
Under this Conjuration, ſpeak my Lord:
For we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
That what you ſpeak is in your Conſcience waſht,
As pure as ſin with Baptiſm.

B. Can. Then hear me gracious Soveraign, & you Peers,
That owe your ſelves, your lives, and ſervices,
To this Imperiall Throne. There is no bar
To make againſt your Highneſſe claim to France,
But this which they produce from Pharamond,
In terram Salicam Mulieres ne ſuccedant,
No Woman ſhall ſucced in Salike Land:
Which Salike Land, the French unjuſtly gloze
To be the Realm of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this Law and female Bar.
Yet their own Authours faithfully affirm,
That the Land Salike is in Germany,
Between the Floods of Sala and of Elve:
VVhere Charles the Great having ſubdu'd the Saxons,
There left behind and ſettled certain French:
VVho holding in diſdain the German women,
For ſome diſhoneſt manners of their life,
Eſtabliſht then this Law; to wit, No Female
Should be Inheritrix in Salike Land:
VVhich Salike (as I ſaid) 'twixt Elve and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meiſen.
Then doth it well appear, the Salike Law
VVas not deviſed for the Realm of France:
Nor did the French poſſeſs the Salike Land,
Untill four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of King Pharamond,
Idlely ſuppos'd the founder of this Law,
VVho died within the year of our Redemption,
Four hundred twenty ſix: and Charles the Great
Subdu'd the Saxons, and did ſeat the French
Beyond the River Sala, in the year
Eight hundred five. Beſides, their VVriters ſay,
King Pepin, which depoſed Childerike,
Did as Heir generall, being deſcended
Of Blithild, which was Daughter to King Clothair,
Make Claim and Title to the Crown of France,
Hugh Capet alſo, who uſurpt the Crown

Of

Of Charles the Duke of Lorain, ſole Heir male
Of the true Line and Stock of Charles the great:
To find his Title with ſome ſhews of truth,
Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught,
Convey'd himſelf as th'Heir to th' Lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the Son
To Lewes the Emperour, and Lewes the Son
Of Charles the Great: alſo King Lewes the Tenth,
Who was ſole Heir to the Uſurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conſcience,
Wearing the Crown of France, 'till ſatisfied,
That fair Queen Iſabel, his Grandmother,
Was Lineall of the Lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foreſaid Duke of Lorain:
By the which Marriage, the Line of Charles the Great
Was re-united to the Crown of France.
So, that as clear as is the Summers Sun,
King Pepins Title, and Hugh Capets Claim,
King Lewes his ſatisfaction, all appear
To hold in Right and Title of the Female:
So do the Kings of France upon this day.
Howbeit, they would hold up this Salique Law,
To bar your Highneſſe claiming from the Female,
And rather chuſe to hide them in a Net,
Then amply to imbar their crooked Titles,
Uſurpt from you and your Progenitors.

King. May I with right and conſcience make this claim?

Biſh. Cant. The ſin upon my head, dread Soveraign;
For in the Book of Numbers, it is writ,
When the man dies, let the Inheritance
Deſcend unto the Daughter. Gracious Lord,
Stand for your own, unwind your bloudy Flag:
Look back into your mighty Anceſtors:
Go my dread Lord, to your great Grandſires Tombe,
From whom you claim; invoke his Warlike Spirit,
And your great Uncle, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedy,
Making defeat on the full Power of France:
Whiles his moſt mighty Father on a Hill
Stood ſmiling, to behold his Lyons Whelp
Forrage in bloud of French Nobility.
O Noble Engliſh, that could entertain
With half their Forces, the full pride of France,
And let another half ſtand laughing by,
And out of work, and cold for action.

Biſh. Ely. Awake remembrance of theſe valiant dead,
And with your puiſſant Arme renew their Feats;
You are their Heir, you ſit upon their Throne:
The Bloud and Courage that renowned them,
Runs in your Veins: and my thrice-puiſſant Liege
Is in the very May-Morn of his Youth,
Ripe for Exploits and mighty Enterpriſes.

Exe. Your brother Kings and Monarchs of the Earth
Do all expect, that you ſhould rouze your ſelf,
As did the former Lions of your Bloud. (might;

Weſt. They know your Grace hath cauſe, & means, and
So hath your Highneſſe, never King of England
Had Nobles richer, and more loyall Subjects,
Whoſe hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavillion'd in the field of France.

Biſh. Cant. O let their bodies follow my dear Liege
With Bloud, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right:
In aid whereof, we of the Spirituality
Will raiſe your Highneſs ſuch a mighty Sum,
As never did the Clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your Anceſtors.

King. We muſt not onely arme t'invade the French,
But lay down our proportions, to defend
Againſt the Scot, who will make road upon us,
With all advantages.

Biſh. Can. They of thoſe Marches, gracious Soveraign,
Shall be a Wall ſufficient to defend
Our in-land from the pilfering Borderers.

King. We do not mean the courſing ſnatchers onely,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been ſtill a giddy neighbour to us:
For you ſhall read, that my great Grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot, on his unfurniſht Kingdome,
Came pouring like a Tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulneſſe of his force,
Galling the gleaned Land with hot aſſayes,
Girding with grievous ſiege, Caſtles and Towns:
That England being empty of defence,
Hath ſhook and trembled at th'ill neighbourhood.

B. Can. She hath bin then more fear'd then harm'd, my (Liege
For hear her but exampl'd by her ſelf,
When all her Chevalry hath been in France,
And ſhe a mourning Widdow of her Nobles,
She hath her ſelf not onely well defended,
But taken and impounded as a Stray,
The King of Scots: whom ſhe did ſend to France,
To fill King Edwards fame with priſoner Kings,
And make their Chronicle as rich with praiſe,
As is the Owſe and bottome of the Sea
With ſunken Wrack, and ſum-leſſe Treaſuries.

Biſh. Ely. But there's a ſaying very old and true,
If that you will France win, then with Scotland firſt begin.
For once the Eagle (England) being in prey,
To her unguarded Neſt, the Weazel (Scot)
Comes ſneaking, and ſo ſucks her Princely Eggs,
Playing the Mouſe in abſence of the Cat,
To tame and havock more then ſhe can eat.

Exet. It follows then, the Cat muſt ſtay at home,
Yet that is but a cruſh'd neceſſity;
Since we have locks to ſafeguard neceſſaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the Armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th'adviſed head defends it ſelf at home:
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one conſent,
Congreeing in a full and naturall cloſe,
Like Muſick.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The ſtate of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continuall motion:
To which is fixed as an aime or butt,
Obedience: for ſo work the Hony Bees,
Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach
The Act of Order to a peopled Kingdome.
They have a King, and Officers of ſorts,
Where ſome like Magiſtrates correct at home:
Others, like Merchants venture Trade abroad:
Others, like Souldiers armed in their ſtings,
Make boot upon the Summers Velvet budds:
Which pillage, they with merry march bring home
To the Tent-Royall of their Emperor:
Who buſied in his Majeſties ſurveys,
The ſinging Maſon building roofs of Gold,
The civill Citizens kneading up the hony;
The poor Mechannick Porters, crowding in
Their heavy burthens at his narrow gate:

The sad-ey'd Justice with his surly hum,
Delivering o're to Executors pale
The lazy yawning Drone: I this infer,
That many things having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously,
As many Arrows loosed several wayes
Come to one mark: as many wayes meet in one town,
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many Lines close in the Dials center:
So may a thousand actions once a foot,
And in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my Liege,
Divide your happy England into four,
Whereof, take you one quarter into France,
And you withall shall make all Gallia shake.
If we with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried, and our Nation lose
The name of hardiness and policie.

King. Call in the Messengers sent from the Dolphin.
Now are we all resolv'd, and by Gods help
And yours, the noble sinews of our power;
France being ours, we'll bend it to our Awe,
Or break it all to pieces. Or there we'll sit,
(Ruling in large and ample Emperie,
Ore France, and all her (almost) Kingly Dukedomes)
Or lay these bones in an unworthy Urne,
Tomblesse, with no remembrance over them:
Either our History shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our Acts, or else our grave
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,
Not worshipt with a waxen Epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair Cosin Dolphin: for we hear,
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

Amb. May't please your Majesty to give us leave
Freely to render what we have in charge:
Or shall we sparingly shew you far off
The Dolphins meaning, and our Embassie.

King. We are no Tyrant, but a Christian King,
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As is our wretches fettred in our prisons:
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainness,
Tell us the Dolphins minde.

Amb. Thus then in few:
Your Highness lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain Dukedomes, in the right
Of your great Predecessor, King Edward the third.
In answer of which claim, the Prince our Master
Sayes that you savour too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd: There's nought in France,
That can be with a nimble Galliard won:
You cannot revell into Dukdomes there.
He therefore sends you meeter for your spirit
This Tun of Treasure; and in lieu of this,
Desires you let the Dukedomes that you claime
Hear no more of you. This the Dolphin speaks.

King. What Treasure Unkle?

Exe. Tennis balls, my Liege.

King. We are glad the Dolphin is so pleasant with us,
His Present, and your pains we thank you for:
When we have match'd our Rackets to these balls,
We will in France (by Gods grace) play a set,
Shall strike his fathers Crown into the hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a Wrangler,
That all the Courts of France will be disturb'd
With Chaces. And we understand him well,
How he comes o're us with our wilder dayes,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor seat of England,
And therefore living hence, did give our self
To barbarous license: and 'tis common,
That men are merriest, when they are from home.
But tell the Dolphin, I will keep my State,
Be like a King, and shew my sayle of Greatness,
When I do rowze me in my Throne of France.
For that I have laid by my Majesty,
And plodded like a man for working dayes:
But I will rise there with so full a glory,
That I will dazle all the eyes of France,
Yea strike the Dolphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant Prince, this Mock of his
Hath turn'd his balls to Gun-stones, and his soul
Shall stand sore charged, for the wastefull vengeance
That shall flye with them: for many a thousand widows
Shall this his Mock, mock out of their dear husbands;
Mock mothers from their sonns, mock Castles down:
And some are it ungotten and unborn,
That shall have cause to curse the Dolphins scorn.
But this lyes all within the will of God,
To whom I do appeal, and in whose name
Tell you the Dolphin, I am coming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightfull hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
So get you hence in peace: and tell the Dolphin,
His Jest will savour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weep more then did laugh at it.
Convey them with safe conduct. Fare ye well.

Exeunt Ambassadors.

Exe. This was a merry Message.

King. We hope to make the Sender blush at it:
Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy hour,
That may give furth'rance to our Expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore let our proportions for these Warres
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon,
That may with reasonable swiftness adde
More feathers to our Wings: for God before,
We'll chide this Dolphin at his father's door.
Therefore let every man now task his thought,
That this fair Action may on foot be brought. Exeunt

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Now all the Youth of England are on fire,
And silken Dalliance in the Wardrobe lyes:
Now thrive the Armourers, and Honour's thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man.
They sell the Pasture now, to buy the Horse,
Following the Mirror of all Christian Kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries.
For now sits expectation in the Aire,
And hides a Sword, from Hilts unto the Point,
With Crowns imperiall, Crowns and Coronets,
Promis'd to Harry, and his followers.
The French advis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadfull preparation,
Shake in their fear, and with pale Pollicy
Seek to divert the English purposes.
O England: Modell to thy inward Greatness,
Like little Body with a mighty Heart:

What mightſt thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and naturall:
But ſee, thy fault France hath in thee found out,
A neſt of hollow boſomes, which he fills
With treacherous Crowns, and three corrupted men:
One Richard Earle of Cambridge, and the ſecond
Henry Lord Scroop of Maſham, and the third
Sir Thomas Gray Knight of Northumberland,
Have for the Gilt of France (O guilt indeed)
Confirm'd Conſpiracy with fearfull France,
And by their hands, this grace of Kings muſt die,
If Hell and Treaſon hold their promiſes,
Ere he take ſhip for France; and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on, and we'll digeſt
Th'abuſe of diſtance; force a play:
The ſum is paid, the Traitors are agreed,
The King is ſet for London, and the Scene
Is now tranſported (Gentles) to Southampton,
There is the play-houſe now, there muſt you ſit,
And thence to France ſhall we convey you ſafe,
And bring you back: Charming the narrow ſeas
To give you gentle Paſſe: for if we may,
We'll not offend one ſtomack with our Play.
But till the King come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southamton we do ſhift our Scene. Exit.

Enter Corporall Nim, and Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. Well met Corporall Nim.

Nim. Good morrow Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. What, are Ancient Piſtoll and you friends yet?

Nim. For my part, I care not: I ſay little: but when time ſhall ſerve, there ſhall be ſmiles, but that ſhall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will wink and hold out mine iron: it is but a ſimple one, but what though? It will toſte Cheeſe, and it will endure cold, as another mans ſword will: and there's an end.

Bar. I will beſtow a breakfaſt to make you friends, and we'll be all three ſworn brothers to France: Let't be ſo, good Corporall Nim.

Nim. Faith, I will live ſo long as I may, that's the certain of it: and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: That is my reſt: that is the rendevous of it.

Bar. It is certain, Corporall, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and certainly ſhe did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nim. I cannot tell, Things muſt be as they may: men may ſleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and ſome ſay, knives have edges: It muſt be as it may, though patience be a tyred name, yet ſhe will plod, there muſt be Concluſions, well, I cannot tell.

Enter Piſtoll, and Quickly.

Bar. Here comes Ancient Piſtoll and his wife: good Corporall be patient here. How now, mine Hoſte Piſtoll?

Piſt. Baſe Tyke, call'ſt thou me Hoſte, now by this hand I ſwear I ſcorne the terme: nor ſhall my Nell keep Lodgers.

Hoſt. No by my troth, not long: For we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen Gentlewomen, that live honeſtly by the prick of their Needles, but it will be thought we keep a Bawdy-houſe ſtraight. O welliday Lady, if he be not hewn now, we ſhall ſee willfull adultery and murther committed.

Bar. Good Lieutenant, Good Corporall, offer nothing here. Nim. Piſh

Piſt. Piſh for thee, Iſland dog: thou prickeard curre of Iſland.

Hoſt. Good Corporall Nim, ſhew thy valor, and put up thy ſword.

Nim. Will you ſhog off? I would have you ſolus.

Piſt. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile; The ſolus in thy moſt marvellous face, the ſolus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, and in thy hatefull Lungs, yea in thy Maw perdy; and which is worſe, within thy naſty mouth. I do retort the ſolus in thy bowels, for I can take, and Piſtol's cock is up, and flaſhing fire will follow.

Nim. I am not Barbaſon, you cannot conjure me: I have an humor to knock you indifferently well: If you grow foul with me Piſtoll, I will ſcour you with my Rapier, as I may, in fair termes. If you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little in good termes, as I may, and that's the humor of it.

Piſt. O Braggard vile, and damned furious wight,
The Grave doth gape, and doting death is near,
Therefore exhale.

Bar. Hear me, hear me what I ſay: He that ſtrikes the firſt ſtroak, I'le run him up to the hilts, as I am a ſoldier.

Piſt. An oath of mickle might, and fury ſhall abate.
Give me thy firſt; thy fore-foot to me give: Thy ſpirits are moſt tall.

Nim. I will cut thy throat one time or other in fair termes, that is the humor of it.

Piſtoll. Couple a gorge that is the word. I defie thee again. O hound of Creet, think'ſt thou my ſpouſe to get? No, to the Spittle go, and from the Powdring tub of infamy, fetch forth the Lazar Kite of Creſſids kinde, Doll Tear-ſheet, ſhe by name, and her eſpouſe. I have, and I will hold the Quondam Quickly for the onely ſhe: and Pauca, there's enough to go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine Hoaſt Piſtoll, you muſt come to my Maſter, and your Hoſteſſe: He is very ſick, and would to bed. Good Bardolfe, put thy face between the ſheets, and do the Office of a Warming-man: Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away you Rogue.

Hoſt. By my troth he'l yield the Crow a pudding one of theſe dayes: the King has killd his heart. Good Huſband come preſently. Exit.

Bar. Come ſhall I make you two friends. We muſt to France together: why the devill ſhould we keep knives to cut one anothers throats?

Piſt. Let flouds o'reſwell and fiends for food howle on.

Nim. You'll pay me the eight ſhillings I won of you at Betting?

Piſt. Baſe is the ſlave that payes.

Nim. That now I will have: that's the humour of it.

Piſt. As manhood ſhall compound: puſh home. Draw.

Bard. By this ſword, he that makes the firſt thruſt, I'le kill him: by this ſword, I will.

Pi. Sword is an Oath, and Oaths muſt have their courſe.

Bar. Corporal Nim, & thou wilt be friends, be friends, and thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too: prethee put up.

Piſt. A Noble ſhalt thou have, and preſent pay, and Liquor likewiſe will I give to thee, and friendſhip ſhall combine, and brotherhood. I'le live by Nim, and Nim ſhall live by me, is not this juſt? For I ſhall Sutler be unto the Campe, and profits will accrue. Give me thy hand.

Nim

Nim. I ſhall have my Noble?
Piſt. In caſh, moſt juſtly paid.
Nim. Wel, then that's the humor of't.

Enter Hoſteſſe.

Hoſt. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John: A poor heart, he is ſo ſhak'd of a burning quotidian Tertian, that it is moſt lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nim. The King hath run bad humors on the Knight, that's the even of it.

Piſt. Nim, thou haſt ſpoke the right, his heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nim. The King is a good King, but it muſt be as it may: he paſſes ſome humors, and carreres.

Piſt. Let us condole the Knight, for (Lambkins) we will live.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Weſtmerland.

Bed. Fore God, his Grace is bold to truſt theſe traitors.
Exe. They ſhall be apprehended by and by.
Weſt. How ſmooth and even they do bear themſelves,
As if all allegeance in their boſomes ſate
Crowned with faith, and conſtant loyalty.
Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend,
By interception, which they dream not of.
Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,
Whom he hath lull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours,
That he ſhould for a forraign purſe, ſo ſell
His Soveraigns life to death and treachery.

Sound Trumpets.

Enter the King, Scroop, Cambridge, and Gray.

King. Now ſits the winde fair, and we will aboard.
My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Maſham,
And you my gentle Knight, give me your thoughts:
Think you not that the powers we bear with us
Will cut their paſſage through the force of France?
Doing the execution, and the act.
For which we have in head aſſembled them.
Scro. No doubt, my Liege, if each man do his beſt.
King. I doubt not that, ſince we are well perſwaded,
We carry not a heart with us from hence,
That grows not in a fair conſent with ours:
Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wiſh
Succeſs and Conqueſt to attend on us.
Cam. Never was a Monarch better fear'd and lov'd,
Then is your Majeſty; there's not I think a ſubject
That ſits in heart-grief and uneaſineſs
Under the ſweet ſhade of your government.
Kni. True: thoſe that were your Fathers enemies,
Have ſteep'd their gauls in honey, and do obſerve you
With hearts create of duty, and of zeal.
King. We therefore have great cauſe of thankfulneſs,
And ſhall forget the office of our hand
Sooner then quittance of deſert and merit,
According to the weight and worthineſs.
Scro. So ſervice ſhall with ſteeled ſinews toyl,
And labour ſhall refreſh it ſelf with hope
To do your Grace inceſſant ſervices.
King. We Judge no leſſe. Unkle of Exeter,
Inlarge the man committed yeſterday,
That rail'd againſt our perſon: We conſider
It was exceſſe of Wine that ſet him on,
And on his more advice, We pardon him.
Scro. That's mercy, but too much ſecurity:
Let him be puniſh'd Soveraign, leaſt example
Breed (by his ſufferance) more of ſuch a kind.
King. O let us yet be mercifull.
Cam. So may your Highneſs, and yet puniſh too.
Gray. Sir, you ſhew great mercy if you give him life,
After the taſte of much correction.
King. Alas, your too much love and care of me,
Are heavy Oriſons 'gain'ſt this poor wretch:
If little faults proceeding on diſtemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how ſhall we ſtretch our eye
When capitall crimes, chew'd, ſwallow'd, and diſgeſted,
Appears before us? We'll yet inlarge that man,
Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray, in their dear care
And tender preſervation of our perſon
Would have him puniſh'd. And now to our French cauſes,
Who are the late Commiſſioners?
Cam. I one my Lord,
Your Highneſs bad me ask for it to day.
Scro. So did you me, my Liege.
Gra. And I, my Royall Soveraign.
King. Then Richard Earle of Cambridge, there is yours:
There yours Lords Scroop of Maſham, and Sir Knight:
Gray of Northumberland, this ſame is yours:
Read them, and know I know your worthineſs.
My Lord of Weſtmerland and Unkle Exeter,
We will aboard to night. Why how now Gentlemen?
What ſee you in thoſe papers, that you loſe
So much complexion? Look ye how they change:
Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there,
That have ſo cowarded and chac'd your bloud
Out of appearance.
Cam. I do confeſſe my fault,
And do ſubmit me to your Highneſs mercy.
Gray. Scro. To which we all appeal.
King. The mercy that was quick in us but late,
By your own counſell is ſuppreſt and kill'd:
You muſt not dare (for ſhame) to talk of mercy,
For your own reaſons turn into your boſomes,
As dogs upon their Maſters, worrying you:
See you my Princes, and my Noble Peers,
Theſe Engliſh monſters: My Lord of Cambridge here,
You know how apt our love was, to accord
To furniſh him with all appertinents
Belonging to his honour; and this man,
Hath for a few light Crowns, lightly conſpir'd
And ſworn unto the practiſes of France
To kill us here in Hampton. To the which,
This Knight no leſſe for bounty bound to us
Then Cambridge is, hath likewiſe ſworn. But O,
What ſhall I ſay to thee, Lord Scroop, thou cruell,
Ingratefull, ſavage, and inhumane Creature?
Thou that didſt bear the key of all my counſells.
That knew'ſt the very bottome of my ſoul,
That (almoſt) might'ſt have coyn'd me into Gold,
Would'ſt thou have practis'd on me, for thy uſe?
May it be poſſible, that forraign hyer
Could ov'r of thee extract one ſpark of evill
That might annoy my finger? 'Tis ſo ſtrange,
That though the truth of it ſtand off as groſſe
As black and white, my eye will ſcarcely ſee it.
Treaſon and murther, ever kept together,
As two yoak devills ſworn to either purpoſe,
Working ſo groſsly in a naturall cauſe,
That admiration did not hoop at them.
But thou ('gainſt all proportion) didſt bring in
Wonder to wait on treaſon, and no murther:
And whatſoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee ſo prepoſterouſly,
Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:

And other devils that ſuggeſt by treaſons,
Do botch and bungle up damnation,
With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetcht
From gliſt'ring ſemblances of piety:
But he that temper'd thee, bad thee ſtand up,
Gave thee no inſtance why thou ſhouldſt do treaſon,
Unleſſe to dub thee with the name of Traitor.
If that ſame Dæmon that hath gull'd thee thus,
Should with his Lyon-gate walk the whole world,
He might return to vaſty Tartar back,
And tell the Legions, I can never win
A ſoul ſo eaſie as that Engliſh mans.
Oh, how haſt thou with jealouſie infected
The ſweetneſſe of affiance? Shew men dutifull?
Why ſo didſt thou. Seem they grave and learned?
Why ſo didſt thou. Come they of Noble Family?
Why ſo didſt thou. Seem they religious?
Why ſo didſt thou. Or are they ſpare in diet,
Free from groſſ paſſion, or of mirth, or anger,
Conſtant in ſpirit, not ſwerving with the bloud,
Garniſh'd and deck'd in modeſt complement,
Not working with the eye, without the ear,
And but in purged judgement truſting neither?
Such and ſo finely boulted didſt thou ſeem:
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
To make thee full fraught man, and beſt indued
With ſome ſuſpition, I will weep for thee.
For this revolt of thine, me thinks is like
Another fall of man. Their faults are open,
Arreſt them to the anſwer of the Law,
And God acquit them of their practiſes.

Exe. I arreſt thee of High Treaſon, by the name of Richard Earle of Cambridge.

I arreſt thee of High Treaſon, by the name of Thomas Lord Scroop of Marſham.

I arreſt thee of High Treaſon, by the name of Thomas Grey, Knight of Northumberland.

Scro. Our purpoſes God juſtly hath diſcover'd,
And I repent my fault more then my death,
Which I beſeech your Highneſſe to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not ſeduce,
Although I did admit it as a motive,
The ſooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention,
Which I in ſufferance heartily will rejoyce
Beſeeching God to pardon me.

Gray. Never did faithfull ſubject more rejoyce
At the diſcovery of moſt dangerous Treaſon,
Then I do at this hour joy o're my ſelf,
Prevented from a damned enterprize:
My fault, but not my body, pardon Soveraign.

King. God quit you in his mercy: Hear your ſentence.
You have conſpir'd againſt Our Royall perſon.
Joyn'd with an enemy proclaim'd; and from his Coffers
Receiv'd the Golden Earneſt of Our death:
Wherein you would have ſould your King to ſlaughter,
His Princes, and his Peers of ſervitude,
His Subjects to oppreſſion, and contempt,
And his whole Kingdome into deſolation:
Touching our perſon, ſeek we no revenge,
But we our Kingdomes ſafety muſt ſo tender,
Whoſe ruine you three ſought, that to her Lawes
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
(Poor miſerable wretches) to your death:
The taſte whereof, God of his mercy give
You patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences. Bear them hence. Exeunt.
Now Lords for France: the enterpriſe whereof
Shall be to you as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky War,
Since God ſo graciouſly hath brought to light
This dangerous Treaſon, lurking in our way
To hinder our beginning. We doubt not now,
But every Rub is ſmoothed on our way:
Then forth, dear Countreymen: Let us deliver
Our Puiſſance into the hand of God,
Putting it ſtraight in expedition.
Cheerly to Sea, the ſignes of War advance,
No King of England, if not King of France. Exeunt.

Enter Piſtoll, Nim, Bardolph, Boy, and Hoſteſs.

Hoſteſs. Prithee honey, ſweet Husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Piſtoll. No: for my manly heart doth yern. Bardolph, be blythe: Nim, rowze thy vaunting Veins: Boy, briſle thy Courage up: for Falſtaffe he is dead, and we muſt yern therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, whereſomere he is, either in Heaven, or in Hell.

Hoſteſs. Nay ſure, he's not in Hell: he's in Arthurs Boſome, if ever man went to Arthurs Boſome: a made finer end, and went away and it had been any Chriſtome Child: a parted juſt between Twelve and One, ev'n at the turning o'th'Tyde: for after I ſaw him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and ſmile upon his fingers end, I knew there was but one way: for his Noſe was as ſharpe as a Pen, and a Table of green fields. How now Sir John (quoth I?) what man? be a good cheer: ſo a cryed out, God, God, God, three or four times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a ſhould not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himſelf with any ſuch thoughts yet: ſo a bad me lay more Cloathes on his feet: I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as a ſtone: then I felt to his knees, and ſo upward and upward, all was as cold as any ſtone.

Nim. They ſay he cryed out of Sack.

Hoſteſs. I, that a did.

Bard. And of Women.

Hoſteſs. Nay, that a did not.

Boy. Yes that a did, and ſaid they were Devills incarnate.

Woman. A could never abide Carnation, 'twas a Colour he never lik'd.

Boy. A ſaid once, the Deule would have him about Women.

Hoſteſs. A did in ſome ſort (indeed) handle Women: but then he was rumatick, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember a ſaw a Flea ſtick upon Bardolph's Noſe, and ſaid it was a black Soul burning in Hell.

Bard. Well, the fuell is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the Riches I got in his ſervice.

Nim. Shall we ſhogg? the King will be gone from Southampton.

Piſt. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy Lips: Look to my Chattels, and my Moveables: Let Sences rule: The world is, Pitch and pay: truſt none: for Oaths are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and holdfaſt is the onely Dog: My Duck, therefore, Caveto be thy Counſellor. Goe, clear thy Chryſtalls. Yokefellowes in Armes, let us to France, like Horſeleeches lecches my Boyes, to ſuck, to ſuck, the very bloud to ſuck.

Boy. And that's but unwholſome food they ſay.

Piſt. Touch her ſoft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell Hoſteſs.

Nim. I cannot kiſs, that is the humour of it: but adieu.

Piſt. Let Huſwifrie appear: keep cloſe, I thee command.

Hoſteſs. Farewell: adieu. Exeunt.

Enter the French King, the Dolphin, the Dukes of Berry and Britain.

Kin. Thus comes the Engliſh with full power upon us,
And more then carefully it us concerns,
To anſwer Royally in our defences.
Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Britain,
Of Brabant and of Orleance ſhall make forth,
And you Prince Dolphin, with all ſwift diſpatch
To line and new repair our towns of War
With men of courage, and with means defendant:
For England his approaches makes as fierce,
As Waters to the ſucking of a Gulfe.
It fits us then to be as provident,
As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatall and neglected Engliſh,
Upon our fields.

Dolphin. My moſt redoubted Father,
It is moſt meet we arme us 'gainſt the Foe:
For Peace it ſelf ſhould not ſo dull a Kingdome,
(Though War nor no known Quarrel were in queſtion)
But that Defences, Muſters, Preparations,
Should be maintain'd, aſſembled and collected,
As were a War in expectation.
Therefore I ſay, 'tis meete we all go forth,
To view the ſick and feeble parts of France:
And let us do it with no ſhew of fear,
No, with no more, then if we heard that England
Were buſied with a Whitſon Morris-dance:
For, my good Liedge, ſhe is ſo idly King'd,
Her Scepter ſo phantaſtically borne,
By a vain giddy ſhallow humorous Youth,
That fear attends her not.

Conſt. O Peace, Prince Dolphin,
You are too much miſtaken in this King:
Queſtion your Grace the late Embaſſadors,
With what great State he heard their Embaſſie,
How well ſupply'd with Noble Councellors,
How modeſt in exception; and withall,
How terrible in conſtant reſolution:
And you ſhall find, his Vanities fore-ſpent,
Were but the out-ſide of the Roman Brutus,
Covering Diſcretion with a Coat of Folly;
As Gardeners do with Ordure hide thoſe Roots
That ſhall firſt ſpring, and be moſt delicate.

Dolph. Well, 'tis not ſo, my Lord High Conſtable.
But though we think it ſo, it is no matter:
In cauſes of defence, 'tis beſt to weigh
The enemy more mighty then he ſeems,
So the proportions of defence are fill'd:
Which of a weak and nigardly projection,
Doth like a Miſer ſpoil his Coat, with ſcanting
A little Cloth

King. Think we King Harry ſtrong:
And Princes, look you ſtrongly arme to meet him.
The Kindred of him hath been fleſht upon us:
And he is bred out of that bloudy ſtrain,
That haunted us in our familiar Paths:
Witneſſe our too much memorable ſhame,
When Creſſy Battell fatally was ſtruck,
And all our Princes captiv'd, by the hand
Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales:
Whiles that his Mountain Sire, on Mountain ſtanding
Up in the Aire, crown'd with the Golden Sun,
Saw his Heroicall Seed, and ſmil'd to ſee him
Mangle the Work of Nature, and deface
The Patterns, that by God and by French Fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a Stem
Of that Victorious Stock: and let us fear
The Native mightineſſe and fate of him.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſ. Embaſſadors from Harry King of England,
Do crave admittance to your Majeſty.

King. We'll give them preſent audience.
Go, and bring them.
You ſee this Chaſe is hotly followed, friends.

Dolph. Turn head, and ſtop purſuit: for coward Dogs
Moſt ſpend their mouths, when what they ſeem to threaten
Runs far before them. Good my Soveraign
Take up the Engliſh ſhort, and let them know
Of what a Monarchy you are the Head:
Self-love, my Liege, is not ſo vile a ſin,
As ſelf-neglecting.

Enter Exeter.

King. From our Brother of England?

Exe. From him, and thus he greets your Majeſty:
He wills you in the Name of God Almighty,
That you deveſt your ſelfe, and lay apart
The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heaven,
By Law of Nature, and of nations, longs
To him and to his Heirs, namely the Crown;
And all wide-ſtretched Honors, that pertain
By Cuſtome, and the Ordinance of Times,
Unto the Crown of France: that you may know
'Tis no ſiniſter, nor no awk-ward Claim,
Pickt from the Worm-holes of long-vaniſht dayes,
Nor from the duſt of old Oblivion rakt,
He ſends you this moſt memorable Line,
In every Branch truly demonſtrative;
Willing you over-look this Pedigree:
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his moſt fam'd, of famous Anceſtors,
Edward the third; he bids you then reſign
Your Crown and Kingdome indirectly held
From him the Native and true Challenger.

King. Or elſe what follows?

Exe. Bloudy conſtraint: for if you hide the Crown
Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it.
Therefore in fierce Tempeſt is he coming,
In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a Jove:
That if requiring fail, he will compell.
And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the Crown, and to take mercy
On the poor Souls for whom this hungry War
Opens his vaſty Jawes: and on your head
Turning the Widows Teares, the Orphans Cryes,
The dead-mens Bloud, the privy Maidens Groans,
For Husbands, Fathers, and betrothed Lovers,
That ſhall be ſwallowed in this Controverſie.
This is his Claim, his threatning, and my Meſſage:
Unleſſe the Dolphin be in preſence here;
To whom expreſſely I bring greeting too.

King. For

King. For us, we will consider of this further:
To morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our Brother of England.
Dolph. For the Dolphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?
Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not mis-become
The mighty Sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus sayes my King: and if your Father's Highness
Doe not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter Mock you sent his Majesty;
He'le call you to so hot an Answer of it,
That Caves and Womby Vaultages of France
Shall chide your Trespas, and return your Mock
In second Accent of his Ordinance.
Dolph. Say: if my Father render fair return,
It is against my will: for I desire
Nothing but Oddes with England,
To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanity,
I did present him with the Paris-Balls.
Ex. He'le make your Paris Lover shake for it,
Were it the Mistresse Court of mighty Europe:
And be assur'd, you'le find a diff'rence,
As we his Subjects have in wonder found,
Between the promise of his greener dayes,
And these he masters now: now he weighs Time
Even to the utmost Grain: that you shall read
In your own Losses, if he stay in France.
King. To morrow shall you know our mind at full.
Flourish.
Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, least that our King
Come here himself to question our delay;
For he is footed in this Land already.
King. You shall be soon dispatcht, with fair conditions.
A Night is but small breathe, and little pause,
To answer matters of this consequence. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Chorus.

Thus with imagin'd wing our swift Scene flyes,
In motion of no lesse celerity then that of Thought.
Suppose, that you have seen
The well-appointed King at Dover Peer,
Embark his Royalty: and his brave Fleet,
With silken Streamers, the young Phebus faining;
Play with your Fancies: and in them behold,
Upon the Hempen Tackle, Ship-boyes climbing;
Hear the shrill Whistle, which doth order give
To sounds confus'd: behold the threaden Sails,
Born with th'invisible and creeping Wind,
Draw the huge Bottomes through the furrowed Sea,
Bresting the lofty Surge. O, do but think
You stand upon the Rivage, and behold
A Citie on th'inconstant Billowes dancing:
For so appears this Fleet Majestical,
Holding due course to Harflew. Follow, follow.
Grapple your minds to sternage of this Navy,
And leave your England as dead Mid-night, still,
Guarded with Grandsires, Babies, and old Women,
Either past, or not arriv'd to pith and puissance:
For who is he, whose Chin is but enricht
With one appearing Hair, that will not follow
These cull'd and choice-drawn Cavaliers to France?
Work, work your Thoughts, and therein see a Siege:
Behold the Ordenance on their Carriages,
With fatal mouthes gaping on girded Harflew,
Suppose th'Embassador from the French comes back:
Tells Harry, That the King doth offer him
Katherine his Daughter, and with her to Dowrie,
Some petty and unprofitable Dukedomes.
The offer likes not: and the nimble Gunner
With Lynstock now the devilish Cannon touches.
Alarum, and Chambers go off.
And down goes all before him. Still be kind,
And ech out our performance with your mind. Exit.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Glocester.
Alarum. Scaling-Laddere at Harflew.

King. Once more unto the Breach,
Dear friends, once more;
Or close the Wall up with our English dead:
In Peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
As modest stilnesse and humility:
But when the blast of War blowes in our eares,
Then imitate the action of the Tyger:
Stiffen the sinewes, commune up the bloud,
Disguise fair Nature with hard-favour'd Rage:
Then lend the Eye a terrible aspect:
Let it pry through the portage of the Head,
Like the Brass Cannon: let the Brow o'rewhelm it,
As fearfully, as doth a galled Rock
O're-hang and jutty his confounded Base,
Swill'd with the wilde and wastfull Ocean.
Now set the Teeth, and stretch the Nosthril wide,
Hold hard the Breath, and bend up every Spirit
To his full height. On, you Noblest English,
Whose bloud is fet from Fathers of War-proof:
Fathers, that like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from Morn till Even fought,
And sheath'd their Swords for lack of argument.
Dishonour not your Mothers: now attest,
That those whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you.
Be Coppy now to me of grosser bloud,
And teach them how to Warre. And you good Yeomen,
Whose Limbs were made in England; shew us here
The mettel of your Pasture: let us swear,
That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not:
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not Noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like Grey-hounds in the slips,
Straying upon the Start. The Game's a-foot:
Follow your Spirit; and upon this Charge,
Cry, God for Harry, England, and S. George.
Alarum, and Chambers go off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on, to the Breach, to the Breach.
Nim. 'Pray thee Corporal stay, the Knocks are too hot: and for mine own part, I have not a Case of Lives: the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plain-Song of it.
Pist. The plain-Song is most just: for humors do abound: Knocks goe and come: Gods Vassals drop and dye: and Sword and Shield, in bloudy Field, doth winne immortal fame.
Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London, I would give all my Fame for a Pot of Ale, and safety.

Piſt. And I: if wiſhes would prevail with me, my purpoſe ſhould not fail with me; but thither would I hye.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as Bird doth ſing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the breach, you Dogs; avant you Cullions.

Piſt. Be merciſull great Duke to men of Mould, abate thy Rage, abate thy manly Rage; abate thy Rage, great Duke. Good Bawcock bate thy Rage: uſe lenity ſweet Chuck.

Nim. Theſe be good humors: your Honour wins bad humors. Exit.

Boy. As young as I am, I have obſerv'd theſe three Swaſhers. I am Boy to them all three, but all they three though they would ſerve me, could not be Man to me; for indeed three ſuch Antiques do not amount to a man: for Bardolph, he is white-liver'd, and red-fac'd; by the means whereof, a faces it out, but fights not: for Piſtol, he hath a killing Tongue, and a quiet Sword; by the means whereof, a breaks Words, and keeps whole Weapons: for Nim, he hath heard, that men of few Words are the beſt men, and therefore he ſcorns to ſay his Prayers, leſt a ſhould be thought a Coward: but his few bad Words are matcht with as few good Deeds; for a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was againſt a Poſt, when he was drunk. They will ſteal any thing, and call it Purchaſe. Bardolph ſtole a Lute-caſe, bore it twelve Leagues, and ſold it for three half-pence. Nim and Bardolph are ſworn Brothers in filching: and in Callice they ſtole a fire-ſhovel. I knew by that piece of Service, the men would carry Coals. They would have me as familiar with men's Pockets, as their Gloves or their Hand-kerchers: which makes much againſt my Manhood, if I ſhould take from another's Pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain pocketting up of Wrongs. I muſt leave them, and ſeek ſome better Service: their Villany goes againſt my weak ſtomack, and therefore I muſt caſt it up. Exit.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Captain Fluellen, you muſt come preſently to the Mynes; the Duke of Glouceſter would ſpeak with you.

Flu. To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not ſo good to come to the Mynes: for look you, the Mynes are not according to the diſciplines of War; the concavities of it is not ſufficient: for look you, th'athverſary, you may diſcuſſe unto the Duke, look you, is digt himſelf four yard under the Countermines: by Cheſhu, I think a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gower. The Duke of Glouceſter, to whom the Order of the Siege is given, is altogether directed by an Iriſh man, a very valiant Gentleman yfaith.

Welch. It is Captain Makmorrice, is it not?

Gower. I think it be.

Welch. By Cheſhu he is an Aſſe, as in the World, I will verifie as much in his Beard: he ha's no more directions in the true diſciplines of the Warres, look you, of the Roman diſciplines, then is a Puppy-dog.

Enter Makmorrice, and Captain Jamy.

Gower. Here a comes, and the Scots Captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Welch. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous Gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th'aunchiant Warres, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheſhu he will maintain his Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the diſciplines of the Priſtine Warres of the Romans.

Scot. I ſay gudday, Captain Fluellen.

Welch. Godden to your Worſhip, good Captain James.

Gower. How now Captain Makmorrice, have you quit the Mynes? have the Pioners given o're?

Iriſh. By Chriſh Law tiſh ill done: the Work iſh give over, the Trompet ſound the Retreat. By my Hand I ſwear, and my father's Soul, the VVork iſh ill done: it iſh give over: I would have blowed up the Town, ſo Chriſh ſave me law, in an hour. O tiſh ill done, tiſh ill done: by my Hand tiſh ill done.

Welch. Captain Makmorrice, I beſeech you now, will you voutſafe me, look you, a few diſputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the diſciplines of the VVar, the Roman VVarres, in the way of Argument, look you, and friendly communication: partly to ſatisfie my Opinion, and partly for the ſatisfaction, look you, of my Mind: as touching the direction of the Military diſcipline, that is the Point.

Scot. It ſall be vary gud, gud feith, gud Captens bath, and I ſall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occaſion: that ſall I mary.

Iriſh. It is no time to diſcourſe, ſo Chriſh ſave me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to diſcourſe, the Town is beſeech'd: and the Trumpet calls us to the breech, and we talk, and be Chriſh do nothing, tis ſhame for us all: ſo God ſa'me tis ſhame to ſtand ſtill, it is ſhame by my hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Works to be done, and there iſh nothing done, ſo Chriſt ſa'me law.

Scot. By the Mes, ere theiſe eyes of mine take themſelves to ſlomber, ayle de gud ſervice, or Ile ligge i'th' grund for it; ay, or go to death: and Ile pay't as valorouſly as I may, that ſall I ſurely doe, the breff and the long: mary, I wad full fain heard ſome queſtion 'tween you tway.

Welch. Captain Makmorrice, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your Nation.

Iriſh. Of my Nation? What iſh my Nation? Iſh a Villain, and a Baſterd, and a Knave, and a Raſcal. What iſh my Nation? Who talks of my Nation?

Welch. Look you, if you take the matter otherwiſe then is meant, Captain Mackmorrice, peradventure I ſhall think you do not uſe me with that affability, as in diſcretion you ought to uſe me, look you, being as good a man as your ſelf both in the diſciplines of War, and in the derivation of my Birth, and in other particularities.

Iriſh. I do not know you ſo good a man as my ſelf, ſo Chriſh ſave me, I will cut off your Head.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will miſtake each other.

Scot. A, that's a foul fault. A Parley.

Gower. The Town ſounds a Parley.

Welch. Captain Makmorrice, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be ſo bold as to tell you, I know the diſciplines of War, and there is an end. Exit.

Enter the King and all his Train before the Gates.

King. How yet reſolves the Governour of the Town? This is the lateſt Parle we will admit:

There

Therefore to our best mercy give your selves,
Or like to men proud of destruction,
Defie us to our worst: for as I am a Souldier,
A Name that in my thoughts becomes me best;
If I begin the batt'rie once again,
I will not leave the half-atchieved Harflew,
'Till in her ashes she lye buried.
The Gates of Mercy shall be all shut up,
And the flesh'd Souldier, rough and hard of heart,
In liberty of bloudy hand, shall range
With Conscience wide as Hell, mowing like Grass
Your fresh fair Virgins, and your flowring Infants.
What is it then to me, if impious War,
Arrayed in games like to the Prince of Fiends,
Do with his smircht complexion of fell feats,
Enlinckt to waste and desolation?
What is't to me, when you your selves are cause,
If your pure Maidens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing Violation?
What Rein can hold licentious Wickedness,
When down the Hill he holds his fierce Career?
We may as bootless spend our vain Command
Upon th'enraged Souldiers in their spoil,
As send Precepts to the Leviathan to come a-shoar.
Therefore, you men of Harflew,
Take pitie of your Town and of your People,
Whiles yet my Souldiers are in my Command,
Whiles yet the cool and temperate VVind of Grace
O're-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds
Of heady Murther, Spoil, and Villany.
If not: why in a moment look to see
The blind and bloudy Souldier, with foul hand
Desire the Locks of your shrill-shreiking Daughters:
Your Fathers taken by the silver Beards,
And their most reverend Heads dasht to the Walls:
Your naked Infants spitted upon Pikes,
Whiles the mad Mothers, with their howles confus'd,
Do break the Clouds; as did the Wives of Jewry,
At Herod's bloudy-hunting slaughter-men.
What say you? Will you yield, and this avoid?
Or guilty in defence be thus destroy'd.

Enter Governour.

Gover. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dolphin, whom of Succours we entreated,
Returns us, that his Powers are yet not ready,
To raise so great a Siege. Therefore great King,
VVe yield our Town and Lives to thy soft Mercy:
Enter our Gates, dispose of us and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.

King. Open your Gates: Come Uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harflew, there remain,
And fortifie it strongly 'gainst the French:
Use mercy to them all for us, dear Uncle.
The Winter comming on, and Sickness growing
Upon our Souldiers, we will retire to Calis.
To night in Harflew will we be your Guest,
To morrow for the March are we addrest.

Flourish, and enter the Town.

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angleterre, & tu parlois bien le Language.

Alice. En peu Madame.

Kath. Ie te prie m'enseigner, il faut que j'apprenne a parler. Comment appellé vous la main en Anglois?

Alice. La main, il est appellé, de Hand.

Kath. De Hand.

Alice. Et le doyt.

Ka. Le doyt, ma foy ie oublie le doyt, mais ie me souviendray le doyt, ie pense qu'ils ont appellé de fingres, on de fingres.

Alice. La main, de Hand, le doyt, le Fingres, le pense que ie suis le bon escholier.

Kath. I' ay gaigné deux mots d' Anglois vistement, comment appellé vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles, les appellons de Nayles.

Kath. De Nayles escoutez: dites moy, si ie parle bien: de Hand, de Fingres, de Nayles.

Alice. C'est bien dit Madame, il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moy en Anglois le bras.

Alice. De Arme, Madame.

Kath. Et le coude.

Alice. D'Elbow.

Kath. D'Elbow: Ie m'en faitz la repetition de tous les mots que m'avez apprins dés a present.

Alice. Il est trop difficile Madame, comme ie pense.

Kath. Excuse moy Alice, escoute, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, d' Arme, de Bilbow.

Alice. D'elbow, Madame.

Kath. O Signeur Dieu, ie men oublie d'Elbow, comment appellé vous le col?

Alice. De Neck, Madame.

Kath. De Neck, & le manton?

Alice. De Chin.

Kath. De Sin: le col, de Neck; le manton, de Sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur en verité vous prononcies les mots aussi droict, que le Natiffs d' Angleterre.

Kath. Ie ne doute point d' apprendre par le grace de Dieu, & en peu de temps.

Al. N' avez vous pas desia oublie ce que ie vous ay enseigné.

Kath. Nomme, ie reciteray a vous promptement d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, Madame.

Alice. De Nayles, Madame.

Kath. De Nayles, de Arme, de Ilbow.

Alice. Sans vostre honneur d'Elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-ie de'Elbow, de Neck, de Sin: comment appellé vous les p'eds & de roba.

Alice. Le Foot Madame, & le Count.

Kath. Le Foot, & le Count: O Signieur Dieu, ce sont des mots mauvais, corruptible & impudique, & non pour les Dames d'Honneur d'user: Ie ne vendrois prononcer ces mots devant les Signeurs de France, pour tout le monde, il faut le Foot, & le Count, neant moins, Ie reciteray un autrefois ma lecon ensemble, d' Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, d' Arme, d' Elbow, de Neck, de Sin, de Foot, de Count.

Alice. Excellent, Madame.

Ka. C'est assez pour une fois, allons nous en disner. Exeunt.

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, the Constable of France, and others.

King. 'Tis certain he hath past the River Some.

Const. And if he be not fought withall, my Lord,
Let us not live in France: let us quit all,
And give our Vineyards to a barbarous People.

Dolph. O Dieu vivant! shall a few Sprayes of us,
The emptying of our Fathers Luxury,
Our Syens, put in wild and savage Stock,
Spirt up so suddenly into the Clouds,
And ovar-look their Grafters?

Brit. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards.
Mort de ma vie, if they march along
Unfought withall, but I will sell my Dukedome,

To buy a slobry and a dirty Farm
In that nook-shotten Ile of Albion.
Const. Dieu de Battailles! where have they this met-
Is not their Climate foggy, raw, and dull? [tel?
On whom, as in despight, the Sun looks pale,
Killing their Fruit with frowns? Can sodden Water,
A Drench for sur-reyn'd Jades, their Barly broth,
Decoct their cold bloud to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick bloud, spirited with Wine,
Seem frosthe? O, for the honour of our Land,
Let us not hang like roping Icicles
Upon our Houses Thatch, whiles a more frostie People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poor we may call them, in their Native Lords.
Dolph. By Faith and Honour,
Our Madames mock at us, and plainly say,
Our Mettel is bred out, and they will give
Their bodies to the Lust of English Youth,
To new-store France with Bastard Warriors.
Brit. They bid us to the English Dancing-Schools,
And teach Lavolta's high, and swift Carranto's,
Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heels.
And that we are most lofty Run-awayes.
King. Where is Montjoy the Herald? speed him hence,
Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.
Up Princes, and with spirit of Honour edged,
More sharper then your Swords, high to the field:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
You Dukes of Orleance, Burbon, and of Berry,
Alanson, Brabant, Bar, and Burgondie,
Jaques Chatillion, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grand Pree, Rouffi, and Faulconbridge,
Loys, Lestrale, Bouciquall, and Charaloyes,
High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings:
For your great Seats, now quit you of great shames:
Barre Harry England, that sweeps through our Land
With Penons painted in the bloud of Harflew:
Rush on his Host, as doth the melted Snow
Upon the Vallies, whose low Vassal Seat,
The Alpes doth spit, and void his rhewm upon.
Go down upon him, you have Power enough,
And in a Captive Chariot, into Roan
Bring him our Prisoner.
Const. This becomes the Great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His Souldiers sick, and famisht in the March:
For I am sure, when he shall see our Army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And for Atchievement, offer us his Ransome.
King. Therefore Lord Constable, haste on Montjoy,
And let him say to England, that we send,
To know what willing Ransome he will give.
Prince Dolphin, you shall stay with us in Roan.
Dolph. Not I, I do beseech your Majesty.
King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.
Now forth Lord Constable, and Princes all;
And quickly bring us word of Englands fall. Exeunt.

Enter Captains, Welch and English, Gower, and Fluellen.

Gower. How now Captain Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?
Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent Services committed at the Bridge.
Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?
Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon, and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not, God be praised and blessed, any hurt in the World, but keeps the Bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an auncient Lievtenant there at the Pridge, I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Anthony, and he is a man of no estimation in the World, but I did see him doe as gallant service.
Gow. What do you call him?
Flu. He is call'd aunchient Pistol.
Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. Here is the man.
Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to doe me favours: the Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.
Flu. I, I praise God, and I have merited some love at his hands.
Pist. Bardolph, a Souldier firm and sound of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by cruel Fate, and giddy Fortunes furious fickle Wheel, that goddesse blind, that stands upon the rolling restlesse Stone.
Flu. By your patience, aunchient Pistol: Fortune is painted blind, with a Muffler afore his eyes, to signifie to you, that Fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a Wheel, to signifie to you, which is the Moral of it, that she is turning and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a Spherical Stone, which rowles, and rowles, and rowles: in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent Moral.
Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him: for he hath stoln a Pax, and hanged must a be: damned death: let Gallowes gape for Dog, let Man goe free, and let not Hemp his Wind-pipe suffocate: but Exeter hath given the doom of death, for Pax of little price. Therefore goe speak, the Duke will hear thy voice; and let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut with edge of Penny-Cord, and vile reproach. Speak Captain for his Life, and I will thee requite.
Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.
Pist. Why then rejoyce therefore.
Flu. Certainly Aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my Brother, I would desire the Duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.
Pist. Die, and be damn'd, and Figo for thy friendship.
Flu. It is well.
Pist. The Fig of Spain. Exit.
Flu. Very good.
Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Rascal, I remember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purse.
Flu. I'le assure you, a utt'red as prave words at the Pridge, as you shall see in a Summers day: but it is very well: what he ha's spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is serve.
Gow. Why 'tis a Gull, a Fool: a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himself at his return into London, under the form of a Souldier, and such fellows are perfit in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learn you by rote where Services were done; at such and such a Sconce, at such a Breach, at such a Convoy: who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what termes the Enemy stood on: and this they conne perfitly in the phrase of War; which they trick up

up with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generals Cut, and a horrid Sute of the Camp, will do among foming Bottles, and Ale-washt wits, is wonderfull to be thought on: but you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower: I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make shew to the World he is: if I find a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my mind: hear you, the King is comming, and I must speak with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and his poor Souldiers.

Flu. God pless your Majesty.

King. How now Fluellen, cam'st thou from the Bridge?

Flu. I, so please your Majesty: The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry, th'athversary was have possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Majesty, the Duke is a prave man.

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th'athversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry for my part, I think the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for Robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Majesty know the man: his face is all bubukles and whelks, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plew, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

King. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give expres charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pai'd for: none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainfull Language: for when Levity and Cruelty play for a Kingdome, the gentler Gamester is the sooneft winner.

Tucket. Enter Mountjoy.

Mountjoy. You know me by my habit.

King. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mount. My Master's mind.

King. Unfold it.

Mountjoy. Thus sayes my King: Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seem'd dead, we did but sleep: Advantage is a better Souldier then Rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuk'd him at Harflew, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury, till it were full ripe. Now we speak upon our Q. and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his Ransome, which must proportion the losses we have born, the Subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his Exchequer is too poor; for th'effusion of our bloud, the Muster of his Kingdome too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this adde defiance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc't: So far my King and Master; so much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Moun. Mountjoy.

King. Thou do'st thy Office fairly. Turn thee back,
And tell thy King, I do not seek him now,
But could be willing to march on to Callice,
Without impeachment: for to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdome to confess so much
Unto an Enemy of Craft and Vantage,
My people are with sickness much enfeebled,
My numbers lessen'd: and those few I have,
Almost no better then so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell the Herald,
I thought, upon one pair of English Legs
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God,
That I do brag thus; this your air of France
Hath blown that vice in me. I must repent:
Go therefore tell thy Master, here I am;
My Ransome, is this frail and worthless Trunk;
My Army, but a weak and sickly Guard:
Yet God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himself, and such another Neighbour
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountjoy.
Go bid thy Master well advise himself,
If we may pass, we will: if we be hindred,
We shall your tawny ground with your red bloud
Discolour: and so Montjoy fare you well.
The summ of all our Answer is but this:
We would not seek a Battel as we are,
Nor as we are, we say we will not shun it:
So tell your Master.

Mount. I shall deliver so: Thanks to your Highness.

Glou. I hope they will not come upon us now.

King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs:
March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night,
Beyond the River we'll encamp our selves,
And on to morrow bid them march away. Exeunt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Ramburs, Orleance, Dolphin, with others.

Const. Tut, I have the best Armour of the World: would it were day.

Orl. You have an excellent Armour: but let my Horse have his due.

Const. It is the best Horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be Morning?

Dolph. My Lord of Orleance, and my Lord High Constable, you talk of Horse and Armour?

Orl. You are as well provided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horse with any that treads but on four pasternes: ch'ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrails were haires: le Cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu. When I bestride him, I soar, I am a Hawk: he trots the air: the Earth sings, when he touches it: the basest horn of his hoof, is more Musical then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perseus: he is pure Air and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water never appear in him, but only in patient stilness while his Rider mounts him: he is indeed a Horse, and all other Jades you may call Beasts.

Const. Indeed my Lord, it is a moſt abſolute and excellent Horſe.

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orl. No more Couſin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot from the riſing of the Lark to the lodging of the Lamb, vary deſerved praiſe on my Palfray: it is a Theme as fluent as the Sea: Turn the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horſe is argument for them all: 'tis a ſubject for a Soveraign to reaſon on, and for a Soveraigns Soveraign to ride on: And for the World, familiar to us, and unknown, to lay a-part their particular Functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a Sonnet in his praiſe, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I have heard a Sonnet begin ſo to ones Miſtreſſe.

Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my Courſer, for my Horſe is my Miſtreſs.

Orl. Your Miſtreſs beares well.

Dolph. Me well, which is the preſcript praiſe and perfection of a good and particular Miſtreſs.

Conſt. Nay, for me thought yeſterday your Miſtreſs ſhrewdly ſhook your back.

Dolph. So perhaps did yours.

Conſt. Mine was not bridled.

Dolph. O then belike ſhe was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kerne of Ireland, your French Hoſe off, and in your ſtrait Stroſſers.

Conſt. You have good judgement in Horſemanſhip.

Dolph. Be warn'd by me then: they that ride ſo, and ride not warily, fall into foul Boggs: I had rather have my Horſe to my Miſtreſſe.

Conſt. I had as lieve have my Miſtreſſe a Jade.

Dolph. I tell thee Conſtable, my Miſtreſſe weares his own hair.

Conſt. I could make as true a boaſt as that, if I had a Sow to my Miſtreſſe.

Dol. Le chien eſt retourné a ſon propre vomiſſement, eſt la levye lavee au bourbier: thou mak'ſt uſe of any thing.

Conſt. Yet do I not uſe my Horſe for my Miſtreſſe, or any ſuch Proverb, ſo little kin to the purpoſe.

Ramb. My Lord Conſtable, the Armour that I ſaw in your Tent to night, are thoſe Starres or Sunnes upon it.

Conſt. Starres my Lord.

Dolph. Some of them will fall to morrow, I hope.

Conſt. And yet my Sky ſhall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you bear a many ſuperfluouſly, and 'twere more honour ſome were away.

Conſt. Ev'n as your Horſe beares your praiſes, who would trot as well, were ſome of your bragges diſmounted.

Dolph. Would I were able to load him with his deſert. Will it never be day? I will trot to morrow a mile, and my way ſhall be paved with Engliſh Faces.

Conſt. I will not ſay ſo, for fear I ſhould be fac't out of my way: but I would it were morning, for I would faine be about the eares of the Engliſh.

Ramb. Who will goe Hazard with me for twenty Priſoners?

Conſt. You muſt firſt goe your ſelf to hazard, ere you have them.

Dolph. 'Tis Mid-night, Ile go arme my ſelf. Exit.

Orl. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Ramb. He longs to eat the Engliſh.

Conſt. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white Hand of my Lady, he's a gallant Prince.

Conſt. Swear by her Foot, that ſhe may tread out the Oath.

Orleance. He is ſimply the moſt active Gentleman of France.

Conſt. Doing is activity, and he will ſtill be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Conſt. Nor will do none to morrow: he will keep that good name ſtill.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Conſt. I was told that, by one that knowes him better then you.

Orl. What's he?

Conſt. Marry he told me ſo himſelf, and he ſaid he car'd not who knew it.

Orleance. He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him.

Conſt. By my faith, Sir, but it is: never any body ſaw it, but his Lacquey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. Ill will never ſaid well.

Conſt. I will cap that Proverb with, There is flattery in friendſhip.

Orl. And I will take up that with, Give the Devil his due.

Conſt. Well plac't: there ſtands your friend for the Devil: have at the very eye of that Proverb with, A Pox of the Devil.

Orl. You are the better at Proverbs, by how much a Fools Bolt is ſoon ſhot.

Conſt. You have ſhot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the firſt time you were over-ſhot.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſen. My Lord high Conſtable, the Engliſh lye within fifteen hundred paces of your Tents.

Conſt. Who hath meaſur'd the ground?

Meſ. The Lord Grandpree.

Conſt. A valiant and moſt expert Gentleman. Would it were day. Alas poor Harry of England: he longs not for the Dawning, as we doe.

Orl. What a wretched and peeviſh fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers ſo far out of his knowledge.

Conſt. If the Engliſh had any apprehenſion, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack: for if their Heads had any intellectual Armour, they could never wear any ſuch heavy Head-pieces.

Ramb. That Iland of England breeds very valiant Creatures; their Maſtiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orleance. Fooliſh Curres, that run winking into the mouth of a Ruſſian Bear, and have their heads cruſht like rotten Apples: you may as well ſay, that's a valiant Flea, that dare to eat his breakfaſt on the Lip of a Lyon.

Conſt. Juſt, juſt: and the men do ſympathize with the Maſtiffs, in robuſtious and rough comming on, leaving their Wits with their Wives: and then give them great Meales of Beef, and Iron and Steel; they will eat like Wolves, and fight like Devils.

Or. I,

Orl. I, but these English are shrewdly out of Beef.

Const. Then shall we find to morrow, they have only stomacks to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arme: come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two a Clock: but let me see, by ten
We shall have each a hundred English men. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Chorus.

Now entertain conjecture of a time,
When creeping Murmur and the poring Dark
Fills the wide Vessel of the Universe.
From Camp to Camp, through the foul Womb of Night
The Humme of either Army stilly sounds,
That the fixt Centinels almost receive
The secret Whispers of each others Watch.
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each Battel sees the others umber'd face.
Steed threatens Steed, in high and boastfull Neighs
Piercing the Nights dull Ear: and from the Tents,
The Armourers accomplishing the Knights,
With busie Hammers closing Rivets up,
Give dreadfull note of preparation.
The Countrey Cocks do crow, the Clocks do towle:
And the third hour of drowsie Morning nam'd,
Proud of their Numbers, and secure in Soul,
The confident and over-lusty French,
Doe the low-rated English play at Dice;
And chide the creeple-tardy-gated Night,
Who like a foul and ugly Witch doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,
Like Sacrifices, by their watchfull Fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The Mornings danger, and their gesture sad,
Investing lank-lean Cheeks, and War-worn Coats,
Presented them unto the gazing Moon
So many horrid Ghosts. O now, who will behold
The Royal Captain of this ruin'd Band
Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent;
Let him cry, Praise and Glory on his head:
For forth he goes, and visits all his Host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest Smile,
And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countreymen.
Upon his Royal Face there is no note,
How dread an Army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of Colour
Unto the weary and all-watched Night:
But freshly looks, and over-bears Attaint,
With chearfull semblance, and sweet Majesty:
That every Wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Looks.
A Largesse universal, like the Sun,
His liberal Eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the Night,
And so our Scene must to the Battel flie:
Where, O for pitie, we shall much disgrace,
With four or five most vile and ragged foiles
(Right ill dispos'd, in brawl ridiculous)
The Name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see,
Minding true things, by what their Mock'ries be.
Exit.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucester.

King. Gloster, 'tis true that we are in great danger,
The greater therefore should our Courage be.
Good morrow Brother Bedford: God Almighty,
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distill it out.
For our bad Neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward Consciences,
And Preachers to us all; admonishing,
That we should dresse us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed,
And make a Moral of the Devil himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft Pillow for that good white Head,
Were better then a churlish turf of France.

Erping. Not so my Liege, this Lodging likes me better,
Since I may say, now lye I like a King.

King. 'Tis good for men to love their present pain,
Upon example, so the Spirit is eased:
And when the Mind is quickned, out of doubt
The Organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsie Grave, and newly move
With casted slough, and fresh celerity.
Lend me thy Cloak Sir Thomas: Brothers both,
Commend me to the Princes in our Camp:
Do my good morrow to them, and anon
Desire them all to my Pavillion.

Gloster. We shall, my Liege.

Erping. Shall I attend your Grace?

King. No my good Knight:
Go with my Brothers to my Lords of England:
I and my Bosome must debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erping. The Lord in Heaven blesse thee, Noble Harry.
Exeunt.

King. God a mercy old Heart, thou speak'st chearfully.

Enter Pistol.

Pist. Che vous la?

King. A friend.

Pist. Discusse unto me, art thou Officer, or art thou base, common, and popular?

King. I am a Gentleman of a Company.

Pist. Trayl'st thou the puissant Pike?

King. Even so: what are you?

Pist. As good a Gentleman as the Emperour.

King. Then you are a better then the King.

Pist. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold, a Lad of Life, an Impe of Fame, of Parents good, of Fist most valiant: I kiss his dirty shooe, and from heart-string I love the lovely Bully. What is thy Name?

King. Harry le Roy.

P. Le Roy? a Cornish Name: art thou of Cornish Crew?

King. No, I am a Welchman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

King. Yes.

Pist. Tell him I'le knock his Leek about his Pate upon S. Davies day.

King. Do not you wear your Dagger in your Cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art

Piſt. Art thou his friend?
King. And his Kinſman too.
Piſt. The Figo for thee then.
King. I thank you: God be with you.
Piſt. My name is Piſtol call'd. Exit.
King. It ſorts well with your fierceneſſe.
Manet King.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gower. Captain Fluellen.
Flu. 'So, in the Name of Jeſu Chriſt, ſpeak fewer: it is the greateſt admiration in the univerſal World, when the true and aunchiént Prerogatifes and Lawes of the Warres is not kept: if you would take the paines but to examine the Warres of Pompey the Great, you ſhall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle, nor pibble babble in Pompey's Camp: I warrant you, you ſhall find the Ceremonies of the Warres, and the Cares of it, and the Formes of it, and the Sobriety of it, and the Modeſty of it, to be otherwiſe.
Gower. Why the Enemy is loud, you hear him all Night.
Flu. If the Enemie is an Aſſe and a Fool, and a prating Coxcombe; is it meet, think you, that we ſhould alſo, look you, be an Aſſe and a Fool, and a prating Coxcombe, in your own conſcience now?
Gow. I will ſpeak lower.
Flu. I pray you, and beſeech you, that you will. Exit.
King. Though it appear a little out of faſhion,
There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter three Souldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the Morning which breaks yonder?
Bates. I think it be: but we have no great cauſe to deſire the approach of day.
Williams. We ſee yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we ſhall never ſee the end of it. Who goes there?
King. A friend.
Will. Under what Captain ſerve you?
King. Under Sir John Erpingham.
Will. A good old Commander, and a moſt kind Gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our eſtate?
King. Even as men wrackt upon a Sand, that look to be waſht off the next Tide.
Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King?
King. No: nor it is not meet he ſhould: for though I ſpeak it to you, I think the King is but a man, as I am: the Violet ſmells to him, as it doth to me; the Element ſhewes to him, as it doth to me; all his ſenſes have but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies laid by, in his Nakedneſſe he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they ſtoop, they ſtoop with the like wing: therefore, when he ſees reaſon of feares, as we doe; his feares, out of doubt, be of the ſame reliſh as ours are: yet in reaſon, no man ſhould poſſeſs him with any appearance of fear; leſt he, by ſhewing it, ſhould dis-hearten his Army.
Bates. He may ſhew what outward courage he will: but I believe as cold a Night as 'tis, he could wiſh himſelf in Thames up to the Neck; and ſo I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, ſo we were quit here.
King. By my troth, I will ſpeak my conſcience of the King: I think he would not wiſh himſelf any where, but where he is.
Bates. Then would he were here alone; ſo ſhould he be ſure to be ranſomed, and a many poor mens lives ſaved.
King. I dare ſay, you love him not ſo ill, to wiſh him here alone: howſoever you ſpeak this to feel other mens minds, me thinks I could not dye any where ſo contented, as in the Kings company; his Cauſe being juſt, and his Quarrel honourable.
Will. That's more then we know.
Bates. I, or more then we ſhould ſeek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the King's Subjects: if his Cauſe be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Crime of it out of us.
Williams. But if the Cauſe be not good, the King himſelf hath a heavy Reckoning to make, when all thoſe Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chopt off in a Battel, ſhall joyn together at the latter day, and cry all, We dyed at ſuch a place, ſome ſwearing, ſome crying for a Surgeon; ſome upon their Wives left poor behind them; ſome upon the Debts they owe, ſome upon their Children rawly left: I am afear'd, there are few die well, that die in Battel: for how can they charitably diſpoſe of any thing, when Bloud is their argument? Now, if theſe men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it; whom to diſobey, were againſt all proportion of ſubjection.
King. So, if a Son that is by his Father ſent about Merchandize, do ſinfully miſcarry upon the Sea; the imputation of his wickedneſs, by your rule, ſhould be impoſed upon his Father that ſent him: or if a Servant, under his Maſter's command, tranſporting a ſumme of Money, be aſſailed by Robbers, and die in many irreconcil'd Iniquities; you may call the buſineſs of the Maſter the author of the Servants damnation: but this is not ſo: The King is not bound to anſwer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Son, nor the Maſter of his Servant; for they purpoſe not their death, when they purpoſe their ſervices. Beſides, there is no King, be his Cauſe never ſo ſpotleſs, if it come to the arbitrement of Swords, can try it out with all unſpotted Souldiers: ſome (peradventure) have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived Murther; ſome, of beguiling Virgins with the broken Seales of Perjury; ſome, making the Warres their Bulwark, that have before gored the gentle Boſome of Peace with Pillage and Robberie. Now, if theſe men have defeated the Law, and outrunne Native puniſhment; though they can out-ſtrip men, they have no wings to flie from God. War is his Beadle, War is his Vengeance: ſo that here men are puniſht, for before breach of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrel: where they feared the death, they have born life away; and where they would be ſafe, they periſh. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the King guilty of their damnation, then he was before guilty of thoſe Impieties, for the which they are now viſited. Every Subjects Duty is the Kings, but every Subjects Soul is his own. Therefore ſhould every Souldier in the Warres doe as every ſick man in his Bed, waſh every Moth out of his Conſcience: and dying ſo, Death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was bleſſedly loſt, wherein ſuch preparation was gained: and in him that eſcapes, it were not ſin to think, that making God ſo free an offer, he let him outlive that day, to ſee his Greatneſs, and to teach others how they ſhould prepare.

Will. 'Tis

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dyes ill, the ill upon his own head, the King is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

King. I my self heard the King say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. I, he said so, to make us fight chearfully: but when our throats are cut, he may be ransom'd, and we ne're the wiser.

King. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then: that's a perilous shot out of an Elder Gun, that a poor and private displeasure can doe against a Monarch: you may as well go about to turn the Sun to ice, with fanning in his face with a Peacocks feather: You'll never trust his word after, come, 'tis a foolish saying.

King. Your reproof is something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a Quarrel between us, if you live.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

King. Give me any Gage of thine, and I will wear it in my Bonnet: Then if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrel.

Will. Here's my Glove: Give me another of thine.

King. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my Cap: if ever thou come to me, and say, after to morrow, This is my Glove, by this Hand I will give thee a box on the ear.

King. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will doe it, though I take thee in the King's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends you English fools, be friends, we have French Quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

Exeunt Souldiers.

King. Indeed the French may lay twenty French Crowns to one, they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English Treason to cut French Crowns, and to morrow the King himself will be a Clipper.

Upon the King, let us, our Lives, our Soules,
Our Debts, our carefull Wives,
Our Children, and our Sinnes, lay on the King:
He must bear all.
O hard Condition, Twin-born with Greatnesse,
Subject to the breath of every fool, whose sence
No more can feel, but his own wringing.
What infinite heart-ease must Kings neglect,
That private men enjoy?
And what have Kings, that Privates have not too,
Save Ceremonie, save general Ceremonie?
And what art thou, thou Idol Ceremony?
What kind of god art thou? that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs, then do thy worshippers.
What are thy Rents? what are thy Commings in?
O Ceremony, shew me but thy worth.
What? is thy Soul of Adoration?
Art thou ought else but Place, Degree, and Form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art lesse happy, being fear'd,
Then they in fearing.
What drink'st thou oft, in stead of Homage sweet,
But poison'd flatterie? O, be sick, great Greatnesse,
And bid thy Ceremony give thee cure.
Think'st thou the fiery Fever will go out
With titles blown from Adulation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggers knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud Dream,
That play'st so subtilly with a King's Repose,
I am a King that find thee: and I know,
'Tis not the Balm, the Scepter, and the Ball,
The Sword, the Mace, the Crown Imperial,
The enter-tissued Robe of Gold and Pearl,
The farted Title running 'fore the King,
The Throne he sits on: nor the Tide of Pomp,
That beats upon the high shoar of this World:
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous Ceremonies,
Not all these, laid in bed Majestical,
Can sleep so soundly, as the wretched Slave:
Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cram'd with distressfull bread,
Never sees horrid Night, the Child of Hell:
But like a Lacquey, from the Rise to Set,
Sweats in the eye of Phebus; and all Night
Sleeps in Elizium: next day after dawn,
Doth rise and help Hiperion to his Horse,
And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labour to his Grave:
And but for Ceremony, such a Wretch,
Winding up Dayes with toil, and Nights with sleep,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King.
The Slave, a Member of the Countries peace,
Enjoyes it: but in grosse brain little wots,
What watch the King keeps, to maintain the peace;
Whose houres, the Peasant best advantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My Lord, your Nobles jealous of your absence,
Seek through your Camp to find you.

King. Good old Knight, collect them all together,
At my Tent: I'le be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my Lord. Exit.

King. O God of Battels, steel my Souldiers hearts,
Possesse them not with fear: Take from them now
The sense of reck'ning of the opposed numbers:
Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord,
O not to day, think not upon the fault
My Father made, in compassing the Crown.
I Richard's body have interred new,
And on it have bestowed more contrite teares,
Then from it issued forced drops of bloud.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up
Toward Heaven, to pardon bloud:
And I have built two Chauntries,
Where the sad and solemn Priests sing still
For Richard's Soul. More will I doe:
Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth:
Since that my Penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter Glocester.

Glouc. My Liege.

King. My Brother Glocester's voice?
I know thy errand, I will go with thee:
The day, my friend, and all things stay for me. Exeunt Enter.

Enter the Dolphin, Orleance, Ramburs, and Beaumont.

Orleance. The Sun doth gild our Armour, up my Lords.

Dolph. Monte Cheval: My Horse, Valet Lacquay: Ha.

Orl. Oh brave spirit.

Dolph. Via les ewes & terre.

Orl. Rien puis le air & feu.

Dolph. Cien, Cousin Orleance. Enter Constable. Now my Lord Constable?

Const. Heark how our Steeds, for present Service neigh.

Dolph. Mount them, and make incision in their Hides, That their hot bloud may spin in English eyes, And dout them with superfluous courage: ha.

Ram. What, will you have them weep our Horses bloud? How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter Messenger.

Messenger. The English are embattel'd, you French Peers.

Const. To Horse you gallant Princes, straight to Horse. Do but behold yond poor and starved Band, And your fair shew shall suck away their Soules, Leaving them but the shales and husks of men. There is not work enough for all our hands, Scarce bloud enough in all their sickly Veins, To give each naked Curtleax a stain, That our French Gallants shall to day draw out, And sheath for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them, The vapour of our Valour will o're-turn them. 'Tis positive 'gainst all exception, Lords, That our superfluous Lacquies, and our Pesants, Who in unnecessary action swarm About our Squares of Battel, were enow To purge this field of such a hilding Foe; Though we upon this Mountains Basis by, Took stand for idle speculation: But that our Honours must not. What's to say? A very little little let us do, And all is done: then let the Trumpets sound The Tucket Sonuance, and the Note to mount: For our approach shall so much dare the field, That England shall couch down in fear, and yield.

Enter Graundpree.

Graund. Why do you stay so long, my Lords of France? Yond Iland Carrions, desperate of their bones, Ill-favourdly become the Morning field: Their ragged Curtains poorly are let loose, And our air shakes them passing scornfully. Big Mars seems banqu'rout in their begger'd Host, And faintly through a rusty Bever peeps. The Horsemen sit like fixed Candlesticks, With Torch-staves in their hand: and their poor Jades Lob down their heads, drooping the hide and hips: The gumme down roping from their pale-dead eyes, And in their pale dull mouthes the Jymold Bitt Lyes foul with chaw'd grass, still and motionlesse, And their executors, the knavish Crowes, Flye o're them all, impatient for their hour. Description cannot suit it self in words, To demonstrate the Life of such a Battel, In life so liveless, as it shews it self.

Const. They have said their prayers, And they stay for death.

Dol. Shall we go send them Dinners, and fresh Sutes, And give their fasting Horses Provender, And after fight with them?

Const. I stay but for my Guard: on To the field, I will the Banner from a Trumpet take, And use it for my haste. Come, come away, The Sun is high, and we out-wear the day. Exeunt.

Enter Glouceſter, Bedford, Exeter, Erpingham with all his Hoſt: Salisbury, and Weſtmerland.

Glouceſt. Where is the King?

Bedf. The King himself is rode to view their Battel.

Weſt. Of fighting men they have full threescore thousand.

Exe. There's five to one, besides they all are fresh.

Salish. Gods Arm strike with us, 'tis a fearfull oddes. God buy'you Princes all; I'le to my Charge: If we no more meet, 'till we meet in Heaven; Then joyfully, my Noble Lord of Bedford, My dear Lord Glouceſter, and my good Lord Exeter, And my kind Kinsman, Warriors all, adieu.

Bed. Farewell good Salisbury, and good luck go with And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it, [thee: For thou art fam'd of the firm truth of valour,

Exe. Farewell kind Lord: fight valiantly to day.

Bed. He is as full of Valour as of Kindness, Princely in both.

Enter the King.

Weſt. O that we now had here But one ten thousand of those men in England, That do no work to day.

King. What's he that wishes so? My Cousin Weſtmerland. No my fair Cousin; If we are markt to die, we are enow To do our Countrey loss: and if to live, The fewer men, the greater share of honour. Gods will, I pray thee wish not one man more. By Jove, I am not covetous for Gold, Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost: It yerns me not, if men my Garments wear; Such outward things dwell not in my desires. But if it be a sin to covet Honour, I am the most offending Soul alive. No 'faith, my Couze, wish not a man from England: Gods peace, I would not loose so great an Honour, As one man more me-thinks would share from me, For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more: Rather proclaim it (Weſtmerland) through my Host, That he which hath no stomack to this fight, Let him depart, his Pasport shall be made, And Crowns for Convoy put into his Purse: We would not die in that man's company, That feares his fellowship, to die with us. This day is call'd the Feast of Crispian: He that out-lives this day, and comes safe home, Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named, And rouze him at the Name of Crispian: He that shall see this day, and live old age, Will yearly on the Vigil feast his Neighbours, And say to morrow is Saint Crispian: Then will he strip his sleeve, and shew his scarres: Old men forget; yet all shall not be forgot: But he'll remember, with advantages, What feats he did that day. Then shall our Names, Familiar in his mouth as houshold words,

Harry

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Glouceſter,
Be in their flowing Cups freſhly remembred.
This ſtory ſhall the good man teach his ſon:
And Criſpine Criſpian ſhall ne're go by,
From this day to the ending of the World,
But we in it ſhall be remembred;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers:
For he to day that ſheds his bloud with me,
Shall be my brother; be he ne're ſo vile,
This day ſhall gentle his condition.
And Gentlemen in England, now a-bed,
Shall think themſelves accurſt they were not here;
And hold their Manhoods cheap, whiles any ſpeaks,
That fought with us upon Saint Criſpin's day.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. My Soveraign Lord, beſtow your ſelf with ſpeed:
The French are bravely in their battels ſet,
And will with all expedience charge on us.

King. All things are ready, if our minds be ſo.

Weſt. Periſh the man, whoſe mind is backward now.

King. Thou do'ſt not wiſh more help from England, Couze?

Weſt. God will, my Liege, would you and I alone,
Without more help could fight this Royal battel.

King. Why now thou haſt unwiſht five thouſand men:
Which likes me better, then to wiſh us one.
You know your places: God be with you all.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mon. Once more I come to know of thee King Harry,
If for thy Ranſome thou wilt now compound,
Before thy moſt aſſured Overthrow:
For certainly, thou art ſo near the Gulfe,
Thou needs muſt be englutted. Beſides, in mercy
The Conſtable deſires thee, thou wilt mind
Thy followers of Repentance; that their Soules
May make a peaceſull and a ſweet Retire
From off theſe fields: where (wretches) their poor bodies
Muſt lye and feſter.

King. Who hath ſent thee now?

Mon. The Conſtable of France.

King. I pray thee bear my former Anſwer back:
Bid them atchieve me, and then ſell my bones.
Good God! why ſhould they mock poor fellows thus?
The man that once did ſell the Lyon's skin
While the beaſt liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
A many of our bodies ſhall no doubt
Find Native Graves: upon the which, I truſt
Shall witneſſe live in Braſſe of this dayes work.
And thoſe that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buried in your Dunghills,
They ſhall be fam'd: for there the Sun ſhall greet them,
And draw their honours reeking up to Heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choak your Clime,
The ſmell whereof ſhall breed a Plague in France.
Mark then abounding valour in our Engliſh:
That being dead, like to the bullets graſing,
Break out into a ſecond courſe of miſchief,
Killing in relapſe of Mortality.
Let me ſpeak proudly: Tell the Conſtable,
We are but Warriors for the working day:
Our Gayneſſe and our Gilt are all be-ſmircht
With rainy Marching in the painfull field.
There's not a piece of feather in our Hoſt:
Good argument (I hope) we will not flie:
And time hath worn us into ſlovenry.
But by the Maſs, our hearts are in the trim:
And my poor Souldiers tell me, yet e're Night,
They'le be in freſher Robes, or they will pluck
The gay new Coats o're the French Souldiers heads,
And turn them out of ſervice. If they doe this,
As if God pleaſe, they ſhall; my Ranſome then
Will ſoon be levyed.
Herauld, ſave thou thy labour:
Come thou no more for Ranſome, gentle Herauld,
They ſhall have none, I ſwear, but theſe my joynts:
Which if they have, as I will leave um them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Conſtable.

Mon. I ſhall, King Harry. And ſo fare thee well:
Thou never ſhall hear Herauld any more. Exit.

King. I fear thou wilt once more come again for a Ranſome.

Enter York.

York. My Lord, moſt humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the Vaward.

King. Take it, brave York.
Now Souldiers march away;
And how thou pleaſeſt, God, diſpoſe the day. Exeunt.

Alarum. Excurſions.
Enter Piſtol, French Souldier, Boy.

Piſtol. Yield Curre.

French. Ie penſe que vous eſtes le Gentil-home de bone qualité.

Piſt. Qualtity calmy cuſture me. Art thou a Gentleman? what is thy Name? diſcuſſe.

French. O Seigneur Dieu.

Piſt. O Signieur Dewe ſhould be a Gentleman: perpend my words O Signieur Dewe, and mark: O Signieur Dewe, thou dyeſt on point of Fox, except O Signieur thou do give to me egregious Ranſome.

French. O prennez miſericorde ayez pitie de moy.

Piſt. Moy ſhall not ſerve, I will have fourty Moyes: for I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in drops of Crimſon bloud.

Fren. Eſt-il impoſſibile d'eſchapper la force de ton bras.

Piſt. Braſſe, Curre? thou damned and luxurious Mountain Goat, offer'ſt me Braſſe?

French. O pardonne moy.

Piſt. Say'ſt thou me ſo? is that a Tonne of Moyes? Come hither boy, ask me this ſlave in French what is his Name.

Boy. Eſcoute comment eſtes vous appellé?

French. Monſieur le Fer.

Boy. He ſayes his name is M. Fer.

Piſt. M. Fer? I'le fer him, and firk him, and ferret him: diſcuſſe the ſame in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke.

Piſt. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

French. Que dit-il Monſieur?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous vous teniez preſt; car ce ſoldat icy eſt diſpoſee tout aſſure de couper voſtre gorge.

Piſt. Owy, cuppele gorge parmafoy peſant, unleſſe thou give me Crownes, brave Crownes, or mangled ſhalt thou be by this my Sword.

French. O Ie vous ſupplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner, Ie ſuis Gentilhome de bonne maiſon, gar de ma vie, & Ie vous donneray deux cents eſcus.

Piſt. What are his words?

Boy. He

Boy. He prayes you to save his life, he is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his Ransom he will give you two hundred Crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I the Crowns will take.

Fren. Petit Monsieur que dit-ill?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son Jurement, de pardonner aucun prisonnier: neant-moins pour les escus que vous luy promittez, il est content de vous donner la liberté de franchise.

Fre. Sur mes genoux ie vous donne milles remerciement, & ie me estime heureux qui ie ne tombe entre les mains d'un Chevalier, ie pense le plus brive valiant, & tres destiné Signeur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me Boy.

Boy. He gives you upon is knees a thousand thanks, and esteems himself happy, that he hath falne into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signeur of England.

Pist. As I suck bloud, I will some mercy shew. Follow me.

Boy. Suave vous le grand Capitain!

I did never know so wofull a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true, The empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph and Nim had ten times more valour, then this roaring Devil i'th' old Play, that every one may pair his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hang'd, and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the Lackies, with the luggage of our Camp, the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boyes. Exit.

Enter Constable, Orleance, Burbon, Dolphin, and Rambures.

Con. O Diable.

Orl. O Signeur le jour & perdia, toute & perdie.

Dol. Mort Dieu ma vie, all is confounded, all,
Reproach, and everlasting shame
Sits mocking in our Plumes. A short Alarum.
O meschante fortune, do not run away.

Con. Why all our Ranks are broke.

Dol. O perdurable shame, let's stab our selves:
Be these the wretches that we plaid at dice for?

Orl. Is this the King we sent to, for his ransome?

Bur. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame,
Let us flye in once more back again,
And he that will not follow Burbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand
Like a base Pander hold the Chamber door,
Whilst by a base slave, no gentler then my dog,
His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder that hath spoil'd us, friend us now,
Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enow yet living in the Field,
To smother up the English in our throngs,
If any order might be thought upon.

Bur. The Devil take Order now, I'le to the throng;
Let life be short, else shame will be too long. Exit.

Alarum. Enter the King and his train, with Prisoners.

King. Well have we done, thrice-valiant Countrimen,
But all's not done, yet keep the French the field.

Exe. The D. of York commends him to your Majesty.

King. Lives he good Uncle: thrice within this hour
I saw him down: thrice up again, and fighting,
From Helmet to the spur all bloud he was.

Exe. In which array (brave Soldiers) doth he lye,
Larding the plain: and by his bloudy side,
(Yoak-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds)
The Noble Earl of Suffolk also lyes.
Suffolk first died, and York all hagled over
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteeped,
And takes him by the Beard, kisses the gashes
That bloudily did yawn upon his face.
He cryes aloud; Tarry my Cousin Suffolk,
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven:
Tarry (sweet soul) for mine, then flye a-breast:
As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our Chivalry.
Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up,
He smil'd me in the face, caught me his hand,
And with a feeble gripe, sayes; Dear my Lord,
Commend my service to my Soveraign;
So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck
He threw his wounded arme, and kist his lippes,
And so espous'd to death, with bloud he seal'd
A Testament of Noble-ending-Love:
The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me, which I would have stop'd,
But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gave me up to tears.

King. I blame you not,
For hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mixtfull eyes, or they will issue too. Alarum.
But hark, what new alarum is this same?
The French have re-enforc'd their scatter'd men:
Then every Souldier kill his Prisoners,
Give the word through.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Fluellen, and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poyes and the luggage, 'Tis expressely against the Law of Armes, 'tis as arrant a peece of knavery mark you now, as can be offert in your Conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive, and the Cowardly Rascals that ran from the Battail ha' done this slaughter: besides they have burned and carried away all that was in the King's Tent, wherefore the King most worthily hath caus'd every Souldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O 'tis a gallant King.

Flu. I, he was porn at Monmouth Captain Gower: what call you the Town's name where Alexander the pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gower. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon, his Father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porn.

porn: I tell you Captain, if you look in the Maps of the Orld, I warrant you sall find in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations look you, is both alike. There is a River in Macedon, and there is also moreover a River at Monmouth, it is call'd Wye at Monmouth: but it is out of my prains, what is the name of the other River: but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is Salmons in both. If you mark Alexanders life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his chollers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did in his Ales and his angers, (look you) kill his best friend Clytus.

Gow. Our King is not like him in that, he never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done (mark you now) to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures, and comparisons of it: as Alexander kild his friend Clytus, being in his Ales and his Cups; so also Harry Monmouth being in his right wits, and his good judgements, turn'd away the fat Knight with the great belly doublet: he was full of jests, and gypes, and knaveries, and mocks, I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaffe.

Flu. That is he: I'le tell you, there is good men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his Majesty.

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Burbon with prisoners. Flourish.

King. I was not angry since I came to France,
Until this instant. Take a Trumpet Herald,
Ride thou unto the horsemen on yond hill:
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or voyd the field: they do offend our sight.
If they'll do neither, we will come to them,
And make them sker away, as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings:
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have,
And not a man of them that we shall take,
Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter Montioy.

Exe. Here comes the Herald of the French, my Liege.

Glow. His eyes are humbler then they us'd to be,

King. How now, what means their Herald? Know'st thou not,
That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransome?
Com'st thou again for ransome?

Her. No great King:
I come to thee for charitable License,
That we may wander o're this bloudy field,
To book our dead, and then to bury them,
To sort our Nobles from our common men.
For many of our Princes (woe the while)
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary bloud:
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In bloud of Princes, and with wounded steeds
Fret fet-lock deep in gore, and with wilde rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O give us leave great King,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

King. I tell thee truly, Herald,
I know not if the day be ours or no,
For yet a many of your horsemen peer,
And gallop o're the field.

Her. The day is yours.

King. Praised be God and not our strength for it:
What is this Castle call'd that stands hard by.

Her. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an't please your Majesty) and your great Unkle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the Chronicles, fought most prave pattle here in France.

King. They did Fluellen.

Flu. Your Majesty sayes very true: If your Majesties is remembred of it, the Welchmen did good service in a Garden where Leeks did grow, wearing Leeks in their Monmouth caps, which your Majesty know to this hour is an honourable badge of the service: And I do believe your Majesty takes no scorn to wear the Leek upon S. Tavies day.

King. I wear it for a memorable honour:
For I am Welch you know good Countriman.

Flu. All the water in Wye, cannot wash your Majesties Welsh ploud out of your pody, I can tell you that: God plesse it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his Grace, and his Majesty too.

King. Thanks good my Countryman.

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your Majesties Countryman, I care not who know it: I will confesse it to all the Orld, I need not to be ashamed of your Majesty, praised be God so long as your Majesty is an honest man.

King. God keep me so.

Enter Williams.

Our Heralds go with him,
Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

Exe. Souldier, you must come to the King.

King. Souldier, why wear'st thou that Glove in thy Cap?

Will. And't please your Majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withall, if he be alive.

King. An English man?

Will. And't please your Majesty, a Rascall that swagger'd with me last night: who if alive, and ever dare to challenge this Glove, I have sworn to take him a box a'th ear: or if I can see my Glove in his cap, which he swore as he was a Souldier he would wear (if alive) I will strike it out soundly.

King. What think you Captain Fluellen, is it fit this souldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a Craven and a Villain else, and't please your Majesty in my conscience.

King. It may be, his enemy is a Gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a Jentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary (look your Grace) that he keep his vow and his oath: If he be perjur'd (see you now) his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack sawce, as ever his black shooe trod upon Gods ground, and his earth, in my conscience law.

King. Then keep thy vow sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So, I will my Liege, as I live.

King. Who serv'st thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my Liege.

Flu. Gower is a good Capta n,and is good knowledge and literatured in the Warrs.

King. Call him hither to me Souldier.

Will. I will my L ege. Exit.

King. Here Fluellen, wear thou this favour for me,and ſtick it in thy Cap: when Alanſon and my ſelf were down together, I pluckt this Glove from his Helme: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alanſon, and an enemy to our Perſon, if thou encounter any ſuch, apprehend him, and thou do'ſt me love.

Flu. Your Grace do's me as great Honours as can be deſir'd in the hearts of his Subjects: I would fain ſee the man, that ha's but two legges, that ſhall find himſelf agriev'd at this Glove; that is all: but I would fain ſee it once, and pleaſe God of his grace that I might ſee.

King. Know'ſt thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, and pleaſe you.

King. Pray thee go ſeek him, and bring him to my Tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. Exit.

King. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloſter,
Follow Fluellen cloſely at the heels,
The Glove which I have given him for a favour,
May haply purchaſe him a box a'th'ear.
It is the Souldiers: I by bargain ſhould
Wear it my ſelf. Follow good Couſin Warwick:
If that the Souldier ſtrike him, as I judge
By this blunt bearing, he will keep his word;
Some ſudden miſchief may ariſe of it:
For I do know Fluellen valiant,
And toucht with Choler, hot as Gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury.
Follow, and ſee there be no harme between them.
Go you with me, Unkle of Exeter. Exeunt.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to Knight you, Captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Gods will, and his pleaſure, Captain, I beſeech you now, come apace to the King: there is more good toward you peradventure, then is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this Glove?

Flu. Know the Glove? I know the Glove is a Glove.

Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.

Strikes him.

Flu. 'Slbud, an arrant Traitor as anyes in the Univerſall World, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now ſir? you Villain.

Will. Do you think I'le be forſworn?

Flu. Stand away Captain Gower, I will give Treaſon his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no Traitor.

Flu. That's a Lie in thy Throat. I charge you in his Majeſties Name apprehend him,he's a friend of the Duke Alanſons.

Enter Warwick and Glouceſter.

War. How now, how now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is, praiſed be God for it, a moſt contagious Treaſon come to light, look you, as you ſhall deſire in a Summers day. Here is his Majeſty.

Enter King, and Exeter.

King. How now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Liege, here is a Villain and a Traitour, that look your Grace, ha's ſtruck the Glove which your Majeſty is take out of the Helmet of Alanſon.

Will. My Liege, this was my Glove, here is the fellow of it: and he that I gave it to in change, promis'd to wear in his Cap: I promis'd to ſtrike him, if he did: I met this man with my Glove in his Cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your Majeſty hear now, ſaving your Majeſties Man-hood, what an arrant raſcally, beggerly, lowſie Knave it is: I hope your Majeſty is pear me teſtimony and witneſſe, and will avouchment, that this is the Glove of Alanſon, that your Majeſty is give me, in your Conſcience now.

King. Give me thy Glove Souldier;
Look, here is the fellow of it:
'Twas I indeed thou promiſed'ſt to ſtrike.
And thou haſt given me moſt bitter termes.

Flu. And pleaſe your Majeſty, let his Neck anſwer for it, if there is any Marſhall Law in the world.

King. How canſt thou make me ſatisfaction?

Will. All offences, my Lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your Majeſty.

King. It was our ſelf thou didſt abuſe.

Will. Your Majeſty came not like your ſelf: you appear'd to me but as a common man: witneſſe the Night, your Garments, your Lowlineſſe: and what your highneſſe ſuffer'd under that ſhape, I beſeech you take it for your own fault, and not mine; for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore I beſeech your highneſſe pardon me.

King. Here Unkle Exeter, fill this Glove with Crowns,
And give it to this fellow. Keep it fellow,
And wear it for an honor in thy Cap,
Till I do challenge it. Give him the Crowns:
And Captain, you muſt needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this Day and this Light, the fellow ha's mettell enough in his belly: hold, there is twelve-pence for you, and I pray you ſerve God, and keep you out of prawls and prabbles, and quarrells and diſſentions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your Money.

Flu. It is with a good will: I can tell you it will ſerve you to mend your ſhooes: come: wherefore ſhould you be ſo paſhfull: your ſhooes is not ſo good: 'tis a good ſilling I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter Herauld.

King. Now Herauld, are the dead numbred?

Her. Here is the number of the ſlaught'red French.

King. What Priſoners of good ſort are taken Unkle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleance, Nephew to the King,
John Duke of Burbon, and Lord Bouchiquald:
Of other Lords and Barons, Knights and Squires,
Full fifteen hundred, beſides common men.

King. This Note doth tell me of ten thouſand French
That in the field lie ſlain: of Princes in this number,
And Nobles bearing Banners, there lye dead
One hundred twenty ſix; added to theſe,
Of Knights, Eſquires, and gallant Gentlemen,
Eight thouſand and four hundred: of the which,
Five hundred were but yeſterday dubb'd Knights,
So that in theſe ten thouſand they have loſt,
There are but ſixteen hundred Mercenaries:
The reſt are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights, Squires,

And

And Gentlemen of blood and quality,
The Names of thoſe their Nobles that lie dead:
Charles Delabreth, High Conſtable of France,
Jaques of Chatilion, Admirall of France,
The Maſter of the Croſs-bows, Lord Rambures,
Great Maſter of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dolphin,
John Duke of Alanſon, Anthonio Duke of Brabant,
The Brother to the Duke of Burgundy,
And Edward Duke of Barr: of luſty Earles,
Grandpree and Rouſſie, Fauconbridge and Foyes,
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Leſtrale.
Here was a Royall fellowſhip of death.
Where is the number of our Engliſh dead?
Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam Eſquire;
None elſe of name: and of all other men,
But five and twenty.

King. O God, thy Arm was here:
And not to us, but to thy Arm alone,
Aſcribe we all: when, without ſtratagem,
But in plain ſhock, and even play of Battell,
Was ever known ſo great and little loſs?
On one part and on th'other, take it God,
For it is none but thine.

Exet. 'Tis wonderfull.

King. Come, go we in proceſſion to the Village:
And be it death proclaimed through our Hoſt,
To boaſt of this, or take that praiſe from God,
Which is his onely.

Flu. Is it not lawfull and pleaſe your Majeſty, to tell how many is kill'd.

King. Yes Captain; but with this acknowledgement,
That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conſcience, he did us great good.

King. Do we all holy Rights;
Let there be ſung Non nobis, and Te Deum,
The dead with charity enclos'd in Clay:
And then to Callice, and to England then,
Where ne're from France arriv'd more happy men.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Chorus.

Vouchſafe to thoſe that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them: and of ſuch as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th'excuſe
Of time, of numbers, and due courſe of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life,
Be here preſented. Now we bear the King
Toward Callice: grant him there; And there being ſeen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts,
Athwart the Sea; Behold the Engliſh beach,
Pales in the flood, with Men, with Wives, and Boyes,
Whoſe ſhouts and claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea,
Which like a mighty Whiffler 'fore the King,
Seems to prepare his way: So let him land;
And ſolemnly ſee him ſet on to London.
So ſwift a pace hath Thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Black-Heath:
Where, that his Lords deſire him, to have borne
His bruiſed Helmet, and his bended Sword
Before him, through the City: he forbids it,
Being free from vainneſſe, and ſelf-glorious pride;
Giving full Trophee, Signall, and Oſtent,
Quite from himſelf, to God. But now behold,
In the quick Forge and working-houſe of Thought,
How London doth powre out her Citizens,
The Mayor and all his Brethren in beſt ſort,
Like to the Senatours of th'antique Rome,
With the Plebeians ſwarming at their heels,
Go forth and fetch their Conqu'ring Cæſar in:
As by a lower, but by loving likelihood,
Were now the Generall of our gracious Empreſſe,
As in good time he may, from Ireland comming,
Bringing Rebellion broached on his Sword;
How many would the peacefull City quit.
To welcome him? much more, and much more cauſe,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him.
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the King of Englands ſtay at home:
The Emperour's comming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them: and omit
All the occurrences, what ever chanc't,
Till Harryes back return again to France:
There muſt we bring him: and my ſelf have play'd,
The Interim, by remembring you 'tis paſt.
Then brook abridgement, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, ſtraight back again to France.

Exit.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right: but why wear you your Leek to day? Saint Davies day is paſt.

Flu. There is occaſions and cauſes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you aſſe my friend, Captain Gower; the raſcally, ſcauld, beggarly, lowſie, pragging Knave Piſtoll, which you and your ſelf, and all the world know to be no petter then a fellow, look you now, of no merits; he is come to me, and prings me pread and ſalt yeſterday, look you, and bid me eat my Leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be ſo bold as to wear it in my Cap till I ſee him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my deſires.

Enter Piſtoll.

Gow. Why here he comes, ſwelling like a Turky-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his ſwellings, nor his Turky-cocks. God pleſſe aunchient Piſtoll: you ſcurvy lowſie Knave, God bleſſe you.

Piſt. Ha, art thou bedlam? do'ſt thou thirſt, baſe Trojan, to have me fold up Parcas fatall Web? Hence; I am qualmiſh at the ſmell of Leek.

Flu. I peſeech you heartily, ſcurvy lowſie Knave, at my deſires, and my requeſts, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this Leek, becauſe, look you, you doe not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your diſgeſtions doo's not agree with it, I would deſire you to eat it.

Piſt. Not for Cadwallader and all his Goats.

Flu. There is one Goat for you. Strikes him. Will you be ſo good, ſcauld Knave, as eat it?

Piſt. Baſe Trojan, thou ſhalt die.

Flu. You ſay very true, ſcauld Knave, when Gods will is: I will deſire you to live in the mean time, and eat your Victualls: come, there is ſawce for it. You call'd me yeſterday Mountain-Squire, but I will make you to-day a Squire of low degree. I pray you fall to, if you can mock a Leek, you can eat a Leek.

Gow. Enough Captain, you have astonisht him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my Leek, or I will peat his pate four dayes: bite I pray you, it is good for your green wound, and your ploody Coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this Leek, I will most horribly revenge: I eat and eat I swear.

Flu. Eat I pray you, will you have some more sawce to your Leek: there is not enough Leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy Cudgell, thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you scauld knave, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away, the skin is good for your broken Coxcomb; when you take occasions to see Leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at 'em, that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. I, Leeks is good: hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat?

Flu. Yes verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another Leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in Cudgels, you shall be a Woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but Cudgels: Gud bu'y you, and keep you, and heal your pate. Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly Knave, will you mock at an ancient Tradition, began upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable Trophee of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words. I have seen you gleeking and galling at this Gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English Cudgell: you find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition, fare ye well. Exit.

Pist. Doth fortune play the huswife with me now? Newes have I that my Doll is dead i'th Spittle of a malady of France, and there my rendevous is quite cut off: Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs honour is Cudgell'd. Well, Bawd I'le turn, and something lean to Cut-purse of quick hand: To England will I steal, and there I'le steal;
And patches will I get unto these cudgel'd scarres,
And swear I got them in the Gallia warres. Exit.

Enter at one door, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Warwick, and other Lords; at another, Queen Isabel, the King, the Duke of Burgoign, and other French.

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore are we met?
Unto our Brother France, and to our Sister,
Health and fair time of day: Joy and good wishes
To our most fair and Princely Cousin Katherine;
And as a branch and member of this Royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you Duke of Bargoigne,
And Princes French and Peers, health to you all.

Fra. Right joyous are we to behold your face,
Most worthy Brother England, fair met.
So are you Princes (English) every one.

Quee. So happy be the Issue, Brother England,
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes,
Your eyes which hitherto have born in them
Against the French that met them in their bent,
The fatal Balls of murthering Basilisks:
The venome of such Looks we fairly hope
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appear.

Que. You English Princes all, I do salute you.

Burg. My duty to you both, on equall love.
Great Kings of France & England: that I have labour'd
With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours,
To bring your most imperiall Majesties
Unto this Bar, and Royall enterview:
Your Mightinesse on both parts best can witnesse.
Since then my Office hath so far prevail'd,
That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye,
You have congreeted: let it not disgrace me,
If I demand before this Royall view,
What Rub, or what impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace,
Dear Nurse of Arts, Plenties, and joyfull Births,
Should not in this best Garden of the World,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely Visage?
Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her Husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in it's own fertility.
Her Vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies: her Hedges even, pleach'd,
Like Prisoners wildly over-grown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd Twigs: her fallow Leas,
The Darnell, Hemlock, and rank Femetary,
Doth root upon; while that the Culter rusts,
That should deracinate such Savagery:
The even Mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled Cowslip, Burnet, and green Clover,
Wanting the Scythe, withall uncorrected, rank;
Conceives by idlenesse, and nothing teems,
But hatefull Docks, rough Thistles, Kecksies, Burres,
Losing both beauty and utility;
And all our Vineyards, Fallows, Meads, and Hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildnesse.
Even so our Houses, and our selves, and Children,
Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time,
The Sciences that should become our Country;
But grow like Savages, as Souldiers will,
That nothing do, but meditate on Blood,
To swearing, and stern Looks, diffus'd Attire,
And every thing that seems unnaturall.
Which to reduce into our former favour,
You are assembled: and my speech entreats,
That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace
Should not expell these inconveniences,
And blesse us with her former qualities.

Eng. If, Duke of Burgony, you would the Peace,
Whose want gives growth to th'imperfections
Which you have cited; you must buy that Peace
With full accord to all our just demands,
Whose Tenures and particular effects
You have enschedul'd briefly in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them: to the which, as yet
There is no Answer made.

Eng. Well then: the Peace which you before so urg'd,
Lies in his Answer.

Fran.

France. I have but with a curſelary eye
O're glance the Articles: Pleaſeth your Grace
To appoint ſome of your Councell preſently,
To ſit with us once more, with better heed
To re-ſurvey them: we will ſuddenly
Paſſe our accept and peremptory Anſwer.

Eng. Brother we ſhall. Go Unkle Exeter,
And brother Clarence, and brother Gloucester,
Warwick, and Huntington, go with the King,
And take with you free power, to ratifie,
Augment, or alter, as your Wiſdomes beſt
Shall ſee advantageable for our Dignity,
Any thing in or out of our Demands,
And we'll conſigne thereto. Will you, fair Siſter,
Go with the Princes, or ſtay here with us?

Quee. Our gracious Brother, I will go with them:
Happely a Womans Voyce may do ſome good,
When Articles too nicely urg'd, be ſtood on,

Eng. Yet leave our Couſin Katherine here with us,
She is our capitall Demand, compris'd
Within the fore-rank of our Articles.

Quee. She hath good leave. Exeunt omnes.

Manet King, and Katherine.

King. Fair Katherine, moſt fair,
Will you vouchſafe to teach a Souldier termes,
Such as will enter at a Ladies ear,
And plead his Love-ſuit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your Majeſty ſhall mock at me, I cannot ſpeak your England.

King. O fair Katherine, if you will love me ſoundly with you French heart, I will be glad to hear you confeſſe it brokenly with your Engliſh Tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonne moy, I cannot tell wat is like me.

King. An Angell is like you Kate, and you are like an Angell.

Kath. Que dit il, que de ſuis ſemblable a les Anges?

Lady. Ouy verament (ſauf voſtre Grace) ainſi dit il.

King. I ſaid ſo, dear Katherine, and I muſt not bluſh to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu, les langues des hommes ſont plein de tromperies.

King. What ſaies ſhe, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Lady. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de Princeſſe.

King. The Princeſſe is the better Engliſh-woman i'faith Kate, my wooing is fit for thy underſtanding, I am glad thou canſt ſpeak no better Engliſh, for if thou could'ſt, thou wou'ſt find me ſuch a plain King, that thou would'ſt think, I had ſold my farme to buy my Crown. I know no wayes to mince it in love, but directly to ſay, I love you, then if you urge me farther, then to ſay, Do you in faith? I wear out my ſuit: Give me your anſwer, i'faith do, and clap hands, and a bargain: how ſay you, Lady?

Kath. Sauf voſtre honour, me underſtand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verſes, or to Dance for your ſake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor meaſure; and for the other, I have no ſtrength in meaſure, yet a reaſonable meaſure in ſtrength. If I could win a Lady at Leap-frog, or by vaulting into my ſaddle, with my Armor on my back; under the correction of bragging be it ſpoken, I ſhould quickly leap into a Wife: Or if I might buffet for my Love, or bound my Horſe for her favours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and ſit like a Jack an Apes, never off. But before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gaſpe out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in proteſtation; onely down-right Oathes, which I never us'd till urg'd, nor never break for urging. If thou canſt love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whoſe face is not worth Sun-burning? that never looks in his Glaſſe, for love of any thing he ſees there? let thine eye be thy Cook, I ſpeak to thee plain Souldier: If thou canſt love me for this, take me? if not? to ſay to thee that I ſhall die, is true; but for thy love, by the L. No: yet I love thee too. And while thou liv'ſt, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoyned Conſtancy, for he perforce muſt do thee right, becauſe he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for theſe fellowes of infinite tongue, that can ryme themſelves into Ladies favours, they do alwayes reaſon themſelves out again. What? a ſpeaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad; a good Leg will fall, a ſtraight back will ſtoop, a black Beard will turn white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a fair Face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow: but a good heart, Kate, is the Sun and the Moon, or rather the Sun, and not the Moon; for it ſhines bright, and never changes, but keeps his courſe truely. If thou would have ſuch a one, take me? and take me; take a ſouldier: take a ſouldier; take a King. And what ſay'ſt thou then to my Love? ſpeak my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it poſſible dat I ſould love de enemy of France?

King. No, it is not poſſible that you ſhould love the Enemy of France, Kate; but in loving me, you ſhould love the Friend of France: for I love France ſo well, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will have it all mine: and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell wat is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am ſure will hang upon my tongue, like a new-married Wife about her Husbands Neck, hardly to be ſhook off; Je quand ſur le poſſeſſion de Fraunce, & quand vous aves le poſſeſſion de moy, (Let me ſee, what then? Saint Dennis be my ſpeed) Donc voſtre eſt Fraunce, & vous eſtes mienne. It is as eaſie for me, Kate, to conquer the Kingdome, as to ſpeak ſo much more French: I ſhall never move thee in French, unleſſe it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf voſtre honeur, le Francois ques vous parleis, il eſt melius quel' Anglois le quel je parle.

King. No faith is't not, Kate: but thy ſpeaking of my Tongue, and I think, moſt truely falſely, muſt needs be granted to be much at one. But Kate, do'ſt thou underſtand thus much Engliſh? Canſt thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your Neighbours tell, Kate? Ile ask them, Come, I know thou loveſt me: and at night, when you come into your Cloſet, you'll queſtion this Gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her diſpraiſe thoſe parts in me, that you love with your heart; but good Kate, mock me mercifully, the rather gentle Princeſſe, becauſe I love thee cruelly. If ever thou beeſt mine, Kate, as I have ſaving Faith within me tells me thou ſhalt; I get thee with ſkambling, and thou muſt therefore needs prove a good Souldier-breeder: Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Sain George, compound a Boy, half French half Engliſh, that ſhall go to Conſtantinople, and take the Turk by The Beard. Shall we not? what ſay'ſt thou, my fair Flower-de-Luce.

Kath. I do not know dat.

King. No: 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promiſe: do but now promiſe Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of ſuch a boy; and for my Engliſh moyty, take the word of a King, and a Batchelor. How anſwer you, La plus belle Katherine du monde mon treſcher & devin deeſſe.

Kath. Your Majeſtee aue fauſe Frenche enough to deceive de moſt ſage Damoiſel dat is in en France.

King. Now fie upon my falſe French: by mine honor in true Engliſh, I love thee Kate; by which honor, I dare not ſwear thou loveſt me, yet my bloud begins to flatter me, that thou do'ſt; yet notwithſtanding the poor and untempering effect of my Viſage. Now beſhrew my Fathers Ambition, he was thinking of Civill Warres when he got me, therefore was I created with a ſtubborn out-ſide with an aſpect of Iron, that when I come to wooe Ladies, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the elder I wax, the better I ſhall appear. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer up of Beauty, can do no more ſpoyle upon my Face. Thou haſt me, if thou haſt me, at the worſt; and thou ſhalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better: and therefore tell me, moſt fair Katherine, will you have me? Put off thoſe Maiden Bluſhs, avouch the thoughts of your Heart with the Looks of an Empreſſe, take me by the Hand and ſay, Harry of England, I am thine: which word thou ſhalt no ſooner bleſſe mine Ear withall, but I will tell thee aloud England is thine: Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantaginet is thine; who, though I ſpeak it before his Face, if he be not Fellow with the beſt King, thou ſhalt find the beſt King of Good-fellows. Come your anſwer in broken Muſick; for thy Voyce is Muſick, and thy Engliſh broken: Therefore Queen of all, Katherine, break thy mind to me in broken Engliſh, wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it ſhall pleaſe de roy mon pere.

King. Nay, it will pleaſe him well, Kate; it ſhall pleaſe him, Kate.

Kath. Den it ſhall alſo content me.

King. Upon that I kiſſe your Hand, and I call you my Queen.

Kath. Laiſſe mon Seigneur, laiſſe, laiſſe, may foy: Je ne veus point que vous abbaiſſe voſtre grandeur, en baiſant le main d'une noſtre Seigneur indignie ſerviteur, excuſe moy. Je vous ſupply mon treſ-puiſſant Seigneur.

King. Then I will kiſſe your Lips, Kate.

Kath. Les Dames & Damoiſels pour eſtre baiſe devant leur nopceſe il net pas le coſtume de Fraunce.

King. Madam, my Interpreter, what ſayes ſhe?

Lady. Dat is not be de faſhion pour le Ladies of France; I cannot tell wat is buiſſe en Engliſh.

King. To Kiſſe.

Lady. Your Majeſty entendre bettre que moy.

King. Is it not a faſhion for the Maids in France to kiſſe before they are marryed, would ſhe ſay?

Lady. Ouy verayment.

King. O Kate, nice Cuſtomes curſie to great Kings, Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confin'd within the weak Liſt of a Countries faſhion: we are the makers of Manners, Kate; and the liberty that followes our Places, ſtops the mouth of all find-faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice faſhion of your Country, in denying me a Kiſſe: therefore patiently, and yielding. You have Witch-craft in your Lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a Suger touch of them; then in the Tongues of the French Councell: and they ſhould ſooner perſwade Harry of England, then a generall Petition of Monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French Power, and the Engliſh Lords.

Burg. God ſave your Majeſty, my Royall Couſin, teach you our Princeſs Engliſh?

King. I would have her learn, my fair Couſin, how perfectly I love her, and that is good Engliſh.

Burg. Is ſhe apt?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condition is not ſmooth: ſo that having neither the Voyce nor the Heart of Flattery about me, I cannot ſo conjure up the ſpirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeneſs.

Burg. Pardon the frankneſs of my mirth, if I anſwer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you muſt make a Circle: if conjure up love in her in his true likeneſſe, he muſt appear naked, and blind. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet ros'd over with the Virgin Crimſon of Modeſty, if ſhe deny the appearance of a naked blind Boy in her naked ſeeing ſelfe? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to conſigne to.

King. Yet they do wink and yield as Love is blind and enforces.

Burg. They are then excus'd, my Lord, when they ſee not what they do.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Couſin to conſent to winking.

Burg. I will wink on her to conſent, my Lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maids well Summer'd, and warme kept, are like Flyes at Bartholomew-tyde, blind, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This Moral ties me over to Time, and a hot Summer; and ſo I ſhall catch the Flie, your Couſin, in the latter end, and ſhe muſt be blind too.

Burg. As Love is my Lord, before it loves.

King. It is ſo: and you may, ſome of you, thank Love for my blindneſs, who cannot ſee many a fair French City for one fair French Maid that ſtands in my way.

French King. Yes my Lord, you ſee them perſpectively: the Cities turn'd into a Maid; for they are all girdled with Maiden Walls, that Warre hath entred.

King. Shall Kate be my Wife?

Fran. So pleaſe you.

Engl. I am content, ſo the Maiden Cities you talk of, may wait on her: ſo the Maid that ſtood in the Way for my Wiſh, ſhall ſhew me the way to my Will.

France. We have conſented to all tearmes of reaſon.

Eng. Is't ſo, My Lords of England?

Weſt. The King hath granted every Article:
His Daughter firſt; and then in ſequele, all,
According to their firm propoſed natures.

Exet. Onely

Exet. Onely he hath not yet ſubſcribed this:
Where your Majeſty demands, That the King of France having occaſion to write for matter of Grant, ſhall name your Highneſſe in this forme, and with this addition, in French: Noſtre treſcher filz Henry Roy'd Angleterre Heretere de Fraunce: and thus in Latine; Præclariſſimus Filius noſter Henricus Rex Angliæ & Heres Franciæ.

Fran. Nor this I have not Brother ſo deny'd,
But your requeſt ſhall make me let it paſſe.

Engl. I pray you then, in love and dear allyance,
Let that one Article rank with the reſt,
And thereupon give me your Daughter.

Fran. Take her fair ſon, and from her bloud raiſe up
Iſſue to me, that the contending Kingdomes
Of France and England, whoſe very ſhoars look pale,
With envy of each others happineſſe,
May ceaſe their hatred; and this dear Conjunction
Plant Neighbourhood and Chriſtian-like accord
In their ſweet Boſomes: that never War advance
His bleeding Sword 'twixt England and fair France.

Lords. Amen.

King. Now welcome Kate: and bear me witneſſe all,
That here I kiſſe her as my Soveraign Queen.

Flouriſh.

Queen. God, the beſt maker of all Marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your Realms in one,
As Man and Wife being two, are one in love,
So be there 'twixt your Kingdomes ſuch a Spouſall,
That never may ill Office, or fell jealouſie,
Which troubles oft the Bed of bleſſed Marriage,
Thruſt in between the Paſſion of theſe Kingdomes,
To make divorce of their incorporate League:
That Engliſh may as French, French Engliſh men,
Receive each other. God ſpeak this Amen.

All. Amen.

King. Prepare for our Marriage: on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy we'll take your Oath
And all the Peers, for ſurety of our Leagues.
Then ſhall I ſwear to Kate, and you to me,
And may our Oaths well kept and proſp'rous be.

Sonet. Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Thus far with rough, and all-unable Pen,
Our bending Author hath purſu'd the Story,
In little room confining Mighty men,
Mangling by ſtarts the full courſe of their glory.
Small time: but in that ſmall, moſt greatly lived
This Star of England. Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds beſt Garden he atchieved:
And of it left his Son Imperiall Lord,
Henry the Sixth, in Infant Bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this King ſucceed:
Whoſe State ſo many had the managing,
That they loſt France, and make his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath ſhown; and for their ſake,
In your fair minds let this acceptance take.

FINIS.

The first Part of King HENRY the Sixth,

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Dead March.

Enter the Funerall of King Henry the Fifth, attended on by the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France; the Duke of Gloster, Protector: the Duke of Exeter, Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Duke of Somerset.

Bedford.

HUng be the heavens with black, yield day to night;
Comets importing change of Times and States,
Brandish your crystall Tresses in the Sky!
And with them scourge the bad revolting Stars,
That have consented unto Henries death:
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long,
England ne're lost a King of so much worth.

Glost. England ne're had a King untill his time:
Vertue he had, deserving to command.
His brandisht Sword did blind men with his beams,
His Armes spread wider then a Dragons Wings:
His sparkling Eyes, repleat with wrathfull fire,
More dazled and drove back his Enemies,
Then mid-day sun, fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his Deeds exceed all speech:
He ne're lift up his hand but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black, why mourn we not in bloud?
Henry is dead, and never shall revive:
Upon a Wooden Coffin we attend:
And deaths dishonorable Victory,
We with our stately presence glorifie,
Like Captives bound to a Triumphant Car.
What? shall we curse the Planets of Mishap,
That plotted thus our Glories overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtile-witted French,
Conjurers and Sorcerers, that afraid of him,
By Magick Verse have contriv'd his end?

Winch. He was a King, blest of the King of Kings.
Unto the French, the dreadfull judgement-Day
So dreadfull will not be, as was his sight.
The Battells of the Lord of Hosts he fought:
The Churches Prayers made him so prosperous.

Glost. The Church? Where is it?
Had not Church-men pray'd,
His thred of Life had not so soon decay'd.
None do you like, but an effeminate Prince,
Whom like a School-boy you may over-awe.

Winch. Gloster, what ere we like, thou art Protector,
And lookest to command the Prince and Realm.
Thy Wife is proud, she holdeth thee in awe,
More then God or Religious Church-men may.

Glost. Name not Religion for thou lov'st the Flesh,
And ne're throughout the year to Church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these Jarres, and rest your minds in peace:
Let's to the Altar: Heralds wait on us;
Instead of Gold, we'll offer up our Armes,
Since Armes avail not, now that Henri's dead.
Posterity await for wretched years,
When at their Mothers moist eyes, Babes shall suck,
Our Isle be made a Nourish of salt Tears,
And none but Women left to wayle the dead.
Henry the Fifth, thy Ghost I invocate:
Prosper this Realm, keep it from Civill Broyles,
Combat with adverse Planets in the heavens;
A far more glorious Star thy soul will make,
Then Julius Cæsar, or bright------

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honorable Lords, health to you all:
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of losse, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guyen, Champaigne, Rheimes, Orleance,
Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What sai'st thou man, before dead Henri's Coarse?
Speak softly, or the losse of those great Towns
Will make him burst his Lead, and rise from death.

Glost. Is Paris lost, and is Roan yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery, but want of Men and Money.
Amongst the Souldiers this is muttered,
That here you maintain severall Factions:
And whil'st a Field should be dispatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your Generalls.
One would have lingring Warrs with little cost;
Another would flye swift but wanteth Wings:
A third man thinks, without expence at all,
By guilefull fair words, Peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English Nobility,
Let not sloth dim your Honors, new begot:
Cropt are the Flower-de-Luces in your Armes
Of Englands Coat, one halfe is cut away.

Exe. Were our Tears wanting to this Funerall,
These Tidings would call forth her flowing Tides.

Bed. Me they concern, Regent I am of France:
Give me my steeled Coat, I'le fight for France.
Away with these disgracefull wayling Robes;
Wounds will I lend the French, in stead of Eyes,
To weep their intermissive Miseries.

Enter

Enter to them another Messenger:

Mess. Lords view these Letters, full of bad mischance.
France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty Towns of no import.
The Dolphin Charles is crowned King in Rhemes:
The Bastard of Orleance with him is joyn'd:
Reynold, Duke of Anjou, doth his part,
The Duke of Alanson flieth on his side. Exit.

Exe. The Dolphin Crown'd King? all flye to him?
O whether shall we flye from this reproach?

Glost. We will not flye, but to our enemies throats.
Bedford, if thou be slack, I'le fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forwardnesse?
An Army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My gracious Lords, to adde to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's Hearse,
I must inform you of a dismall fight,
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot, and the French.

Win. What? wherein Talbot overcame, is't so?

3. Mes. O no: wherein Lord Talbot was o'rethrown:
The circumstance I'le tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadfull Lord,
Retiring from the Siege of Orleance,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troup,
By three and twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed, and set upon:
No leisure had he to enrank his men.
He wanted Pikes to set before his Archers:
Instead whereof, sharp Stakes pluckt out of Hedges
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the Horsemen off, from breaking in.
More then three houres the fight continued:
Where valiant Talbot, above humane thought,
Enacted wonders with his Sword and Lance.
Hundreds he sent to Hell, and none durst stand him:
Here, there, and every where enrag'd, he slew.
The French exclaim'd, the Devil was in Armes,
All the whole Army stood agaz'd on him.
His Souldiers spying his undaunted Spirit,
A Talbot, a Talbot, cri'd out amain.
And rusht into the bowels of the Battel.
Here had the Conquest fully been seal'd up,
If Sir John Falstaffe had not play'd the Coward,
He being in the Vauward, plac't behind,
With purpose to relieve and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroak.
Hence grew the generall wrack and massacre;
Enclosed were they with their enemies.
A base Walloon, to win the Dolphins grace,
Thrust Talbot with a Spear into the Back,
Whom all France, with their assembled strength,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain then? I will slay my self,
For living idlely here in pomp and ease,
Whil'st such a worthy Leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe-men is betray'd,

3. Mes. O no, he lives, but is took Prisoner,
And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford:
Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took likewise.

Bed. His Ransome there is none but I shall pay.
I'le hale the Dolphin headlong from his Throne,
His Crown shall be the Ransome of my friend:
Four of their Lords I'le change for one of ours.
Farewell my Masters, to my Task will I,
Bonefires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint Georges Feast withall.
Ten thousand Souldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

3. Mes. So you had need, for Orleance is besieg'd,
The English Army is grown weak and faint:
The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,
Since they so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember Lords your Oaths to Henry sworn:
Either to quell the Dolphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoak.

Bed. I do remember it, and here take leave,
To go about my preparation. Exit Bedford.

Glost. I'le to the Tower with all the hast I can,
To view th'Artillery and Munition,
And then I will proclaim young Henry King.
Exit Gloster.

Exe. To Eltam will I, where the young King is,
Being ordain'd his speciall Governour,
And for his safety there I'le best devise. Exit.

Winch. Each hath his place and Function to attend:
I am left out; for me nothing remains:
But long I will not be Jack out of Office,
The King from Eltam I intend to send,
And sit at chiefest stern of publick Weal.
Exit.

Enter Charles Alanson, and Reigneir, marching with Drum and Souldiers.

Charl. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens,
So in the Earth to this day is not known.
Late did he shine upon the English side:
Now we are Victors, upon us he smiles.
What Towns of any moment, but we have?
At pleasure here we lye, near Orleance:
Otherwhiles, the famisht English, like pale Ghosts,
Faintly besiege us one hour in a moneth.

Al. They want their Porredge, and their fat Bull-Beeves
Either they must be dieted like Mules.

Reig. Let's raise the Siege: why live we idlely here?
And have their Provender ti'd to their mouthes,
Or pitteous they will look, like drowned Mice.
Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear:
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury,
And he may well in fretting spend his gall,
Nor men, nor money hath he to make War.

Char. Sound, sound Alarum, we will rush on them,
Now for the honour of the forlorn French:
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me;
When he sees me go back on foot, or flye. Exeunt.

Here Alarum, they are beaten back by the English, with great losse.

Enter Charles, Alanson, and Reignier.

Charl. VVho ever saw the like? what men have I?
Dogs, Cowards, Dastards: I would ne're have fled,
But that they left me 'midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate Homicide,
He fighteth as one weary of his life:
To other Lords, like Lyons wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alanf.

Alanſ. Froiſard, a Countreyman of ours, records,
England all Olivers and Rowlands breed,
During the time Edward the third did raign:
More truly now may this be verefied;
For none but Samſons and Goliaſſes
It ſendeth forth to skirmiſh: one to ten?
Lean raw-bon'd Raſcalls, who would e're ſuppoſe,
They had ſuch courage and audacity;
Charl. Let's leave this Town,
For they are hair-brain'd Slaves,
And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:
Of old I know them; rather with their Teeth
The Walls they'll tear down, then forſake the Siege.
Reig. I think by ſome odde Gimmalis or device
Their Armes are ſet, like Clocks, ſtill to ſtrike on;
Elſe ne're could they hold out ſo as they do:
By my conſent, we'll even let them alone.
Alan. Be it ſo.

Enter the Baſtard of Orleance.

Baſt. Where's the Prince Dolphin? I have newes for him.
Dolph. Baſtard of Orleance, thrice welcome to us.
Baſt. Me thinks your looks are ſad, your cheer appal'd.
Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not diſmay'd for ſuccour is at hand:
A holy Maid hither with me I bring,
Which by a Viſion ſent to her from heaven,
Ordained is to raiſe this tedious Siege,
And drive the Engliſh forth the bounds of France:
The ſpirit of deep Propheſie ſhe hath,
Exceeding the nine Sibyls of old Rome:
What's, paſt, and what's to come, ſhe can deſcry.
Speak, ſhall I call her in? believe my words,
For they are certain, and unfallible.
Dolph. Go call her in: but firſt, to try her skill,
Reignier ſtand thou as Dolphin in my place;
Queſtion her proudly, let thy Looks be ſtern,
By this means ſhall we ſound what skill ſhe hath.

Enter Jone Puzel.

Reig. Fair Maid, is't thou wilt do theſe wondrous feats?
Puz. Reignier, is't thou that thinkeſt to beguile me?
Where is the Dolphin? Come, come from behind,
I know thee well, though never ſeen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me;
In private will I talk with thee apart:
Stand back you Lords, and give us leave a while.
Reig. She takes upon her bravely at firſt daſh.
Puz. Dolphin, I am by birth a Shepheards Daughter,
My wit untrain'd in any kind of Art:
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To ſhine on my contemptible eſtate.
Loe, whil'ſt I waited on my tender Lambs,
And to Suns parching heat diſplay'd my cheeks,
Gods Mother deigned to appear to me,
And in a Viſion full of Majeſty,
Will'd me to leave my baſe Vocation,
And free my Country from Calamity:
Her aid ſhe promis'd, and aſſur'd ſucceſſe.
In compleat Glory ſhe reveal'd her ſelf:
And whereas I was black and ſwart before:
With thoſe clear Rayes, which ſhe infus'd on me,
That beauty am I bleſt with, which you ſee.
Ask me what queſtion thou canſt poſſible,
And I will anſwer unpremeditated:
My Courage try by Combat, if thou dar'ſt,
And thou ſhalt find that I exceed my Sex.
Reſolve on this, thou ſhalt be fortunate,
If thou receive me for thy Warlike Mate.
Dolph. Thou haſt aſtoniſht me with thy high termes:
Onely this proof I'le of thy Valour make,
In ſingle Combat thou ſhalt buckle with me;
And if thou vanquiſheſt, thy words are true,
Otherwiſe I renounce all confidence.
Puz. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd Sword,
Deckt with fine Flower-de-Luces on each ſide,
The which at Tourain, in S. Katherines Church-yard,
Out of a great deal of old Iron, I choſe forth.
Dolph. Then come a God's name, I fear no woman.
Puzel. And while I live, I'le ne're flie no man.
Here they fight, and Jone de Puzel overcomes.
Dolph. Stay, ſtay thy hands, thou art an Amazon,
And fighteſt with the Sword of Debora.
Puzel. Chriſts Mother helps me, elſe I were too weak.
Dolph. Who e're helps thee, 'tis thou that muſt help me:
Impatiently I burn with thy deſire,
My heart and hands thou haſt at once ſubdu'd,
Excellent Puzel, if thy name be ſo,
Let me thy ſervant, and not Soveraign be,
'Tis the French Dolphin ſueth to thee thus.
Puzel. I muſt not yield to any rights of Love,
For my Profeſſion's ſacred from above:
When I have chaſed all thy Foes from hence,
Then will I think upon a recompence.
Dolph. Mean time look gracious on thy proſtrate Thrall.
Reig. My Lord me thinks is very long in talk.
Alan. Doubtleſs he ſhrives this Woman to her ſmock,
Elſe ne're could he ſo long protract his ſpeech.
Reign. Shall we diſturb him, ſince he keeps no mean?
Ala. He may mean more then we poor men do know?
Theſe women are ſhrewd tempters with their tongues.
Reig. My Lord, where are you? what deviſe you on,
Shall we give o're Orleance, or no?
Puzel. Why no, I ſay: diſtruſtfull Recreants,
Fight till the laſt gaſp: for I'le be your guard.
Dolph. What ſhe ſayes, I'le confirm: we'll fight it out.
Puzel. Aſſign'd I am to be the Engliſh Scourge.
This night the Siege aſſuredly I'le raiſe:
Expect Saint Martins Summer, Halcyon dayes,
Since I have entred thus into theſe Wars.
Glory is like a Circle in the Water,
Which never ceaſeth to enlarge it ſelf,
Till by broad ſpreading, it diſperſe to nought.
With Henry's death, the Engliſh Circle ends,
Diſperſed are the glories it included:
Now am I like that proud inſulting Ship,
Which Cæſar and his fortune bare at once.
Dolph. Was Mahomet inſpired with a Dove?
Thou with an Eagle art inſpired then.
Hellen, the Mother of great Conſtantine,
Nor yet S. Philips Daughters were like thee.
Bright Star of Venus, fal'n down on the Earth,
How may I reverently worſhip thee enough?
Alan. Leave off delayes, and let us raiſe the Siege.

Reignier.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canſt to ſave our honors,
Drive them from Orleance, and be immortalliz'd.
Dolph. Preſently we'll try: come, let's away about it,
No Prophet will I truſt, if ſhe prove falſe. Exeunt.

Enter Glouceſter, with his ſerving-men.

Gloſt. I am to ſurvey the Tower this day;
Since Henries death, I fear there is a Conveyance:
Where be theſe Warders, that they wait not here?
Open the Gates, 'tis Gloſter that calls.
1. Warder. Who's there, that knocks ſo imperiouſly?
Gloſt. 1. man. It is the Noble Duke of Gloſter.
2. Warder. Who ere he be, you may not be let in.
1. Man. Villains, anſwer you ſo the Lord Protector?
1. Warder. The Lord protect him, ſo we anſwer him,
We do not otherwiſe then we are will'd.
Gloſt. Who wilied you? or whoſe will ſtands but mine?
There's none Protector of the Realme, but I:
Break up the Gates, I'le be your warrantize;
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill Grooms?
Gloſters men ruſh at the Tower Gates, and Woodvile the Lieutenant ſpeaks within.
Wood. What noyſe is this? what Traytors have we here?
Gloſt. Lieutenant, is it you whoſe voyce I hear?
Open the Gates, here's Gloſter that would enter.
Wood. Have patience Noble Duke, I may not open,
The Cardinall of Wincheſter forbids:
From him I have expreſſe commandement,
That thou nor none of thine ſhall be let in.
Gloſt. Faint-hearted Woodvile, prizeſt him 'fore me:
Arragant Wincheſter, that haughty Prelate,
Whom Henry our late Soveraign ne're could brook?
Thou art no friend to God, or to the King:
Open the Gates, or I'le ſhut thee out ſhortly.
Servingmen. Open the Gates to the Lord Protector,
Or we'll burſt them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower Gates, Wincheſter and his men in Tawney Coats.

Wincheſt. How now ambitious Umpire what means this?
Gloſt. Piel'd Prieſt, do'ſt thou command me to be ſhut out?
Winch. I do, thou moſt uſurping Proditor,
And not Protector of the King or Realm.
Gloſt. Stand back thou manifeſt Conſpirator,
Thou that contriv'ſt to murther our dead Lord,
Thou that giv'ſt Whores Indulgences to ſin,
I'le canvas thee in thy Broad Card nalls Hat,
If thou proceed in this thy inſolence.
Winch. Nay, ſtand thou back, I will not budge a foot:
This be Damascus, be thou curſed Cain,
To ſlay thy Brother Abel, if thou wilt.
Gloſt. I will not ſlay thee, but I'le drive thee back:
Thy Scarlet Robes, as a Childs bearing Cloth,
I'le uſe, to carry thee out of this place.
Winch. Doe what thou dar'ſt, I beard thee to thy face.
Gloſt. What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?
Draw men, for all this priviledged place,
Blew Coats to Tawney Coats. Prieſt beware thy Beard,
I mean to tugge it, and to cuff you ſoundly.
Under my feet I'le ſtamp thy Cardinalls Hat:
In ſpight of Pope, or dignities of Church,
Here by the Cheeks I'le drag thee up and down.
Winch. Gloſter, thou wilt anſwer this before the Pope.
Gloſt. Wincheſter Gooſe, I cry, a Rope, a Rope.
Now beat them hence, why do you let them ſtay?
Thee I'le chaſe hence, thou Wolf in Sheeps array.
Out Tawney-Coats, out Scarlet Hypocrite.

Here Gloſters men beat out the Cardinalls men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers.

Mayor. Fie Lords, that you being ſupream Magiſtrates,
Thus contumeliouſly ſhould break the Peace.
Glo. Peace Mayor, for thou know'ſt little of my wrongs:
Here's Beauford, that regards not God nor King,
Hath here diſtrayn'd the Tower to his uſe.
Winch. Here's Gloſter too, a Foe to Citizens,
One that ſtill motions War, and never Peace,
O're-charging your free purſes with large Fines;
That ſeeks to overthrow Religion,
Becauſe he is Protector of the Realm;
And would have Armour here out of the Tower,
To Crown himſelf King, and ſuppreſſe the Prince.
Gloſt. I will not anſwer thee with words, but blows.

Here they ſkirmiſh again.

Mayor. Nought reſts for me, in this tumultuous ſtrife,
But to make open Proclamation.
Come Officer, as loud as e're thou canſt, cry:
All manner of men, aſſembled here in Armes this day, againſt Gods Peace and the Kings, we charge and command you, in his Highneſs Name, to repair to your ſeveral dwelling places, and not to wear, handle, or uſe any Sword, Weapon, or Dagger hence-forward, upon pain of death.
Gloſt. Cardinall, I'le be no breaker of the Law:
But we ſhall meet, and break our minds at large.
Winch. Gloſter, we'll meet to thy dear coſt be ſure:
Thy heart-bloud I will have for this dayes work.
Mayor. I'le call for Clubs, if you will not away:
This Cardinall is more haughty then the Devill.
Gloſter. Major farewell: thou do'ſt but what thou may'ſt
Winch. Abominable Gloſter, guard thy head,
For I intend to have it e're be long. Exeunt.
Mayor. See the Coaſt clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God, theſe Nobles ſhould ſuch ſtomacks bear,
I my ſelf fight not once in forty year. Exeunt.

Enter the Maſter Gunner of Orleance, and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirra, thou know'ſt how Orleance is beſiedg'd
And how the Engliſh have the Suburbs won.
Boy. Father I know, and oft have ſhot at them,
How e're unfortunate, I miſs'd my aime.
M. Gun. But now thou ſhalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:
Chief Maſter Gunner am I of this Town,
Something I muſt do to procure me grace:
The Princes eſpyalls have informed me:
How the Engliſh, in the Suburbs cloſe entrencht,
Went through a ſecret Grate of Iron Barres,
In yonder Tower, to over-peer the City,
And thence diſcover, how with moſt advantage
They may vex us with ſhot or with Aſſault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of Ordnance 'gainſt it I have plac'd,

And fully even these three dayes have I watch'd,
If I could see them. Now Boy do thou watch,
For I can stay no longer.
If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word,
And thou shalt find me at the Governors. Exit.

Boy. Father, I warrant you take you no care,
I'le never trouble you, if I may spy them.

Enter Salisbury, and Talbot on the Turrets, with others.

Salis. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd?
How wert thou handled, being Prisoner?
Or by what means got's thou to be releas'd?
Discourse I prethee on this Turrets top.

Tal. The Earle of Bedford had a Prisoner,
Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santraile,
For him was I exchang'd, and ransom'd.
But with a baser man of Armes by far,
Once in contempt they would have barter'd me:
Which I disdaining, scorn'd, and craved death,
Rather then I would be so pil'd esteem'd;
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
But O, the trecherous Falstaffe wounds my heart,
Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Salis. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs and scorns, and contumelious taunts,
In open Market-place produc'd they me,
To be a publick spectacle to all:
Here, said they, is the Terror of the French,
The Scare-Crow that affrights our Children so.
Then broke I from the Officers that led me,
And with my nails digg'd stones out of the Ground,
To hurle at the beholders of my shame.
My grisly countenance made others flye,
None durst come near, for fear of sudden death.
In Iron Walls they deem'd me not secure:
So great fear of my Name 'mong'st them were spread,
That they suppos'd I could rend Barres of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of Adamant.
Wherefore a guard of chosen Shot I had;
That walkt about me every Minute while:
And if I did but stir out of my Bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a Linstock.

Salis. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd,
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.
Now it is Supper time in Orleance:
Here, through this Grate, I can count every one,
And view the French men how they fortifie:
Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee:
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glandsdale,
Let me have your expresse opinions,
Where is best place to make our Batt'ry next?

Garg. I think at the North Gate, for there stand Lords.

Glandf. And I here, at the Bulwark of the Bridge.

Talb. For ought I see, this City must be famisht,
Or with light Skirmishes enfeebled.

Here they shot, and Salisbury falls down.

Salis. O Lord have mercy on us wretched sinners.

Garg. O Lord have mercy on me, wofull man.

Talb. What chance is this that suddenly hath crost us?
Speak Salisbury; at least, if thou canst, speak:
How far'st thou, Mirror of all Martiall men?
One of thy Eyes, and thy Cheeks side struck off?
Accursed Tower, accursed fatall Hand,
That hath contriv'd this wofull Tragedy.
In thirteen Battells, Salisbury o're came:
Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the Warrs.
Whil'st any Trump did sound, or Drum struck up,
His Sword did ne're leave striking in the field.
Yet liv'st thou Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,
One Eye thou hast to look to Heaven for grace.
The Sun with one Eye vieweth all the World.
Heaven be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands.
Bear hence this Body, I will help to bury it.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
Speak unto Talbot, nay, look up to him.
Salisbury chear thy Spirit with this comfort,
Thou shalt not die whiles------
He beckens with his hand, and smiles on me:
As who should say, When I am dead and gone,
Remember to avenge me on the French.
Plantaginet I will, and, Nero like, will Play on the Lute, beholding the Towns burn:
Wretched shall France be onely in my Name.
----Here an Alarum, and it Thunders and Lightens.
What stir is this? what tumult's in the Heavens?
Whence cometh this Alarum, and the noyse?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord, my Lord, the French have gather'd head
The Dolphin, with one Joan de Puzel joyn'd,
A holy Prophetesse, new risen up,
Is come with a great Power, to raise the Siege.

Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans.

Talb. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan,
It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.
French men, I'le be a Salisbury to you.
Puzel or Pusel, Dolphin or Dog-fish,
Your hearts I'le stamp out with my Horses heels,
And make a Quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his Tent,
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

Alarum. Exit.

Here an Alarum again: and Talbot pursueth the Dolphin, and driveth him: Then enter Joan de Puzel, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.

Talb. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English Troups retyre, I cannot stay them.
A Woman clad in Armour chaseth them.

Enter Puzel.

Here, here she comes. I'le have a bout with thee:
Devill, or Devils Dam, I'le conjure thee:
Bloud will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch.
And straightway give thy Soul to him thou serv'st.

Puz. Come, come, 'tis onely I that must disgrace thee.

Here they fight.

Talb. Heavens, can you suffer Hell so to prevail?
My breast I'le burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my Armes asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded Strumpet.

They fight again.

Puz. Talbot farewell, thy hour is not yet come,
I must go Victuall Orleance forthwith;

A short Alarum: Then enter the Town with Souldiers.

O're-

O re-take me if thou canſt, I ſcorn thy ſtrength.
Go, go, chear up they hungry-ſtarved men,
Help Salisbury to make his Teſtament,
This Day is ours, as many more ſhall be. Exit.
Talb. My thoughts are whirled like a Potter's Wheel.
I know not where I am, nor what I do:
A Witch by fear, not force, like Hannibal,
Drives back our Troops, and conquers as ſhe liſts:
So Bees with ſmoak, and Doves with noiſome ſtench,
Are from their Hives and Houſes driven away.
They call'd us, for our fierceneſs, Engliſh Dogges,
Now like the Whelps, we crying run away.
A ſhort Alarum.
Heark Countreymen, either renew the fight,
Or tear the Lyons out of England's Coat;
Renounce your Soil, give Sheep in Lyons ſtead:
Sheep run not half ſo treacherous from the Wolf,
Or Horſe or Oxen from the Leopard,
As you flie from your oft-ſubdued Slaves.
Alarum. Here another Skirmiſh.
It will not be, retire into your Trenches:
You all conſented unto Salisburies death,
For none would ſtrike a ſtroke in his revenge.
Puzel is entred into Orleance,
In ſpight of us, or ought that we could doe.
O would I were to die with Salisbury,
The ſhame hereof, will make me hide my head.
Exit Talbot.
Alarum, Retreat, Flouriſh.

Enter on the Wall Puzel, Dolphin, Reigneir, Alanſon, and Souldiers.

Puzel. Advance our waving Colours on the Walls,
Reſcu'd is Orleance from the Engliſh wolves:
Thus Joan de Puzel hath perform'd her word.
Dolph. Divineſt Creature, bright Aſtrea's Daughter,
How ſhall I honour thee for this ſucceſſe?
Thy promiſes are like Adonis Garden,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitfull were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious Prophetceſſe,
Recover'd is the Town of Orleance,
More bleſſed hap did ne're befall our State.
Reigneir. Why ring not out the Bells aloud,
Throughout the Town?
Dolphin command the Citizens make Bonefires,
And feaſt and banquet in the open ſtreets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.
Alanſ. All France will be repleat with mirth and joy,
When they ſhall hear how we have play'd the men.
Dolph. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won:
For which, I will divide my Crown with her,
And all the Prieſts and Fryers in my Realm,
Shall in proceſſion ſing her endleſs praiſe.
A ſtatelier Pyramis to her I'le rear,
Then Rhodope's or Memphis ever was.
In memory of her when ſhe is dead,
Her Aſhes, in an Urn more precious
Then the rich-jewel'd Coffer of Darius,
Tranſported, ſhall be at high Feſtivals
Before the Kings and Queens of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Joan de Puzel ſhall be France's Saint.
Come in, and let us Banquet Royally,
After this Golden Day of Victory.
Flouriſh. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Serjeant of a Band, with two Centinels.

Ser. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant:
If any noiſe or Souldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by ſome apparent ſign
Let us have knowledge at the Court of Guard.
Cent. Serjeant you ſhall. Thus are poor Servitors
(When others ſleep upon their quiet beds)
Conſtrain'd to watch in darkneſs, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burgundy, with ſcaling Ladders: Their Drummes beating a Dead March.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whoſe approach, the Regions of Artoys,
Wallon, and Picardie, are friends to us:
This happy night, the Frenchmen are ſecure,
Having all day carous'd and banquetted,
Embrace we then this opportunity,
As fitting beſt to quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by Art, and balefull Sorcery.
Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Deſpairing of his own armes fortitude,
To joyn with Witches, and the help of Hell.
Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Puzel, whom they term ſo pure?
Tal. A Maid, they ſay.
Bed. A Maid? And be ſo martial?
Bur. Pray God ſhe prove not maſculine e're long:
If underneath the Standard of the French
She carry Armour, as ſhe hath begun.
Tal. Well, let them practiſe and converſe with ſpirits.
God is our Fortreſſe, in whoſe conquering name
Let us reſolve to ſcale their flinty bulwarks.
Bed. Aſcend brave Talbot, we will follow thee.
Tal. Not altogether: Better far I gueſſe,
That we do make our entrance ſeveral wayes:
That if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may riſe againſt their force.
Bed. Agreed; I'le to yond corner.
Bur. And I to this.
Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.
Now Salisbury for thee and for the right
Of Engliſh Henry, ſhall this night appear
How much in duty, I am bound to both.
Cent. Arme, arme, the enemy doth make aſſault.
Cry, S. George. A Talbot.

The French leap o're the walls in their ſhirts. Enter ſeveral wayes, Baſtard, Alanſon, Reignier, half ready, and half unready.

Alan. How now my Lords? what all unreadie ſo?
Baſt. Unready? I and glad we ſcap'd ſo well.
Reig. 'Twas time (I trow) to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing Alarums at our Chamber doores.
Alan. Of all exploits ſince firſt I follow'd Armes,
Ne're heard I of a warlike enterprize

More venturous, or desperate then this.
Bast. I think this Talbot be a Fiend of Hell.
Reig. If not of Hell, the Heavens sure favour him.
Alanſ. Here commeth Charles, I marvel how he sped.

Enter Charles and Joan.

Bast. Tut, holy Ioan was his defensive Guard.
Charl. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitfull Dame?
Didst thou at first, to flatter us withall,
Make us partakers of a little gain,
That now our loss might be ten times so much?
Joan. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?
At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
Improvident Souldiers, had your watch been good,
This sudden mischief never could have faln.
Charl. Duke of Alanson, this was your default,
That being Captain of the Watch to Night,
Did look no better to that weighty Charge.
Alanſ. Had all our Quarters been as safely kept,
As that whereof I had the government,
We had not been thus shamefully surpriz'd.
Bast. Mine was secure.
Reign. And so was mine, my Lord.
Charl. And for my self, most part of all this Night
Within her Quarter, and mine own Precinct,
I was employ'd in passing to and fro,
About relieving of the Centinels.
Then how, or which way, should they first break in?
Joan. Question (my Lords) no further of the case,
How, or which way; 'tis sure they found some place,
But weakly guarded, where the breach was made:
And now there rests no other shifts but this,
To gather our Souldiers, scatter'd and disperc't,
And lay new Plat-formes to endamage them.
Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter a Souldier, crying, a Talbot, a Talbot: they flie, leaving their Cloathes behind.

Sould. I'le be so bold to take what they have left:
The Cry of Talbot serves me for a Sword,
For I have loaden me with many Spoiles,
Using no other Weapon but his Name. Exit.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundie.

Bedf. The day begins to break, and Night is fled,
Whose pitchy Mantle over-vail'd the Earth.
Here sound Retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. Retreat.
Talb. Bring forth the Body of old Salisbury,
And here advance it in the Market-place,
The middle Centre of this cursed Town.
Now have I pay'd my Vow unto his Soul,
For every drop of Bloud was drawn from him,
There hath at least five Frenchmen dyed to night.
And that hereafter Ages may behold
What ruine happened in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest Temple I'le erect
A Tomb, wherein his Corps shall be interr'd:
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleance,
The treacherous manner of his mournfull death,
And what a terrour he had been to France.
But Lords, in all our bloudy Massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dolphin's Grace,
His new-come Champion, virtuous Joan of Acre,
Nor any of his false Confederates.
Bedf. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Rouz'd on the sudden from their drowsie Beds,
They did amongst the troops of armed men,
Leap o're the Walls for refuge in the field.
Burg. My self, as far as I could well discern,
For smoak, and dusky vapours of the night,
Am sure I scar'd the Dolphin and his Trull,
When Arme in Arme they both came swiftly running,
Like to pair of loving Turtle-Doves,
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. All hail, my Lords: which of this Princely train
Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Acts
So much applauded through the Realm of France?
Talb. Here is the Talbot, who would speak with him?
Mess. The virtuous Lady, Countess of Auergne,
With modesty admiring thy Renown,
By me intreats (great Lord) thou would'st vouchsafe
To visit her poor Castle where she lyes,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man,
Whose glory fills the World with loud report.
Burg. Is it even so? Nay, then I see our Warres
Will turn unto a peacefull Comick sport,
When Ladies crave to be encountred with.
You may not (my Lord) despise her gentle suit.
Talb. Ne're trust me then: for when a World of men
Could not prevail with all their Oratorie,
Yet hath a Woman's kindness over-rul'd:
And therefore tell her, I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.
Will not your Honours bear me company?
Bedf. No, truly, 'tis more then manners will:
And I have heard it said, Unbidden Guests
Are often welcommest when they are gone.
Talb. Well then, alone (since there's no remedy)
I mean to prove this Ladies courtesie.
Come hither Captain, you perceive my mind.
Whispers.
Capt. I do my Lord, and mean accordingly.
Exeunt.

Enter Countess.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge,
And when you have done so, bring the Keyes to me.
Port. Madam, I will. Exit.
Count. The Plot is laid, if all things fall out right,
I shall as famous be by this exploit,
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadfull Knight,
And his atchievements of no less account:
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine eares,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam, according as your Ladiship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.
Count. And he is welcome: what? is this the man?
Mess. Madam, it is.
Count. Is this the Scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad?
That with his Name the Mothers still their Babes?
I see Report is fabulous and false.

I thought I ſhould have ſeen ſome Hercules,
A ſecond Hector, for his grim aſpect,
And large proportion of his ſtrong knit Limbs.
Alas, this is a Child, a ſilly Dwarf:
It cannot be, this weak and writhled ſhrimp
Should ſtrike ſuch terrour to his Enemies.
Talb. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you:
But ſince your Ladiſhip is not at leiſure,
I'le ſort ſome other time to viſit you.
Count. What means he now?
Go ask him, whither he goes?
Meſſ. Stay my Lord Talbot, for my Lady craves,
To know the cauſe of your abrupt departure.
Talb. Marry, for that ſhe's in a wrong belief,
I go to certifie her Talbot's here.

Enter Porter with Keyes.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou Priſoner.
Talb. Priſoner? to whom?
Count. To me, bloud-thirſty Lord:
And for that cauſe I train'd thee thee to my Houſe.
Long time thy ſhadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my Gallery thy picture hangs:
But now the ſubſtance ſhall endure the like,
And I will chain theſe Legges and Armes of thine,
That haſt by tyranny theſe many yeares
Waſted our Countrey, ſlain our Citizens,
And ſent our Sonnes and Husbands captivate.
Talb. Ha, ha, ha.
Count. Laugheſt thou Wretch?
Thy mirth ſhall turn to moan.
Talb. I laugh to ſee your Ladiſhip ſo fond,
To think, that you have ought but Talbot's ſhadow,
Wherein to practice your ſeverity.
Count. Why? art thou not the man?
Talb. I am indeed.
Count. Then have I ſubſtance too.
Talb. No, no, I am but ſhadow of my ſelf:
You are deceiv'd, my ſubſtance is not here;
For what you ſee, is but the ſmalleſt part,
And leaſt proportion of Humanity:
I tell you Madam, were the whole Frame here,
It is of ſuch a ſpatious lofty pitch,
Your Roof were not ſufficient to contain't.
Count. This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce;
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can theſe contrarieties agree?
Talb. That will I ſhew you preſently.

Winds his Horn, Drummes ſtrike up, a Peal of Ordenance: Enter Souldiers.

How ſay you Madam? are you now perſwaded,
That Talbot is but ſhadow of himſelf?
Theſe are his ſubſtance, ſinews, armes, and ſtrength,
With which he yoaketh your rebellious Necks,
Razeth your Cities, and ſubverts your Towns,
And in a moment makes them deſolate.
Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abuſe,
I find thou art no leſs then Fame hath bruited,
And more then may be gathered by thy ſhape.
Let my preſumption not provoke thy wrath,
For I am ſorry, that with Reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.
Talb. Be not diſmay'd, fair Lady, nor miſconſter
The mind of Talbot, as you did miſtake
The outward compoſition of his body.
What you have done, hath not offended me:
Nor other ſatisfaction do I crave,
But onely with our patience, that we may
Taſte of your Wine, and ſee what Cates you have,
For Souldiers ſtomacks alwayes ſerve them well.
Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured,
To feaſt ſo great a Warriour in my houſe. Exeunt.

Enter Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, Somerſet, Pool, and others.

York. Great Lords and Gentlemen,
What means this ſilence?
Dare no man anſwer in a Caſe of Truth?
Suff. Within the Temple Hall we were too loud,
The Garden here is more convenient.
York. Then ſay at once, if I maintain'd the Truth:
Or elſe was wrangling Somerſet in th'error?
Suff. Faith I have been a Truant in the Law,
And never yet could frame my will to it,
And therefore frame the Law unto my will.
Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then between us.
War. Between two Hawks, which flies the higher pitch,
Between two Dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two Blades, which beares the better temper,
Between two Horſes, which doth bear him beſt,
Between two Girls, which hath the merrieſt eye,
I have perhaps ſome ſhallow ſpirit of judgement:
But in theſe nice ſharp Quillets of the Law,
Good faith, I am no wiſer then a Daw.
York. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
Truth appears ſo naked on my ſide,
That any pur-blind eye may find it out.
Som. And on my ſide it is ſo well apparrel'd,
So clear, ſo ſhining, and ſo evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind-man's eye.
York. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and ſo loth to ſpeak,
In dumb ſignificants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-born Gentleman,
And ſtands upon the honour of his birth,
If he ſuppoſe that I have pleaded truth,
From off this Bryer pluck a white Roſe with me.
Som. Let him that is no Coward, nor no flatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the Truth,
Pluck a red Roſe from off this Thorn with me.
War. I love no Colours: and without all colour
Of baſe inſinuating flattery,
I pluck this white Roſe with Plantagenet.
Suff. I pluck this red Roſe with young Somerſet,
And ſay withall, I think he held the right.
Vernon. Stay Lords and Gentlemen, and pluck no more
'Till you conclude, that he upon whoſe ſide
The feweſt Roſes are cropt from the tree,
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.
Som. Good Maſter Vernon, it is well objected:
If I have feweſt, I ſubſcribe in ſilence.
York. And I.
Vernon. Then for the truth, and plainneſs of the Caſe,
I pluck this pale and Maiden Bloſſome here,
Giving my Verdict on the white Roſe ſide.
Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Leaſt bleeding, you do paint the white Roſe red,
And fall on my ſide ſo againſt your will.
Vernon. If I, my Lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion ſhall be Surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the ſide ſtill where I am.
Som. Well well, come on, who elſe?

Lawyer. Unless my Study and my Books be false,
The argument you held, was wrong in you;
In sign whereof, I pluck a white Rose too.
York. Now Somerset, where is your argument?
Som. Here in my Scabbard, meditating, that Shall dy your white Rose in a bloudy red.
York. Mean time your cheeks do counterfeit our Roses,
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.
Som. No Plantagenet.
'Tis not for fear, but anger, that my cheeks
Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our Roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confesse thy error.
York. Hath not thy Rose a Canker, Somerset?
Som. Hath not thy Rose a Thorn, Plantagenet?
York. I, sharp and piercing to maintain his truth,
Whiles thy consuming Canker eats his falsehood.
Som. Well, I'le find friends to wear my bleeding Roses,
That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.
York. Now by this Maiden Blossome in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish Boy.
Suff. Turn not thy scornes this way Plantagenet.
York. Proud Poole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.
Suff. I'le turn my part thereof into thy throat.
Som. Away, away, good William de la Pool,
We grace the Yeoman, by conversing with him.
Warw. Now by God's will thou wrong'st him, Somerset:
His Grandfather was Lyonel Duke of Clarence,
Third Son to the third Edward King of England:
Spring Crestless Yeomen from so deep a Root?
York. He beares him on the place's Priviledge,
Or durst not for his craven heart say thus.
Som. By him that made me, I'le maintain my words
On any plot of Ground in Christendome.
Was not thy Father, Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
For Treason executed in our late King's dayes?
And by his Treason, stand'st not thou attainted,
Corrupted and exempt from ancient Gentry?
His trespasse yet lives guilty in thy bloud,
And 'till thou be restor'd, thou art a Yeoman.
York. My Father was attached, not attainted,
Condemn'd to dye for Treason, but no Traytor;
And that I'le prove on better men then Somerset,
Were growing time once ripened to my will.
For your partaker Pool, and you your self,
I'le note you in my Book of Memory,
To scourge you for this apprehension:
Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd.
Som. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for thee still:
And know us by these Colours for thy Foes,
For these, my friends in spight of thee shall wear.
York. And by my Soul, this pale and angry Rose,
As Cognizance of my bloud-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my faction weare,
Until it wither with me to my Grave,
Or flourish to the height of my Degree.
Suff. Go forward, and be choak'd with thy ambition:
And so farewell, until I meet thee next. Exit.
Som. Have with thee Poole: Farewell ambitious Richard. Exit.
York. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it?
Warw. This blot that they object against your House,
Shall be wip't out in the next Parliament,
Call'd for the Truce of Winchester and Glocester:
And if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.
Mean time, in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset, and William Pool,
Will I upon thy party wear this Rose.
And here I prophesie: this Brawl to day,
Grown to this faction in the Temple Garden,
Shall send between the Red-Rose and the White,
A thousand Soules to Death and deadly Night.
York. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalf would pluck a Flower.
Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.
Lawyer. And so will I.
York. Thanks gentle Sir.
Come, let us four to Dinner: I dare say,
This Quarrel will drink Bloud another day.
Exeunt.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a Chair, and Jaylors.

Mort. Kind Keepers of my weak decaying Age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the Wrack,
So fare my Limbs with long Imprisonment:
And these gray Locks, the Pursuivants of Death,
Nestor-like aged, in an Age of Care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These Eyes, like Lamps, whose wasting Oil is spent,
Wax dimm, as drawing to their Exigent.
Weak Shoulders, over-born with burthening Grief,
And pithless Armes, like to a withered Vine,
That droops his sap-less Branches to the ground.
Yet are these Feet, whose strength-less stay is numm,
(Unable to support this Lump of Clay)
Swift-winged with desire to get a Grave,
As witting I no other comfort have.
But tell me Keeper, will my Nephew come?
Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my Lord, will come:
We sent unto the Temple, his Chamber,
And answer was return'd, that he will come:
Mort. Enough: my soul then shall be satisfied.
Poor Gentleman, his wrong doth equal mine,
Since Henry Monmouth first began to Reign,
Before whose Glory I was great in Armes,
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then, hath Richard been obscur'd,
Depriv'd of Honour and Inheritance.
But now, the Arbitrator of Despaires,
Just Death, kind Umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet Enlargement doth dismisse me hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard.

Keeper. My Lord, your loving Nephew now is come.
Mort. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come?
Rich. I, Noble Uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your Nephew, late despised Richard, comes.
Mort. Direct mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck,
And in his Bosome spend my latter gasp.
Oh tell me when my Lippes do touch his Cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting Kiss,
And now declare sweet Stem from York's great Stock,
Why did'st thou say of late thou were despis'd?

Rich. First

Rich. First, lean thine aged Back against mine Arme,
And in that ease I'le tell thee my Disease.
This day in argument upon a Case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me:
Amongst which termes, he us'd his lavish tongue,
And did upbraid me with my Father's death;
Which obloquie set barres before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.
Therefore good Uncle, for my Father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for Alliance sake, declare the cause
My Father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his Head.

Mort. That cause (fair Nephew) that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring Youth,
Within a loathsome Dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his decease.

Rich. Discover more at large what cause that was,
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.

Mort. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And Death approach not, e're my Tale be done.
Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King,
Depos'd his Nephew Richard, Edward's Son,
The first begotten, and the lawfull Heir
Of Edward King, the third of that Descent.
During whose Reign, the Piercies of the North,
Finding his Usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour'd my advancement to the Throne.
The reason mov'd these Warlike Lords to this,
Was, for that (young King Richard thus remov'd, Leaving no Heir begotten of his Body)
I was the next by Birth and Parentage:
For by my Mother I derived am
From Lyonel Duke of Clarence, the third Son
To King Edward the Third; whereas he,
From John of Gaunt doth bring his Pedigree,
Being but the fourth of that Heroick Line.
But mark: as in this haughty great attempt,
They laboured to plant the rightfull Heir,
I lost my Liberty, and they their Lives,
Long after this, when Henry the Fifth
(Succeeding his Father Bullingbrook) did reign;
Thy Father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,
Marrying my Sister, that thy Mother was;
Again, in pitie of my hard distress,
Levied an Army, weening to redeem,
And have install'd me in the Diademe:
But as the rest, so fell that Noble Earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the Title rested, were suppress.

Rich. Of which, my Lord, your Honour is the last.

Mort. True; and thou seest, that I no Issue have
And that my fainting words do warrant death:
Thou art my Heir; the rest, I wish thee gather:
But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Rich. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me:
But yet me thinks, my Father's execution
Was nothing less then bloudy Tyranny.

Mort. With silence, Nephew, be thou politick,
Strong fixed is the House of Lancaster,
And like a Mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy Uncle is removing hence,
As Princes do their Courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a setled place.

Rich. O Uncle, would some part of my young yeares
Might but redeem the passage of your Age.

Mort. Thou do'st then wrong me, as that slaughterer
Which giveth many Wounds, when one will kill. (doth,
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good,
Only give order for my Funeral.
And so farewell, and fair be all thy hopes;
And prosperous be thy Life in Peace and War. Dyes.

Rich. And Peace, no War, befall thy parting Soul.
In prison hast thou spent a Pilgrimage,
And like a Hermite over-past thy dayes.
Well, I will lock his Counsel in my Breast,
And what I do imagine, let that rest.
Keepers convey him hence, and I my self
Will see his Burial better then his Life. Exit.
Here dyes the duskie Torch of Mortimer,
Choak't with Ambition of the meaner sort,
And for those Wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my House,
I doubt not, but with honour to redress.
And therefore haste I to the Parliament,
Either to be restored to my Bloud,
Or make my will th' advantage of my good. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Flourish. Enter King, Exeter, Gloster, Winchester, Warwick, Somerset, Suffolk, Richard Plantagenet. Gloster offers to put up a Bill: Winchester snatches it, tears it.

Winch. Com'st thou with deep premeditated Lines?
With written Pamphlets, studiously devis'd?
Humfrey of Gloster, if thou canst accuse,
Or ought intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention, suddenly,
As I with sudden, and extemporal speech,
Purpose to answer what thou canst object. (patience,

Glo. Presumptuous Priest, this place commands my
Or thou should'st find thou hast dis-honour'd me.
Think not, although in Writing I preferr'd
The manner of thy vile outragious Crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able
Verbatim to rehearse the Method of my Pen.
No Prelate, such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy leud, pestiferous and dissentious pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernicious Usurer,
Froward by nature, Enemy to peace,
Lascivious, wanton, more then well beseems
A man of thy profession, and Degree,
And for thy Treachery, what's more manifest?
In that thou laid'st a Trap to take my Life,
As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower.
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The King, thy Soveraign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Winch. Gloster, I do defie thee. Lords vouchsafe
To give me hearing what I shall reply.
If I were covetous, ambitious or perverse,
As he will have me: how am I so poor?
Or how haps it, I seek not to advance
Or raise my self? but keep my wonted Calling.
And for Dissention, who preferreth Peace
More then I do? except I be provok'd.
No, my good Lords, it is not that offends,
It is not that, that hath incens'd the Duke:
It is because no one should sway but he,
No one, but he, should be about the King;
And that engenders Thunder in his breast,

And makes him roar these Accusations forth.
But he shall know I am as good ------
Glost. As good?
Thou Bastard of my Grandfather.
Winch. I, Lordly Sir: for what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in another's Throne?
Glost. Am not I Protector, saucie Priest?
Winch. And am not I a Prelate of the Church?
Glost. Yes, as an Out-law in a Castle keeps,
And useth it, to patronage his Theft.
Winch. Unreverent Gloucester.
Glost. Thou art Reverend,
Touching thy Spiritual function, not thy Life.
Winch. Rome shall remedie this.
Warw. Roam thither then.
My Lord, it were your duty to forbear.
Som. I, see the Bishop be not over-borne:
Me thinks my Lord should be Religious,
And know the Office that belongs to such.
Warw. Me thinks his Lordship should be humbler,
It fitteth not a Prelate so to plead.
Som. Yes, when his holy State is toucht so near.
Warw. State holy, or unhallow'd, what of that?
Is not his Grace Protector to the King?
Rich. Plantagenet I see must hold his tongue,
Lest it be said, Speak Sirrha when you should:
Must your bold Verdict enter talk with Lords?
Else would I have a fling at Winchester.
King. Uncles of Glosters, and of Winchester,
The special Watch-men of our English Weal,
I would prevail, if Prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amitie.
Oh, what a Scandal is it to our Crown,
That two such Noble Peers as ye should jarre?
Believe me, Lords, my tender yeares can tell,
Civil dissention is a viperous Worm,
That gnaws the Bowels of the Common-wealth.
A noise within. Down with the Tawny-Coats.
King. What Tumult's this?
Warw. An Uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the Bishop's men.
A noise again, Stones, Stones.

Enter Mayor.

Mayor. Oh my good Lords, and virtuous Henry,
Pitie the City of London, pitie us:
The Bishop, and the Duke of Gloster's men,
Forbidden late to carry any Weapon,
Have fill'd their Pockets full of peble stones;
And banding themselves in contrary parts,
Do pelt so fast at one anothers Pate,
That many have their giddy braines knockt out:
Our Windows are broke down in every Street,
And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our Shops.

Enter in skirmish with bloudy Pates.

King. We charge you, on allegiance to our selves,
To hold your slaughtring hands, and keep the Peace:
Pray' Uncle Gloster mitigate this strife.
1. Serving. Nay, if we be forbidden Stones, we'll fall to it with our Teeth.
2. Serving. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
skirmish again.
Glost. You of my household leave this peevish broil,
And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.
3. Serv. My Lord, we know your Grace to be a man
Just, and upright; and for your Royal Birth,
Inferior to none, but to his Majesty:
And e're that we will suffer such a Prince,
So kind a Father of the Common-weal,
To be disgraced by an Ink-horn Mate,
We and our Wives and Children all will fight,
And have our bodies slaughtred by thy foes.
1. Serv. I, and the very paring of our Nails
Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.
Begin again.
Glost. Stay, stay, I say,
And if you love me, as you say you doe,
Let me perswade you to forbear a while.
King. Oh, how this discord doth afflict my soul.
Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighes and teares, and will not once relent?
Who should be pitifull, if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a Peace,
If holy Church-men take delight in broils?
Warw. Yield, my Lord Protector, yield Winchester,
Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your Soveraign, and destroy the Realm.
You see what mischief, and what Murther too,
Hath been enacted through your enmity:
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for bloud.
Winch. He shall submit, or I will never yield.
Glost. Compassion on the King commands me stoop,
Or I would see his heart out, e're the Priest
Shold ever get that priviledge of me.
Warw. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the Duke
Hath banisht moodie discontented fury,
As by his smoothed Brows it doth appear:
Why look you still so stern and Tragical?
Glost. Here Winchester, I offer thee my Hand.
King. Fie Uncle Beauford, I have heard you preach,
That Malice was a great and grievous sin:
And will not you maintain the thing you teach?
But prove a chief offender in the same.
Warw. Sweet King: the Bishop hath a kindly gird:
For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent;
What, shall a Child instruct you what to doe?
Winch. Well, Duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee
Love for thy Love, and Hand for Hand I give.
Glost. I, but I fear me with a hollow Heart.
So here my friends and loving Countreymen,
The token serveth for a Flag of Truce,
Betwixt our selves, and all our followers:
So help me God, as I dissemble not.
Winch. So help me God, as I intend it not.
King. Oh, loving Uncle, kind Duke of Gloster,
How joyfull am I made by this Contract,
Away my Masters, trouble us no more,
But joyn in friendship, as your Lords have done.
1. Serv. Content, I'le to the Surgeon's.
2. Serv. And so will I.
3. Serv. And I will see what Physick the Tavern affords. Exeunt.
Warw. Accept this Scrowl, most gracious Soveraign,
Which in the Right of Richard Plantagenet,
We do exhibit to your Majesty.
Glo. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for sweet Prince,
And if your Grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right,
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham place I told your Majesty.

King. And

King. And those occasions, Uncle, were of force:
Therefore my loving Lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his Bloud.
Warw. Let Richard be restored to his Bloud,
So shall his Father's wrongs be recompenc't.
Winch. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.
King. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whose Inheritance I give,
That doth belong unto the House of York,
From whence you spring, by Lineal Descent.
Rich. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.
King. Stoop then, and set you Knee against my Foot,
And in reguerdon of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valiant Sword of York.
Rise Richard, like a true Plantagenet.
And rise created Princely Duke of York.
Rich. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fall,
And as my duty springs, so perish they,
That grudge one Thought against your Majesty.
All. Welcome high Prince, the mighty Duke of York.
Som. Perish base Prince, ignoble Duke of York.
Glost. Now will it best avail your Majesty,
To cross the Seas, and to be Crown'd in France:
The presence of a King engenders love
Amongst his Subjects and his loyal Friends,
As it dis-animates his Enemies.
King. When Glester says the word, King Henry goes,
For friendly counsel cuts off many Foes.
Glost. Your Ships already are in readiness.

Exeunt.

Manet Exeter.

Exe. I, we may march in England or in Fraunce,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue;
This late dissention grown betwixt the Peers,
Burns under fained ashes of forg'd love,
And will at last break out into a flame,
As festred members rot but by degree,
Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal Prophesie,
Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fift,
Was in the mouth of every sucking Babe,
That Henry born at Monmouth should winne all,
And Henry born at Windsor should lose all:
Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish,
His dayes may finish, e're that hapless time. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Puzel disguis'd, and four Souldiers with Sacks upon their backs.

Puzel. These are the Citie Gates, the Gates of Roan,
Through which our Policy must make a breach.
Take heed, be wary how you place your words,
Talk like the vulgar sort of Market men,
That come to gather Money for their Corn.
If we have entrance, as I hope we shall,
And that we find the slothfull Watch but weak,
I'le by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.
Souldier. Our Sacks shall be a mean to sack the City,
And we be Lords and Rulers over Roan,
Therefore we'l knock. Knock.
Watch. Che la.
Puzel. Peasauns la pouure gens de France,
Poor Market folks that come to sell their Corn.
Watch. Enter, go in, the Market Bell is rung.
Puzel. Now Roan, I'le shake thy Bulwarkes to the ground. Exeunt.

Enter Charles, Bastard, Alanson.

Charles. Saint Denns bless this happy Stratagem,
And once again we'll sleep secure in Roan.
Bastard. Here entred Puzel, and her Practisants:
Now she is there, how will she specifie?
Here is the best and safest passage in.
Reign. By thrusting out a Torch from yonder Tower,
Which once discern'd shews that her meaning is,
No way to that (for wakness) which she entred.

Enter Puzel on the top, thrusting out a Torch burning.

Puzel. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch,
That joyneth Roan unto her Countreymen,
But burning fatal to the Talbonites.
Bastard. See Noble Charles the Beacon of our friend,
The burning Torch in yonder Turret stands.
Charles. Now shines it like a Comet of Revenge,
A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes.
Reig. Deferre no time, delayes have dangerous ends;
Enter and cry, the Dolphin, presently,
And then do execution on the Watch. Alarum.

An Alarum, Talbot in an Excursion.

Talb. France, thou shalt rue this Treason with thy teares,
If Talbot but survive thy Treachery.
Puzel that Witch, that damned Sorceress,
Hath wrought this Hellish mischief unawares,
That hardly we escap't the Pride of France. Exit.

An Alarum: Excursions. Bedford brought in sick in a Chair.

Enter Talbot and Burgonie without: within, Puzel, Charles, Bastard, and Reigneir on the Walls.

Puzel. Good morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread?
I think the Duke of Burgonie will fast,
Before he'll buy again at such a rate.
'Twas full of Darnel: do you like the taste?
Burg. Scoff on vile Fiend, and shameless Curtizan,
I trust e're long to choak thee with thine own,
And make thee curse the Harvest of that Corn.
Charles. Your Grace may starve (perhaps) before that time.
Bedf. Oh let not words, but deeds, revenge this Treason.
Puzel. What will you do, good grey-beard?
Break a Launce, and run a-Tilt at Death,
Within a Chair.
Talb. Foul Fiend of France, and Hag of all despight,
Incompass'd with thy lustfull Paramours,
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant Age,
And twit with Cowardise a man half dead?
Damsel, I'le have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.
Puzel. Are ye so hot, Sir: yet Puzel hold thy peace,
If Talbot do but Thunder, Rain will follow.

They whisper together in counsel.

God speed the Parliament: who shall be the Speaker?
Talb. Dare

Talb. Dare ye come forth, and meet us in the field?
Puzel. Belike your Lordship takes us then for fools,
To try if that our own be ours, or no.
Talb. I speak not to that railing Hecate,
But unto thee Alanson, and the rest.
Will ye, like Souldiers, come and fight it out?
Alanf. Seignior, no.
Talb. Seignior, hang: base Muleters of France,
Like Peasant foot-Boyes do they keep the Walls,
And dare not take up Armes, like Gentlemen.
Puzel. Away Captains, let's get us from the Walls,
For Talbot means no goodness by his Looks,
God b'uy my Lord, we came sir but to tell you
That we are here. Exeunt from the Walls.
Talb. And there we will be too, e're it be long.
Or else Reproach be Talbot's greatest fame.
Vow Burgonie, by honour of thy house,
Prickt on by publick Wrongs sustain'd in France,
Either to get the Town again, or dye.
And I, as sure as English Henry lives,
And as his Father here was Conqueror;
As sure as in this late betrayed Town,
Great Cordelion's Heart was buried;
So sure I swear, to get the Town, or dye.
Burg. My Vowes are equal partners with thy Vowes.
Talb. But e're we go, regard this dying Prince,
The valiant Duke of Bedford: Come my Lord,
We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sickness, and for crazie age.
Bedf. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:
Here I will sit, before the Walls of Roan,
And will be partner of your weal or woe.
Burg. Couragious Bedford, let us now perswade you.
Bedf. Not to be gone from hence, for once I read,
That stout Pendragon, in his Litter sick,
Came to the field, and vanquished his foes.
Me thinks I should revive the Souldiers hearts,
Because I ever found them as my self.
Talb. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast,
Then be it so: Heavens keep old Bedford safe.
And now no more adoe, brave Burgonie,
But gather we our Forces out of hand,
And set upon our boasting Enemy. Exit.

An Alarum: Excursions. Enter Sir John Falstaff, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away Sir John Falstaff, in such haste?
Falst. Whither away? to save my self by flight,
We are like to have the overthrow again.
Cap. What? will you flie, and leave Lord Talbot?
Falst. I, all the Talbots in the World, to save my life. Exit.
Capt. Cowardly Knight, ill fortune follow thee. Exit.

Retreat. Excursions. Puzel, Alanson, and Charles flie.

Bedf. Now quiet Soul, depart when Heaven please,
For I have seen our Enemies overthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
They that of late were daring with their scoffes,
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.
Bedford dyes, and is carried by two in his Chair.

An Alarum. Enter Talbot, Burgonie, and the rest.

Talb. Lost, and recovered in a day again,
This is a double Honour, Burgonie:
Yet Heavens have glory for this Victory.
Burg. Warlike and Martial Talbot, Burgonie
Inshrines thee in his heart, and there erects
Thy Noble Deeds, as Valour's Monuments.
Talb. Thanks gentle Duke: but where is Puzel now?
I think her old Familiar is asleep.
Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his glikes?
What all amort? Roan hangs her head for grief,
That such a valiant Company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the Town,
Placing therein some expert Officers,
And then depart to Paris, to the King,
For there young Henry with his Nobles lye.
Burg. What wills Lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgonie.
Talb. But yet before we go, let's not forget
The Noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
But see his Exequies fulfill'd in Roan,
A braver Souldier never couched Launce,
A gentler heart did never sway in Court.
But Kings and mightiest Potentates must die,
For that's the end of humane miserie. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Bastard, Alanson, Puzel.

Puzel. Dismay not (Princes) at this accident,
Nor grieve that Roan is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrasive,
For things that are not to be remedy'd.
Let frantick Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a Peacock sweep along his tail,
We'll pull his Plumes, and take away his Train,
If Dolphin and the rest will be but rul'd.
Charles. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy Cunning had no diffidence,
One sudden Foil shall never breed distrust.
Bastard. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the World.
Alanf. We'll set thy Statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverenc't like a blessed Saint.
Employ thee then, sweet Virgin, for our good.
Puzel. Then thus it must be, this doth Joan devise:
By fair perswasions, mixt with sugred words,
We will intice the Duke of Burgonie
To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.
Charles. I marry Sweeting, if we could do that,
France were no place for Henrie's Warriours,
Nor should that Nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our Provinces.
Alanf. For ever should they be expuls'd from France,
And not have Title of an Earldome here.
Puzel. Your Honours shall perceive how I will work,
To bring this matter to the wished end.
Drumme sounds a-far off.
Heark, by the sound of Drumme you may perceive
Their Powers are marching unto Paris-ward.
Here sound an English March.
There goes the Talbot with his Colours spred,
And all the Troops of English after him.

French March.

Now in the Rereward comes the Duke and his:
Fortune in favour makes him lagge behind.
Summon a Parley, we will talk with him.

Trumpets sound a Parley.

Charles. A Parley with the Duke of Burgonie?

Burg. Who craves a Parley with the Burgonie?

Puzel. The Princely Charles of France, thy Countreyman.

Burg. What say'st thou Charles? for I am marching hence.

Charles. Speak Puzel, and enchant him with thy words.

Puzel. Brave Burgonie, undoubted hope of France, Stay, let thy humble hand-maid speak to thee.

Burg. Speak on, but be not over-tedious.

Puzel. Look on thy Countrey, look on fertile France, And see the Cities and the Towns defac't, By wasting Ruine of the cruel Foe, As looks the Mother on her lowly Babe, When Death doth close his tender-dying Eyes, See, see the pining Malady of France: Behold the Wounds, the most unnatural Wounds, Which thou thy self hast given her wofull Breast. Oh turn thy edged Sword another way, Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help: One drop of Bloud drawn from thy Countrie's Bosome, Should grieve thee more then streames of common gore. Return thee therefore with a flood of Teares, And wash away thy Countries stained Spots.

Burg. Either she hath bewitcht me with her words, Or Nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puzel. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, Doubting thy Birth and lawfull Progenie. Whom joyn'st thou with, but with a Lordly Nation, That will not trust thee, but for Profits sake? When Talbot hath set footing once in France, And fashion'd thee that Instrument of Ill, Who then, but English Henry, will be Lord, And thou be thrust out, like a Fugitive? Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof: Was not the Duke of Orleance thy Foe? And was he not in England Prisoner? But when they heard he was thine Enemie, They set him free, without his Ransome pay'd, In spight of Burgonie and all his friends, See then, thou fight'st against thy Countrey men, And joyn'st with them will be thy slaughter-men. Come, come, return; return thou wandring Lord, Charles and the rest will take thee in their armes.

Burg. I am vanquished:
These haughty words of hers
Have Batt'red me like roaring Cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees.
Forgive me Countrey, and sweet Countreymen:
And Lords accept this hearty kind embrace.
My Forces and my Power of men are yours.
So farewell Talbot, I'le no longer trust thee.

Puzel. Done like a Frenchman: turn and turn again.

Charles. Welcome brave Duke, thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bastard. And doth beget new Courage in our Breasts.

Alanson. Puzel hath bravely play'd her part in this, And doth deserve a Coronet of Gold.

Charles. Now let us on, my Lords,
And joyn our Powers,
And seek how we may prejudice the Foe. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Warwick, Exeter: To them, with his Souldiers, Talbot.

Talb. My gracious Prince, and honourable Peers,
Hearing of your arrival in this Realm,
I have a while given Truce unto my Warres,
To doe my duty to my Soveraign.
In sign whereof, this Arme, that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience, fiftie Fortresses,
Twelve Cities, and seven walled Towns of strength,
Beside five hundred Prisoners of esteem;
Lets fall his Sword before your Highness feet:
And with submissive loyalty of heart
Ascribes the Glory of his Conquest got,
First to my God, and next unto your Grace.

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, Uncle Gloucester,
That hath so long been resident in France.

Glost. Yes, if it please your Majesty, my Liege.

King. Welcome, brave Captain, and victorious Lord.
When I was young (as yet I am not old)
I do remember how my Father said,
A stouter Champion never handled Sword.
Long since we have resolved of your truth,
Your faithfull service, and your toil in War:
Yet never have you tasted our Reward,
Or bee reguerdon'd with so much as Thanks,
Because 'till now, we never saw your face;
Therefore stand up, and for these good deserts,
We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury,
And in our Coronation take your place.

Exeunt.

Manent Vernon and Basset.

Vern. Now Sir, to you that were so hot at Sea,
Disgracing of these Colours that I wear,
In honour of my Noble Lord of York,
Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bass. Yes Sir, as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucie Tongue,
Against the Duke of Somerset.

Vern. Sirrha, thy Lord I honour as he is.

Bass. Why what is he? as good a man as York.

Vern. Heark ye: not so: in witnesse take you that.

Strikes him.

Bass. Villain, thou knowest
The Law of Armes is such,
That who so drawes a Sword, 'tis present death,
Or else this Blow should broach thy dearest Bloud.
But I'le unto his Majesty, and crave,
I may have liberty to 'venge this Wrong,
When thou shalt see, I'le meet thee to thy cost.

Vern. Well miscreant, I'le be there as soon as you,
And after meet you, sooner then you would.

Exeunt.

Enter

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter King, Gloceſter, Wincheſter, York, Suffolk, Somerſet, Warwick, Talbot, and Governor Exeter.

Glo. Lord Biſhop, ſet the Crown upon his head.
Win. God ſave King Henry of that name the ſixt.
Glo. Now Governour of Paris take your Oath,
That you elect no other King but him;
Eſteem none friends, but ſuch as are his Friends,
And none your Foes, but ſuch as ſhall pretend
Malicious practices againſt his State:
This ſhall ye do, ſo help you righteous God.

Enter Falſtaffe.

Fal. My gracious Soveraign, as I rode from Calice,
To haſte unto your Coronation:
A Letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your Grace, from th'Duke of Burgundy.
Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy, and thee:
I vow'd (baſe Knight) when I did meet thee next,
To tèar the Garter from thy Craven's leg,
Which I have done, becauſe (unworthily)
Thou was't inſtalled in that High Degree.
Pardon my Princely Henry, and the reſt:
This Daſtard, at the Battel of Poctiers,
When (but in all) I was ſix thouſand ſtrong,
And that the French were almoſt ten to one,
Before we met, or that a ſtroke was given,
Like to a truſty Squire, did run away.
In which aſſault we loſt twelve hundred men.
My ſelf, and divers Gentlemen beſide,
Were there ſurpriz'd, and taken priſoners.
Then judge (great Lords) if I have done amiſs:
Or whether that ſuch Cowards ought to wear
This Ornament of Knighthood, yea or no?
Glo. To ſay the truth, this fact was infamous,
And ill beſeeming any common man:
Much more a Knight, a Captain, and a Leader.
Tal. When firſt this Order was ordain'd my Lords,
Knights of the Garter were of Noble birth;
Valiant, and Virtuous, full of haughty Courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the Warres:
Not fearing Death, nor ſhrinking for Diſtreſs.
But alwaies reſolute, in moſt extreames.
He then, that is not furniſh'd in this ſort,
Doth but uſurp the Sacred name of Knight,
Profhaning this moſt Honourable Order,
And ſhould (if I were worthy to be Judge)
Be quite degraded, like a Hedge-born Swain,
That doth preſume to boaſt of Gentle Bloud.
K. Stain to thy Countreymen, thou hear'ſt thy doom;
Be packing therefore, thou that waſt a Knight:
Henceforth we baniſh thee on pain of death. Exit.
And now my Lord Protector view the Letter,
Sent from our Uncle Duke of Burgundie.
Glo. VVhat means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his ſtile?
No more but plain and bluntly? (To the King.)
Hath he forgot he is his Soveraign?
Or doth this churliſh Superſcription
Pretend ſome alteration in good will?
What's here? I have upon eſpecial cauſe,
Mov'd with compaſſion of my Countries wrack,
Together with the pittifull complaints
Of ſuch as your Oppreſſion feeds upon,
Forſaken your pernicious Faction,
And joyn'd with Charles, the rightfull king of France.
O monſtrous Treachery! Can this be ſo?
That in alliance, amity, and oathes,
There ſhould be found ſuch falſe diſſembling guile?
King. What? doth my Uncle Burgundy revolt?
Glo. He doth, my Lord, and is become my foe.
King. Is that the worſt this Letter doth contain?
Glo. It is the worſt, and all (my Lord) he writes.
King. Why then, Lord Talbot, there ſhall talk with him,
And give him chaſtiſement for this abuſe.
How ſay you (my Lord) are you not content?
Tal. Content my Liege? Yes: but that I am prevented,
I ſhould have begg'd I might have been employ'd.
King. Then gather ſtrength, and march unto him ſtraight:
Let him perceive how ill we brook his Treaſon,
And what offence it is to flout his Friends.
Tal. I go, my Lord, in heart deſiring ſtill
You may behold confuſion of your foes.

Enter Vernon and Baſſet.

Ver. Grant me the Combat, gracious Soveraign.
Baſ. And me (my Lord) grant me the Combate too.
York. This is my Servant, hear him noble Prince.
Som. And this is mine (ſweet Henry) favour him.
King. Be patient Lords, and give them leave to ſpeak,
Say Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim
And wherefore crave you Combate? Or with whom?
Ver. With him (my Lord) for he hath done me wrong.
Baſ. And I with him, for he hath done me wrong.
King. What is that wrong whereon you both complain?
Firſt let me know, and then I'le anſwer you.
Baſ. Croſſing the Sea, from England into France,
This fellow here with carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the Roſe I wear,
Saying, the ſanguine colour of the Leaves
Did preſent my Maſter's bluſhing cheeks:
When ſtubbornly he did repugn the truth,
About a certain queſtion in the Law,
Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York, and him:
With other vile and ignominious termes.
In confutation of which rude Reproach,
And in defence of my Lord's worthineſs,
I crave the benefit of Law of Armes.
Ver. And that is my petition (Noble Lord:)
For though he ſeem with forged queint conceit
To ſet a gloſs upon his bold intent,
Yet know (my Lord) I was provok'd by him,
And he firſt took exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing that the paleneſs of this Flower,
Bewray'd the faintneſs of my Maſter's heart.
York. Will not this malice, Somerſet, be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out,
Though ne're ſo cunningly you ſmother it.
King. Good Lord, what madneſs rules in brain-ſick men,
When for ſo ſlight and frivolous a cauſe,
Such factious emulations ſhall ariſe?
Good Couſins both of York and Somerſet,
Quiet your ſelves, and be at peace.
York. Let this diſſention firſt be tryed by fight,
And then your Highneſs ſhall command a Peace.
Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone,
Betwixt our ſelves let us decide it then.
York. There is my pledge, accept it Somerſet.
Ver. Nay let it reſt where it began at firſt.

Baſſ.

Baſ. Confirm it ſo, mine honourable Lord.
Glo. Confirm it ſo? Confounded be your ſtrife,
And periſh ye with your audacious prate;
Preſumptuous vaſſals, are you not aſham'd
With this immodeſt clamorous outrage,
To trouble and diſturb the King, and Us?
And you my Lords, me thinks you do not well
To bear with their perverſe Objections:
Much leſs to take occaſion from their mouthes,
To raiſe a mutiny betwixt your ſelves:
Let me perſwade you take a better courſe.
Exet. It grieves his Highneſs,
Good my Lords, be friends.
King. Come hither you that would be Combatants,
Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this Quarrel, and the cauſe.
And you my Lords: Remember where you are,
In France, amongſt a fickle wavering Nation:
If they perceive diſſention in our looks,
And that within our ſelves we diſagree;
How will their grudging ſtomacks be provok'd
To wilfull Diſobedience, and Rebell?
Beſide, What infamy will there ariſe,
When Foreign Princes ſhall be certified,
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henrie's Peers, and chief Nobility,
Deſtroy'd themſelves, and loſt the Realm of France?
O think upon the Conqueſt of my Father,
My tender yeares, and let us not forgoe
That for a trifle, that was bought with bloud.
Let me be Umpier in this doubtfull ſtrife:
I ſee no reaſon if I wear this Roſe,
That any one ſhould therefore be ſuſpicious
I more encline to Somerſet, then York:
Both are my kinſmen, and I love them both.
As well they may upbraid me with my Crown,
Becauſe (forſooth) the King of Scots is Crown'd.
But your diſcretions better can perſwade,
Then I am able to inſtruct or teach:
And therefore as we hither came in peace,
So let us ſtill continue peace and love.
Coſin of York, we inſtitute your Grace
To be our Regent in theſe parts of France:
And good my Lord of Somerſet, unite
Your troops of horſemen, with his Bands of foot,
And like true Subjects, ſonnes of your Progenitors,
Go chearfully together, and digeſt
Your angry Choler on your Enemies.
Our Self, my Lord Protector, and the reſt,
After ſome reſpite will return to Calice;
From thence to England, where I hope e're long
To be preſented by your Victories,
With Charles, Alanſon, and that traiterous Rout.
Exeunt. Manent York, Warwick, Exeter, Vernon.
War. My Lord of York, I promiſe you the King
Prettily (me thought) did play the Orator.
York. And ſo he did, but yet I like it not,
In that he weares the badge of Somerſet.
War. Tuſh, that was but his fancie, blame him not,
I dare preſume (ſweet Prince) he thought no harm.
York. And if I wiſh he did. But let it reſt,
Other affairs muſt now be managed. Exeunt.
Flouriſh. Manet Exeter.
Exet. Well didſt thou Richard to ſuppreſs thy voice:
For the paſſions of thy heart burſt out,
I fear we ſhould have ſeen decipher'd there
More rancorous ſpight, more furious Raging broils,
Then yet can be imagin'd or ſuppos'd:
But howſoe're, no ſimple man that ſees
This jarring diſcord of Nobilitie,
This ſhouldering of each other in the Court,
This factious bandying of their Favourites,
By that it doth preſage ſome ill event.
'Tis much, when Scepters are in Childrens hands:
But more, when Envy breeds unkind Diviſion:
Then comes the Ruine, there begins Confuſion. Exit.

Enter Talbot with Trumpet and Drumme, before Burdeaux.

Talb. Go to the Gates of Burdeaux, Trumpeter, Summon their General unto the Wall. Sounds.
Enter General Aloft.
Engliſh John Talbot (Captains) calls you forth,
Servant in Armes to Harry King of England,
And thus he would: Open your City Gates,
Be humbled to us, call my Soveraign yours,
And do him homage as obedient Subjects,
And I'le withdraw me, and my bloudy power.
But if you frown upon this proffer'd Peace,
And tempt the fury of my three Attendants,
Lean Famine, quartering Steel, and climbing Fire,
Who in a moment, even with the earth,
Shall lay your ſtately, and air-braving Towers,
If you forſake the offer of their love.
Cap. Thou ominous and fearfull Owl of death,
Our Nations terrour, and their bloudy ſcourge,
The period of thy Tyrrany approacheth,
On us thou canſt not enter but by Death:
For I proteſt we are well fortified,
And ſtrong enough to iſſue out and fight.
If thou retire, the Dolphin well appointed,
Stands with the ſnares of War to tangle thee.
On either hand thee, there are ſquadrons pitcht,
To wall the from thee liberty of Flight;
Ten thouſand French have ta'ne the Sacrament,
And no way canſt thou turn thee for Redreſſe,
But death doth front thee with apparent ſpoil,
And pale deſtruction meets thee in the face:
To rive their dangerous Artillery
Upon no Chriſtian ſoul but Engliſh Talbot.
Loe, there thou ſtand'ſt a breathing valiant man
Of an invincible unconquer'd ſpirit:
This is the lateſt Glory of thy praiſe,
That I thy enemy dew thee withall:
For e're the Glaſs that now begins to run,
Finiſh the proceſſe of his ſandy hour,
Theſe eyes that ſee thee now well coloured,
Shall ſee thee withered, bloudy, pale, and dead.
Drum a-far off.
Heark, heark, the Dolphin's drum, a warning Bell.
Sings heavy Muſick to thy timorous ſoul,
And mine ſhall ring thy dire departure out. Exit.
Talb. He Fables not, I heard the enemy:
Out ſome light Horſemen, and peruſe their Wings.
O negligent and heedleſſe Diſcipline,
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale?
A little Heard of Englands Timorous Deer,
'Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French Curres.
If we be Engliſh Deer, be then in bloud,
Not Raſcal-like to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moodie mad: And deſperate Stagges,

Turn

Turn on the bloudy Hounds with heads of Steel,
And make the Cowards ſtand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they ſhall find dear Deer of us my Friends.
God, and S. George, Talbot and Englands Right,
Proſper our Colours in this dangerous fight. Exeunt.

Enter a Meſſenger that meets York. Enter York with Trumpet, and many Souldiers.

York. Are not the ſpeedy ſcouts return'd again,
That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?
Meſſ. They are return'd my Lord, and give it out,
That he is march'd to Burdeaux with his power
To fight with Talbot: as he march'd along,
By your eſpyals were diſcovered
Two mightier Troops then that the Dolphin led,
Which joyn'd with him, and made their march for (Burdeaux.
York. A plague upon that Villain Somerſet,
That thus delayes my promiſed ſupply
Of horſemen, that were levied for this ſiedge.
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,
And I am lowted by a Traitor Villain,
And cannot help the noble Chevalier:
God comfort him in this neceſſity:
If he miſcarry, farewell Warres in France.

Enter another Meſſenger.

2. Meſ. Thou Princely Leader of our Engliſh ſtrength,
Never ſo needfull on the earth of France,
Spur to the Reſcue of the Noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waſte of Iron,
And hem'd about with grim deſtruction:
To Burdeaux, warlike Duke, to Burdeaux York,
Elſe farewell Talbot, France, and Englands honour.
York. O God, that Somerſet who in proud heart
Doth ſtop my Cornets, were in Talbot's place,
So ſhould we ſave a valiant Gentleman,
By forfeiting a Traitor and a Coward:
Mad ire, and wrathfull fury makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remiſſe Traitors ſleep.
Meſ. O ſend ſome ſuccour to the diſtreſt Lord.
York. He dies, we loſe: I break my warlike word:
We mourn, France ſmiles: We loſe, they dayly get,
All long of this vile Traitor Somerſet.
Meſ. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's ſoul,
And on his Son young John, who two houres ſince,
I met in travel towards his warlike Father;
This ſeven yeares did not Talbot ſee his ſon,
And now they meet where both their lives are done.
York. Alas, what joy ſhall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young ſon welcome to his Grave:
Away, vexation almoſt ſtops my breath,
That ſundred friends greet in the hour of death.
Lucie farewell, no more my fortune can,
But curſe the cauſe I cannot aid the man.
Maine, Bloys, Poytiers, and Toures, are won away,
Long all of Somerſet, and his delay. Exit.
Meſ. Thus while the Vulture of ſedition,
Feeds in the boſome of ſuch great Commanders,
Sleeping neglection doth betray to loſſe:
The Conqueſt of our ſcarce cold Conqueror,
That ever-living man of Memorie,
Henry the fifth: Whiles they each other croſs,
Lives, Honours, Lands, and all, hurrie to loſs. Exit.

Enter Somerſet with his Army.

Som. It is too late, I cannot ſend them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot,
Too raſhly plotted. All our general force,
Might with a ſally of the very Town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath ſullied all his gloſs of former Honour
By this unheedfull, deſperate, wilde adventure:
York ſet him on to fight, and die in ſhame,
That Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.
Cap. Here is Sir William Lucie, who with me
Set from our o're-matcht forces forth for aid.
Som. How now Sir William, whither were you ſent?
Lu. Whither my Lord? from bought and ſold L. Talbot,
Who ring'd about with bold adverſitie,
Cryes out for noble York and Somerſet,
To beat aſſailing death from his weak Regions;
And whiles the honourable Captain there
Drops bloudy ſweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And in advantage lingring looks for Reſcue,
You his falſe hopes, the truſt of Englands honour,
Keep off aloof with worthleſs emulation:
Let not your private diſcord keep away
The levied ſuccours that ſhall lend him aide,
While he renowned Noble Gentleman
Yields up his life unto a world of odds.
Orleance the Baſtard, Charles, and Burgundie,
Alanſon, Reignard, compaſs him about,
And Talbot periſheth by your default.
Som. York ſet him on, York ſhould have ſent him aide.
Luc. And York as faſt upon your Grace exclaims,
Swearing that you with-hold his levied hoſt,
Collected for this expedition.
Som. York lyes: He might have ſent, and had the Horſe:
I owe him little Dutie, and leſs Love,
And take foul ſcorn to fawn on him by ſending.
Luc. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now intrapt the Noble-minded Talbot:
Never to England ſhall he bear his life,
But dies betraid to fortune by your ſtrife.
Som. Come go, I will diſpatch the Horſemen ſtrait:
Within ſix houres, they will be at his aid.
Luc. Too late comes Reſcue, if he is tane or ſlain,
For flie he could not, if he would have fled:
And flie would Talbot never though he might.
Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu.
Luc. His fame lives in the World. His ſhame in you.
Exeunt.

Enter Talbot and his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot, I did ſend for thee
To tutor thee in ſtratagems of War,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
When ſapleſs Age, and weak unable limbs
Should bring thy father to his drooping Chair.
But O malignant and ill-boading Starres,
Now art thou come unto a Feaſt of death,
A terrible and unavoided danger:
Therefore dear Boy, mount on my ſwifteſt horſe,
And I'le direct thee how thou ſhalt eſcape
By ſudden flight. Come, dally not, be gone.
John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your Son?

Shall

And shall I flye? O, if you love my Mothers,
Dishonour not her honourable Name,
To make a Bastard and a slave of me:
The World will say, he is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when Noble Talbot stood.
Talb. Flye, to revenge my death, If I be slain.
John. He that flyes so, will ne're return again.
Talbot. If we both stay, we both are sure to dye.
John. Then let me stay, and, Father, do you flye:
Your losse is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no losse is known in me.
Upon my death, the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won,
But mine it will, that no exploit have done.
You fled for Vantage, every one will swear:
But if I bow, they'l say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If the first hour I shrink and run away:
Here on my knee I beg Mortality,
Rather then Life, preserv'd with Infamy.
Talb. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tomb?
John. I, rather then I'le shame my Mothers Womb.
Talb. Upon my blessing I command thee go.
John. To fight I will, but not flye the Foe.
Talb. Part of thy Father may be sav'd in thee.
John. No part of him, but will be shame in me.
Talb. Thou never hadst Renown, nor canst not lose it.
John. Yes, your renowned Name: shall flight abuse it?
Tal. Thy Fathers charge shall clear thee from the stain.
John. You cannot witnesse for me, being slain.
If Death be so apparent, then both flye.
Talb. And leave my followers here to fight and die?
My age was never tainted with such shame.
John. And shall my Youth be guilty of such blame?
No more can I be severed from your side,
Then can your self, your self in twain divide:
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not, if my Father die.
Talb. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair Son,
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon:
Come, side by side, together live and die,
And Soul with Soul from France to heaven flye.
Exeunt.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemm'd about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. S. George, and Victory, fight Souldiers, fight:
The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his Sword.
Where is John Talbot? pawse, and take thy breath,
I gave thee Life, and rescu'd thee from Death.
John. O twice my Father, twice am I thy Son:
The Life thou gav'st me first, was lost and done,
Till with thy Warlike Sword, despight of Fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.
Talb. When from the Dolphins Crest thy Sword struck fire,
It warm'd thy Fathers heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac't Victory. Then Leaden Age,
Quicken'd with Youthfull Spleen, and Warlike Rage,
Beat down Alanson, Orleance, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescued thee.
The irefull Bastard Orleance, that drew blood
From thee my Boy, and had the Maidenhood
Of thy first fight, I soon encountered,
And interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his Bastard blood, and in disgrace
Bespoke him thus: Contaminated, base,
And mis-begotten blood, I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave Boy.
Here purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak thy Fathers care:
Art thou not weary, John? How do'st thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the Battell, Boy, and flye,
Now thou art seal'd the Son of Chivalry?
Flye, to revenge my death when I am dead,
The help of one stands me in little stead.
Oh, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small Boat.
If I to day dye not with French-mens Rage,
To morrow I shall die with mickle age.
By me they nothing gain, and if I stay,
'Tis but the shortning of my Life one day.
In thee thy Mother dies, our Households Name,
My Deaths Revenge, thy Youth, and Englands Fame:
All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are sav'd, if thou wilt flye away.
John. The Sword of Orleance hath not made me smart,
These words of yours draw Life-blood from my heart.
On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
To save a paltry Life, and slay bright Fame,
Before young Talbot from old Talbot flye,
The Coward Horse that bears me, fall and die:
And like me to the pezant Boyes of France,
To be Shames scorn, and subject of Mischance.
Surely, by all the Glory you have won,
And if I flye, I am not Talbot's Son.
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot,
If Son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.
Talb. Then follow thou thy desp'rate Sire of Crete
Thou Icarus, thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy Fathers side,
And commendable prov'd let's die in pride. Exit.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter old Talbot led.

Talb. Where is my other Life? mine own is gone.
O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?
Triumphant Death, smear'd with Captivity,
Young Talbot's Valour makes me smile at thee.
When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my Knee,
His bloody Sword he brandisht over me,
And like a hungry Lyon did commence
Rough deeds of Rage, and stern impatience:
But when my angry Guardant stood alone,
Tendring my ruine, and assail'd of none,
Dizzy-ey'd Fury, and great rage of heart,
Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clustring Battell of the French:
And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench
His over-mounting Spirit; and there di'd
My Icarus, my Blossome in his pride.
Enter with John Talbot, borne.
Serv. O, my dear Lord, loe where your Son is borne.
Ta. Thou antick Death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,
Anon from thy insulting Tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots winged through the lither Skie,
In thy despight shall scape Mortality.
O thou whose wounds become hard favoured death,

Speak to thy Father, ere thou yield thy breath,
Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no:
Imagine him a French-man, and thy Foe.
Poor Boy, he smiles, me thinks, as who should say,
Had Death been French, then Death had died to day.
Come, come, and lay him in his Fathers armes,
My spirit can no longer bear these harmes.
Souldiers adieu: I have what I would have,
Now my old armes are young John Talbots grave. Dies.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Charles, Alanson, Burgundy, Bastard, and Puzell.

Char. Had York and Sommerset brought rescue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.
Bast. How the young whelp of Talbots raging wood,
Did flesh his puny-sword in French-mens blood.
Puz. Once I encountred him, and thus I said:
Thou Maiden youth, be vanquisht by a Maid.
But with a proud Majesticall high scorn
He answer'd thus: Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a Giglot Wench,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.
Bur. Doubtlesse he would have made a noble Knight:
See where he lies inhearsed in the armes
Of the most bloody Nurser of his harmes.
Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder,
Whose life was Englands glory, Galliaes wonder.
Char. Oh no forbear: For that which we have fled
During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter Lucy.

Lu. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.
Char. On what submissive message art thou sent?
Lucy. Submission, Dolphin? 'Tis a meer French word:
We English Warriours wot not what it means.
I come to know what Prisoners thou hast tane,
And to survey the bodies of the dead.
Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? Hell our prison is.
But tell me whom thou seek'st?
Luc. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury?
Created for his rare successe in Armes,
Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence,
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdon of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffeild,
The thrice victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the Noble Order of S. George,
Worthy S. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,
Great Marshall to our King Henry the sixt,
Of all his Wars within the Realm of France.
Puz. Here's a silly stately stile indeed:
The Turk that two and Fifty Kingdomes hath,
Writes not so tedious a Stile as this.
Him that thou magnifi'st with all these Titles,
Stinking and flye-blown lies here at our feet,
Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the French-mens only Scourge,
Your Kingdomes terrour, and black Nemesis?
Oh were mine eye-balls into Bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces.
Oh, that I could but call these dead to life,
It were enough to fright the Realm of France.
Were but his Picture left amongst you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their Bodies, that I may bear them hence,
And give them Buriall, as beseems their worth.
Puz. I think this upstart is old Talbot's Ghost,
He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit:
For Gods sake let him have him: to keep them here,
They would but stink, and putrifie the aire.
Char. Go take their Bodies hence.
Lucy. I'le bear them hence: but from their ashes shall be rear'd
A Phœnix that shall make all France affear'd. (wilt.
Char. So we be rid of them, do with them what thou
And now to Paris in this conquering vein,
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Gloucester, and Exeter.

King. Have you perus'd the Letters from the Pope,
The Emperour, and the Earl of Armanack?
Glo. I have, my Lord, and their intent is this,
They humbly sue unto your Excellence,
To have a godly peace concluded of,
Between the Realms of England and of France.
King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?
Glo. Well (my good Lord) and as the onely means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And stablish quietnesse on every side.
King. I marry, Unckle, for I alwayes thought
It was both impious and unnaturall,
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should raign among Professors of one Faith,
Glo. Beside, my Lord, the sooner to effect,
And surer bind this knot of amity,
The Earl of Armanack near knit to Charles,
A man of great Authority in France,
Proffers his onely Daughter to your Grace,
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous Dowry.
King. Marriage, Unckle? Alass my yeares are young:
And fitter is my study, and my Books,
Than wanton dalliance with a Paramour.
Yet call th'Embassadours, and as you please,
So let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choyce
Tends to Gods glory, and my Countreys weal.

Enter Winchester, and three Ambassadours.

Exet. What, is my Lord of Winchester install'd,
And call'd unto a Cardinalls degree?
Then I perceive, that will be verefied
Henry the Fift did sometime prophesie.
If once he come to be a Cardinall,
He'll make his Cap coequall with the Crown.
King. My Lords Ambassadors, your severall suits
Have bin consider'd and debated on,
Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
And therefore are we certainly resolv'd,
To draw conditions of a friendly peace,

Which

Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France.
Glo. And for the proffer of my Lord your Master,
I have inform'd his Highnesse so at large,
As liking of the Ladies virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her Dower,
He doth intend she shall be Englands Queen,
King. In argument and proof of which contract,
Bear her this Jewell, pledge of my affection.
And so, my Lord Protector, see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover, wherein shipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the Sea. Exeunt.
Win. Stay, my Lord Legate, you shall first receive
The summe of mony which I promised
Should be delivered to his Holinesse,
For cloathing me in these grave Ornaments.
Legat. I will attend upon your Lordships leisure.
Win. Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferiour to the proudest Peer.
Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That neither in birth, or for authority,
The Bishop will be over-born by thee:
I'le either make the stoop, and bend thy knee,
Or sack this Country with a mutiny. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alanson, Bastard, Reignier, and Joan.

Charl. This newes (my Lords) may cheer our drooping spirits:
'Tis said, the stout Parisians do revolt,
And return again unto the warlike French.
Alan. Then march to Paris Royall Charles of France,
And keep not back your power in dalliance.
Puz. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us,
Else ruine combat with their Pallaces.
Enter Scout.
Scout. Successe unto our valiant Generall,
And happinesse to his accomplices.
Char. What tidings send our Scouts? I prethee speak,
Scout. The English Army that divided was
Into two parties, is now conjoyn'd in one,
And means to give you Battell presently.
Char. Somewhat too sudden Sirs, the warning is,
But we will presently provide for them.
Bur. I trust the Ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone, my Lord, you need not fear.
Puz. Of all base passions, Fear is most accurst.
Command the Conquest Charles, it shall be thine:
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.
Char. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate.
Exeunt. Alarum. Excursions.

Enter Joan de Puzell.

Puz. The Regent conquers, and the French-men flye.
Now help ye charming Spells and Periapts,
And ye choyse spirits that admonish me,
And give me signs of future accidents. Thunder.
You speedy helpers, that are Substitutes
Under the Lordly Monarch of the North,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprize.
Enter Fiends.
This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.
Now ye familiar Spirits, that are cull'd
Out of the powerfull Regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.
They walk, and speak not.
Oh hold me not with silence over long:
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'le lop a member off, and give it you
In earnest of a further benefit:
So you do condescend to help me now.
They hang their heads.
No hope to have redresse? My body shall
Pay recompence, if you will grant my suit.
They shake their heads.
Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
Intreat you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foyl.
They depart.
See, they forsake me. Now the time is come,
That France must vail her lofty plumed Crest,
And let her head fall into Englands lap.
My ancient Incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with:
Now France thy glory droopeth to the dust. Exit.

Excursions. Burgundy and York fight hand to hand. French flye.

York. Damsell of France, I think I have you fast,
Unchain your spirits now with spelling Charmes,
And try if they can gain your liberty.
A goodly prize, fit for the Devils grace.
See how the ugly Witch doth bend her brows,
As if with Circe, she would change my shape.
Puz. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.
Yor. Oh, Charles the Dolphin is a proper man,
No shape but his can please your dainty eye.
Puz. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee,
And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds.
York. Fell banning Hag, Inchantresse hold thy tongue.
Puz. I prethee give me leave to curse a while.
Yor. Curse Miscreant, when thou com'st to the stake.
Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Suffolk with Margaret in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.
Gazes on her.
Oh fairest Beauty, do not fear, nor flye:
For I will touch thee but with reverend hands,
I kisse these fingers for eternall peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.
Who art thou, say? that I may honour thee.
Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King,
The King of Naples, who so ere thou art.
Suf. And Earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.
Be not offended, Natures miracle,
Thou art alotted to be tane by me:
So doth the Swan her downy Cignets save,

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings:
Yet if this servile usage once offend,
Go, and be free again, as Suffolks friend. She is going.
Oh stay: I have no power to let her passe,
My hand would free her, but my heart sayes no.
As playes the Sun upon the glassie streams,
Twinkling another counterfeited beam,
So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes,
Fain would I wooe her, yet I dare not speak:
I'le call for Pen and Ink, and write my mind:
Fie De la Pole, disable not thy self:
Hast not a Tongue? Is she not here thy prisoner?
VVilt thou be daunted at a VVomans sight?
I: Beauties Princely Majesty is such,
Confounds the Tongue, and makes the senses rough.
Mar. Say Earl of Suffolk, if thy name be so,
VVhat ransome must I pay before I passe?
For I perceive I am thy prisoner.
Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a triall of her love? (pay?
M. VVhy speak'st thou not? VVhat ransome must I
Suf. She's beautifull; and therefore to be VVooed:
She is a VVoman, therefore to be wonne.
Mar. VVilt thou accept of ransome, yea or no?
Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife,
Then how can Margaret be thy Paramour?
Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.
Suf. There all is marr'd: there lies a cooling card.
Mar. He talks at randome: sure the man is mad.
Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.
Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me:
Suf. I'le win this Lady Margaret. For whom?
VVhy for my King: Tush, that's a wooden thing.
Mar. He talks of wood: It is some Carpenter.
Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these Realms.
But there remains a scruple in that too:
For though her Father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Main, yet is he poor,
And our Nobility will scorn the match.
Mar. Hear ye Captain? are you not at leisure?
Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne're so much:
Henry is youthfull, and will quickly yield.
Madam, I have a secret to reveal.
Mar. VVhat though I be inthrall'd, he seems a Knight,
And will not any way dishonour me.
Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.
Mar. Perhaps I shall be resc'u'd by the French,
And then I need not crave his curtesie.
Suf. Sweet Madam, give me hearing in a cause.
Mar. Tush, women have been captivate ere now.
Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?
Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo.
Suf. Say gentle Princesse, would you not suppose
Your bondage happy, to be made a Queen?
Mar. To be a Queen in bondage, is more vile,
Than is a slave, in base servility:
For Princes should be free.
Suf. And so shall you,
If happy Englands Royall King be free.
Mar. Why, what concerns his freedome unto me?
Suf. I'le undertake to make thee Henry's Queen,
To put a Golden Scepter in thy hand,
And set a precious Crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my-------
Mar. What?
Suf. His love.
Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.
Suf. No, gentle Madam, I unworthy am
To wooe so fair a Dame to be his wife,
And have no portion in the choyce my self.
How say you, Madam, are you so content?
Mar. And if my Father please, I am content.
Suf. Then call our Captains and our Colours forth,
And Madam, at your Fathers Castle walls,
We'll crave a parley to conferre with him.
Sound. Enter Reignier on the Walls.
See Reignier see, thy daughter prisoner.
Reig. To whom?
Suf. To me.
Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?
I am a Souldier, and unapt to weep,
Or to exclaim on Fortunes fickleness.
Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough my Lord,
Consent, and for thy Honour give consent,
Thy Daughter shall be wedded to my King,
Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto:
And this her easie held imprisonment,
Hath gain'd thy Daughter Princely liberty.
Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?
Suf. Fair Margaret knows,
That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or fain.
Reig. Upon thy Princely warrant, I descend,
To give thee answer of thy just demand.
Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sound. Enter Reignier.

Reig. Welcome, brave Earl, into our Territories,
Command in Anjou what your Honour pleases.
Suf. Thanks Reignier, happy for so sweet a Child,
Fit to be made Companion with a King:
What answer makes your Grace unto my suit?
Reig. Since thou dost daign to wooe her little worth,
To be the Princely Bride of such a Lord:
Upon condition I may quietly
Enjoy mine own, the Country Main and Anjou,
Free from oppression, or the stroke of War,
My Daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.
Suf. That is her ransome, I deliver her,
And those two Counties I will undertake
Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.
Reig. And I again in Henry's Royall name,
As Deputy unto that gracious King,
Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith.
Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee Kingly thanks,
Because this is in Traffick of a King.
And yet me thinks I could be well content
To be mine own Atturney in this case.
I'le over then to England with this newes,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd:
So farewell Reignier, set this Diamond safe
In golden Pallaces as it becomes.
Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian Prince King Henry were he here.
Mar. Farewell my Lord, good wishes, praise, & prayers,
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. She is going.
Suf. Farewell sweet Madam: but hark you Margaret,
No Princely commendations to my King?
Mar. Such commendations as becomes a Maid,
A Virgin and his Servant, say to him.
Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed,

But

But, Madam, I must trouble you again,
No loving Token to his Majesty?
Mar. Yes, my good Lord, a pure unspotted heart,
Never yet taint with love, I send the King.
Suf. And this withall. Kisse her
Mar. That for thy self, I will not so presume,
To send such peevish Tokens to a King.
Suf. Oh wert thou for my self: but Suffolk stay,
Thou mayest not wander in that Labyrinth,
There Minotaurs, and ugly Treasons lurk.
Solicite Henry with her wondrous praise,
Bethink thee on her Virtues that surmount,
Made naturall Graces that extinguish Art,
Repeat their semblance often on the Seas,
That when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
Thou mayest bereave him of his wits with wonder. Exit.

Enter York, Warwick, Shepheard, Puzel.

Yor. Bring forth that Sorceresse condemn'd to burn.
Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy Fathers heart out-right,
Have I sought every Countrey far and near,
And now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timelesse cruell death:
Ah Joan, sweet Daughter, I'le die with thee.
Puz. Decrepit Miser, base ignoble Wretch,
I am descended of a gentler blood.
Thou art no Father, nor no Friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out: My Lords, and please you, 'tis not so,
I did beget her, all the Parish knows:
Her Mother liveth yet, can testifie
She was the first fruit of my Batch'lor-ship.
War. Graceless, wilt thou deny thy Parentage?
Yor. This argues what her kind of life hath been,
Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes.
Shep. Fie Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle:
God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I pray thee, gentle Joan.
Puz. Pezant avant, you have suborn'd this man
Of purpose, to obscure my Noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a Noble to the Priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her Mother.
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my Girl.
Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
Of thy nativity: I would the Milk
Thy Mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her breast,
Had bin a little Ratsbane for thy sake,
Or else, when thou didst keep my Lambs a field,
I wish some ravenous Wolf had eaten thee.
Dost thou deny thy Father, cursed Drab?
O burn her, burn her, hanging is too good. Exit.
Yor. Take her away, for she hath liv'd too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.
Puz. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd,
Not me, begotten of a Shepheard Swain,
But issued from the Progeny of Kings.
Virtuous and Holy, chosen from above,
By inspiration of Celestiall Grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked Spirits,
But you that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltlesse blood of Innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand Vices:
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compasse Wonders, but by help of Devils.
No misconceived, Joan of Aire hath been
A Virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste, and immaculate, in very thought,
Whose Maiden-blood thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the Gates of heaven.
Yor. I, I: away with her to execution.
War. And hearke ye sirs: because she is a Maid,
Spare for no Faggots, let there be enow:
Place Barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortned.
Puz. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
Then Joan discover thine infirmity,
That warranteth by Law, to be thy priviledge.
I am with Child, ye bloody Homicides:
Murther not then the Fruit within my Womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.
Yor. Now heaven forfend, the holy Maid with Child?
War. The greatest miracle that ere ye wrought:
Is all your strict precisenesse come to this?
Yor. She and the Dolphin have bin juggling,
I did imagine what would be her refuge.
War. Well, go to, we will have no Bastards live,
Especially since Charles must Father it.
Puz. You are deceiv'd, my child is none of his,
It was Alanson that enjoy'd my love.
Yor. Alanson, that notorious Machevile?
It dies, and if it had a thousand lives.
Puz. Oh give me leave, I have deluded you,
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the Duke I nam'd,
But Reignier King of Naples that prevail'd.
War. A married man! that's most intollerable.
Yor. Why here's a Girl: I think she knows not well
(There were so many) whom she may accuse.
War. It's a sign she had been liberall and free.
Yor. And yet forseeth she is a Virgin pure.
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy Brat, and thee.
Use no intreaty, for it is in vain.
Pu. Then lead me hence: with whom I leave my curse.
May never glorious Sun reflex his beams
Upon the Country where you make abode:
But darkenesse, and the gloomy shade of death
Inviron you, till Mischief and Despair,
Drive you to break your necks, or hang your selves. Exit.

Enter Cardinall.

Yor. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes,
You foul accursed minister of Hell.
Car. Lord Regent, I do greet your Excellence
With Letters of Commission from the King.
For know my Lords, the States of Christendome,
Mov'd with remorse of these outragious broyles,
Have earnestly implor'd a generall peace,
Betwixt our Nation, and th'aspiring French;
And here at hand, the Dolphin and his Train
Approacheth, to conferre about some matters.
Yor. Is all our travell turn'd to this effect,
After the slaughter of so many Peers,
So many Captains, Gentlemen, and Souldiers,
That in this quarrell have been overthrown,
And sold their Bodies for their Countries benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the Towns,
By treason, falshood, and by treachery,
Our great Progenitors had conquered?
Oh Warwick, Warwick, I foresee with grief
The utter losse of all the Realm of France.
War. Be patient York, if we conclude a Peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe Covenants,
As little shall the French-men gain thereby.

Enter Charles, Alanson, Bastard, Reignier.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peacefull truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be informed by your selves,
What the conditions of that league must be.
Yor. Speak Winchester, for boyling choller chokes
The hollow passage of my poyson'd voyce,
By sight of those our balefull enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That in regard King Henry gives consent,
Of meer compassion, and of lenity,
To ease your Country of distressefull War,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitfull peace,
You shall become true Liegemen to his Crown.
And Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thy self,
Thou shalt be plac'd as Viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy Regall dignity.
Alan. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his Temples with a Coronet,
And yet in substance and authority,
Retain but priviledge of a private man?
This proffer is absurd, and reasonlesse.
Char. 'Tis known already that I am possest
With more then half the Gallian Territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawfull King.
Shall I for lucre of the rest un-vanquisht,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but Viceroy of the whole?
No, Lord Ambassadour, I'le rather keep
That which I have, than coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.
Yor. Insulting Charles, hast thou by secret means
Us'd intercession to obtain a league,
And now the matter grows to compremize,
Stand'st thou aloof upon Comparison.
Either accept the Title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our King,
And not of any challenge of Desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant Warres.
Reig. My Lord, you do not well, in obstinacy
To cavill in the course of this Contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not find like opportunity.
Alan. To say the truth, it is your policy,
To save your Subjects from such massacre
And ruthlesse slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in Hostility.
And therefore take this contract of a Truce,
Although you break it, when your pleasure serves,
War. How say'st thou Charles?
Shall our Condition stand?
Char. It shall:
Onely reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our Towns of Garrison.
Yor. Then swear Allegiance to his Majesty,
As thou art Knight, never to disobey,
Nor be Rebellious to the Crown of England,
Thou nor thy Nobles, to the Crown of England.
So, now dismisse your Army when ye please:
Hang up your Ensigns, let your Drummes be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. Exeunt.

Enter Suffolk in conference with the King, Gloucester, and Exeter.

King. Your wondrous rare description (noble Earl)
Of beautious Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues graced with externall gifts,
Do breed Loves settled passions in my heart,
And like as rigour with tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest Hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her Renown,
Either to suffer Shipwrack, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her Love.
Suf. Tush, my good Lord, this superficiall tale,
Is but a preface to her worthy praise:
The chief perfections of that lovely Dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them)
Would make a volume of inticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.
And which is more, she is not so Divine,
So full repleat with choyce of all delights,
But with as humble lowlinesse of mind,
She is content to be at your command:
Command I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love, and honour Henry as her Lord.
King. And otherwise, will Henry ne're presume:
Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be Englands Royall Queen.
Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin,
You know (my Lord) your Highnesse is betroth'd
Unto another Lady of esteem,
How shall we then dispence with that contract,
And not deface your Honour with reproach?
Suf. As doth a Ruler with unlawfull Oathes,
Or one that at a Triumph, having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the Lists
By reason of his Adversaries oddes,
A poor Earl's Daughter is unequall oddes,
And therefore may be broke without offence.
Glou. Why, what (I pray) is Margaret more than (that?
Her Father is no better than an Earl,
Although in glorious Titles he excell.
Suf. Yes, my good Lord, her Father is a King,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem,
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the French-men in Allegiance.
Glo. And so the Earl of Arminack may do,
Because he is near Kinsman unto Charles.
Exet. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberall dower,
Where Reignier sooner will receive than give.
Suf. A Dower, my Lords? disgrace not so your King,
That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect Love.
Henry is able to enrich his Queen,
And not to seek a Queen to make him rich:
So worthlesse Peazants bargain for their Wives,
As Market-men for Oxen, Sheep, or Horse.
But marriage is a matter of more worth,
Then to be dealt in by Attorney-ship:
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,
Must be companion of his Nuptiall bed.
And therefore, Lords, since he affects her most,
Most of all these reasons bindeth us,
In our opinions she should be preferr'd,
For what is Wedlock forced, but a Hell,
An age of discord and continuall strife?

Whereas

Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliſſe,
And is a pattern of Celeſtiall peace.
Whom ſhould we match with Henry, being a King,
But Margaret, that is Daughter to a King?
Her peerleſſe feature, joyned with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a King.
Her valiant courage, and undaunted ſpirit,
(More then in women commonly is ſeen)
Will anſwer our hope in iſſue of a King:
For Henry, Son unto a Conquerour,
Is likely to beget more Conquerors,
If with a Lady of ſo high reſolve,
(As is fair Margaret) he be link'd in Love.
Then yield my Lords, and here conclude with me,
That Margaret ſhall be Queen, and none but ſhe.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,
My Noble Lord of Suffolk: Or for that
My tender youth was never yet attaint
With any paſſion of inflaming Love,
I cannot tell: but this I am aſſur'd,
I feel ſuch ſharp diſſention in my breaſt,
Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Fear,
As I am ſick with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore ſhipping, poſt, my Lord, to France,
Agree to any covenants, and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchſafe to come
To croſſe the Seas to England, and be Crown'd
King Henry's faithfull and annointed Queen.
For your expences and ſufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone I ſay, for till you do return,
I reſt perplexed with a thouſand Cares.
And you (good Unckle) baniſh all offence:
If you do cenſure me, by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuſe
This ſudden execution of my will.
And ſo conduct me, where from company,
I may revolve and ruminate my grief. Exit.

Glo. I, grief I fear me, both at firſt and laſt.
Exit Gloceſter.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd, and thus he goes
As did the youthfull Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love,
But proſper better than the Trojan did:
Margaret ſhall now be Queen, and rule the King:
But I will rule both her, the King, and Realm. Exit.

FINIS.

The second Part of King HENRY the Sixth,

With the Death of the good Duke HUMPHREY.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Flouriſh of Trumpets: Then Hoboyes.

Enter King, Duke Humfrey, Salisbury, Warwick, and Beauford on the one ſide. The Queen, Suffolk, York, Sommerſet, and Buckingham on the other.

Suffolk.

AS by your high Imperiall Majeſty,
I had in charge at my depart from France,
As Procurator to your Excellence,
To marry Princes Margaret for your Grace;
So in the famous ancient City, Towres,
In preſence of the Kings of France, and Sicill,
The Dukes of Orleance, Calaber, Britaigne, Alanſon,
Seven Earls, twelve Barons, & twenty reverend Biſhops
I have perform'd my Taske, and was eſpous'd,
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In ſight of England, and her Lordly Peers,
Deliver up my Title in the Queen
To your moſt gracious hand, that are the Subſtance
Of that great Shadow I did repreſent:
The happieſt Gift, that ever Marqueſſe gave,
The Faireſt Queen that ever King receiv'd.

King. Suffolk ariſe. Welcome Queen Margaret,
I can expreſſe no kinder ſign of Love
Then this kind Kiſſe: O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart repleat with thankfulneſſe:
For thou haſt given me in this beauteous Face
A world of earthly bleſſings to my ſoul,
If ſympathy of Love unite our thoughts.

Que. Great King of England, and my gracious Lord,
The mutuall conference that my mind hath had,
By day, by night; waking, and in my dreams,
In Courtly company, or at my Beads,
With you mine Alder liefeſt Soveraign,
Makes me the bolder to ſalute my King,
With ruder termes, ſuch as my wit affoords,
And over-joy of heart doth miniſter.

King. Her ſight did raviſh, but her grace in Speech,
Her words yclad with wiſdomes Majeſty,
Make me from wondring, fall to weeping Joyes,
Such is the fulneſſe of my hearts content.
Lords, with one cheerfull voyce, welcome my Love.

All kneel. Long live Q. Margaret, Englands happines.

Que. We thank you all. Flouriſh.

Suf. My Lord Protector, ſo it pleaſe your Grace,
Here are the Articles of contracted peace,
Between our Soveraign, and the French King Charles,
For eighteen moneths concluded by conſent.

Glo. Reads. Imprimis, It is agreed between the French King Charles, and William de la Pole, Marqueſſe of Suffolk, Ambaſſador for Henry King of England, That the ſaid Henry ſhall eſpouſe the Lady Margaret, Daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicillia, and Jeruſalem, and Crown her Queen of England, ere the thirtieth of May next enſuing.

Item, That the Dutchy of Anjou, and the County of Main, ſhall be releaſed & delivered to the K. her father.

King. Unckle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me gracious Lord,
Some ſudden qualm hath ſtruck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

King. Unckle of Wincheſter, I pray read on.

Win. Item, It is further agreed between them, That the Dutcheſſe of Anjou and Main, ſhall be releaſed and delivered over to the King her Father, and ſhe ſent over of the King of Englands own proper Coſt and Charges, without having any Dowry.

King. They pleaſe us well. Lord Marqueſs kneel down,
We here create thee the firſt Duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the Sword. Couſin of York,
We here diſcharge your Grace from being Regent
I'th parts of France, till terme of eighteen Moneths
Be full expir'd. Thanks Unckle Wincheſter,
Gloſter, York, Buckingham, and Sommerſet,
Salisbury, and Warwick,
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my Princely Queen.
Come, let us in, and with all ſpeed provide
To ſee her Coronation be perform'd.

Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk. Manent the reſt.

Glo. Brave Peers of England, Pillars of the State,
To you Duke Humphrey muſt unload his grief:
Your grief, the common grief of all the Land.
What? did my brother Henry ſpend his youth,
His Valour, Coyn, and People in the Wars?
Did he ſo often lodge in open field,
In Winters cold, and Summers parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my Brother Bedford toyl his wits,

To

To keep by policy what Henry got:
Have you your selves, Sommerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scarres in France and Normandy:
Or hath mine Uncle Beauford, and my self,
With all the Learned Council of the Realm,
Studied so long, sat in the Council-house,
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and French-men might be kept in awe,
And hath his Higness in his infancy,
Crowned in Paris in despight of foes,
And shall these Labours, and these Honours die?
Shall Henry's Conquest, Bedfords vigilance,
Your Deeds of War, and all our Counsell die!
O Peers of England, shamefull is this League,
Fatall this Marriage, cancelling your Fame,
Blotting your names from Books of memory,
Racing the Characters of your Renown,
Defacing Monuments of Conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never bin.

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?
This peroration with such circumstance:
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. I, Uncle, we will keep it, if we can:
But now it is impossible we should.
Suffolk, the new made Duke that rules the roast,
Hath given the Dutchy of Anjou and Main,
Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now by the death of him that di'd for all,
These Counties were the Keyes of Normandy:
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief that they are past recovery.
For were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no teares.
Anjou and Main? My self did win them both:
Those Provinces, these Armes of mine did conquer,
And are the Cities that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peacefull words?
Mort Dieu.

York. For Suffolks Duke, may he be suffocate,
That dimmes the Honour of this Warlike Isle:
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this League.
I never read but Englands Kings have had
Large summes of Gold, and Dowries with their wives,
And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Hum. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole Fifteenth,
For Costs and Charges in transporting her:
She should have staid in France, and starv'd in France
Before--------

Car. My Lord of Gloster, now ye grow too hot,
It was the pleasure of my Lord the King.

Hum. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind.
'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike:
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye,
Rancour will out, proud Prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury: If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings:
Lordings farewell, and say when I am gone,
I propheſied, France will be lost ere long. Exit Humph.

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage:
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy:
Nay more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the King;
Consider Lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir-apparant to the English Crown:
Had Henry got an Empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the West,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it:
Look to it Lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts, be wise an circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him, Humphrey the good Duke of Gloster,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce,
Jesu maintain your Royall Excellence,
With God preserve the good Duke Humphrey.
I fear me, Lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous Protector.

Buc. Why should he then protect our Soveraign?
He being of age to govern of himself.
Cousin of Sommerset, joyn you with me.
And altogether with the Duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoyse Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty businesse will not brook delay,
I'le to the Duke of Suffolk presently. Exit Cardinal.

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphreys pride
And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty Cardinall,
His insolence is more intollerable
Then all the Princes in the Land beside,
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be Protector.

Buc. Or thou, or I, Sommerset, will be Protector,
Despight Duke Humphrey, or the Cardinall.
Exit Buckingham, and Sommerset.

Sal. Pride went before, Ambition follows him.
While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the Realm.
I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloster,
Did bear him like a Noble Gentleman:
Oft have I seen the haughty Cardinall,
More like a Souldier then a man o'th Church,
As stout and proud as he were Lord of all,
Swear like a Ruffian, and demean himself
Unlike the Ruler of a Common-weal.
Warwick my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,
Hath won the greatest favour of the Commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey.
And Brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil Discipline:
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert Regent for our Soveraign,
Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people,
Joyn we together for the publick good,
In what we can, to bridle and suppresse
The pride of Suffolk, and the Cardinall,
With Sommersets and Buckinghams ambition,
And as we may, cherish Duke Humphreys deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the Land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the Land,
And common profit of his Country.

York. And so sayes York,
For he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then lets make haste away,
And look unto the main?

Warw. Vnto the main?
Oh Father, Main is lost,
That Main, which by main force Warwick did win
And would have kept, so long as breath did last:

Main

Main-chance Father you meant, but I meant Main,
Which I will win from France, or else be slain.
Exit Warwick and Salisbury. Manet York.
York. Anjou and Main are given to the French,
Paris is lost, the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
Suffolk concluded on the Articles,
The Peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two Dukedomes for a Duke's fair Daughter.
I cannot blame them all, what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
Pirates may make cheap penniworths of their pillage,
And purchase Friends, and give to Curtezans,
Still revelling like Lords till all be gone.
While as the silly owner of the goods
Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
While all is shar'd, and all is born away,
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own.
So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his own Lands are bargain'd for, and sold:
Me thinks the Realms of England, France, and Ireland,
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althea burnt,
Unto the Princes heart of Calidon:
Anjou and Main both given unto the French?
Cold newes for me: for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile Englands soil.
A day will come, when York shall claim his own,
And therefore I will take the Nevills parts,
And make a shew of love to proud Duke Humphrey,
And when I spye advantage, claim the Crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the Scepter in his childish Fist,
Nor wear the Diadem upon his head,
Whose Church-like humours fits not for a Crown.
Then York be still a while till time do serve:
Watch thou, and wake when others be asleep,
To prie into the secrets of the State,
Till Henry surfetting in joyes of love,
With his new Bride, and Englands dear bought Queen,
And Humphrey with the Peers be fall'n at jarres.
Then will I raise aloft the Milk-white Rose,
With whose sweet smell the aire shall be perfum'd,
And in my Standard bear the Armes of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster,
And force perforce I'le make him yield the Crown,
Whose Bookish Rule hath pull'd fair England down.
Exit York.

Enter Duke Humphrey, and his Wife Elianor.

Elia. Why droops my Lord, like over-ripen'd Corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres plenteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the Favours of the World?
Why are thine eyes fixt to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dimme thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's Diadem,
Inchac'd with all the Honours of the World?
If so, gaze on, and grovell on thy face,
Untill thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious Gold.
What, is't too short? I'le lengthen it with mine.
And having both together heav'd it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our sight so low,
As to vouchsafe one glance upon the ground.
Hum. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy Lord,
Banish the Canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my King and Nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortall world.
My troublous dreames this night, doth make me sad.
Eli. What dream'd my Lord, tell me, and I'le requite
With sweet rehearsall of my mornings dream? (it,
Hum. Me thought this staffe, mine Office-badge in Court,
Was broke in twain: by whom, I have forgot,
But as I think, it was by th' Cardinall,
And on the pieces of the broken Wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmond Duke of Sommerset,
And William de la Pole first Duke of Suffolk.
This was the dream, what it doth bode God knows.
Eli. Tut, this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breaks a stick of Glosters Grove,
Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet Duke:
Me thought I sate in seat of Majesty,
In the Cathedrall Church of Westminster,
And in that Chair where Kings & Queens were Crown'd,
Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me,
And on my head did set the Diadem.
Hum. Nay Elianor, then must I chide out-right:
Presumptuous Dame, ill-nurtur'd Elianor,
Art thou not second Woman in the Realm?
And the Protectors wife belov'd of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compasse of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband, and thy self,
From top of Honour, to Disgraces feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.
Elia. What, what, my Lord, are you so chollerick
With Elianor, for telling but her dream?
Next time I'le keep my dreams unto my self,
And not be check'd.
Hum. Nay be not angry, I am pleas'd again.

Enter Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highnesse pleasure,
You do prepare to ride unto S. Albans,
Whereas the King and Queen do mean to Hawk.
Hu. I go: Come Nell, thou wilt ride with us? Ex. Hu.
Elia. Yes, my good Lord, I'le follow presently.
Follow I must, I cannot go before,
While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a Man, a Duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling blocks,
And smooth my way upon their headlesse necks.
And being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in Fortunes Pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John; nay fear not man,
We are alone, here's none but thee and I. Enter Hume.
Hume. Jesus preserve your Royall Majesty.
Eli. What saist thou? Majesty: I am but Grace.
Hume. But by the grace of God, and Humes advice,
Your Graces Title shall be multipli'd.
Elia. What saist thou Man? Hast thou as yet conferr'd
With Margery Jordan the cunning Witch,
With Roger Bullingbrook the Conjurer?
And will they undertake to do me good?
Hume. This they have promised, to shew your Highness
A Spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,

That

That shall make answer to such Questions,
As by your Grace shall be propounded him.
Elianor. It is enough, I'le think upon the Questions:
When from Saint Albans we do make return;
We'll see those things effected to the full.
Here Hume, take this reward, make merry man
With thy Confederates in this weighty cause.
Exit Elianor.
Hum. Hume must make merry with the Dutchesse
Marry and shall: but how now, Sir John Hume? (Gold:
Seal up your Lips, and give no words but Mum,
The businesse asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Elianor gives Gold, to bring the Witch:
Gold cannot come amisse, were she a Devil.
Yet have I Gold flies from another Coast:
I dare not say, from the rich Cardinall,
And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;
Yet I do find it so: for to be plain,
They (knowing Dame Elianors humour)
Have hired me to under-mine the Dutchesse,
And buzze these Conjurations in her brain.
They say, a crafty Knave do's need no Broker,
Yet am I Suffolk and the Cardinalls Broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty Knaves.
Well, so it stands: and thus I fear at last.
Humes Knavery will be the Dutchesse Wrack,
And her attainture will be Humphreys fall:
Sort how it will, I shall have Gold for all. Exit.

Enter three or four Petitioners, the Armorers Man being one.

1. Pet. My Masters, let's stand close, my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our Supplications in the Quill.
2. Pet. Marry the Lord protect him, for he's a good man, Jesu blesse him.

Enter Suffolk, and Queen

Peter. Here a comes me thinks, and the Queen with him: I'le be the first sure.
2. Pet. Come back fool, this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my Lord Protector.
Suff. How now fellow: would'st any thing with me?
1. Pet. I pray, my Lord, pardon me, I took ye for my Lord Protector.
Quee. To my Lord Protector? are your Supplications to his Lordship? let me see them: what is thine?
1. Pet. Mine is, and't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinals Man, for keeping my House, and Lands, and Wife and all from me.
Suff. Thy Wife too? that's some Wrong indeed. What's yours? what's here? against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the Commons of Melford. How now, Sir Knave?
2. Pet. Alas, Sir, I am but a poor Petitioner of our whole Township.
Pet. Against my Master Thomas Horner, for saying, That the Duke of York was rightfull Heir to the Crown.
Quee. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of York say, he was rightfull Heir to the Crown?
Pet. That my Mistresse was? No forsooth: my Master said, that he was; and that the King was an Usurper.
Suf. Who is there?
Enter Servant.
Take this fellow in, and send for his Master with a Pursevant presently: we'll hear more of your matter before the King. Exit.
Quee. And as for you that love to be protected
Under the wings of our Protectors Grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.
Tear the Supplication.
Away, base Cullions: Suffolk, let them go.
All. Come, let's be gone. Exit.
Quee. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise?
Is this the Fashions in the Court of England?
Is this the Government of Britains I'le?
And this the Royalty of Albions King?
What, shall King Henry be a Pupill still,
Under the surly Glosters Governance?
And I a Queen in Title and in Stile,
And must be made a Subject to a Duke?
I tell thee Pool, when in the City Tours
Thou rann'st a tilt in honour of my Love,
And stol'st away the Ladies hearts of France;
I thought King Henry had resembled thee,
In Courage, Courtship, and Proportion:
But all his mind is bent to holinesse,
To number Ave-Maries on his Beads:
His Champions, are the Prophets and Apostles,
His Weapons, holy Saws of sacred Writ,
His Study is his Tilt-yard, and his Loves
Are brazen Images of Canonized Saints.
I would the Colledge of the Cardinalls
Would chuse him Pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the Triple Crown upon his head;
That were a State fit for his Holinesse.
Suff. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your Highness came to England, so will I
In England work your Graces full content.
Quee. Beside the haught Protector, have we Beauford
The imperious Church-man; Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling York: and not the least of these,
But can do more in England then the King.
Suff. And he of these that can do most of all,
Cannot do more in England then the Nevills:
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple Peers.
Quee. Not all these Lords do vex me half so much,
As that proud Dame, the Lord Protector's Wife:
She sweeps it through the Court with troups of Ladies,
More like an Empresse, then Duke Humphreys Wife:
Strangers in Court, do take her for the Queen:
She bears a Dukes revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our Poverty:
Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?
Contemptuous base-born Callot as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her Minions 'tother day,
The very train of her worst wearing Gown,
Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands,
Till Suffolk gave two Dukedomes for his Daughter.
Suff. Madam, my self have lim'd a Bush for her,
And plac't a Quier of such enticing Birds,
That she will light to listen to the Layes,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So let her rest: and, Madam, list to me,
For I am bold to counsell you in this;
Although we fancy not the Cardinall,
Yet must we joyn with him, and with the Lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late Complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So one by one we'll weed them all at last,
And you your self shall steer the happy Helm. Exit.

Enter the King, Duke Humphrey, Cardinall, Buckingham, York, Salisbury, Warwick, and the Dutchesse.

King. For my part, Noble Lords, I care not which,
Or Sommerset, or York, all's one to me.
Yor. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be denay'd the Regent-ship.
Som. If Sommerset be unworthy of the Place,
Let York be Regent, I will yield to him.
Warw. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no,
Dispute not that, York is the worthier.
Card. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.
Warw. The Cardinall's not my better in the field.
Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.
War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.
Salish. Peace Son, and shew some reason Buckingham,
Why Sommerset should be preferr'd in this?
Quee. Because the King forsooth will have it so.
Hum. Madam, the King is old enough himself
To give his Censure: These are no Womens matters.
Quee. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace
To be Protector of his Excellence?
Humph. Madam, I am Protector of the Realm,
And at his pleasure will resign my Place.
Suff. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence.
Since thou wert King, as who is King, but thou?
The Common-wealth hath daily run to wrack,
The Dolphin hath prevail'd beyond the Seas,
And all the Peers and Nobles of the Realm
Have been as Bond-men to thy Soveraignty.
Car. The Commons hast thou rackt, the Clergies Bags
Are lank and lean with thy Extortions.
Som. Thy sumptuous Buildings, and thy Wives Attire
Have cost a masse of publick Treasure.
Buck. Thy Cruelty in execution
Upon Offenders, hath exceeded Law,
And left thee to the mercy of the Law.
Quee. Thy sale of Offices and Towns in France,
If they were known, as the suspect is great,
Would make the quickly hop without thy Head.
Exit Humphrey.
Give me my Fan: what, Minion, can ye not?

She gives the Dutchesse a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, Madam: was it you?
Dutch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-woman:
Could I come near your Beauty with my Nails,
I could set my ten Commandements in your face.
King. Sweet Aunt be quiet, 'twas against her will.
Dutch. Against her will, good King? look to't in time,
She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a Baby:
Though in this place most Master wears no Breeches,
She shall not strike Dame Elianor unreveng'd.
Exit Elianor.
Buck. Lord Cardinall, I will follow Elianor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:
She's tickled now, her Fume can need no spurres,
She'll gallop far enough to her destruction.
Exit Buckingham.

Enter Humphrey.

Humph. Now, Lords, my Choller being over-blown,
With walking once about the Quadrangle,
I come to talk of Common-wealth Affaires.
As for your spightfull false Objections,
Prove them, and I lye open to the Law:
But God in mercy so deal with my Soul,
As I in Duty love my King and Countrey.
But to the matter that we have in hand:
I say, my Soveraign, York is meetest man
To be your Regent in the Realm of France.
Suff. Before we make election, give me leave
To shew some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.
York. I'le tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.
First, for I cannot flatter thee in Pride:
Next, if I be appointed for the Place,
My Lord of Sommerset will keep me here,
Without Discharge, Money, or Furniture,
Till France be won into the Dolphin's hands.
Last time I danc't attendance on his will,
Till Paris was besieg'd, famisht, and lost.
Warw. That can I witnesse, and a fouler fact
Did never Traytor in the Land commit.
Suff. Peace head-strong Warwick.
Warw. Image of Pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Armorer and his Man.

Suff. Because here is a man accus'd of Treason,
Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself.
York. Doth any one accuse York for a Traytor?
King. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?
Suff. Please it your Majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his Master of High Treason;
His words were these: That Richard, Duke of York,
Was rightfull Heir unto the English Crown,
And that you Majesty was an Usurper.
King. Say man, were these thy words?
Armo. And't shall please your Majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witnesse, I am falsly accus'd by the Villain.
Peter. By these ten bones, my Lords, he did speak them to me in the Garret one Night, as we were scowring my Lord of York's Armour.
York. Base Dunghill Villain, and Mechanicall,
I'le have thy Head for this thy Traytors speech:
I do beseech your Royall Majesty,
Let him have all the rigour of the Law.
Ar. Alas, my Lord, hang me if ever I spake the words: my accuser is my Prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his Knees he would be even with me: I have good witnesse of this; therefore I beseech your Majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a Villains accusation.
King. Unckle, what shall we say to this in Law?
Humph. This doom, my Lord, if I may judge:
Let Sommerset be Regent o're the French,
Because in York this breeds suspition:
And let these have a day appointed them
For single Combat, in convenient place,
For he hath witnesse of his servants malice:
This is the Law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

Som.

Som. I humbly thank your Royal Majesty.

Armourer. And I accept the Combate willingly.

Peter. Alas, my Lord, I cannot fight; for God s sake pitie my case: the spight of my man prevaileth against me. O Lord have mercy upon me, I shall never be able to fight a blow: O Lord my heart.

Humf. Sirrha, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to Prison: and the day of Combat, shall be the last of the next moneth. Come Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Enter the Witch, the two Priests, and Bullingbrook.

Hume. Come, my Masters, the Duchess I tell you expects performance of your promises.

Bulling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will her Ladiship behold and hear our Exorcismes?

Hume. I, what else? fear you not her courage.

Bulling. I have heard her reported to be a Woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busie below; and so I pray you go in God's Name, and leave us. Exit Hume.

Mother Jordan, be you prostrate, and grovel on the Earth; John Southwell read you, and let us to our work.

Enter Elianor aloft.

Elian. Well said, my Masters, and welcome all: To this geer, the sooner the better.

Bul. Patience, good Lady, Wizards know their times: Deep Night, dark Night, the silent of the Night, The time of Night when Troy was set on fire, The times when Screech-owls cry, and Bandogs howle; And Spirits walk, and Ghosts break up their Graves; That time fits best the work we have in hand. Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise, We will make fast within a hallow'd Verge.

Here doe the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Circle, Bullingbrook or Southwell reads, Conjuro te, &c. It Thunders and Lightens terribly: then the Spirit riseth.

Spirit. Adsum.

Witch. Asmath, by the eternal God, Whose name and power thou trembleſt at, Answer that I ask: for till thou speak, Thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spirit. Ask what thou wilt; that I had said, and done.

Bulling. First of the King: What shall of him become?

Spirit. The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose: But him out-live, and dye a violent death.

Bull. What Fates await the Duke of Suffolk?

Spirit. By Water shall he dye, and take his end.

Bull. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?

Spirit. Let him shun Castles.
Safer shall he be upon the sandie Plaines,
Then where Castles mounted stand.
Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Bull. Descend to Darkness, and the burning Lake: False fiend avoid.

Thunder and Lightning. Exit Spirit.

Enter the Duke of York, and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon these Traytors, and their trash: Beldame I think we watcht you at an inch.
What Madam, are you there? the King and Common-weale
Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains;
My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Elian. Not half so bad as thine to England's King,
Injurious Duke, that threaten'st where's no cause.

Buck. True Madam, none at all: what call you this?
Away with them, let them be clapt up close,
And kept asunder: you Madam shall with us.
Stafford take her to thee.
We'll see your Trinkets here all forth-comming.
All away. Exit.

York. Lord Buckingham, me thinks you watcht her well.
A pretty Plot, well chosen to build upon.
Now pray my Lord, let see the Devil's Writ.
What have we here? Reads.
The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose:
But him out-live, and dye a violent death.
Why this is just: Aio Æacide Romanos vincere posse.
Well, to the rest:
Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
By Water shall he dye, and take his end.
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shun Castles,
Safer shall he be upon the sandie Plaines,
Then where Castles mounted stand.
Come, come, my Lords,
These Oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly understood.
The King is now in progresse towards Saint Albans,
With him, the husband of this lovely Lady:
Thither goes these Newes,
As fast as horse can carry them:
A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buc. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,
To be the Poste, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good Lord.
VVho's within there, hoe?

Enter a Serving-man.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To sup with me to morrow Night. Away.
Exeunt.

Enter the King, Queen, Protector, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Faulkners hallowing.

Queen. Believe me Lords, for flying at the Brook,
I saw not better sport these seven year's day;
Yet by your leave, the winde was very high,
And ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my Lord, your Faulcon made,
And what a pitch she flew above the rest:
To see how God in all his Creatures works,
Yea Man and Birds are fain of climbing high.

Suff. No marvel, and it like your Majesty,
My Lord Protector's Hawks do towre so well,
They know their Master loves to be aloft,
And bears his thoughts above his Faulcon's Pitch.

Glost. My Lord, 'tis but a base ignoble minde,
That mounts no higher then a Bird can soar.

Card. I thought as much, he would be above the Clouds.

Gloſt. I my Lord Cardinal, how think you by that? Were it not good your Grace could flie to Heaven?

King. The Treaſury of everlaſting Joy.

Card. Thy heaven is on Earth, thine Eyes and Thoughts Beat on a Crown, the Treaſure of thy heart. Pernicious Protector, dangerous Peer, That ſmooth'ſt it ſo with King and Commonweal.

Gloſt. What Cardinal? Is your Prieſt-hood grown peremptory? Tantæne animis Cœleſtibus iræ, Church-men ſo hot? Good Uncle hide ſuch Malice: With ſuch Holineſs can you do it?

Suff. No malice Sir, no more then well becomes So good a Quarrel, and ſo bad a Peer.

Gloſt. As who, my Lord?

Suff. Why, as you, my Lord, An't like your lordly Lords Protectorſhip.

Gloſt. Why Suffolk, England knows thine inſolence.

Queen. And thy Ambition, Gloſter.

King. I prethee peace, good Queen, And whet not on theſe too-too-furious Peers, For bleſſed are the Peace-makers on Earth

Card. Let me be bleſſed for the Peace I make Againſt this proud Protector with my Sword.

Gloſt. Faith holy Uncle, would't were come to that.

Car. Marry, when thou dar'ſt.

Gloſt. Make up no factious numbers for the matter, In thine own perſon anſwer thy abuſe.

Card. I, where thou dar'ſt not peep: And if thou dar'ſt, this Evening, On the Eaſt ſide of the Grove.

King. How now, my Lords?

Card. Believe me, Couſin Gloſter, Had not your man put up the Foul ſo ſuddenly, We had had more ſport. Come with thy two-hand Sword.

Gloſt. True Uncle, are ye adviſ'd? The Eaſt ſide of the Grove: Cardinal, I am with you.

King Why how now, Uncle Gloſter?

Gloſt. Talking of Hawking; nothing elſe, my Lord, Now by Gods Mother, Prieſt, I'le ſhave your Crowne for this, Or all my Fence ſhall fail.

Car. Medice teipſum, Protector ſee to't well, protect your ſelf.

King. The Winds grow high, So do your Stomacks Lords: How irkſome is this Muſick to my heart? When ſuch Strings jarre, what hope of Harmony? I pray my Lords let me compound this ſtrife.

Enter one crying a Miracle.

Gloſt. What means this noiſe? Fellow, what Miracle do'ſt thou proclaim?

One. A Miracle, a Miracle.

Suffolk. Come to the King, and tell him what Miracle.

One. Forſooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's Shrine, Within this half hour hath receiv'd his ſight, A man that ne're ſaw in his life before.

King. Now God be prais'd, that to believing Soules Gives Light in Darkneſs, Comfort in Deſpair.

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans, and his Brethren, bearing the man between two in a Chair.

Card. Here comes the Towns-men on proceſſion, To preſent your Highneſs with the man.

King. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale, Although by his ſight his ſin be multiplyed.

Gloſt. Stand by, my Maſters, bring him near the King, His Highneſs pleaſure is to talk with him.

King. Good-fellow, tell us here the circumſtance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord. What, haſt thou been long blind, and now reſtor'd?

Simp. Born blind, and't pleaſe your Grace.

Wife. I indeed was he.

Suff. What Woman is this?

Wife. His Wife, and't like your Worſhip.

Gloſt. Had'ſt thou been his Mother, thou could'ſt have better told.

King. Where wert thou born?

Simpe. At Barwick in the North, and't like your Grace.

King. Poor ſoul, God's goodneſs hath been great to thee: Let never Day or Night unhallowed paſs, But ſtill remember what the Lord hath done.

Queen. Tell me, good-fellow, Cam'ſt thou here by Chance, or of Devotion, To this holy Shrine?

Simpe. God knows of pure Devotion, Being call'd a hundred times, and oftner, In my ſleep, by good Saint Alban: Who ſaid; Simon, come: come offer at my Shrine, And I will help thee.

Wife. Moſt true, forſooth: And many a time and oft my ſelf have heard a Voice, To call him ſo.

Card. What, art thou lame?

Simp. I, God Almighty help me.

Suff. How cam'ſt thou ſo?

Simp. A fall off a Tree.

Wife. A Plum-tree, Maſter.

Gloſt. How long haſt thou been blind?

Simpe. O born ſo, Maſter.

Gloſt. What, and would'ſt climb a Tree?

Simpe. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very dear.

Gloſt. Maſs, thou lov'dſt Plummes well, that would'ſt venture ſo.

Simp. Alas, good Maſter, my Wife deſired ſome Damſons, and made me climb, with danger of my Life.

Gloſt. A ſubtil Knave, but yet it ſhall not ſerve: Let me ſee thine Eyes; wink now, now open them, In my opinion, yet thou ſeeſt not well.

Simpe. Yes Maſter, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Gloſt. Say'ſt thou me ſo: what Colour is this Cloak of?

Simpe. Red Maſter, Red as bloud.

Gloſt. Why that's well ſaid: What Colour is my Gown of?

Simpe. Black forſooth, Coal-black, as Jet.

King. Why then, thou know'ſt what Colour Jet is of?

Suff. And yet I think, Jet he did never ſee.

Gloſt.

Gloſt. But Cloakes and Gownes, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never before this day, in all his life.

Gloſt. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?

Simpc. Alas Maſter, I know not.

Gloſt. What's his Name?

Simpc. I know not.

Gloſt. Nor his?

Simpc. No indeed, Maſter.

Gloſt. What's thine own Name?

Simpc. Saunder Simpcoxe, and if it pleaſe you, Maſter.

Gloſt. Then Saunder, ſit there,
The lying'ſt Knave in Chriſtendome.
If thou had'ſt been born blind,
Thou might'ſt as well have known all our Names,
As thus to name the ſeveral Colours we do wear.
Sight may diſtinguiſh Colours:
But ſuddenly to nominate them all,
It is impoſſible.
My Lords, Saint Alban here hath done a Miracle:
And would ye not think it, Cunning to be great,
That could reſtore this Cripple to his Legges again?

Simpc. O Maſter, that you could?

Gloſt. My Maſters of Saint Albans,
Have you not Beadles in your Town,
And things call'd Whippes?

Mayor. Yes, my Lords, if it pleaſe your Grace.

Gloſt. Then ſend for one preſently.

Mayor. Sirrha, go fetch the Beadle hither ſtraight.
Exit.

Gloſt. Now fetch me a Stool hither by and by.
Now Sirrha, if you mean to ſave your ſelf from Whipping, leap me over this Stool, and run away.

Simpc. Alas Maſter, I am not able to ſtand alone:
You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a Beadle with Whippes.

Gloſt. Well Sir, we muſt have you find your Legges.
Sirrha Beadle, whip him 'till he leap over that ſame Stool.

Bead. I will, my Lord,
Come on Sirrha, off with your Doublet, quickly.

Simpc. Alas Maſter, what ſhall I do? I am not able to ſtand.

After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the Stool, and runnes away: and they follow, and cry, A Miracle.

King. O God, ſeeſt thou this, and beareſt ſo long?

Queen. It made me laugh, to ſee the Villain run.

Gloſt. Follow the Knave, and take this Drab away.

Wife. Alas Sir, we did it for pure need.

Gloſt. Let him be whipt through every Market Town
'Till they come to Barwick, from whence they came.
Exit.

Card. Duke Humfrey ha's done a Miracle to day.

Suff. True, made the Lame to leap, and flie away.

Gloſt. But you have done more Miracles then I:
You made in a day, my Lord, whole Towns to flie.

Enter Buckingham.

King. What Tidings with our Couſin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold:
A ſort of naughty perſons, lewdly bent,
Under the Countenance and Confederacy
Of Lady Elianor, the Protector's wife,
The Ring-leader and head of all this Rout,
Have practis'd dangerouſly againſt your State,
Dealing with Witches and with Conjurers,
Whom we have apprehended in the Fact,
Raiſing up wicked Spirits from under ground,
Demanding of King Henrie's Life and Death,
And other of your Highneſs Privy Councel,
As more at large your Grace ſhall underſtand.

Card. And ſo my Lord Protector, by this means
Your Lady is forth-coming, yet at London.
This newes I think hath turn'd your Weapon's edge;
'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keep your hour.

Gloſt. Ambitious Church-man, leave to afflict my heart:
Sorrow and grief have vanquiſht all my powers;
And vanquiſht as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meaneſt Groom.

King. O God, what miſchiefs work the wicked ones?
Heaping confuſion on their own heads thereby.

Queen. Gloſter, ſee here the Tainture of thy Neſt,
And look thy ſelf be faultleſs, thou wert beſt.

Gloſt. Madam, for my ſelf, to heaven I do appeal,
How I have lov'd my King, and Common-weal:
And for my Wife, I know not how it ſtands,
Sorry am I to hear, what I have heard.
Noble ſhe is: but if ſhe have forgot
Honour and Virtue, and convers't with ſuch,
As like to Pitch, defile Nobility;
I baniſh her my Bed, and Company,
And give her as a Prey to Law and Shame,
That hath diſ-honoured Gloſter's honeſt name.

King. Well, for this Night we will repoſe us here:
To morrow toward London, back again,
To look into this Buſineſs thorowly,
And call theſe foul Offendors to their anſwers;
And poiſe the Cauſe in Juſtice equal Scales,
Whoſe Beam ſtands ſure, whoſe rightfull cauſe prevails.
Exeunt.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our ſimple Supper ended, give me leave,
In this cloſe Walk, to ſatisfie my ſelf,
In craving your opinion of my Title,
Which is infallible to England's Crown.

Salisb. My Lord, I long to hear it thus at full.

Warw. Sweet York begin: and if thy claim be good,
The Nevills are thy Subjects to command.

York. Then thus:
Edward the third, my Lords, had ſeven Sonnes:
The firſt, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales;
The ſecond, William of Hatfield; and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence: next to whom,
Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaſter;
The fifth, was Edward Langley, Duke of York;
The ſixth, Thomas of Woodſtock, Duke of Gloſter,
William of Windſor, was the ſeventh, and laſt.
Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father,
And left behind him Richard, his only Son,
Who after Edward the third's death, raign'd King,
'Till Henry Bullingbrook, Duke of Lancaſter,
The eldeſt Son and Heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the Name of Henry the fourth,
Seiz'd on the Realm, depos'd the rightfull King,
Sent his poor Queen to France, from whence ſhe came,

And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
Harmleſs King Richard was murthered traiterouſly.
Warw. Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the Houſe of Lancaſter the Crown.
York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right:
For Richard, the firſt Sonnes Heir, being dead,
The iſſue of the next Son ſhould have reign'd.
Salis. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heir.
York. The third Son, Duke of Clarence,
From whoſe Line I claim the Crown,
Had iſſue Philip, a Daughter,
Who married Edmond Mortimer, Earl of March:
Edmond had iſſue, Roger Earl of March;
Roger had iſſue, Edmond, Anne, and Elianor.
Salis. This Edmond, in the Reign of Bullingbrook,
As I have read, laid claime unto the Crown,
And, but for Owen Glendour, had been King;
Who kept him in Captivity, till he dyed.
But, to the reſt.
York. His eldeſt Siſter, Anne,
My Mother, being Heir unto the Crown,
Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
Who was to Edmond Langley,
Edward the third's fift Son's ſon;
By her I claim the Kingdome:
She then was Heir to Roger, Earl of March,
Who was the Son of Edmond Mortimer,
Who married Philip, ſole Daughter
Unto Lyonel, Duke of Clarence.
So, if the iſſue of the elder Son
Succeed before the younger, I am King.
Warw. What plain proceeding is more plain then this?
Henry doth claim the Crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth Son, York claims it from the third:
'Till Lyonel's iſſue fails, his ſhould not Reign.
It fails not yet, but flouriſhes in thee,
And in thy Sonnes, fair ſlips of ſuch a Stock,
Then Father Salisbury, kneel we together,
And in this private Plot be we the firſt,
That ſhall ſalute our rightfull Soveraign
With honour of his Birth-right to the Crown.
Both. Long live our Soveraign Richard, England's King.
York. We thank you Lords:
But I am not your King, 'till I be Crown'd,
And that my Sword be ſtain'd
With heart-bloud of the Houſe of Lancaſter:
And that's not ſuddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and ſilent ſecrecy.
Do you as I do in theſe dangerous dayes,
Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's inſolence,
At Beauford's Pride, at Somerſet's ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the Crew of them,
'Till they have ſnar'd the Shepheard of the Flock,
That virtuous Prince, the good Duke Humfrey:
'Tis that they ſeek; and they, in ſeeking that,
Shall find their deaths, if York can propheſie.
Salisb. My Lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.
Warw. My heart aſſures me, that the Earl of Warwick,
Shall one day make the Duke of York a King.
York. And Nevil, this I do aſſure my ſelf.
Richard ſhall live to make the Earl of Warwick
The greateſt man in England, but the King.
Exeunt.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King and State with Guard, to baniſh the Ducheſs.

King. Stand forth Dame Elianor Cobham, Gloſter's Wife:
In ſight of God, and us, your guilt is great,
Receive the ſentence of the Law for ſin,
Such as by God's Book are adjudg'd to death.
You four from hence to Priſon, back again
From thence, unto the place of Execution;
The Witch in Smithfield ſhall be burnt to aſhes,
And you three ſhall be ſtrangled on the Gallows.
You Madam, for you are more Nobly born,
Deſpoiled of your Honour in your life,
Shall, after three days open Penance done,
Live in your Countrey here, in Baniſhment,
With Sir John Stanly, in the Ile of Man.
Elian. Welcome is Baniſhment, welcome were my Death.
Gloſt. Elianor, the Law thou ſeeſt hath judged thee,
I cannot juſtifie whom the Law condemns.
Mines eyes are full of teares, my heart of grief.
Ah Humfrey, this diſhonour in thine age,
Will bring thy head with ſorrow to the ground.
I beſeech your Majeſty give me leave to goe;
Sorrow would ſolace, and mine Age would ceaſe.
King. Stay Humfrey, Duke of Gloſter,
E're thou go, give up thy Staff,
Henry will to himſelf Protector be,
And God ſhall be my hope, my ſtay, my guide,
And lanthorn to my feet:
And go in peace, Humfrey, no leſs belov'd,
Then when thou wert Protector to thy King.
Queen. I ſee no reaſon, why a King of yeares
Should be to be protected like a Child;
God and King Henry govern England's Realm:
Give up your Staff, Sir, and the King his Realm.
Gloſt. My Staff? Here, Noble Henry, is my Staff:
As willingly do I the ſame reſign,
As e're thy Father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiouſly receive it.
Farewell good King: when I am dead and gone,
May honourable Peace attend thy Throne.
Exit Gloſter.
Quee. Why now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen,
And Humfrey, Duke of Gloſter, ſcarce himſelf,
That bears ſo ſhrewd a maim: two Pulls at once;
His Lady baniſht, and a limb lopt off,
This Staff of Honour raught, there let it ſtand,
Where beſt it fits to be, in Henrie's hand.
Suff. Thus droops this lofty Pine, and hangs his ſprayes,
Thus Elianor's Pride dyes in her younger dayes.
York. Lords, let him go. Pleaſe it your Majeſty,
This is the day appointed for the Combat,
And ready are the Appellant and Defendant,
The Armourer and his Man, to enter the Liſts,
So pleaſe your Highneſs to behold the fight.
Queen. I, good my Lord: for purpoſely therefore Left I the Court, to ſee this Quarrel try'd.
King. A God's Name ſee the Liſts and all things fit,
Here let them end it, and God defend the right.
York. I never ſaw a fellow worſe beſtead,
Or more afraid to fight, then is the Appellant,
The ſervant of this Armourer, my Lords.

Enter

Enter at one Door the Armourer and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much, that he is drunk; and he enters with a Drumme before him, and his Staff with a Sand-bag fastened to it: and at the other Door his Man, with a Drumme and Sand-bag, and Prentices drinking to him.

1. Neighbour. Here Neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a Cup of Sack; and fear not Neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2. Neighbour. And here Neighbour, here's a Cup of Charneco.

3. Neighbour. And here's a Pot of good Double-Beer Neighbour: drink, and fear not your Man.

Armourer. Let it come yfaith, and I'le pledge you all, and a figge for Peter.

1. Pren. Here Peter, I drink to thee, and be not afraid.

2. Pren. Be merry Peter, and fear not thy Master; Fight for the credit of the Prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you, for I think I have taken my last Draught in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Aporn; and Will, thou shalt have my Hammer: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord bless me, I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my Master, he hath learnt so much to fence already.

Salis. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blowes. Sirrha, what's thy Name?

Peter. Peter forsooth.

Salis. Peter? what more?

Peter. Thump.

Salis. Thump? Then see thou thump thy Master well.

Armourer. Masters, I am come hither as it were upon my Man's instigation, to prove him a Knave, and my self an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queen, and therefore Peter have at thee with a down-right blow.

York. Dispatch, this Knaves tongue begins to double. Sound Trumpets, Alarum to the Combatants.

They fight, and Peter strikes him down.

Armourer. Hold Peter, hold, I confess, I confess Treason.

York. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thank God, and the good Wine in thy Master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine Enemie in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd in right.

King. Goe, take hence that Traytor from our sight,
For by his death we do perceive his guilt,
And God in Justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murther'd wrongfully.
Come fellow, follow us for thy Reward. Exeunt.

Enter Duke Humfrey and his Men in Mourning Cloaks.

Glost. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a Cloud
And after Summer, evermore succeeds
Barren Winter, with his wrathfull nipping Cold;
So Cares and Joyes abound, as Seasons fleet.
Sirs, what's a Clock?

Serv. Ten, my Lord.

Glost. Ten is the hour that was appointed me,
To watch the coming of my punisht Duchess:
Unneath may she endure the Flinty Streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy Noble Mind a-brook
The abject People, gazing on thy face,
With envious Looks still laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud Chariot-Wheels,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets,
But soft, I think she comes, and I'le prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes, to see her Miseries.

Enter the Duchess in a white Sheet, and a Taper burning in her hand, with the Sheriff and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the Sheriff.

Gloster. No, stirre not for your lives, let her passe by.

Elian. Come you, my Lord, to see my open shame?
Now thou do'st Penance too. Look how they gaze,
See how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.
Ah Gloster, hide thee from their hatefull looks,
And in thy Closet pent up, rue my shame,
And banne thine Enemies, both mine and thine.

Glost. Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this grief.

Elian. Ah Gloster, teach me to forget my self:
For whilest I think I am thy married Wife,
And thou a Prince, Protector of this Land:
Me thinks I should not thus be led along,
Mail'd up in shame, with Papers on my back,
And follow'd with a Rabble, that rejoyce
To see my tears, and hear my deep-fet groans.
The ruthless Flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh,
And bid me be advised how I tread.
Ah Humfrey, can I bear this shameful yoak?
Trowest thou, that e're I'le look upon the World,
Or count them happy, that enjoyes the Sun?
No: Dark shall be my Light, and Night my Day.
To think upon my Pomp, shall be my Hell.
Sometime I'le say, I am Duke Humfrey's Wife,
And he a Prince, and Ruler of the Land:
Yet so he Rul'd, and such a Prince he was,
As he stood by, whilest I, his forlorn Duchess,
Was made a wonder, and a pointing stock,
To every idle Rascal follower.
But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame,
Nor stir at nothing, till the Axe of Death
Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will.
For Suffolk, he that can do all in all
With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all,
And York, and impious Beauford, that false Priest,
Have all lym'd Bushes to betray thy Wings,
And flie thou how thou canst, they'le tangle thee.
But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd,
Nor ever seek prevention of thy foes.

Glost. Ah Nell, forbear: thou aimest all awry.
I must offend, before I be attainted:
And had I twenty times so many foes,
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any scathe,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Would'st have me rescue thee from this Reproach?

Why yet thy scandal were not wip't away
But I in danger for the breach of Law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee sort thy heart to patience,
These few dayes wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majesties Parliament
Holden at Bury, the first of this next Moneth,
Glost. And my consent ne're ask'd herein before?
This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.
My Nell, I take my leave; and Master Sheriff,
Let not her Penance exceed the King's Commission.
Sher. And't please your Grace, here my Commission stayes:
And Sir John Stanly is appointed now,
To take her with him to the Ile of Man.
Glost. Must you, Sir John, protect my Lady here?
Stanly. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.
Glost. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray
You use her well: the World may laugh again,
And I may live to do you kindness, if you do it her.
And so Sir John, farewell.
Elian. What, gone my Lord, and bid me not farewell?
Glost. Witness my teares, I cannot stay to speak.

Exit Gloster.

Elian. Art thou gone too? all comfort go with thee,
For none abides with me: my Joy, is Death:
Death, at whose Name I oft have been afear'd,
Because I wish'd this World's eternity.
Stanly, I prethee goe, and take me hence,
I care not whither, for I beg no favour;
Only convey me where thou art commanded.
Stan. Why, Madam, that is to the Ile of Man,
There to be us'd according to your State.
Elian. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?
Stan. Like to a Duchess, and Duke Humfry's Lady,
According to that State you shall be us'd.
Elian. Sheriff farewell, and better then I fare,
Although thou hast been Conduct of my shame.
Sher. It is my Office, and Madam pardon me.
Elian. I, I, farewell, thy Office is discharg'd:
Come Stanley, shall we goe?
Stan. Madam, your Penance done,
Throw off this Sheet,
And goe we to attire you for our Journey.
Elian. My shame will not be shifted with my Sheet:
No, it will hang upon my richest Robes,
And shew it self, attire me how I can.
Goe, lead the way, I long to see my Prison. Exeunt.

Enter King, Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick, to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloster is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
What e're occasion keeps him from us now.
Queen. Can you not see? or will ye not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd Countenance?
With what a Majesty he beares himself,
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself.
We know the time since he was milde and affable,
And if we did but glance a far-off Look,
Immediately he was upon his Knee,
That all the Court admir'd him for submission.
But meet him now, and be it in the Morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his Brow, and shews an angry Eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed Knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.
Small Curres are not regarded when they grin,
But great men tremble when the Lyon roars,
And Humfrey is no little Man in England.
First note, that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then, it is no Policy,
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
And his advantage following your decease,
That he should come about your Royal Person,
Or be admitted to your Highness councel.
By flattery hath he won the Commons hearts:
And when he please to make Commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
Now 'tis the Spring, and Weeds are shallow-rooted;
Suffer them now, and they'll o're-grow the Garden,
And choak the Herbs for want of husbandry,
The reverent care I bear unto my Lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the Duke.
If it be fond, call it a Woman's fear:
Which fear, if better Reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the Duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
Reprove my allegation, if you can,
Or else conclude my words effectual.
Suff. Well hath your Highness seen into this Duke:
And had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your Graces Tale.
The Duchess, by his subornation,
Upon my Life began her devilish practises:
Or if he were not privy to those Faults,
Yet by reputing of his high descent,
As next the King, he was successive Heir,
And such high vaunts of his Nobility,
Did instigate the Bedlam brain-sick Duchess,
By wicked means to frame our Soveraign's fall.
Smooth runs the Water where the Brook is deep,
And in his simple shew he harbours Treason.
The Fox barks not, when he would steal the Lamb.
No, no, my Soveraign, Gloster is a man
Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.
Card. Did he not, contrary to form of Law,
Devise strange deaths, for small offences done?
York. And did he not, in his Protectorship,
Levy great summes of Money through the Realm,
For Souldiers pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof the Towns each day revolted.
Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humfrey.
King. My Lords at once: the care you have of us,
To mow down Thorns that would annoy our Foot,
Is worthy praise: but shall I speak, my conscience,
Our Kinsman Gloster is as innocent,
From meaning Treason to our Royal Person,
As is the sucking Lamb, or harmless Dove:
The Duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.
Que. Ah what's more dangerous, then this fond affiance?
Seems he a Dove? his feathers are but borrow'd
For he's disposed as the hatefull Raven.
Is he a Lamb? his Skin is surely lent him,

For

For he's enclin'd as is the ravenous Wolves.
Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my Lord, the welfare of us all,
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudfull man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious Soveraign.
King. Welcome Lord Somerset: What Newes from France?
Som. That all your Interest in those Territories,
Is utterly bereft you: all is lost.
King. Cold Newes, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done.
York. Cold Newes for me: for I had hope of France,
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my Blossoms blasted in the Bud,
And Caterpillars eat my Leaves away:
But I will remedy this geare e're long,
Or sell my Title for a glorious Grave.

Enter Gloucester.

Glouc. All happiness unto my Lord the King:
Pardon, my Liege, that I have stay'd so long.
Suff. Nay Gloster, know that thou art come too soon,
Unless thou wer't more loyal then thou art:
I do arrest thee of high Treason here.
Glost. Well Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,
Nor change my Countenance for this Arrest:
A heart unspotted, is not easily daunted.
The purest Spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from Treason to my Soveraign.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?
York. 'Tis thought, my Lord,
That you took Bribes of France,
And being Protector, stay'd the Souldiers pay,
By means whereof, his Highness hath lost France.
Glost. Is it but thought so?
What are they that think it?
I never rob'd the Souldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny Bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watcht the Night,
I, Night by Night, in studying good for England.
That Doit that e're I wrested from the King,
Or any Groat I hoorded to my use,
Be brought against me at my Trial day.
No: many a Pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy Commons,
Have I dispurst to the Garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.
Card. It serves you well, my Lord, to say so much.
Glost. I say no more then truth, so help me God.
York. In your Protectorship, you did devise
Strange Tortures for Offendors, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by Tyranny.
Glost. Why 'tis well known, that whiles I was Protector,
Pitie was all the fault that was in me:
For I should melt at an Offendor's teares,
And lowly words were Ransome for their fault:
Unless it were a bloudy Murtherer,
Or foul felonious Thief, that fleec'd poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment.
Murther indeed, that bloudy sin, I tortur'd
Above the Felon, or what Trespass else.
Suff. My Lord, these faults are easie, quickly answer'd:
But mightier Crimes are lay'd unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge your self.
I do arrest you in his Highness Name,
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keep, until your further time of Tryal.
King. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope,
That you will clear your self from all suspence
My Conscience tells me you are innocent.
Glost. Ah gracious Lord, these dayes are dangerous:
Virtue is choak't with foul Ambition,
And Charity chas'd hence by Rancour's hand;
Foul Subornation is predominant,
And Equitie exil'd your Highness Land.
I know, their Complot is to have my Life:
And if my death might make this Iland happy,
And prove the Period of their Tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness.
But mine is made the Prologue to their Play:
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted Tragedy.
Beauford's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,
And Suffolk's cloudy Brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburthens with his tongue,
The envious Load that lyes upon his heart:
And dogged York, that reaches at the Moon,
Whose over-weening Arme I have pluckt back,
By false accuse doth level at my life.
And you, my Soveraign Lady, with the rest,
Causeless have lay'd disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My liefest Liege to be mine Enemy:
I, all of you have lay'd your heads together,
My self had notice of your Conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life.
I shall not want false Witness, to condemn me,
Nor store of Treasons, to augment my guilt:
The ancient Proverb will be well effected,
A Staff is quickly found to beat a Dog.
Card. My Liege, his railing is intollerable.
If those that care to keep your Royal Person
From Treason's secret Knife, and Traytor's Rage,
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the Offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.
Suff. Hath he not twit our Soveraign Lady here
With ignominious words, though Clarkly coucht?
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations, to o'rethrow his state.
Queen. But I can give the loser leave to chide.
Glost. Far truer spoke then meant: I lose indeed,
Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false,
And well such losers may have leave to speak.
Buck. He'll wrest the sence, and hold us here all day.
Lord Cardinal, he is your Prisoner.
Card. Sirs, takes away the Duke, and guard him sure.
Glost. Ah, thus King Henry throws away his Crutch
Before his Legges be firm to bear his body,
Thus is the Shepheard beaten from thy side,
And Wolves are gnarling, who shall gnaw thee first.
Ah that my fear were false, ah that it were;
For good King Henry, thy decay I fear. Exit Gloucester.
King. My Lords, what to your wisdomes seemeth best,
Doe, or undoe, as if our self were here.
Queen. What, will your Highness leave the Parliament?
King. I Margaret: my heart is drown'd with grief,
Whose floud begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engirt with misery:

For

For what's more miserable then Discontent?
Ah Uncle Humfrey, in thy sad face I see
The Map of Honour, Truth, and Loyalty:
And yet, good Humfrey, is the hour to come,
That e're I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.
What lowring Star now envies thy estate?
That these great Lords, and Margaret our Queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless Life.
Thou never did'st them wrong, nor no man wrong:
And as the Butcher takes away the Calf,
And binds the Wretch, and beats it when it strayes,
Bearing it to the bloudy Slaughter-house;
Even so remorseless have they borne him hence:
And as the Damme runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her Darlings loss;
Even so my self bewails good Gloster's case
With sad unhelpfull teares, and with dimn'd eyes;
Look after him, and cannot do him good:
So mighty are his vowed Enemies.
His fortunes I will weep, and twixt each groan,
Say, who's a Traytor? Gloster he is none. Exit.

Queen. Free Lords:
Cold Snow melts with the Sun's hot Beames:
Henry, my Lord, is cold in great Affairs,
Too full of foolish pitie: and Gloster's shew
Beguiles him, as the mournfull Crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the Snake, roll'd in a flowring Bank,
With shining checker'd slough doth sting a Child,
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
Believe me Lords, were none more wise then I,
And yet herein I judge my own Wit good;
This Gloster should be quickly rid the World,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Card. That he should dye, is worthy policy,
But yet we want a Colour for his death:
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of Law.

Suff. But in my mind, that were no policy:
The King will labour still to save his Life,
The Commons haply rise, to save his Life;
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More then mistrust, that shews him worthy death.

York. So that by this, you would not have him dye.

Suff. Ah York, no man alive, so fain as I.

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.
But my Lord Cardinal, and you my Lord of Suffolk,
Say as you think, and speak it from your Soules:
Wer't not all one, an empty Eagle were set,
To guard the Chick from a hungry Kite,
As place Duke Humfrey for the King's Protector?

Queen. So the poor Chicken should be sure of death.

Suff. Madam 'tis true: and wer't not madness then,
To make the Fox surveyor of the Fold?
Who being accus'd a crafty Murtherer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No: let him dye, in that he is a Fox,
By nature prov'd an Enemy to the Flock,
Before his Chaps be stain'd with Crimson bloud,
As Humfrey prov'd by Reasons to my Liege.
And do not stand on Quillets how to slay him:
Be it by Ginnes, by Snares, by Subtilty,
Sleeping, or Waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit.
Which mates him first, that first intends deceit.

Queen. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suff. Not resolute, except so much were done,
For things are often spoke, and seldome meant,
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my Soveraign from his Foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his Priest.

Card. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
E're you can take due Orders for a Priest:
Say you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'le provide his Executioner,
I tender so the safety of my Liege.

Suff. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queen. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugnes our doom.

Enter a Poste.

Post. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come amain,
To signifie, that Rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the Sword;
Send Succours (Lords) and stop the Rage betime,
Before the Wound do grow incurable;
For being green, there is great hope of help.

Card. A Breach that craves a quick expedient stop.
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent a Regent thither:
'Tis meet the luckie Ruler be imploy'd,
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the Regent there, in stead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done.
I rather would have lost my life betimes,
Then bring a burthen of dis-honour home,
By staying there so long, 'till all were lost.
Shew me one skar, character'd on thy skin.
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldome win.

Queen. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If Wind and Fuel be brought, to feed it with:
No more, good York; sweet Somerset be still.
Thy fortune, York, had'st thou been Regent there,
Might haply have prov'd far worse then his.

York. What, worse then naught? nay, then a shame take all.

Somerset. And in the number, thee, that wishest shame.

Card. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is,
Th'uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in Armes,
And temper Clay with bloud of Englishmen.
To Ireland will you lead a Band of men,
Collected choicely, from each County some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my Lord, so please his Majesty.

Suff. Why, our Authority is his consent,
And what we do establish, he confirms;
Then, Noble York, take thou this Task in hand.

York. I am content: Provide me Souldiers, Lords.
Whiles I take order for mine own affaires.

Suff. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.
But now return we to the false Duke Humfrey.

Card. No more of him: for I will deal with him,
That henceforth he shall trouble us no more:
And so break off, the day is almost spent,
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen dayes
At Briſtow I expect my Souldiers,
For there I'le ſhip them all for Ireland.
Suff. I'le ſee it truly done, my Lord of York. Exeunt.

Manet York.

York. Now York, or never, ſteel thy fearfull thoughts,
And change miſdoubt to reſolution;
Be that thou hop'ſt to be, or what thou art;
Reſign to death, it is not worth th'enjoying:
Let pale-fac't fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a Royal heart.
Faſter then Spring-time ſhowres, comes thought on thought,
And not a thought, but thinks on Dignity.
My brain, more buſie then the labouring Spider,
Weaves tedious Snares to trap mine Enemies.
Well Nobles, well: 'tis politickly done,
To ſend me packing with an Hoaſt of men:
I fear me, you but warm the ſtarved Snake,
Who cheriſh't in your breaſts, will ſting your hearts,
'Twas Men I lack't, and you will give them me;
I take it kindly: yet be well aſſur'd,
You put ſharp Weapons in a mad-man's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nouriſh a mighty Band,
I will ſtir up in England ſome black Storm,
Shall blow ten thouſand Soules to heaven or hell:
And this fell Tempeſt ſhall not ceaſe to rage,
Until the Golden Circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious Sun's tranſparent Beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred Flawe.
And for a miniſter of my intent,
I have ſeduc'd a head-ſtrong Kentiſhman,
John Cade of Aſhford,
To make Commotion, as full well he can,
Under the Title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I ſeen this ſtubborn Cade
Oppoſe himſelf againſt a troop of Kernes,
And fought ſo long, till that his thighes with Darts
Were almoſt like a ſharp-quill'd Porpentine:
And in the end being reſcued, I have ſeen
Him caper upright, like a wild Moriſco,
Shaking the bloudy Darts, as he his Bells.
Full often, like a ſhag-hair'd crafty Kern,
Hath he converſed with the Enemy,
And undiſcover'd, come to me again,
And given me notice of their Villanies.
This devil here ſhall be my ſubſtitute,
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gate, in ſpeech he doth reſemble.
By this, I ſhall perceive the Commons mind,
How they affect the Houſe and Claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack't, and tortured;
I know, no pain they can inflict upon him,
Will make him ſay, I mov'd him to thoſe Armes.
Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will,
Why then from Ireland come I with my ſtrength,
And reap the Harveſt which that Raſcal ſow'd.
For Humfrey being dead, as he ſhall be,
And Henry put a-part: the next for me. Exit.

Enter two or three running over the Stage, from the Murther of Duke Humfrey.

1. Run to my Lord of Suffolk: let him know
We have diſpatcht the Duke, as he commanded.
2. Oh, that it were to doe; what have we done?
Did'ſt ever hear a man ſo penitent?
Enter Suffolk.
1. Here comes my Lord.
Suff. Now Sirs, have you diſpatcht this thing?
1. I, my good Lord, he's dead.
Suff. Why that's well ſaid. Go, get you to my houſe,
I will reward you for this venturous deed:
The King and all the Peers are here at hand.
Have you laid fair the Bed? are all things well,
According as I gave directions?
1. 'Tis, my good Lord.
Suff. Away, be gone. Exeunt.

Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, Somerſet, with Attendants.

King. Go call our Uncle to our preſence ſtraight:
Say, we intend to try his Grace to day,
If he be guilty, as 'tis publiſhed.
Suff. I'le call him preſently, my Noble Lord. Exit.
King. Lords take your places; and I pray you all
Proceed no ſtraiter 'gainſt our Uncle Gloſter,
Then from true evidence, of good eſteem,
He be approv'd in practice culpable.
Queen. God forbid any malice ſhould prevail,
That faultleſs may condemn a Noble man:
Pray God he may acquit him of ſuſpition.
King. I thank thee Nell, theſe words content me much.

Enter Suffolk.

How now? why look'ſt thou pale? why trembleſt thou?
Where is our Uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk?
Suff. Dead in his Bed, my Lord: Gloſter is dead.
Queen. Marry God forfend.
Card. God's ſecret Judgement: I did dream to night,
The Duke was dumb, and could not ſpeak a word.

King ſounds.

Queen. How fares my Lord? Help Lords, the King is dead.
Som. Rear up his Body, wring him by the Noſe.
Queen. Run, go, help, help: Oh Henry ope thine eyes.
Suff. He doth revive again, Madam be patient.
King. Oh heavenly God!
Queen. How fares my gracious Lord?
Suff. Comfort my Soveraign, gracious Henry comfort.
King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?
Came he right now to ſing a Raven's Note,
Whoſe diſmal tune bereft my Vital powres:
And thinks he, that the chirping of a Wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breaſt,
Can chaſe away the firſt conceived ſound?
Hide not thy poiſon with ſuch ſugred words,
Lay not thy hands on me: forbear I ſay,
Their touch affrights me as a Serpent's ſting.
Thou balefull Meſſenger, out of my ſight:
Upon thy eye-balls, murderous Tyranny
Sits in grim Majeſty, to fright the World.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding;
Yet do not go away; come Baſilisk.
And kill the innocent gazer with thy ſight:
For in the ſhade of death, I ſhall find joy;
In life, but double death, now Gloſter's dead
Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus?
Although the Duke was enemy to him,
Yet he moſt Chriſtian-like laments his death;
And for my ſelf, Foe as he was to me,
Might liquid teares, or heart-offending groans,
Or bloud-conſuming ſighes recall his life;

I would

I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as Prim-rose with bloud-drinking sighes,
And all to have the Noble Duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow Friends:
It may be judg'd I made the Duke away.
So shall my name with Slander's tongue be wounded,
And Princes Courts be fill'd with my reproach:
This get I by his death: aye me unhappy,
To be a Queen, and Crown'd with infamy.

King. Ah woe is me for Gloster, wretched man.

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is.
What, Do'st thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome Leper, look on me.
What? art thou like the Adder waxen deaf?
Be poysonous too, and kill thy forlorn Queen.
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's Tombe?
Why then Dame Elianor was ne're thy joy.
Erect his Statue, and worship it,
And make my image but an Ale-house sign.
Was I for this nigh wrack'd upon the sea,
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
Drove back again unto my Native Clime.
What boaded this? but well fore-warning wind
Did seem to say, seek not a scorpion's Nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shoar.
What did I then? but curst the gentle gusts,
And he that loos'd them from their Brazen Caves,
And bid them blow towards England's blessed shoar,
Or turn our Stern upon a dreadfull Rock:
Yet Æolus would not be a murtherer,
But left that hatefull office unto thee.
The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me,
Knowing that thou would'st have me drown'd on shoar
With teares as salt as sea, through thy unkindness.
The splitting Rocks cowr'd in the sinking sands,
And would not dash me with their ragged sides,
Because thy flinty heart more hard then they,
Might in thy Pallace perish Elianor:
As far as I could ken thy Chalky Cliffs,
When from thy shoar, the Tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the Hatches in the storm:
And when the dusky sky, began to rob
My earnest-gaping-sight of the Land's view,
I took a costly Jewel from my neck,
A Heart it was bound in with Diamonds,
And threw it towards thy Land: the Sea receiv'd it,
And so I wish'd thy body might my Heart:
And even with this, I lost fair England's view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,
And call'd them blind and dusky Spectacles,
For loosing ken of Albion's wished Coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
(The agent of thy foul inconstancy)
To sit and watch me, as Ascanius did,
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His Father's Acts, commenc'd in burning Troy,
Am I not witcht like her? or thou not false like him?
Aye me, I can no more: Dye Elinor,
For Henry weeps, that thou do'st live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick, and many Commons.

Warw. It is reported, mighty Soveraign,
That good Duke Humfrey Traiterously is murthered
By Suffolk, and the Cardinal Beauford's means:
The Commons like an angry hive of Bees
That want their Leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
My self have calm'd their spleenfull mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.

King. That he is dead good Warwick, 'tis too true,
But how he dyed, God knows, not Henry:
Enter his Chamber, view his breathless Corps,
And comment then upon his sudden death.

Warw. That shall I do my Liege: stay Salisbury
With the rude multitude, till I return.

King. O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts:
My thoughts, that labour to perswade my soul,
Some violent hands were laid on Humfrey's life:
If my suspect be false, forgive me God,
For judgement only doth belong to thee:
Fain would I goe to chafe his paly lips,
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an Ocean of salt teares,
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand, unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean Obsequies,

Bed put forth.

And to survey his dead and earthly Image:
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Warw. Come hither gracious Soveraign, view this body.

King. That is to see how deep my grave is made,
For with his soul fled all my worldly solace;
For seeing him, I see my life in death.

Warw. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him,
To free us from his Father's wrathfull curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suff. A dreadfull Oath, sworn with a solemn tongue:
What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

Warw. See how the bloud is setled in his face.
Oft have I seen a timely-parted Ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meager, pale, and bloudless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart,
Who in the Conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy,
Which with the heart there cools, and ne're returneth,
To blush and beautifie the Cheek again.
But see, his face is black, and full of bloud:
His eye-balls further out, than when he lived,
Staring full gastly, like a strangled man:
His hair up-rear'd, his nostrils stretcht with strugling:
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp't
And tugg'd for Life, and was by strength subdude.
Look on the Sheets, his hair (you see) is sticking,
His well-proportion'd Beard, made ruffe and rugg'd,
Like to the Summer's Corn by Tempest lodged:
It cannot be but he was murdred here,
The least of all these signes were probable.

Suff. Why Warwick, who should do the Duke to death?
My self and Beauford had him in protection,
And we, I hope Sir, are no murtherers. (death.

Warw. But both of you have vowed Duke Humfrey's
And you (forsooth) had the good Duke to keep:
'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend,
And 'tis well seen, he found an enemy.

Queen. Then you belike suspect these Noble men,
As guilty of Duke Humfrey's timeless death.

Warw.

Warw. Who finds the Heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast-by, a Butcher with an Axe,
But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the Partridge in the Puttocks Nest,
But may imagine, how the Bird was dead,
Although the Kite soar with un-bloudied Beak?
Even so suspicious is this Tragedy.

Qu. Are you the Butcher, Suffolk? where's your Knife?
Is Beauford term'd a Kite? where are his Tallons?

Suff. I wear no Knife, to slaughter sleeping men,
But here's a 'vengefull Sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart.
That slanders me with Murther's Crimson Badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humfrey's death.

Warw. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Queen. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant Controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

Warw. Madam be still: with reverence may I say,
For every word you speak in his behalf,
Is slander to your Royal Dignity.

Suff. Blunt-witted Lord, ignoble in demeanor,
If ever Lady wrong'd her Lord so much,
Thy Mother took into her blamefull Bed,
Some stern un-tutor'd Churl; and Noble Stock
Was graft with Crab-tree slip, whose Fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils Noble Race.

Warw. But that the guilt of Murther bucklers thee,
And I should rob the Deaths-man of his Fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my Soveraigns presence makes me mild,
I would, false murd'rous Coward, on thy Knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,
And say, it was thy Mother that thou meant'st,
That thou thy self wast born in Bastardy;
And after all this fearfull Homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and thy Soul to hell,
Pernicious bloud-sucker of sleeping men.

Suff. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy bloud.
If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

Warw. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence,
Unworthy though thou art, I'le cope with thee,
And do some service to Duke Humfrey's Ghost.

Exeunt.

King. What stronger Breast-plate then a heart untainted?
Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his Quarrel just;
And he but naked, though lockt up in Steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

A noise within.

Queen. What noise is this?

Enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their Weapons drawn.

King. Why how now Lords?
Your wrathfull Weapons drawn,
Here in our presence? Dare you be so bold?
Why what Tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suff. The trayt'rous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mighty Soveraign.

Enter Salisbury.

Salis. Sirs stand a-part, the King shall know your mind.
Dread Lord, the Commons send you word by me,
Unless Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's Territories,
They will by violence tear him from your Pallace,
And torture him with grievous lingring death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humfrey dy'd:
They say, in him they fear your Highness death;
And mere instinct of Love and Loyalty,
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his Banishment.
They say, in care of your most Royal Person,
That if your Highness should intend to sleep,
And charge, that no man should disturb your Rest,
In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait Edict,
Were there a Serpent seen, with forked Tongue,
That slyly glided towards your Majesty,
It were but necessary you were wak't:
Lest being suffer'd in that harmless slumber,
The mortal Worm might make the sleep eternal,
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, where you will, or no,
From such fell Serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose invenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving Uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons within. An Answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury.

Suff. 'Tis like the Commons, rude unpolisht hinds,
Could send such Message to their Soveraign:
But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd,
To shew how queint an Orator you are.
But all the Honour Salisbury hath wonne,
Is, that he was the Lord Embassador,
Sent from a sort of Tinkers to the King.

Within. An answer from the King, or we will all break in.

King. Go Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do intreat:
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesie,
Mischance unto my State by Suffolk's means.
And therefore by his Majesty I swear,
Whose far-un-worthy Deputy I am,
He shall not breed infection in this air,
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

Quee. Oh Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

King. Ungentle Queen, to call him gentle Suffolk.
No more I say: if thou do'st plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my Wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But when I swear, it is irrevocable:
If after three days space thou here be'st found,
On any ground that I am Ruler of,
The World shall not be Ransome for thy Life.
Come Warwick, come good Warwick, go with me,
I have great matters to impart to thee. Exit.

Queen. Mischance and Sorrow go along with you,
Hearts Discontent, and sowr Affliction,
Be play-fellows to keep you company:
There's two of you, the Devil made a third,
And three-fold Vengeance tend upon your steps,

Suff. Cease, gentle Queen, these Execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Queen.

Queen. Fie Coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch,
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine Enemy?

Suff. A plague upon them: wherefore should I curse them?
Would curses kill, as doth the Mandrakes groan,
I would invent as bitter searching termes,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signes of deadly hate,
As lean-fac'd envy in her loathsome cave.
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words,
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten Flint,
Mine hair be fixt an end, as one distract:
I, every joynt should seem to curse and ban,
And even now my burthen'd heart would break
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink,
Gall, worse then Gall, the daintiest that they taste:
Their sweetest shade, a grove of Cypress Trees:
Their chiefest Prospect, murd'ring Basilisks:
Their softest Touch, as smart as Lizards stings:
Their Musick, frightfull as the Serpents hiss,
And boading Screech-Owls, make the Consort full.
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell------

Queen. Enough sweet Suffolk, thou torment'st thy self,
And these dread curses like the Sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an over-charged Gun, recoil,
And turns the force of them upon thy self.

Suff. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?
Now by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a Winters night,
Though standing naked on a Mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Queen. Oh, let me intreat thee cease, give me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mournfull teares;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my wofull Monuments.
Oh, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou might'st think upon these by the Seal,
Through whom a thousand sighes are breath'd for thee.
So get thee gone, that I may know my grief,
'Tis but surmiz'd, whiles thou art standing by,
As one that surfets, thinking on a want:
I will repeal thee, or be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished my self:
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Goe, speak not to me; even now be gone,
Oh goe not yet. Even thus, two friends condemn'd
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part then dye;
Yet now farewell, and farewell life with thee.

Suff. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the Land I care for, wer't thou hence,
A Wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the World it self,
With every several pleasure in the World:
And where thou art not, Desolation.
I can no more: Live thou to joy thy life;
My self no joy in ought, but that thou liv'st.

Enter Vaux.

Queen. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what newes I prethee?

Vaux. To signifie unto his Majesty,
That Cardinal Beauford is at the point of death:
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks, as if Duke Humfrey's Ghost
Were by his side: sometime, he calls the King,
And whispers to his Pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his over-charged soul,
And I am sent to tell his Majesty,
That even now he cryes aloud for him.

Quee. Go tell this heavy Message to the King. Exit.
Aye me! What is this World? What newes are these?
But wherefore grieve I at an houres poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soule's Treasure?
Why onely Suffolk mourn I not for thee?
And with the Southern clouds, contend in teares?
Theirs for the Earth's increase; mine for my sorrows.
Now get thee hence, the King thou know'st is comming
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suff. If I depart from thee, I cannot live,
And in thy sight to dye, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As milde and gentle as the Cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's dugge between it's lips.
Where from thy sight, I should be raging mad:
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes:
To have thee with thy lippes to stop my mouth:
So should'st either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breath it so into thy body,
And then it lives in sweet Elizium.
To dye by thee, were but to dye in jest,
From thee to dye, were torture more then death:
Oh let me stay, befall what may befall.

Queen. Away: though parting be a fretfull corrosive,
It is applyed to a deathfull wound.
To France sweet Suffolk: Let me hear from thee:
For whersoever thou art in this world's Globe,
I'le have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suff. I goe.

Queen. And take my heart with thee.

Suff. A Jewel lockt into the woful'st Cask,
That ever did contain a thing of worth,
Even as a splitted Bark, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.

Queen. This way for me. Exeunt.

Enter the King, Salisbury, and Warwick, to the Cardinal in bed.

King. How fares my Lord? Speak Beauford to thy Soveraign.

Car. If thou beest death, I'le give thee Englands Treasure,
Enough to purchase such another Island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

King. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible.

War. Beauford, it is thy Soveraign speaks to thee.

Beau. Bring me unto my Trial when you will.
Dide he not in his bed? Where should he dye?
Can I make men live where they will or no?
Oh torture me no more, I will confess.
Alive again? Then shew me where he is:
I'le give a thousand pound to look upon him,
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Combe

Combe down his hair; look, look, it ſtands upright,
Like Lime-twigs ſet to catch my winged ſoul:
Give me ſome drink, and bid the Apothecary
Bring the ſtrong poyſon that I bought of him.
King. O thou eternall moover of the heavens,
Look with a gentle eye upon this Wretch,
Oh beat away the buſie medling Fiend,
That layes ſtrong ſiege unto this wretches ſoul,
And from his boſome purge this black deſpair.
War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.
Sal. Diſturb him not, let him paſſe peaceably.
King. Peace to his ſoul, if Gods good pleaſure be.
Lord Card'nall, if thou think'ſt on heavens bliſſe,
Hold up thy hand, make ſignall of thy hope.
He dies and makes no ſigne: Oh God forgive him,
War. So bad a death, argues a monſtrous life.
King. Forbear to judge, for we are ſinners all.
Cloſe up his eyes, and draw the Curtain cloſe,
And let us all to Meditation. Exeunt.

Alarum. Fight at Sea. Ordenance goes off.

Enter Lieutenant, Suffolk, and others.

Lieu. The gaudy blabbing and remorſefull day,
Is crept into the boſome of the Sea:
And now loud howling Wolves arouze the Jades
That drag the Tragick melancholy night:
Who with their drowſie, ſlow, and flagging wings
Cleap dead-mens graves; and from their miſty Jaws,
Breath foul contagious darkneſſe in the air:
Therefore bring forth the Souldiers of our prize,
For whil'ſt our Pinnace Anchors in the Downs,
Here ſhall they make their ranſome on the ſand,
Or with their bloud ſtain this diſcoloured ſhore.
Maſter, this Priſoner freely give I thee.
And thou that art his Mate, make boot of this:
The other Walter Whitmore is thy ſhare.
1. Gent. What is my ranſome Maſter, let me know.
Ma. A thouſand Crowns, or elſe lay down your head.
Mate. And ſo much ſhall you give, or off goes yours.
Lieu. What think you much to pay 2000. Crowns,
And bear the name and port of Gentlemen?
Cut both the Villains throats, for die you ſhall:
The lives of thoſe which we have loſt in fight,
Be counter-poys'd with ſuch a petty ſum.
1. Gent. I'le give it, ſir, and therefore ſpare my life.
2. Gent. And ſo will I, and write home for it ſtraight.
Whitm. I loſt mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
And therefore to revenge it, ſhalt thou die,
And ſo ſhould theſe, If I might have my will.
Lieu. Be not ſo raſh, take ranſome, let him live.
Suf. Look on my George, I am a Gentleman,
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou ſhalt be paid.
Whit. And ſo am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.
How now? why ſtartſt thou? what doth death affright?
Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whoſe ſound is death:
A cunning man did calculate my Birth,
And told me that by Water I ſhould die:
Yet let not this make thee be bloudy-minded,
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly ſounded.
Whit. Gualtier or Walter, which it is I care not,
Never yet did baſe diſhonour blur our name,
But with our ſword we wip'd away the blot.
Therefore, when Merchant-like I ſell revenge,
Broke be my ſword, my Armes torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a Coward through the world,
Suf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Priſoner is a Prince,
The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.
Whit. The Duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags?
Suf. I, but theſe rags are no part of the Duke.
Lieu. But Jove was never ſlain as thou ſhalt be,
Obſcure and lowſie Swain, King Henries bloud.
Suf. The honorable bloud of Lancaſter
Muſt not be ſhed by ſuch a jaded Groom:
Haſt thou not kiſt thy hand, and held my ſtirrop?
Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth Mule,
And thought thee happy when I ſhook my head.
How often haſt thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my Trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feaſted with Queen Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee Creſt-faln,
I, and alay this thy abortive Pride:
How in our voiding Lobby haſt thou ſtood,
And duly waited for my coming forth?
This hand of thine hath writ in thy behalf,
And therefore ſhall it charme thy riotous tongue.
Whit. Speak Captain, ſhall I ſtab the forlorn Swain?
Lieu. Firſt let my words ſtab him, as he hath me.
Suf. Baſe ſlave, thy words are blunt, and ſo art thou.
Lieu. Convey him hence, and on our long boats ſide,
Strike off his head. Suf. Thou dar'ſt not for thy own.
Lieu. Poole, Sir Poole? Lord?
I, kennell. puddle, ſink, whoſe filth and dirt
Troubles the ſilver Spring, where England drinks:
Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
For ſwallowing up the Treaſure of the Realm.
Thy lips that kiſt the Queen, ſhall ſweep the ground:
And thou that ſmil'dſt at good Duke Humfries death,
Againſt the ſenſeleſs winds ſhalt grin in vain,
Who in contempt ſhall hiſs at thee again.
And wedded be thou to the Hags of hell,
For daring to affye a mighty Lord
Unto the daughter of a worthleſs King,
Having neither Subject, Wealth, nor Diadem:
By deviliſh policy art thou grown great,
And like ambitious Sylla over-gor'd,
With gobbets of thy Mother-bleeding heart.
By thee Anion and Main were ſold to France.
The falſe revolting Normans thorough thee,
Diſdain to call us Lord, and Piccardie
Hath ſlain their Governors, ſurpriz'd our Forts,
And ſent the ragged Souldiers wounded home:
The Princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whoſe dreadfull ſwords were never drawn in vain,
As hating thee, and riſing up in Armes.
And now the Houſe of York thruſt from the Crown,
By ſhamefull murther of a guiltleſs King,
And lofty proud incroaching tyranny,
Burns with revenging fire, whoſe hopefull colours
Advance our half-fac'd Sun, ſtriving to ſhine;
Under the which is writ, Invitis nubibus.
The commons here in Kent are up in a:mes,
And to conclude, Reproach and Beggery,
Is crept into the Pallace of our King,
And all by thee: away convey him hence.
Suf. O that I were a God, to ſhoot forth Thunder
Upon theſe paltry, ſervile, abject Drudges:
Small things make baſe men proud. This Villain here,
Being Captain of a Pinnace, threatens more
Then Bargulus the ſtrong Illyrian Pirate.
Drones ſuck not Eagles bloud, but rob Bee-hives.
It is Impoſſible that I ſhould die

By such a lowly Vassall as thy self.
Thy words move Rage, and not remorse in me:
I go of Message from the Queen to France:
I charge thee waft me safely crosse the Channell.

Lieu. Water: W. Come Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus, it is thee I fear.

Wal. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee. What, are ye daunted now? will you stoop?

1. Gent. My gracious Lord intreat him; speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolks Imperiall tongue is stern and rough:
Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it, we should honour such as these
With humble suit: no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block, then these knees bow to any,
Save to the God of heaven; and to my King:
And sooner dance upon a bloudy pole,
Then stand uncover'd to the Vulgar Groom.
True Nobility, is exempt from fear:
More can I bear, then you dare execute.

Lieu. Hale him away, and let him talk no more:
Come Souldiers, shew what cruelty ye can.

Suf. That this my death may never be forgot.
Great men oft die by vilde Bezonians.
A Roman Sworder, and Bandetto slave
Murder'd sweet Tully. Brutus Bastard hand
Stab'd Julius Caesar. Savage Islanders
Pompey the Great, and Suffolk dies by Pyrats.
Exit Walter with Suffolk.

Lieu. And as for these whose ransome we have set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart:
Therefore come you with us, and let him go.
Exit Lieutenant, and the rest.

Manet the first Gent. Enter Walter with the body.

Wal. There let his head, and liveless body lie,
Untill the Queen his Mistris bury it. Exit Walter.

1. Gent. O barbarous and bloudy spectacle,
His body will I bear unto the King:
If he revenge it not, yet will his Friends,
So will the Queen, that living held him dear. Exit.

Enter Bevis, and John Holland.

Bevis. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a Lath, they have been up these two dayes.

Hol. They have the more need to sleep now then.

Bevis. I tell thee, Jack Cade the Cloathier, means to dresse the Common-wealth and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

Hol. So he had need, 'tis thred-bare. Well, I say, it was never merry world in England, since Gentlemen came up.

Bevis. O miserable Age: Vertue is not regarded in Handy-crafts men.

Hol. The Nobility think scorn to go in Leather Aprons.

Bevis. Nay more, the Kings Councell are no good Workmen.

Hol. True: and yet it is said, Labour in thy Vocation: which is as much as to say, let the Magistrates be labouring men, and therefore should we be Magistrates,

Bevis. Thou hast hit it: for there's no better signe of a brave mind, then a hard hand.

Hol. I see them, I see them: There's Best's Son, the Tanner of Wingham.

Bevis. He shall have the skinns of our enemies, to make Dogs Leather of.

Hol. And Dick the Butcher.

Bevis. Then is sin struck down like an Oxe, and iniquities throat cut like a Calf.

Hol. And Smith the Weaver.

Bevis. Argo, their thred of life is spun.

Hol. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter Cade, Dick Butcher, Smith the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so term'd of our supposed Father.

But. Or rather of stealing a Cade of Herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fail before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down Kings and Princes. Command silence.

But. Silence.

Cade. My Father was a Mortimer.

But. He was an honest man, and a good Bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.

But. I knew her well, she was a Midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies.

But. She was indeed a Pedlers daughter, and sold many Laces.

Weaver. But now of late, not able to travell with her furr'd Pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade Therefore am I of an honorable house.

But. I by my faith the field is honorable, and there was he born, under a hedge: for his Father had never a house but a Cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Weaver. A must needs, for beggery is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

But. No question of that: for I have seen him whipt three Market dayes together.

Cade. I fear neither, sword nor fire.

Weav. He need not fear the sword, for his Coat is of proof.

But. But me thinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i'th hand for stealing of Sheep.

Cade. Be brave then, for your Captain is Brave, and Vows Reformation. There shall be in England, seven half penny Loaves sold for a penny: the three hoop'd pot, shall have ten hoops, and will make it Fellony to drink small Beer. All the Realm shall be in Common, and in Cheapside shall my Palfrey go to grasse: and when I am King, as King I will be.

All. God save your Majesty.

Cade. I thank you good people. There shall be no money, all shall eat and drink on my score, and I will apparell them all in one Livery, that they may agree like Brothers, and worship me their Lord.

But. The first thing we do, let's kill all the Lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that the skin of an innocent Lamb should be made Parchment; that Parchment being scribeld o're, should undo a man. Some say the Bee stings, but I say, 'tis Bees wax: for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never my own man since. How now? Who's there?

Enter a Cleark.

Weaver. The Cleark of Chattam: he can write and read, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Weav. We took him setting boyes Copies.

Cade.

Cade. Here's a Villain.

Weav. Ha's a Book in his pocket with red Letters in't.

Cade. Nay then he is a Conjurer.

But. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Cleark. Emanuell.

But. They use to write it on the top of Letters: 'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: Do'st thou use to write thy name? Or hast thou a mark to thy self, like an honest plain dealing man?

Clerk. Sir I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confest: away with him: he is a Villain and a Traitor.

Cade. Away with him I say: Hang him with his Pen and Ink-horn about his neck.

Exit one with the Cleark.

Enter Michaell.

Mich. Where is our Generall?

Cade. Here I am thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly, Sir Humfrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cade. Stand villain, stand or I'le fell thee down: he shall be encountred with a man as good as himself. He is but a Knight, is a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equall him I will make my self a knight presently; Rise up Sir John Mortimer. Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brother, with Drum and Souldiers.

Staf. Rebellious Hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,
Mark'd for the Gallows; Lay your Weapons down,
Home to your Cottages: forsake this Groom.
The King is mercifull, if you revolt.

Bro. But angry, wrathfull, and inclin'd to bloud,
If you go forward: therefore yield or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves I passe not,
It is to you good people, that I speak,
Over whom (in time to come) I hope to reign:
For I am rightfull heir unto the Crown.

Staf. Villain, thy Father was a Plaisterer,
And thou thy self a Shearman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmond Mortimer Earle of March, married the Duke of Clarence daughter, did he not?

Stafford. I sir.

Cade. By her he had two Children at one birth,

Bro. That's false.

Cade. I, there's the question; But I say, 'tis true:
The elder of them being put to nurse,
Was by a begger-woman stoln away,
And ignorant of his birth and parentage,
Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age.
His son am I, deny it if you can.

But. Nay, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be King.

Weav. Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testifie it: therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base Drudges Words, that speaks he knows not what?

All. I marry will we, therefore get you gone.

Bro. Jack Cade, the D. of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lyes, for I invented it my self. Go too Sirrah, tell the King from me, that for his Fathers sake Henry the fifth, (in whose time boyes went to Span-counter for French Crowns) I am content he shall reign, but I'le be Protector over him.

But And further more we'll have the Lord Sayes head, for selling the Dukedome of Main.

Cade. And good reason: for thereby is England main'd. And fain to go with a staffe, but that my puissance holds it up, Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that Lord Say hath gelded the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: and more then that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a Traitor.

Staf. O grosse and miserable ignorance.

Cade. Nay answer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go too then: I ask but this: Can he that speaks with the tong of an enemy, be a good Counceller, or no?

All. No, no, and therefore we'll have his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,
Assayle them with the Army of the King.

Staf. Herauld away, and throughout every Town,
Proclaim them Traitors that are up with Cade,
That those which flye before the battell ends,
May even in their wives and Childrens sight,
Be hang'd up for example at their doors:
And you that be the Kings friends follow me. Exit.

Cade. And you that love the Commons follow me:
Now shew your selves men, 'tis for Liberty.
We will not leave one Lord, one Gentleman:
Spare none, but such as go in clouted shoon,
For they are thrifty honest men, and such
As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

But. They are all in order, and march towards us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slain. Enter Cade and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dick, the Butcher of Ashford?

But. Here sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheep and Oxen, and thou behaved'st thy self, as if thou hadst been in thine own Slaughter-house: Therefore thus I will reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is, and thou shalt have a License to kill for a hundred lacking one.

But. I desire no more.

Cade. And to speak truth, thou deserv'st no lesse.
This Monument of the Victory will I bear, and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my horses heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the Maiors sword borne before us.

But. If we mean to thrive, and do good, break open the Goals, and let out the Prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. Exeunt.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queen with Suffolks head, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind,

And makes it fearfull and degenerate,
Think therefore on revenge, and ceaſe to weep.
But who can ceaſe to weep, and look on this,
Here may his head lye throbbing on my breſt:
But where's the body that I ſhould imbrace?

Buc. What anſwer makes your Grace to the Rebells Supplication?

King. I'le ſend ſome holy Biſhop to intreat:
For God forbid, ſo many ſimple ſouls
Should periſh by the Sword. And I my ſelf,
Rather then bloudy war ſhall cut them ſhort,
Will parly with Jack Cade their Generall.
But ſtay, I'le read it over once again.

Qu. Ah barbarous villains: Hath this lovely face,
Rul'd like a wandring Plannet over me,
And could it not inforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the ſame?

King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath ſworn to have thy head.

Say. I, but I hope your Highneſſe ſhall have his.

King. How now Madam?
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolks death?
I fear me (Love) if that I had been dead,
Thou would'ſt not half have mourn'd ſo much for me.

Qu. No my Love, I ſhould not mourn, but dye for thee.

Enter a Meſſenger.

King. How now? What news? Why com'ſt thou in ſuch haſte?

Meſ. The Rebels are in Southwarke: Flye my Lord: Jack Cade proclaims himſelf Lord Mortimer,
Deſcended from the Duke of Clarence houſe,
And calls your Grace Uſurper openly,
And vows to Crown himſelf in Weſtminſter.
His Army is a ragged multitude
Of Hinds and Peazants, rude and mercileſſe:
Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brothers death,
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed:
All Schollers, Lawyers, Courtiers, Gentlemen,
They call falſe Caterpillers, and intend their death.

King. O graceleſs men: they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious Lord, retire to Killingworth,
Untill a power be rais'd to put them down.

Qu. Ah were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,
Theſe Kentiſh Rebels ſhould be ſoon appeas'd.

King. Lord Say, the Traitors hate thee,
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your Graces perſon be in danger:
The ſight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this City will I ſtay,
And live alone as ſecret as I may.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Meſ. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge,
The Citizens flye him and forſake their houſes:
The Raſcall people thirſting after prey,
Joyn with the Traitor, and they joyntly ſwear
To ſpoyle the City, and your Royall Court.

Buc. Then linger not my Lord, away, take Horſe.

King. Come, Margaret, God our hope will ſuccour us.

Qu. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceaſt.

King. Farewell my Lord, truſt not to Kentiſh Rebels.

Buc. Truſt no body for fear you be betraid.

Say. The truſt I have, is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and Reſolute. Exeunt.

Enter Lord Scales upon the Tower walking. Then enters two or three Citizens below.

Scales. How now? Is Jack Cade ſlain?

1. Cit. No my Lord, nor likely to be ſlain:
For they have won the Bridge,
Killing all thoſe that withſtand them:
The L. Maior craves aid of your Honor from the Tower
To defend the City from the Rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can ſpare you ſhall command,
But I am troubled here with them my ſelf.
The Rebels have aſſay'd to win the Tower.
But get you into Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither will I ſend you Matthew Goffe.
Fight for your King, your Countrey, and your Lives,
And ſo farewell, for I muſt hence again. Exeunt.

Enter Jack Cade and the reſt, and ſtrikes his ſtaffe on London ſtone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer Lord of this City,
And here ſitting upon London Stone,
I charge and command, that of the Cities coſt
The piſſing Conduit run nothing but Claret Wine
The firſt year of our reign.
And now henceforward it ſhall be treaſon for any,
That calls me other then Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Souldier running.

Soul. Jack Cade, Jack Cade.

Cade. Knock him down there. They kill him.

But. If this fellow be wiſe, he'll never call ye Jack Cade more, I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My Lord, there's an Army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then let's go fight with them:
But firſt, go and ſet London Bridge on fire,
And if you can, burn down the Tower too.
Come, let's away. Exeunt omnes.

Alarums. Matthew Goffe is ſlain, and all the reſt. Then enter Jack Cade, with his Company.

Cade. So ſirs: now go ſome and pull down the Savoy: Others to'th Inns of Court, down with them all.

But. I have a ſuit unto your Lordſhip.

Cade. Be it a Lordſhip, thou ſhalt have it for that word.

But. Onely that the Laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Maſſe 'twill be ſore Law then, for he was thruſt in the mouth with a Spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. Nay John, it will be ſtinking Law, for his breath ſtinks with toſted Cheeſe.

Cade. I have thought upon it, it ſhall be ſo. Away, burn all the Records of the Realm, my mouth ſhall be the Parliament of England.

Joh. Then we are like to have biting Statutes, Unleſſe his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And hence-forward all things ſhall be in Common.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. My Lord, a prize, a prize, here's the Lord Say, which ſold the Towns in France, He that made us pay one and twenty Fifteens, and one ſhilling to the pound, the laſt Subſidie.

Enter

Enter George with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times: Ah thou Say, thou Surge, nay thou Buckram Lord, now art thou within point-blank of our Jurisdiction Regall. What canst thou answer to my Majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto Mounsieur Basimecu, the Dolphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the Beesome that must sweep the Court clean of such filth as thou art: Thou hast most traiterously corrupted the youth of the Realm, in erecting a Grammar School: and whereas before, our Fore-fathers had no other Books but the Score and the Tally, thou hast caused printing to be us'd, and contrary to the King, his Crown, and Dignity, thou hast built a Paper-Mill. It will be proved to thy Face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a Noun and a Verb, and such abominable words, as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed Justices of Peace, to call poor men before them, about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not read, thou hast hang'd them, when (indeed) only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou do'st ride on a foot-cloth, do'st thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let thy horse wear a Cloak, when honester men then thou go in their Hose and Doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too, as my self for example, that am a Butcher.

Say. You men of Kent.

Dick. What say you of Kent.

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him, he speaks Latine.

Say. Heare me but speak, and beare me where you will:
Kent in the Commentaries Cæsar writ,
Is term'd the civel'st place of all this Isle:
Sweet is the Country, because full of Riches,
The People Liberal, Valiant, Active, Wealthy,
Which makes me hope thou art not void of pitty.
I sold not Main, I lost not Normandy,
Yet to recover them would lose my life:
Justice with favour have I alwayes done,
Prayers and Tears have mov'd me, Gifts could never;
When have I ought exacted at your hands?
Kent to maintain, the King, the Realm and you,
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned Clearks,
Because my Book preferr'd me to the King.
And seeing Ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to heaven,
Unlesse you be possest with deviliſh spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murther me:
This Tongue hath parlied unto Forraign Kings
For your behoof.

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have teaching hands: oft have I struck Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous Coward! What, to come behinde Folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale with watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o'th'ear, and that will make'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor mens causes,
Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen Candle then, and the help of a hatchet.

Dick. Why do'st thou quiver man?

Say. The Palsie, and not fear provokes me.

Cade. Nay he nodds at us, as who should say, I'le be even with you. I'le see if his head will stand steddier on a pole, or no: Take him away and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected Wealth, or honor? Speak.
Are my Chests fill'd up with extorted Gold?
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltlesse bloudshedding,
This breast from harbouring foul deceitfull thoughts.
O let me live.

Cade. I feel remorse in my self with his words: but I'le bridle it: he shall dye, and be it but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him, he ha's a Familiar under his Tongue, he speaks not a Gods name. Go, take him away I say, and strike off his head presently, and then break into his Son in Laws house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah Countrimen; if when you make your prai'rs,
God should be so obdurate as your selves:
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye: the proudest Peer of the Realm, shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unlesse he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay me her Maidenhead ere they have it: Men shall hold of me in Capite. And we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dick. My Lord,
When shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry presently.

All. O brave.

Enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braver:
Let them kisse one another: For they lov'd well
When they were alive. Now part them again,
Least they consult about the giving up
Of some more Towns in France. Souldiers,
Defer the spoyl of the City untill night;
For with these borne before us, in stead of Maces,
Will we ride through the streets, at every Corner
Have them kisse. Away. Exit.

Alarum, and Retreat. Enter again Cade, and all his rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street; down Saint Magnes corner, kill and knock down, throw them into Thames:

Sound a Parley.

What noyse is this I hear?
Dare any be so bold to sound Retreat or Parley
When I command them kill?

Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Buc. I here they be that dare and will diſturb thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambaſſadors from the King
Unto the Commons whom thou haſt miſled,
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forſake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What ſay ye Countrimen, will ye relent
And yield to mercy, whil'ſt 't is offered you,
Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths.
Who loves the King, and will imbrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap and ſay, God ſave his Majeſty;
Who hateth him, and honors not his Father,
Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us, and paſſe by.

All. God ſave the King, God ſave the King.

Cade. What Buckingham and Clifford are ye ſo brave? And you baſe Pezants, do ye believe him, will you needs be hang'd with your Pardons about your necks? Hath my ſword therefore broke through London gates, that you ſhould leave me at the white-heart in Southwarke. I thought ye would never have given out theſe Armes till you had recovered your ancient Freedome: but you are all Recreants and Daſtards, and delight to live in ſlavery to the Nobility. Let them break your backs with burthens, take your houſes over your heads, raviſh your Wives and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make ſhift for one, and ſo Gods Curſe light upon you all.

All. We'll follow Cade.
We'll follow Cade.

Clif. Is Cade the ſon of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him.
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meaneſt of you Earls and Dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to flye to:
Nor knows he how to live, but by the ſpoyle,
Unleſſe by robbing of your Friends, and us.
Wer't not a ſhame, that whil'ſt you live at jar,
The fearfull French, whom you late vanquiſhed
Should make a ſtart o're ſeas, and vanquiſh you?
Me thinks already in this civill broyl,
I ſee them Lording it in London ſtreets,
Crying Villiago unto all they meet.
Better ten thouſand baſe-born Cades miſcarry,
Then you ſhould ſtoop unto a Frenchmans mercy.
To France to France, and get what you have loſt;
Spare England, for it is your Native Coaſt:
Henry hath mony, you are ſtrong and manly:
God on our ſide, doubt not of Victory.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford,
We'll follow the King and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever Feather ſo lightly blown too and fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fifth, hales them to an hundred miſchiefs, and makes them leave me deſolate. I ſee them lay their heads together to ſurprize me. My ſword make way for me, for here is no ſtaying: in deſpight of the devills and hell, have through the very middeſt of you, and heavens and honour be witneſſe, that no want of reſolution in me, but only my Followers baſe and ignominous treaſons, make me betake me to my heels. Exit.

Buck. what, is he fled? Go ſome and follow him,
And he that brings his head unto the King,
Shall have a thouſand Crowns for his reward.
Exeunt ſome of them.
Follow me ſouldiers, we'll deviſe a mean,
To reconcile you all unto the King. Exeunt omnes.

Sound Trumpets. Enter King, Queen, and Somerſet on the Tarras.

King. Was ever King that joy'd an earthly Throne,
And could command no more content then I?
No ſooner was I crept out of my Cradle,
But I was made a King at nine months old:
Was never ſubject long to be a King,
As I do long and and wiſh to be a Subject.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buc. Health and glad tydings to your Majeſty.
King. Why Buckingham, is the Traitor Cade ſurpris'd?
Or is he but retir'd to make him ſtrong?

Enter Multitudes with Halters about their Necks.

Clif. He is fled my Lord, and all his powers do yield,
And humbly thus with halters on their necks,
Expect your Highneſs doom of life or death.
King. Then heaven ſet ope thy everlaſting gates,
To entertain my vows of thanks and praiſe.
Souldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And ſhew'd how well you love your Prince and Country:
Continue ſtill in this ſo good a mind.
And Henry though he be unfortunate,
Aſſure your ſelves will never be unkind:
And ſo with thanks and pardon to you all,
I do diſmiſſe you to your ſeverall Countries.
All. God ſave the King, God ſave the King.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Pleaſe it your Grace to be advertiſed,
The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puiſſant and mighty power
Of Gallow-glaſſes and ſtout Kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And ſtill proclaimeth as he comes along,
His Armies are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerſet, whom he termes a Traitor.

King. Thus ſtands my ſtate, 'twixt Cade and York diſtreſt,
Like to a Ship, that having ſcap'd a Tempeſt,
Is ſtraightway claim'd and boarded with a Pyrate,
But now is Cade driven back, his men diſpierc'd,
And now is York in armes to ſecond him.
I pray thee Buckingham go and meet him,
And ask him what's the reaſon of theſe Armes:
Tell him, I'le ſend Duke Edmund to the Tower,
And Somerſet we will commit thee thither,
Untill his Army be diſmiſt from him.

Somer. My Lord,
I'le yield my ſelf to priſon willingly,
Or unto death, to do my Country good.

King. In any caſe, be not to rough in termes,
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard Language.

Buck. I will my Lord, and doubt not ſo to deal,
As all things ſhall redound unto your good.

King. Come Wife, let's in, and learn to govern better,
For yet may England curſe my wretched reign.
Exeunt.
Enter.

Enter Jack Cade.

Cade. Fie on Ambition: fie on my ſelf, that have a ſword, and yet am ready to famiſh. Theſe five dayes have I hid me in theſe Woods, and durſt not peep out, for all the Country is laid for me: but now am I hungry, that if I might have a leaſe of my life for a thouſand years, I could ſtay no longer. Wherefore on a Brick wall have I climb'd into this Garden, to ſee if I can eat Graſſe, or pick a Sallet another while, which is not amiſſe to cool a mans ſtomack this hot weather: and I think this word Sallet was born to do me good; for many a time but for a Sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown Bill; and many a time when I have been dry, & bravely marching, it hath ſerv'd me inſtead of a quart pot to drink in: and now the word Sallet muſt ſerve me to feed on.

Enter Iden.

Iden. Lord who would live turmoyled in the Court,
And may enjoy ſuch quiet walks as theſe?
This ſmall inheritance my Father left me,
Contenteth me, and worth a Monarchy.
I ſeek not to wax great by others warning,
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy:
Sufficeth, that I have maintains my ſtate,
And ſends the poor well pleaſed from my gate.

Cade. Here's the Lord of the ſoile come to ſeize me for a ſtray, for entring his Fee-ſimple without leave. Ah Villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a 1000. Crowns of the King by carrying my head to him, but I'le make thee eat Iron like an Oſtridge, and ſwallow my Sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why rude Companion, whatſoere thou be,
I know thee not, why then ſhould I betray thee?
Is't not enough to break into my Garden,
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds:
Climbing my walls in ſpight of me the Owner,
But thou wilt brave me with theſe ſawcie tearms?

Cade. Brave thee? I by the beſt bloud that ever was braach'd, and beard thee too. Look on me well, I have eat no meat theſe five dayes, yet come thou and thy five men, and If I do not leave you all as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may never eat graſſe more.

Iden. Nay, it ſhall ne're be ſaid, while England ſtands,
That Alexander Iden an Eſquire of Kent,
Took odds to combate a poor famiſht man.
Oppoſe thy ſtedfaſt gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canſt out-face me with thy looks:
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the leſſer:
Thy hand is but a finger to my fiſt,
Thy leg a ſtick compared with this Truncheon,
My foot ſhall fight with all the ſtrength thou haſt,
And if mine arme be heaved in the aire,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth:
As for words, whoſe greatneſſe anſwers words,
Let this my ſword report what ſpeech forbears.

Cade. By my Valour: the moſt compleat Champion that ever I heard. Steel, if thou turn the edge, or, cut not out the burly bon'd Clown in chines of Beef, ere thou ſleep in thy Sheath, I beſeech Jove on my knees thou may'ſt be turnd to Hobnaiis.

Here they fight.

O I am ſlain, Famine and no other hath ſlain me, let ten thouſand devils come againſt me, and give me but the ten meals I have loſt, and I'de defie them all. Wither Garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this houſe, becauſe the unconquered ſoul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have ſlain, that monſtrous traitor?
Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o're my Tomb, when I am dead.
Ne're ſhall this bloud be wiped from thy point,
But thou ſhalt wear it as a Heralds coat,
To emblaze the Honor thy Maſter got.

Cade. Iden farewell, and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me, ſhe hath loſt her beſt man, and exhort all the World to be Cowards: for I that never feared any, am vanquiſhed by famine, not by Valour. Dies.

Id. How much thou wrong'ſt me, heaven be my judge;
Die damned Wretch, the curſe of her that bare thee:
And as I thruſt thy body in with my ſword,
So wiſh I, I might thruſt thy ſoul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Unto a dunghill, which ſhall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy moſt ungracious head,
Which I will bear in triumph to the King,
Leaving thy trunk for Crows to feed upon. Exit.

Enter York, and his Army of Iriſh, with Drum and Colours.

Yor. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the Crown from feeble Henries head.
Ring, Bells aloud, burn Bonfires clear and bright
To entertain great Englands lawfull King.
Ah Sancta Majeſtas! who would not buy thee dear?
Let them obey, that knows not how to Rule.
This hand was made to handle nought but Gold.
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a Sword or Scepter ballance it.
A Scepter ſhall it have, have I a ſoul,
On which I'le toſſe the Floure-de-Luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom have we here? Buckingham to diſturb me?
The King hath ſent him ſure: I muſt diſſemble.

Buc. York, if thou meaneſt well, I greet thee well.

Yor. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.
Art thou a Meſſenger, or come of pleaſure.

Buc. A Meſſenger from Henry, our dread Liege,
To know the reaſon of theſe Armes in peace.
Or why, thou being a Subject, as I am,
Againſt thy Oath, and true Allegeance ſworn,
Should raiſe ſo great a power without his leave?
Or dare to bring thy Force ſo near the Court?

Yor. Scarce can I ſpeak, my Choler is ſo great.
Oh I could hew up Rocks, and fight with Flint,
I am ſo angry at theſe abject termes.
And now like Ajax Telamonius,
On Sheep or Oxen could I ſpend my fury.
I am far better born then is the King:
More like a King, more Kingly in my thoughts.
But I muſt make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more ſtrong.
O Buckingham, I prethee pardon me,
That I have given no anſwer all this while:
My mind was troubled with deep Melancholly.
The cauſe why I have brought this army hither,

Is to remove proud Somerset from the King,
Seditious to his Grace, and the State.
Buc. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy Armes be to no other end,
The King hath yielded unto thy demand:
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.
York. Upon thine Honor is he Prisoner?
Buc. Upon mine Honor he is Prisoner?
York. Then Buckingham, I do dismisse my Powers.
Souldiers I thank you all: disperse your selves:
Meet me to morrow in S. Georges field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my Soveraign, vertuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, nay all my sons,
As pledges of my Fealty and Love,
I'le send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, Goods, Horse, Armor, any thing I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.
Buck. York, I commend this kind submission,
We twain will go into his Highnesse Tent.

Enter King and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend no harme to us,
That thus he marcheth with thee Arme in Arme?
York. In all submission and humility,
York doth present himself unto your Highnesse.
Kin. Then what intends these forces thou dost bring?
Yor. To have the Traitor Somerset from hence,
And fight against that monstrous Rebell Cade,
Whom since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter Iden with Cades head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition
May passe into the presence of a King:
Loe, I present your Grace a Traitors head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.
King. The head of Cade? Great God, how just art thou?
O let me view his Visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me my Friend, art thou the man that slew him?
Iden. I was, an't like your Majesty.
King. How art thou call'd? And what is thy degree?
Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name,
A poor Esquire of Kent, that love the King.
Buck. So please it you my Lord, 'twere not amisse
He were created Knight for his good service.
King. Iden, kneel down, rise up a Knight:
We give thee for reward a thousand Marks,
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.
Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his Liege.

Enter Queen and Somerset.

K. See Buckingham, Somerset, comes with th' Queen,
Go bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.
Qu. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,
But boldly stand and front him to his face,
Yor. How now? is Somerset at liberty?
Then York unloose thy long imprisoned thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equall with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?
False King, why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? no, thou art no King:
Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no nor canst not rule a Traitor.
That head of thine doth not become a Crown:
Thy hand is made to grasp a Palmers staffe,
And not to grace an awfull Princely Scepter.
That Gold, must round engirt the brows of mine,
Whose smile and frown, like Achilles Spear
Is able with the change, to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a Scepter up,
And with the same to act controlling Laws:
Give place: by heaven thou shalt rule no more
O're him, whom heaven created for thy Ruler.
Som. O monstrous Traitor! I arrest thee York
Of Capitall Treason 'gainst the King and Crown:
Obey audacious Traitor, kneel for Grace.
Yor. Would'st have me kneel? First let me ask of thee,
If they can brook I bow a knee to man:
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:
I know ere they will let me go to Ward,
They'l pawn their swords for thy infranchisement.
Qu. Call hither Clifford, bid him come amain,
To say, if that the Bastard boyes of York
Shall be the Surety for their Traitor Father.
York. O bloud-bespotted Neapolitan,
Out-cast of Naples, Englands bloudy Scourge:
The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their Fathers Bail, and bane to those
That for my Surety will refuse the Boyes.

Enter Edward and Richard.

See where they come, I'le warrant they'l make it good.

Enter Clifford.

Qu. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.
Clif. Health and all happiness to my Lord the King.
Yor. I thank thee Clifford. Say, what news with thee?
Nay, do not fright me with an angry look:
We are thy Soveraign Clifford, kneel again;
For thy mistaking so, We pardon thee.
Clif. This is my King, York, I do not mistake,
But thou mistakest me much to think I do,
To Bedlem with him, is the man grown mad?
King. I Clifford, a Bedlem and ambitious humor
Makes him oppose himself against his King.
Clif. He is a Traitor, let him to the Tower,
And crop away that factious pate of his.
Qu. He is arrested, but will not obey:
His sons (he sayes) shall give their words for him.
Yor. Will you not sons?
Edm. I Noble Father, if our words will serve.
Rich. And if words will not, then our Weapons shall.
Clif. Why what a brood of Traitors have we here?
Yor. Look in a Glass, and call thy Image so.
I am the King, and thou a false-heart Traitor:
Call hither to the stake my two brave Bears,
That with the very shaking of their Chains,
They may astonish these fell-lurking Currs:
Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the Earls of Warwick and Salisbury.

Clif. Are these thy Bears? We'll bait thy Bears to death,
And manacle the Bearard in their Chains,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting place.
Rich. Oft have I seen a hot ore-weening Cur,
Run back and bite, because he was with-held,
Who being suffer'd with the Bears fell paw,
Hath clapt his tail, between his legs and cride,
And such a piece of service will you do,

If

If you suppose your selves to match Lord Warwick.
Clif. Hence heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.
York. Nay we shall heat you thoroughly anon.
Clif. Take heed least by your heat you burn your selves.
King. Why Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?
Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,
Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son,
What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Ruffian?
And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?
Oh where is Faith? Oh where is Loyalty?
If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out War,
And shame thine honourable age with blood?
Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame in duty bend thy knee to me,
That bows unto the grave with milky age.
Sal. My Lord, I have considered with my self
The Title of this most renowned Duke,
And in my conscience, do repute his grace
The rightfull heir to Englands Royal seat.
King. Hast thou not sworn Allegeance unto me?
Sal. I have.
Kin. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?
Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin:
But greater sin to keep a sinfull oath:
Who can be bound by any solemn Vow
To do a murd'rous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotlesse Virgins Chastity,
To reave the Orphan of his Patrimony,
To wring the Widow from her custom'd right,
And have no other reason for this wrong,
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?
Qu. A subtle Traitor needs no Sophister.
King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arme himself.
York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,
I am resolv'd for death and dignity.
Old Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.
War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again,
To keep thee from the Tempest of the field,
Old Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm,
Then any thou canst conjure up to day:
And that I'le write upon thy Burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy houses Badge.
War. Now by my Fathers badge, old Nevils Crest,
The rampant Bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'le wear aloft my Burgonet,
As on a Mountain top, the Cedar shews,
That keeps his leaves in spight of any storm,
Even so affright thee with the view thereof.
Old Clif. And from thy Burgonet I'le rend thy Bear,
And tread it underfoot with all contempt,
Despight the Bearard, that protects the Bear.
Yo. Clif. And so to Armes victorious noble Father,
To quell the Rebells, and their Complices.
Rich. Fie, Charity for shame, speak not in spight,
For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to night.
Yo. Clif. Foul stigmatick, that's more then thou canst tell.
Rich. If not in heaven, you'l surely sup in hell. Exeunt.

Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:
And if thou do'st not hide thee from the Bear,
Now when the angry Trumpet sounds alarum,
And dead mens cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford I say, come forth and fight with me,
Proud Northern Lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to armes.

Enter York.

War. How now my Noble Lord? What all a-foot?
York. The deadly handed Clifford slew my steed:
But match to match I have encountred him,
And made a prey for Carrion Kytes and Crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.
Yor. Hold Warwick: seek thee out some other chase,
For I my self must hunt this Deer to death.
War. Then nobly York, 'tis for a Crown thou fight'st:
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd. Exit War.
Clif. What seest thou in me York?
Why do'st thou pause?
York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.
Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem.
But that 'tis shewn ignobly, and in Treason.
York. So let it help me against thy sword,
As I in justice, and true right expresse it.
Clif. My soul and body on the action both.
York. A dreadfull day, addresse thee instantly.
Clif. La fin Corrone les oevres. Dies.
York. Thus War hath given thee peace, for thou art still,
Peace with his soul, heaven if it be thy will.

Enter young Clifford.

Clif. Shame and confusion all is on the rout,
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O War thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosomes of our part,
Hot Coals of Vengeance. Let no Souldiers flye.
He that is truly dedicate to War,
Hath no self-love: nor he that loves himself,
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance
The name of Valour. O let the vile world end,
And the premised Flames of the last day,
Knit earth and heaven together.
Now let the generall Trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities, and petty sounds
To cease. Was't thou ordained (O dear Father)
To lose thy youth in peace, and to atchieve
The Silver Livery of advised Age,
And in thy Reverence, and thy Chair-dayes, thus
To die in Ruffian battell? Even at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,
It shall be stony. York, not our old men spares:
No more will I their Babes, Tears Virginall,
Shall be to me, even as the Dew to Fire,
And Beauty, that the Tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath, be Oyle and Flax:
Henceforth, I will not have to do with pitty,
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbits will I cut it
As wilde Medea, young Abstirtis did.
In cruelty, will I seek out my Fame.
Come thou new ruine of old Cliffords house:
As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders:
But then, Æneas bare a living load;

Nothing

Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerset to fight.

Rich. So lie thou there:
For underneath an Ale-house paltry signe,
The Castle in S. Albans, Somerset
Hath made the Wizard famous in his death:
Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathfull still:
Priests pray for enemies, but Princes kill.
Fight. Excursions.

Enter King, Queen, and others.

Qu. Away my Lord, you are slow, for shame away.

King. Can we out-run the Heavens? Good Margaret stay.

Qu. What are you made of? You'll not fight nor flye:
Now is it manhood, wisdome, and defence,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but flye.
Alarum afar off.
If you be tane, we then should see the bottome
Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect)
We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,
And where this breach now in our fortunes made
May readily be stopt.

Enter Clifford.

Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy e're bid you flye:
But flye you must: Uncureable discomfite
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away for your relief, and we will live
To see their day, and them our Fortune give.
Away my Lord, away. Exeunt.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter York, Richard, Warwick, and Souldiers, with Drum and Colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That winter Lyon, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions, and all brush off Time:
And like a Gallant, in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with Occasion. This happy day
Is not it selfe, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My Noble Father:
Three times to day I hope him to his horse,
Three times bestri'd him: Thrice I led him off,
Perswaded him from any further act:
But still where danger was, still there I met him,
And like rich hangings in an homely house,
So was his will, in his old feeble body.
But Noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now by my Sword, well hast thou fought to day:
By'th'Masse so did we all. I thank you Richard.
God knows how long it is I have to live:
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to day
You have defended me from eminent death.
Well Lords, we have not got that which we have,
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing Nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them,
For (as I hear) the King is fled to London,
To call a present Court of Parliament.
Let us pursue him e're the Writs go forth.
What sayes Lord Warwick, shall we after them?

War. After them! nay before them if we can:
Now by my hand (Lords) 'twas a glorious day.
Saint Albans battell won by famous York,
Shall we be eterniz'd in all Age to come.
Sound Drum and Trumpets, and to London all,
And more such dayes as these, to us befall. Exeunt.

F I N I S.

The third Part of King HENRY the Sixth.

with the death of the Duke of YORK.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Alarum.

Enter Plantagenet, Edward, Norfolk, Mountague, Warwick, and Souldiers.

Warwick.

I Wonder how the King escap'd our hands?

Pl. While we pursu'd the Horsmen of the North,
He slily stole away, and left his men:
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose Warlike ears could never brook retreat,
Chear'd up the drooping Army, and himself.
Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-breast
Charg'd our main Battells Front: and breaking in,
Were by the Swords of Common Souldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Staffords Father, Duke of Buckingham,
Is either slain or wounded dangerous.
I cleft his Beaver with a down-right blow:
That this is true (Father) behold his bloud.

Mount. And Brother, here's the Earle of Wiltshires blood
Whom I encountred as the Battells joyn'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

Plan. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons:
But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Nor. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt.

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henries head.

Warw. And so do I, victorious Prince of York.
Before I see thee seated in the Throne,
Which now the House of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by Heaven, these eyes shall never close.
This is the Pallace of the fearfull King,
And this the Regall Seat: possesse it York,
For this is thine, and not King Henries Heirs.

Plant. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will,
For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you: he that flyes shall die.

Plant. Thanks gentle Norfolk, stay by me my Lords,
And Souldiers stay and lodge by me this Night.

They go up.

War. And when the King comes, offer him no violence,
Unlesse he seek to thrust you out perforce.

Plant. The Queen this day here holds her Parliament,
But little thinks we shall be of her counsell,
By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this House.

War. The bloudy Parliament shall this be call'd,
Unlesse Plantagenet, Duke of York, be King,
And bashfull Henry depos'd, whose Cowardize
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

Plant. Then leave me not, my Lords be resolute,
I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best,
The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
Dares stir a Wing, if Warwick shake his Bells.
I'le plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares:
Resolve thee Richard, claim the English Crown.

Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmerland, Exeter, and the rest.

Hen. My Lords, look where the sturdy Rebell sits,
Even in the Chair of State: belike he means,
Backt by the power of Warwick, that false Peer,
To aspire unto the Crown, and reign as King,
Earle of Northumberland, he slew thy Father,
And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both have vow'd revenge
On him, his sons, his favorites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, Heavens be reveng'd on me.

Clifford. The hope thereof, makes Clifford mourn in Steel.

West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down,
My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it.

Henry. Be patient, gentle Earle of Westmerland.

Clifford. Patience is for Poultroones, and such is he:
He durst not sit there had your Father liv'd.
My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament
Let us assayl the Family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, Cousin be it so.

Henry. Ah, know you not the City favours them,
And they have troops of Souldiers at their beck?

Westm. But when the Duke is slain, they'll quickly flye.

Henry. Far be the thought of this from Henries heart.
To make a shambles of the Parliament House.
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,
Shall be the War that Henry means to use:
Thou factious Duke of York, descend my Throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet,
I am thy Soveraign.

York. I am thine.

Exet. For shame come down, he made thee Duke of York.

York. It was my Inheritance, as the Earldome was.

Exet. Thy

Thy Father was a Traitor to the Crown.
War. Exeter thou art a Traitor to the Crown.
In following this usurping Henry.
Clifford. Whom should he follow, but his naturall King?
War. True Clifford, and that's Richard Duke of York.
Henry. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my Throne?
York. It must and shall be so, content thy self.
Warw. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King.
Westm. He is both King, and Duke of Lancaster,
And that the Lord of Westmerland shall maintain.
War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget,
That we are those which chas'd you from the field,
And slew your Fathers, and with Colours spread
March'd through the City to the Pallace Gates.
North. Yes Warwick, I remember it to my grief.
And by his Soul, thou and thy House shall rue it.
West. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy Sons,
Thy Kinsmen, and thy Friends, I'le have more lives
Then drops of bloud were in my Fathers Veins.
Cliff. Urge it no more, lest that instead of words
I send thee, Warwick, such a Messenger,
As shall revenge his death, before I stir.
Warw. Poor Clifford, how I scorn his worthlesse Threats.
Plant. Will you we shew our Title to the Crown?
If not, our Swords shall plead it in the field.
Henry. What Title hast thou Traitor to the Crown?
My Father was as thou art, Duke of York,
Thy Grandfather Roger Mortimer, Earle of March.
I am the Son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dolphin and the French to stoop,
And seiz'd upon their Towns and Provinces.
Warw. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
Henry. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I:
When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.
Rich. You are old enough now,
And yet me thinks you lose:
Father tear the Crown from the Usurpers Head.
Edward. Sweet Father do so, set it on your Head.
Mount. Good Brother,
As thou lov'st and honorest Armes,
Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.
Richard. Sound Drums and Trumpets, and the King will flye.
Plant. Sons peace.
Henry. Peace thou, and give King Henry leave to speak.
Warw. Plantagenet shall speak first: Hear him Lords,
And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him, shall not live.
Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my Kingly Throne,
Wherein my Grandsire and my Father sat?
No: first shall War unpeople this my Realm;
I, and their Colours often borne in France,
And now in England, to our hearts great sorrow,
Shall be my Winding-sheet. Why faint you Lords?
My Title's good, and better far then his.
Warw. But prove it Henry, and thou shalt be King.
Hen. Henry the Fourth by Conquest got the Crown.
Plant. 'Twas by rebellion against his King.
Hen. I know not what to say, my Title's weak:
Tell, me, may not a King adopt an Heir?
Plant. What then?
Plant. If he may, then am I lawfull King:
For Richard, in the view of many Lords,
Resign'd the Crown to Henry the Fourth,
Whose Heir my Father was, and I am his.
Plant. He rose against him, being his Soveraign,
And made him to resign his Crown perforce.
Warw. Suppose, my Lords, he did it unconstrain'd,
Think you 'twere prejudiciall to his Crown?
Exet. No: for he could not so resign his Crown,
But that the next Heir should succeed and reign.
Henry. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?
Exet. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.
Plant. Why whisper you, my Lords, and answer not?
Exet. My Conscience tells me he is lawfull King.
Henry. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the Claim thou lay'st,
Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.
Warw. Depos'd he shall be in despight of all.
Northumb. Thou art deceiv'd:
'Tis not thy Southern power
Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
Can set the Duke up in despight of me.
Cliff. King Henry, be thy Title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive;
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my Father.
Hen. Oh Clifford, how thy words revive my heart.
Plant. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy Crown:
What mutter you, or what conspire you Lords?
Warw. Do right unto this Princely Duke of York,
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And o're the Chair of State, where now he sits,
Write up his Title with usurping bloud.
He stamps with his foot, and the Souldiers shew themselves
Henry. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word,
Let me for this time reign as King.
Plant. Confirm the Crown to me, and to mine Heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.
Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet
Enjoy the Kingdome after my decease.
Clifford. What wrong is this unto the Prince, your Son?
War. What good is this to England, and himself?
Westm. Base, fearfull, and despairing Henry.
Cliff. How hast thou injur'd both thy self and us?
Westm. I cannot stay to hear these Articles.
Northumb. Nor I
Clifford. Come Cousin, let us tell the Queen these News..
West. Farewell faint-hearted and degenerate King,
In whose cold bloud no spark of honour bides.
North. Be thou a prey unto the House of York,
And die in Bands, for this unmanly deed.
Cliff. In dreadfull War may'st thou be overcome,
Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd.
Warw. Turn this way Henry, and regard them not.
Exeter. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.
Henry. Ah Exeter.
Warw. Why should you sigh my Lord?
Hen. Not for my self Lord Warwick, but my Son,
Whom I unnaturally shall dis-inherit
But be it as it may: I here entayle
The Crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever,
Conditionally, that here you take an Oath,
To cease this Civill War: and whil'st I live,

To

To honour me as thy King and Soveraign:
Neither by Treason nor Hostility,
To seek to put me down, and reign thy self.
Plant. This Oath I willingly take, and will perform.
War. Long live King Henry: Plantagenet embrace him.
Henry. And long live thou, & these thy forward Sons.
Plant. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.
Exet. Accurst be he that seeks to make them foes.

Sonet. Here they come down.

Plant. Farewell my gracious Lord, I'le to my Castle.
War. And I'le keep London with my Souldiers.
Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.
Mount. And I unto the Sea, from whence I came.
Hen. And I with grief and sorrow to the Court.

Enter the Queen.

Exet. Here comes the Queen,
Whose looks bewray her anger
I'le steal away.
Henry. Exeter, so will I.
Queen. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.
Hen. Be patient, gentle Queen, and I will stay.
Quee. Who can be patient in such extreames?
Ah wretched man, would I had di'd a Maid,
And never seen thee, never born thee Son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnaturall a Father.
Hath he deserv'd to lose his Birth-right thus?
Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourisht him, as I did with my blood;
Thou would'st have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather then made that savage Duke thine Heir,
And dis-inherited thine only Son.
Prin. Father, you cannot dis-inherit me:
If you be King, why should not I succeed?
Hen. Pardon me, Margaret, pardon me, sweet Son,
The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enforc't me.
Que. Enforc't thee? art thou King, and wilt be forc't?
I shame to hear thee speak: ah timorous Wretch,
Thou hast undone thy self, thy Son, and me,
And given unto the house of York such head,
As thou shalt raign but by their sufferance.
To entaile him and his Heirs unto the Crown,
What is it, but to make thy Sepulcher,
And creep into it far before thy time?
Warwick is Chancellour, and the Lord of Callice,
Stern Falconbridge commands the Narrow Seas,
The Duke is made Protector of the Realm,
And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling Lamb, invironed with Wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly Woman,
The Souldiers should have tos'd me on their Pikes,
Before I would have granted to that Act.
But thou preferr'st thy Life before thine honour.
And seeing thou do'st, I here divorce my self,
Both from thy Table, Henry, and thy Bed,
Untill that Act of Parliament be repealed.
Whereby my Son is dis-inherited.
The Northern Lords, that have forsworn thy Colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruine of the House of York.
Thus do I leave thee: Come Son, let's away,
Our Army is ready, come, we'll after them,
Henry. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.
Queen. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thee gone.
Hen. Gentle Son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?
Que. I, to be murther'd by his enemies.
Prin. When I return with victory from the field,
I'le see your Grace: till then I'le follow her.
Quee. Come, Son, away, we may not linger thus.
Hen. Poor Queen,
How love to me, and to her Son,
Hath made her break out into termes of Rage.
Reveng'd may she be on that hatefull Duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my Crown, and like an empty Eagle,
Tyre on the Flesh of me, and of my Son.
The losse of those three Lords torments my heart:
I'le write unto them, and entreat them fair;
Come, Cousin, you shall be the Messenger.
Exet. And I hope, shall reconcile them all. Exit.

Enter Richard, Edward, and Mountague.

Richard. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.
Edw. No, I can better play the Orator.
Moun. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter the Duke of York.

Yor. Why, how now Sons and Brothers, at a strife?
What is your Quarrell? how began it first?
Edw. No Quarrell, but a slight Contention.
Yor. About what?
Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and us,
The Crown of England, Father, which is yours.
Yor. Mine, Boy? not untill King Henry be dead.
Rich. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.
Edw. Now you are Heir, therefore enjoy it now:
By giving the House of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will out-run you, Father, in the end.
Yor. I took an Oath, that he should quietly reign.
Edw. But for a Kingdome any Oath may be broken:
I would break thousand Oathes to reign one year.
Richard. No: God forbid, your Grace should be forsworn.
Yor. I shall be, if I claim by open War.
Richard. I'le prove the contrary, if you'l hear me speak.
Yor. Thou canst not, Son, 'tis impossible.
Rich. An Oath is of no moment, being not took
Before a true and lawfull Magistrate,
That hath authority over him that sweares.
Henry had none, but did usurp the place.
Then seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore to Armes: and, Father, do but think,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a Crown,
Within whose Circuit is Elizium,
And all that Poets fain of Blisse and Joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Untill the White Rose that I wear, be dy'd
Even in the luke-warm blood of Henry's heart.
Yor. Richard, enough: I will be King, or die.
Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this Enterprise.

Thou, Richard, ſhalt to the Duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.
You, Edward, ſhall unto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentiſh-men will willingly riſe.
In them I truſt; for they are Souldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberall, full of ſpirit.
While you are thus employ'd, what reſteth more,
But that I ſeek occaſion how to riſe?
And yet the King not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the Houſe of Lancaſter.

Enter Gabriel.

But ſtay, what Newes? why comm'ſt thou in ſuch poſte?

Gabriel. The Queen,
With all the Northern Earls and Lords,
Intend here to beſiege you in your Caſtle.
She is hard by, with twenty thouſand men:
And therefore fortifie your hold, my Lord.

Yor. I, with my Sword.
What? think'ſt thou, that we fear them?
Edward and Richard, you ſhall ſtay with me,
My Brother Mountague ſhall poſte to London.
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the reſt;
Whom we have left Protectors of the King,
With powerfull Policy ſtrengthen themſelves,
And truſt not ſimple Henry, nor his Oathes.

Monn. Brother, I go: I'le win them, fear it not.
And thus moſt humbly I do take my leave.

Exit Mountague.

Enter Mortimer, and his Brother.

Yor. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine Unckles,
You are come to Sandall in a happy hour.
The Army of the Queen means to beſiege us.

John. She ſhall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

Yor. What, with five thouſand men?

Rich. I, with five hundred, Father, for a need.
A Woman's Generall: what ſhould we fear?

A March afar off.

Edw. I hear their Drummes:
Let's ſet our men in order,
And iſſue forth, and bid them Battell ſtraight.

Yor. Five men to twenty: though the oddes be great,
I doubt not, Unckle, of our Victory.
Many a Battell have I won in France,
When as the Enemy hath been ten to one:
Why ſhould I not now have the like ſucceſſe?

Alarum. Exit.

Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rutl. Ah, whether ſhall I flye, to ſcape their hands?
Ah, Tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter Clifford.

Clifford. Chaplain, away, thy Prieſthood ſaves thy life,
As for the Brat of this accurſed Duke,
Whoſe Father ſlew my Father, he ſhall die.

Tutor. And I, my Lord, will bear him company.

Cliff. Souldiers, away with him.

Tutor. Ah Clifford, murther not this innocent Child,
Leaſt thou be hated both of God and Man. Exit.

Clifford. How now? is he dead already?
Or is it fear that makes him cloſe his eyes?
I'le open them.

Rutl. So looks the pent-up Lyon o're the wretch,
That trembles under his devouring Paws:
And ſo he walks, inſulting o're his Prey,
And ſo he comes to rend his Limbs aſunder.
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy Sword,
And not with ſuch a cruell threatning Look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me ſpeak, before I die:
I am too mean a ſubject for thy wrath,
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Cliff. In vain thou ſpeak'ſt, poor Boy:
My Fathers blood hath ſtopt the paſſage
Where thy words ſhould enter.

Rutl. Then let my Fathers blood open it again,
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Cli. Had I thy Brethren here, their lives and thine
Were not revenge ſufficient for me:
No, if I digg'd up thy fore-fathers Graves,
And hung their rotten Coffins up in Chains,
It could not ſlake mine ire, nor eaſe my heart.
The ſight of any of the Houſe of York,
Is as a Fury to torment my Soul:
And till I root out their accurſed Line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore----

Rutl. Oh let me pray, before I take my death:
To thee I pray; ſweet Clifford, pitty me.

Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapiers point affoords.

Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou ſlay me?

Clif. Thy Father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.
Thou haſt one Son, for his ſake pitty me,
Leaſt in revenge thereof, ſith God is juſt,
He be as miſerably ſlain as I.
Ah, let me live in Priſon all my dayes,
And when I give occaſion of offence,
Then let me die, for now thou haſt no cauſe.

Cliff. No cauſe? thy Father ſlew my Father: therefore die.

Rutl. Dii faciant laudis ſumma ſit iſta tua.

Cli. Plantagenet, I come Plantagenet:
And this thy Sons blood cleaving to my Blade,
Shall ruſt upon my Weapon, till thy blood
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both. Exit.

Alarum. Enter Richard, Duke of York.

Yor. The Army of the Queen hath got the field:
My Unckles both are ſlain in reſcuing me,
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back, and flye, like Ships before the wind,
Or Lambs purſu'd by hunger-ſtarved Wolves.
My Sons, God knows what hath bechanced them:
But this I know, they have demean'd themſelves
Like men born to Renown, by Life or Death.
Three times did Richard make a Lane to me,
And thrice cri'd, Courage Father, fight it out:
And full as oft came Edward to my ſide,
With Purple Faulchion, painted to the Hilt,
In blood of thoſe that had encountred him:
And when the hardieſt Warriours did retire,
Richard cri'd, Charge, and give no foot of ground,
And cri'd, A Crown, or elſe a glorious Tombe,

A Scepter or an Earthly Sepulcher.
With this we charg'd again: but out alas,
We bodg'd again: as I have seen a Swan
With bootleſſe labour ſwim againſt the Tide,
And ſpend her ſtrength with over-matching waves.
A ſhort alarum within.
Ah heark, the fatall followers do purſue,
And I am faint, and cannot flye their fury.
And were I ſtrong, I would not ſhun their fury.
The Sands are numbred, that make up my life,
Here muſt I ſtay, and here my life muſt end.

Enter the Queen, Clifford, Northumberland, the young Prince, and Souldiers

Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchleſſe fury to more rage:
I am your But, and I abide your ſhot.
North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clif. I, to ſuch mercy, as his ruthleſſe Arme
With down-right payment, ſhew'd unto my Father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his Carre,
And made an Evening at the Noon-tide Prick.
Yor. My aſhes, as the Phœnix may bring forth
A Bird, that will revenge upon you all:
And in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning what ere you can afflict me with.
Why come you not? what? multitudes, and fear?
Clif. So Cowards fight, when they can flye no further,
So Doves do peck the Falcons piercing Tallons,
So deſperate Thieves, all hopeleſſe of their Lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainſt the Officers.
Yor. Oh Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o'r-run my former time:
And if thou canſt, for bluſhing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that ſlanders him with Cowardice,
Whoſe frown hath made thee faint and flye ere this.
Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckler with thee blows twice two for one.
Quee. Hold, valiant Clifford, for a thouſand cauſes
I would prolong a while the Traytors Life:
Wrath makes him deaf; ſpeak thou Northumberland.
North. Hold, Clifford, do not honour him ſo much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
What valour were it, when a Curre doth grin,
For one to thruſt his Hand between his Teeth,
When he might ſpurn him with his foot away?
It is VVars prize, to take all vantages,
And ten to one, is no impeach of Valour.
Clifford. I, I, ſo ſtrives the Woodcock with the Gynne.
Northumberland. So doth the Cony ſtruggle in the Net.
Yor. So triumph Thieves upon their conquer'd Booty,
So true men yield, with Robbers ſo o'r-matcht.
North. What would your Grace have done unto him now?
Quee. Brave Warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him ſtand upon this Mole-hill here,
That caught at Mountains with out-ſtretched Armes,
Yet parted but the ſhadow with his hand.
What, was it you that would be Englands King?
Was't you that revell'd in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Deſcent?
Where are your meſſe of Sons to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the luſty George?
And where's that valiant Crook-back Prodigy,
Dicky, your Boy, that with his grumbling voyce
Was wont to cheer his Dad in Mutinies?
Or with the reſt, where is your Darling, Rutland?
Look York, I ſtain'd this Napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his Rapiers point,
Made iſſue from the boſome of the Boy,
And if thine eyes can water for his Death,
I give thee this to dry thy Cheeks with all.
Alas poor York, but that I hate thee deadly;
I ſhould lament thy miſerable ſtate.
I prethee grieve, to make me merry, York.
What, hath thy fiery heart ſo parcht thine entrails,
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's Death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou ſhould'ſt be mad:
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may ſing and dance.
Thou would'ſt be fee'd, I ſee, to make me ſport:
York cannot ſpeak, unleſſe he wear a Crown.
A Crown for York; and Lords bow low to him:
Hold you his hands, whileſt I do ſet it on.
I marry, Sir, now looks he like a King:
I, this is he that took King Henry's Chair,
And this is he was his adopted Heir.
But how is it, that great Plantagenet
Is Crown'd ſo ſoon, and broke his ſolemn Oath?
As I bethink me, yon ſhould not be King,
Till our King Henry had ſhook hands with Death.
And will you pale your head in Henry's Glory,
And rob his Temples of the Diadem,
Now in his Life againſt your holy Oath?
Oh 'tis a fault too too unpardonable.
Off with the Crown, and with the Crown, his Head,
And whil'ſt we breathe take time to do him dead.
Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers ſake.
Queen. Nay ſtay, let's hear the Orizons he makes.
York. She-Wolf of France,
But worſe then Wolves of France,
Whoſe Tongue more poyſons then the Adders Tooth!
How ill-beſeeming is it in thy Sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian Trull,
Upon their Woes, whom Fortune captivates?
But that thy Face is Vizard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with uſe of evil deeds,
I would aſſay, proud Queen, to make thee bluſh.
To tell thee whence thou cam'ſt, of whom deriv'd,
Were ſhame enough to ſhame thee,
Wert thou not ſhameleſſe,
Thy Father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jeruſalem,
Yet not ſo wealthy as an Engliſh Yeoman.
Hath that poor Monarch taught thee to inſult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud Queen,
Unleſſe the Adage muſt be vereſi'd,
That Beggars mounted, run their Horſe to death.
'Tis Beauty that doth oft make Women proud,
But God he knows, thy ſhare thereof is ſmall.
'Tis Virtue that doth make them moſt admir'd,
The contrary doth make thee wondred at.
'Tis Government that makes them ſeem Divine,
The want thereof makes thee abominable.
Thou art as oppoſite to every good,
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the South to the Septentrion.
Oh Tigres Heart, wrapt in a Womans Hide,

How could it thou drain the Life-blood of the Child,
To bid the Father wipe his eyes withall,
And yet be seen to bear a Womans face?
Women are soft, mild, pittifull, and flexible;
Thou ſtern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorſeleſſe,
Bidſt thou me rage? why now thou haſt thy wiſh.
Would'ſt have me weep? why now thou haſt thy will.
For raging wind blows up inceſſant ſhowers,
And when the Rage allayes, the Rain begins.
Theſe Teares are my ſweet Rutlands Obſequies,
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainſt thee, fell Clifford, and thee, falſe French-woman.
Northumb. Beſhrew me, but his paſſions move me ſo,
That hardly can I check mine eyes from Teares.
York. That face of his,
The hungry Canniballs would not have toucht,
Would not have ſtain'd the Roſes juſt with blood:
But you are more inhumane, more inexorable,
Oh, ten times more then Tygers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthleſſe Queen, a hapleſſe Fathers teares:
This Cloth thou dip'dſt in blood of my ſweet Boy,
And I with teares do waſh the blood away.
Keep thou the Napkin, and go boaſt of this,
And if thou tell'ſt the heavy ſtory right,
Upon my Soul, the hearers will ſhed Teares:
Yea, even my Foes will ſhed faſt-falling Teares,
And ſay, alaſs, it was a pittious deed.
There, take the Crown, and with the Crown, my Curſe.
And in thy need, ſuch comfort come to thee,
As now I reap at thy too cruell hand.
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the World,
My Soul to Heaven, my Blood upon your Heads.
North. Had he been ſlaughter-man to all my Kin,
I ſhould not for my Life but weep with him,
To ſee how inly ſorrow gripes his Soul.
Quee. What, weeping ripe, my Lord Northumberland?
Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting Teares.
Clifford. Here's for my Oath, here's for my Fathers Death.
Quee. And here's to right our gentle-hearted King.
York. Open thy Gate of mercy, gracious God.
My Soul flyes through theſe wounds, to ſeek out thee.
Quee. Off with his Head, and ſet it on York Gates,
So York may over-look the Town of York.

Exeunt.

A March. Enter Edward, Richard, and their power.

Edw. I wonder how our Princely Father ſcap't:
Or whether he be ſcap't away, or no,
From Cliffords and Northumberlands purſuit?
Had he been tane, we ſhould have heard the newes:
Had he been ſlian, we ſhould have heard the newes:
Or had he ſcap't, methinks we ſhould have heard
The happy tidings of his good eſcape.
How fares my Brother? why is he ſo ſad?
Rich. I cannot joy until I be reſolv'd
Where our right valiant Father is become.
I ſaw him in the Battell range about,
And watcht him how he ſingled Clifford forth,
Me thought he bore him in the thickeſt troup,
As doth a Lyon in a Heard of Neat,
Or as a Bear encompaſs'd round with Dogs:
Who having pincht a few, and made them cry,
The reſt ſtand all aloof, and bark at him.
So far'd our Father with his Enemies,
So fled his Enemies, my Warlike Father:
Me thinks 'tis prize enough to be his Son.
See how the Morning opesher golden Gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious Sun.
How well reſembles it the prime of Youth,
Trimm'd like a Yonker, prancing to his Love?
Ed. Dazle mine eyes, or do I ſee three Suns?
Rich. Three glorious Suns, each one a perfect Sun,
Not ſeparated with the racking Clouds,
But ſever'd in a pale clear-ſhining skie.
See, ſee they joyn, embrace, and ſeem to kiſſe,
As if they vow'd ſome League inviolable.
Now are they but one Lamp, one Light, one Sun:
In this, the Heaven figures ſome event.
Edw. 'Tis wondrous ſtrange,
The like yet never heard of.
I think it cites us (Brother) to the field,
That we, the Sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should notwithſtanding joyn our Lights together,
And over-ſhine the Earth, as this the World.
What e're it bodes, hence-forward will I bear
Upon my Target three fair ſhining Suns.
Rich. Nay, bear three Daughters:
By your leave, I ſpeake it,
You love the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter one blowing.

But what art thou, whoſe heavy Looks fore-tell
Some dreadfull ſtory hanging on thy Tongue?
Meſſe. Ah, one that was a wofull looker on,
When as the Noble Duke of York was ſlain,
Your Princely Father, and my loving Lord.
Edward. Oh ſpeak no more, for I have heard too much.
Rich. Say how he di'd, for I will hear it all.
Meſſ. Environed he was with many foes,
And ſtood againſt them, as the hope of Troy
Againſt the Greeks, that would have entred Troy.
But Hercules himſelf muſt yield to odds:
And many ſtroaks, though with a little Axe,
Hewes down and fells the hardeſt-timber'd Oake.
By many hands your Father was ſubdu'd,
But only ſlaughter'd by the irefull Arme
Of un-relenting Clifford, and the Queen:
Who crown'd the gracious Duke in high deſpight,
Laugh'd in his face: and when with grief he wept,
The ruthleſſe Queen gave him, to dry his Cheek,
A Napkin, ſteeped in the harmleſſe blood
Of ſweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford ſlain:
And after many ſcorns, many foul taunts,
They took his Head, and on the Gates of York
They ſet the ſame, and there it doth remain,
The ſaddeſt ſpectacle that e're I view'd.
Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our Prop to lean upon,
Now thou art gone, we have no Staffe, no Stay.
Oh Clifford, boyſt'rous Clifford, thou haſt ſlain
The flower of Europe, for his Chevalry,
And treacherouſly haſt thou vanquiſht him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquiſht thee.
Now my Souls Palace is become a Priſon:
Ah, would ſhe break from hence, that this my body

Might

Might in the ground be clofed up in reft:
For never henceforth fhall I joy again:
Never, oh never fhall I fee more joy.
Rich. I cannot weep: for all my bodies moifture
Scarce ferves to quench my Furnace-burning heart:
Nor can my tongue unload my hearts great burthen,
For felf-fame winde that I fhould fpeak withall,
Is kindling coales that fires up all my breft,
And burns me up with flames, that teares would quench.
To weep, is to make leffe the depth of grief:
Teares then for Babes; Blowes, and Revenge for me.
Richard, I bear thy name, I'le venge thy Death,
Or die renowned by attempting it.
Ed. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee:
His Dukedome, and his Chair with me is left.
Rich. Nay, if thou be that Princely Eagles Bird,
Shew thy defcent by gazing 'gainft the Sun:
For Chair and Dukedome, Throne and Kingdome fay,
Either that is thine, or elfe thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick, Marqueffe Mountacute, and their Army.

Warwick. How now, fair Lords? what fare? what newes abroad?
Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we fhould recount
Our balefull newes, and at each words deliverance
Stab Poniards in our flefh, till all were told;
The words would adde more anguifh then the wounds.
O, valiant Lord, the Duke of York is flain.
Edw. O, Warwick, Warwick, that Plantagenet,
Which held thee dearly as his Souls Redemption,
Is by the ftern Lord Clifford done to death.
War. Ten dayes ago I drown'd thefe newes in teares,
And now to adde more meafure to your woes,
I come to tell you things fith then befaln.
After the bloody Fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave Father breath'd his lateft gasp,
Tidings, as fwiftly as the Poffs could run,
Were brought me of your loffe, and his depart.
I then in London, keeper of the King,
Muffer'd my Souldiers, gathered flocks of Friends,
Marcht toward S. Albans, to intercept the Queen,
Bearing the King in my behalf along:
For by my Scouts, I was advertifed
That fhe was comming with a full intent
To dafh our late Decree in Parliament,
Touching King Henry's Oath, and your Succeffion:
Short Tale to make, we at S. Albans met,
Our Battells joyn'd, and both fides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldneffe of the King,
Who look'd full gently on his Warlike Queen,
That robb'd my Souldiers of their heated Spleen.
Or whether 'twas report of her fucceffe,
Or more then common fear of Cliffords Rigour,
Who thunders to his Captives, Blood and Death,
I cannot judge: but to conclude with truth,
Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went:
Our Souldiers like the Night-Owles lazy flight,
Or like a lazy Threfher with a Flayle,
Fell gently down, as if they ftruck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with juftice of our Cauſe.
With promife of high pay, and great Reward:
But all in vain, they had no heart to fight,
And we (in them) no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the King unto the Queen,
Lord George, your Brother Norfolk, and my felf,
In hafte, poft-hafte, are come to joyn with you:
For in the Marches here we heard you were,
Making another Head, to fight again.
Ed. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?
War. Some fix miles off the Duke is with the Soldiers;
And for your Brother he was lately fent
From your kind Aunt, Dutcheffe of Burgundy,
With aid of Souldiers to this needfull Warre.
Rich. 'Twas oddes belike, when valiant Warwick fled;
Oft have I heard his praifes in purfuit,
But ne're till now, his fcandall of Retire.
War. Nor now my fcandall, Richard, doft thou hear:
For thou fhalt know this ftrong right hand of mine,
Can pluck the Diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awfull Scepter from his Fift,
Were he as famous, and as bold in warre,
As he is fam'd for mildneffe, peace, and prayer.
Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick, blame me not,
'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me fpeak.
But in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our Coats of Steele,
And wrap our Bodies in black mourning Gowns,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our Beads?
Or fhall we on the Helmets of our foes,
Tell our Devotion with revengefull Armes?
If for the laft, fay I, and to it Lords.
War. Why therefore Warwick came to feek you out,
And therefore comes my Brother Mountague:
Attend me Lords, the proud infulting Queen,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds,
Have wrought the eafie-melting King, like Wax,
He fwore confent to your fucceffion,
His Oath enrolled in the Parliament.
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To fruftrate both his Oath, and what befide
May make againft the Houfe of Lancaſter.
Their power (I think) is thirty thoufand ftrong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and my felf,
With all the friends that thou brave Earl of March,
Among'ft the loving Welch-men canft procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thoufand,
Why Via, to London will we march,
And once again beftride our foaming Steeds,
And once again cry, Charge upon our foes,
But never once again turn back and flye.
Rich. I, now me thinks I hear great Warwick fpeak;
Ne're may he live to fee a fun-fhine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwick bid him ftay.
Ed. Lord Warwick, on thy fhoulder will I lean,
And when thou fail'ft (as God forbid the hour)
Muft Edward fall, which perill heaven forfend.
War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:
The next Degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England fhalt thou be proclaim'd
In every Burrough as we paffe along,
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, valiant Richard Mountague:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renown,
But found the Trumpets, and about our Task.
Rich. Then, Clifford, wear thy heart as hard as fteele,
As thou haft fhewn it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.
Edw. Then ftrike up Drums, God and S. George for us.

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? what newes?

Mes. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,
The Queen is comming with a puissant Hoste,
And craves your company, for speedy counsell.

War. Why then it sorts, brave Warriors let's away.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter the King, the Queen, Clifford, Northumberland and young Prince, with Drumme and Trumpets.

Quee. Welcome, my Lord, to this brave Town of York,
Yonder's the head of that Arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompast with your Crown.
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my Lord.

K. I, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wrack,
To see this sight, it irks my very soul:
With-hold revenge (dear God) 'tis not my fault,
Nor wittingly have I infring'd my Vow.

Clif. My gracious Liege, this too much lenity
And harmfull pitty must be laid aside:
To whom do Lyons cast their gentle looks?
Not to the Beast that would usurp their Den.
Whose hand is that the Forrest Bear doth lick?
Not his that spoyles her young before her face.
Who scapes the lurking Serpents mortall sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest Worm will turn, being troden on,
And Doves will peck in safeguard of their Brood.
Ambitious York did levell at thy Crown,
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry Browes.
He but a Duke, would have his Son a King,
And raise his issue like a loving Sire,
Thou being a King, blest with a goodly Son,
Didst yield consent to dis-inherit him:
Which argued thee a most unloving Father.
Unreasonable Creatures feed their young,
And though mans face be fearfull to their eyes,
Yet in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them even with those wings.
Which sometime they have us'd with fearfull flight,
Make Warre with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their youngs defence?
For shame, my Liege, make them your President:
Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy
Should lose his Birth-right by his Fathers fault,
And long hereafter say unto his Childe,
What my great Grandfather, and my Grandsire got,
My careless Father fondly gave away.
Ah, what a shame were this? look on the Boy,
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successefull Fortune steele thy melting heart,
To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

King. Full well hath Clifford plaid the Orator,
Inferring arguments of mighty force:
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear,
That things ill got, had ever bad successe.
And happy always was it for that Son,
Whose Father for his hoording went to hell:
I'le leave my Son my virtuous deeds behinde,
And would my Father had left me no more:
For all the rest is held at such a Rate,
As brings a thousand fold more care to keep,
Then in possession any jot of pleasure.
Ah Cousin York, would thy best friends did know,
How it doth grieve me that thy head is here.

Quee. My Lord, cheer up your spirits, our foes are nigh,
And this soft courage makes your Followers faint:
You promist Knighthood to our forward Son,
Unsheath your sword, and dub him presently.
Edward, kneele down.

King. Edward Plantagenet, arise a Knight,
And learn this Lesson, Draw thy Sword in right.

Prin. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leave,
I'le draw it as apparant to the Crown,
And in that Quarrell use it to the death.

Clif. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royall Commanders, be in readinesse,
For with a Band of thirty thousand men,
Comes Warwick backing of the Duke of York,
And in the Towns as they do march along,
Proclaimes him King, and many flye to him,
Darraign your Battell, they are at hand.

Clif. I would your Highnesse would depart the field,
The Queen hath best successe when you are absent.

Qu. I good my Lord, and leave us to our fortune.

King. Why, that's my fortune too, therefore I'le stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prin. My Royall Father, cheer these Noble Lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence:
Unsheath your sword, good Father: cry S. George.

March. Enter Edward, Warwick, Richard, Clarence, Norfolk, Mountague, and Souldiers.

Ed. Now perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace?
And set thy Diadem upon my head?
Or bide the mortall fortune of the field.

Qu. Go rate thy Minions, proud insulting Boy,
Becomes it thee to be thus bold in termes,
Before thy Soveraign, and thy lawfull King?

Ed. I am his King, and he should bow his knee;
I was adopted Heir by his consent.
Since when, his Oath is broke: for as I hear,
You that are King, though he do wear the Crown,
Have caus'd him by new Act of Parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own Son in.

Clif. And reason too:
Who should succeed the Father, but the Son?

Rich. Are you there, Butcher? O, I cannot speak.

Clif. I Crook back, here I stand to answer thee,
Or any he, the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Clif. I, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For Gods sake, Lords, give signall to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry,
Wilt thou yield the Crown? (you speak?

Quee. Why how now, long-tongu'd Warwick, dare
When you and I met at S. Albans last,
Your legges did better service then your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to flye, and now 'tis thine;

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

Nor. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently,
Break off the parley, for scarce I can refrain
The execution of my big-swoln heart
Upon that Clifford, that cruell Child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy Father, call'st thou him a Child?

Rich.

Rich. I like a Dastard, and a treacherous Coward,
As thou didst kill our tender Brother Rutland,
But ere Sun set, I'le make thee curse the deed.
King. Have done with words (my Lords) and hear me speak.
Qu. Defie them then, or else hold close thy lips.
King. I prethee give no limits to my Tongue,
I am a King, and priviledg'd to speak.
Clif. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here,
Cannot be cur'd by words, therefore be still.
Rich. Then, Executioner, unsheath thy sword:
By him that made us all, I am resolv'd,
That Clifford's Manhood lyes upon his tongue.
Ed. Say Henry, shall I have my right, or no:
A thousand men have broke their Fasts to day,
That ne're shall dine, unless thou yield the Crown.
War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head.
For York in justice puts his Armour on.
Pr. Ed. If that be right, which Warwick sayes is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.
War. VVho ever got thee, there thy Mother stands,
For well I wot, thou hast thy Mothers tongue.
Qu. But thou art neither like thy Sire nor Damme,
But like a foul misshapen Stigmatick,
Mark'd by the Destinies to be avoided,
As venome Toads, or Lizards dreadfull stings.
Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt,
VVhose Father beares the Title of a King,
(As if a Channell should be call'd the Sea)
Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart.
Ed. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand Crowns,
To make this shamelesse Callet know her self.
Hellen of Greece was fairer farre then thou,
Although thy Husband may be Menelaus;
And ne're was Agamemnon's Brother wrong'd
By that false woman, as this King by thee.
His Father revell'd in th heart of France,
And tam'd the King, and made the Dolphin stoop:
And had he match'd according to his State,
He might have kept that glory to this day.
But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poor Sire with his Bridall day;
Even then that Sun-shine brew'd a shower for him,
That washt his Fathers fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd Sedition on his Crown at home:
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy Pride?
Hadst thou been meek, our Title still had slept,
And we in pitty of the Gentle King,
Had slipt our Claim untill another Age.
Cla. But when we saw, our Sunshine made thy Spring,
And that thy Summer bred us no encrease,
VVe set the Axe to thy usurping Root:
And though the edge hath something hit our selves,
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
VVe'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,
Or bath'd thy growing, with our heated bloods.
Ed. And in this resolution, I defie thee,
Not willing any longer Conference,
Since thou deni'dst the gentle King to speak.
Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours wave,
And either Victory, or else a Grave.
Qu. Stay, Edward.
Ed. No, wrangling VVoman, we'll no longer stay,
These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.
Exeunt omnes.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Fore-spent with toyle, as Runners with a Race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe:
For strokes receiv'd, and many blowes repaid,
Have robb'd my strong knit sinewes of their strength,
And spight of spight, needs must I rest a while.

Enter Edward running.

Ed. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death,
For this world frowns, and Edward's Sun is clouded.
War. How now, my Lord, what hap? what hope of good?

Enter Clarence.

Cla. Our hap is losse, our hope but sad despaire,
Our ranks are broke, and ruine follows us.
What counsell give you? whether shall we flye?
Ed. Bootlesse is flight, they follow us with wings,
And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwick, why hast thow withdrawn thy self?
Thy Brothers blood the thirsty Earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the steelly point of Cliffords Launce:
And in the very pangs of death he cri'd,
Like to a dismall Clangor heard from farre,
Warwick, revenge; Brother, revenge my death.
So underneath the belly of their Steeds,
That stain'd their Fetlocks in his smoaking blood,
The Noble Gentleman gave up the ghost.
War. Then let the Earth be drunken with our blood:
I'le kill my Horse because I will not flye:
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the Foe doth rage,
And look upon, as if the Tragedy
Were plaid in jest, by counterfeiting Actors.
Here on my knee, I vow to God above,
I'le never pawse again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.
Ed. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine,
And in this vow do chain my soul to thine.
And ere my knee rise from the Earths cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up, and plucker down of Kings,
Beseech thee (if with thy will it stands)
That to my Foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinfull soule.
Now Lords, take leave untill we meet again,
Where e're it be, in heaven, or in the earth.
Rich. Brother,
Give me thy hand, and gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary armes:
I that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That Winter should cut off our Spring-time so.
War. Away, away:
Once more, sweet Lords, farewell.
Cla. Yet let us altogether to our Troops,
And give them leave to flye that will not stay:
And call them Pillars that will stand to us:
And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As Victors wear at the Olympian Games.
This may plant Courage in their quailing breasts,
For yet is hope of Life and Victory:

Fore-

Fore-flow no longer, make we hence amain. Exeunt.

Excurſions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now Clifford, I have ſingled thee alone,
Suppoſe this arme is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland, both bound to revenge,
Wert thou inviron'd with a Brazen wall.

Clif. Now Richard, I am with thee here alone,
This is the hand that ſtabb'd thy Father York,
And this the hand that ſlew thy Brother Rutland,
And here's the heart, that triumphs in their death,
And cheeres theſe hands that ſlew thy Sire and Brother,
To execute the like upon thy ſelf,
And ſo have at thee.

They fight, Warwick comes, Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay Warwick, ſingle out ſome other Chace,
For I my ſelf will hunt this Wolf to death. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter King Henry alone.

Hen. This Battell fares like to the mornings Warre,
When dying Clouds contend with growing Light,
What time the Shepheard blowing of his nailes,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now ſwayes it this way, like a mighty Sea,
Forc'd by the Tide to combat with the Wind:
Now ſwayes it that way, like the ſelf-ſame Sea,
Forc'd to retire by fury of the Winde.
Sometime, the Flood prevails; and then the Winde:
Now, one the better, then another beſt;
Both tugging to be Victors, breſt to breſt:
Yet neither Conqueror, nor conquered.
So is the equall poize of this fell Warre.
Here on this Mole-hill will I ſit me down,
To whom God will, there be the victory:
For Margaret my Queen, and Clifford too
Have chid me from the Battell; Swearing both,
They proſper beſt of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead, if Gods good will were ſo:
For what is in this world, but grief and woe.
Oh God! me thinks it were a happy life,
To be no better then a homely Swain,
To ſit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out Dialls queintly, point by point,
Thereby to ſee the Minutes how they run:
How many makes the Hour full compleat,
How many houres bring about the day,
How many dayes will finiſh up the year,
How many yeares a mortall Man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the Times:
So many houres muſt I tend my Flock;
So many houres muſt I take my reſt:
So many houres muſt I contemplate:
So many houres muſt I ſport my ſelf:
So many dayes my Ewes have been with young:
So many dayes ere the poor Fools will Ean:
So many yeares ere I ſhall ſheer the Fleece:
So minutes, houres, dayes, moneths, and yeares,
Paſt over to the end they were created,
Would bring white haires unto a quiet Grave.
Ah! what a life were this? how ſweet, how lovely?
Gives not the Haw-thorn buſh a ſweeter ſhade
To Shepheards, looking on their ſilly ſheep,
Then doth a rich embroider'd Canopy
To Kings, that fear their Subjects treachery?
Oh yes, it doth, a thouſand fold it doth.
And to conclude, the Shepheards homely Curds,
His cold thin drink out of his Leather Bottle,
His wonted ſleep, under a freſh Trees ſhade,
All which ſecure, and ſweetly he enjoyes,
Is farre beyond a Princes Delicates:
His Viands ſparkling in a Golden Cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Miſtruſt, and Treaſons waits on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath kill'd his Father at one door, and a Father that hath kill'd his Son at another door.

Son. Ill blowes the winde that profits no body,
This man whom hand to hand I ſlew in fight,
May be poſſeſſed with ſome ſtore of Crowns,
And I that (haply) take them from him now,
May yet (ere night) yield both my life and them
To ſome man elſe, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? Oh God! it is my Fathers face,
Whom in this Conflict, I (unwares) have kill'd:
Oh heavy times! begetting ſuch events.
From London, by the King was I preſt forth,
My Father being the Earl of Warwick's Man,
Came on the part of York; preſt by his Maſter:
And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him.
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did:
And pardon, Father, for I knew not thee.
My teares ſhall wipe away theſe bloody marks:
And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

King. O pittious ſpectacle! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons warre, and Battell for their Dennes,
Poor harmleſſe Lambs abide their enmity.
Weep, wretched man, I'le aid thee Tear for Tear,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Civil Warre,
Be blinde with teares, and break o're-charg'd with grief.

Enter Father, bearing of his Son.

Fa. Thou that ſo ſtoutly haſt reſiſted me,
Give me thy Gold, if thou haſt any Gold:
For I have bought it with an hundred blowes.
But let me ſee: is this our foe-man's face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine onely Son.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye; ſee, ſee, what ſhowers ariſe,
Blown with the windy Tempeſt of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kills mine eye, and heart.
O pitty God, this miſerable Age!
What ſtratagems? how fell? how butcherly?
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnaturall,
This deadly quarrell daily doth beget?
O Boy! thy Father gave thee life too ſoon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

King. Woe above woe: grief, more then common grief;
O that my death would ſtay theſe ruefull deeds:
O pitty, pitty, gentle heaven, pitty.
The Red Roſe and the White are on his face,
The fatall Colours of our ſtriving Houſes:
The one his purple blood right well reſembles,
The other his pale Cheeks (me thinks) preſenteth:
Wither one Roſe, and let the other flouriſh:
If you contend, a thouſand lives muſt wither.

Son. How will my Mother, for a Father's death
Take on with me, and ne're be ſatisfi'd?

Fa. How will my Wife, for ſlaughter of my Son,
Shed ſeas of Teares, and ne're be ſatisfi'd?

King. How will the Country, for the wofull chances,

Mis-think

Me-think the King, and not be satisfied?
Son. Was ever Son so rew'd a Fathers death?
Fath. Was ever Father so bemoan'd his Son?
Hen. Was ever King so griev'd for Subjects woe?
Much is your sorrow; mine, ten times so much.
Son. I'le bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.
Fath. These armes of mine shall be thy winding-sheet:
My heart (sweet Boy) shall be thy Sepulcher,
For from my heart thine Image ne're shall go.
My sighing brest shall be thy Funerall bell;
And so obsequious will thy Father be,
Men for the losse of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his valiant Sons,
I'le bear thee hence, and let them fight that will,
For I have murther'd where I should not kill. Exit.
Hen. Sad-hearted men, much over-gone with Care;
Here sits a King, more wofull then you are.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the Queen, the Prince, and Exeter.

Prin. Fly Father, flye: for all your Friends are fled.
And Warwick rages like a chafed Bull:
Away, for death doth hold us in pursuit.
Quee. Mount you my Lord, towards Barwick post amain:
Edward and Richard like a brace of Grey-hounds,
Having the fearfull flying Hare in sight,
With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steele grasped in their irefull hands,
Are at our backs, and therefore hence amain.
Exet. Away: for vengeance come along with them.
Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed,
Or else come after, I'le away before.
Hen. Nay take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whether the Queen intends. Forward, away. Exeunt.

A loud Alarum. Enter Clifford wounded.

Clif. Here burns my Candle out; I, here it dies,
Which whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
More then my Bodies parting with my Soul:
My Love and Fear glew'd many Friends to thee,
And now I fall. Thy tough Commixtures melt,
Impairing Henry, strengthning mis-proud York;
And whether flye the Gnats, but to the Sun?
And who shines now, but Henry's Enemies?
O, Phœbus! hadst thou never given consent,
That Phaeton should check thy fiery Steds,
Thy burning Carre never had scorch'd the earth.
And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as Kings should do,
Or as thy Father, and his Father did,
Giving no ground unto the House of York,
They never then had sprung like Summer Flyes:
I, and ten thousand in this luckless Realm,
Had left no mourning Widows for our death,
And thou this day, hadst kept thy Chaire in peace.
For what doth cherrish Weeds, but gentle aire?
And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lenity?
Bootlesse are Plaints, and Cureless are my VVounds?
No way to flye, nor strength to hold out flight:
The Foe is mercilesse, and will not pitty:
For at their hands I have deserv'd no pitty.
The aire hath got into my deadly VVounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint:
Come York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest,
I stabb'd your Fathers bosomes; Split my brest.

Alarum & Retreat. Enter Edward, Warwick, Richard, and Souldiers, Mountague, and Clarence.

Ed. Now breathe we Lords, good fortune bids us pawse,
And smooth the frowns of War, with peacefull looks:
Some Troups pursue the bloody-minded Queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a King,
As doth a Saile, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an Argosie to stemme the Waves:
But think you (Lords) that Clifford fled with them?
War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:
(For though before his face I speak the word)
Your Brother Richard markt him for the Grave.
And whersoe're he is, he's surely dead. Clifford grones.
Rich. Whose Soul is that which takes her heavy leave?
A deadly grone, like life and deaths departing.
See who it is.
Ed. And now the Battel's ended,
If Friend or Foe, let him be gently used.
Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford,
VVho not contented that he lopp'd the Branch
In hewing Rutland, when his leaves put forth,
But set his murth'ring knife unto the Root,
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,
I mean our Princely Father, Duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,
Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed there:
In stead whereof, let this supply the room,
Measure for measure must be answered.
Ed. Bring forth that fatall Schreech-owl to our house,
That nothing sung but death, to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismall threatning sound,
And his ill-boading tongue, no more shall speak.
War. I think his understanding is bereft:
Speak Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?
Dark cloudy death o're-shades his beames of life,
And he nor sees, nor heares us, what we say.
Rich. O would he did, and so (perhaps) he doth,
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
VVhich in the time of death he gave our Father.
Cla. If so thou think'st,
Vex him with eager words.
Rich. Clifford, aske mercy, and obtain no grace.
Ed. Clifford, repent in bootlesse penitence.
War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.
Cla. VVhile we devise fell Tortures for thy faults.
Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am Son to York.
Edw. Thou pittied'st Rutland, I will pitty thee.
Cla. VVhere's Captain Margaret, to fence you now?
War. They mock thee, Clifford,
Swear as thou was't wont.
Ric. VVhat, not an Oath? nay the world go's hard,
VVhen Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:
I know by that he's dead, and by my Soul,
If this right hand would buy but two houres life,
That I (in all despight) might rail at him,
This hand should chop it off: and with the issuing blood
Stifle the Villain, whose unstanched thirst
York, and young Rutland, could not satisfie.
War. I, but he's dead. Off with the Traytors head,
And rear it in the place your Fathers stand,
And now to London with triumphant march,

There

There to be Crowned England's Royall King:
From whence shall Warwick cut the Sea to France,
And aske the Lady Bona for thy Queen:
So shalt thou sinow both these Lands together,
And having France thy Friend, thou shalt not dread
The scatter'd Foe, that hopes to rise again:
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them buz to offend thine ears.
First will I see the Coronation,
And then to Britany I'le crosse the Sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my Lord.
Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be:
For on thy shoulder do I build my Seat;
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsell and consent is wanting:
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester,
And George of Clarence; Warwick as our Self,
Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best.
Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Glocester,
For Glocester's Dukedome is too ominous.
War. Tut, that's a foolish observation:
Richard, be Duke of Glocester: Now to London,
To see these honours in possession. Exeunt.

Enter Sinklo, and Humphrey, with Crosse-bowes in their hands.

(our selves:
Sink. Under this thick grown brake we'll shrowd
For through this Laund anon the Deer will come,
And in this covert will we make our Stand,
Culling the principall of all the Deer.
Hum. I'le stay above the hill, so both may shoot,
Sink. That cannot be, the noyse of thy Crosse-bow
Will scare the Heard, and so my shoot is lost:
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:
And for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'le tell thee what befell me on a day,
In this self-place, where now we mean to stand.
Sink. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past:
Enter the King with a Prayer-Book.
Hen. From Scotland am I stoln even of pure love,
To greet mine own Land with my wishfull sight:
No Harry, Harry, 'tis no Land of thine,
Thy place is fill'd, thy Scepter wrung from thee,
Thy Balm washt off wherewith thou wast annointed:
No bending Knee will call thee Cæsar now,
No humble sutors presse to speak for right:
No, not a man comes for redresse of thee:
For how can I help them, and not my self?
Sin. I, here's a Deer, whose skin's a Keepers Fee:
This is the quondam King; let's seize upon him.
Hen. Let me embrace the sowre adversaries,
For wise men say, it is the wisest course.
Hum. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.
Sink. Forbear a while, we'll hear a little more.
Hen. My Queen and Son are gon to France for aid:
And (as I hear) the great Commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French King's Sister
To wife for Edward. If this newes be true,
Poor Queen, and Son, your labour is but lost:
For Warwick is a subtle Orator:
And Lewis, a Prince soon won with moving words:
By this account then Margaret may win him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much:
Her sighs will make a batt'ry in his brest,
Her tears will pierce into a Marble heart:
The Tyger will be mild, whiles she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To hear and see her plaints, her Brinish Teares.
I, but she's come to beg, Warwick to give:
She on his left side, craving aid for Henry;
He on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
She weeps, and sayes, her Henry is depos'd:
He smiles, and sayes, his Edward is install'd;
That she (poor wretch) for grief can speak no more:
Whiles Warwick tells his Title, smooths the wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the King from her,
With promise of his Sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edwards place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be, and thou (poor soul)
Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.
Hum. Say, what art thou talk'st of Kings and Queens?
King. More then I seem, and lesse then I was born to:
A man at least, for lesse I should not be:
And men may talk of Kings, and why not I?
Hum. I, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a King.
King. Why so I am (in Mind) and that's enough.
Hum. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crown?
King. My Crown is in my heart, not on my head:
Not deck'd with Diamonds, and Indian stones:
Nor to be seen: my Crown is call'd Content,
A Crown it is that seldome Kings enjoy.
Hum. Well, if you be a King crown'd with Content,
Your Crown Content, and you, must be contented
To go along with us. For (as we think)
You are the King, King Edward hath depos'd:
And we his subjects, sworn in all Allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his Enemy.
King. But did you never swear, and break an Oath.
Hum. No, never such an Oath, nor will not now.
King. Where did you dwell when I was K. of England?
Hum. Here in this Country, where we now remain.
King. I was annointed King at nine moneths old,
My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings:
And you were sworn true Subjects unto me:
And tell me then, have you not broke your Oathes?
Si. No, for we were Subjects, but while you were King.
King. Why? am I dead? do I not breathe a Man?
Ah simple men, you know not what you swear:
Look, as I blow this Feather from my Face,
And as the aire blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded alwayes by the greater gust:
Such is the lightnesse of you common men.
But do not break your Oath, for of that sin,
My mild intreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the King shall be commanded,
And be you Kings, command, and I'le obey.
Sink. We are true Subjects to the King,
King Edward.
King. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as King Edward is.
Sink. We charge you in Gods name and the Kings,
To go with us unto the Officers.
King. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obey'd,
And what God will, that let your King perform,
And what he will, I humbly yield unto. Exeunt.

Enter King Edward, Glocster, Clarence, Lady Gray.
King. Brother of Glocster, at S. Albans field

This

This Ladies Husband, Sir Richard Grey, was ſlain,
His Land then ſeiz'd on by the Conqueror,
Her ſuit is now, to repoſſeſſe thoſe Lands,
Which we in Juſtice cannot well deny,
Becauſe in Quarrell of the Houſe of York,
The worthy Gentleman did loſe his Life.
Rich. Your Highneſſe ſhall do well to grant her ſuit:
It were diſhonour to deny it her.
King. It were no leſſe, but yet I'le make a pawſe.
Rich. Yea, is it ſo:
I ſee the Lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the King will grant her humble ſuit.
Cla. He knows the Game, how true he keeps the wind?
Rich. Silence.
King. Widow, we will conſider of your ſuit,
And come ſome other time to know our mind.
Wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brook delay,
May it pleaſe your Highneſſe to reſolve me now,
And what your pleaſure is, ſhall ſatisfie me.
Rich. I VVidow: then I'le warrant you all your Lands,
And if what pleaſes him, ſhall pleaſe you:
Fight cloſer, or good faith you'll catch a blow.
Cla. I fear her not, unleſſe ſhe chance to fall.
Rich. God forbid, for he'll take vantages.
King. How many Children haſt thou, VVidow? tell me.
Cla. I think he means to beg a Child of her.
Rich. Nay then whip me: he'll rather give her two.
Wid. Three, my moſt gracious Lord.
Rich. You ſhall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.
King. 'Twere pitty they ſhould loſe their Fathers Lands.
Wid. Be pittifull, dread Lord, and grant it then.
King. Lords give us leave, I'le trye this VVidows wit.
Rich. I, good leave have you, for you will have leave,
Till Youth take leave, and leave you to the Gruch.
King. Now tell me, Madam, do you love your Children?
Wid. I, full as dearly as I love my ſelf.
King. And would you not do much to do them good?
Wid. To do them good, I would ſuſtain ſome harm.
King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to do them good.
Wid. Therefore I came unto your Majeſty.
King. I'le tell you how theſe Lands are to be got.
Wid. So ſhall you bind me to your Highneſſe ſervice.
King. VVhat ſervice wilt thou do me, if I give them?
Wid. VVhat you command, that reſts in me to do.
King. But you will take exceptions to my Boon.
Wid. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot do it.
King. I, but thou canſt do what I mean to ask.
Wid. VVhy then I will do what your Grace commands.
Rich. He plies her hard, and much Rain wears the Marble.
Clar. As red as fire? nay then, her VVax will melt.
Wid. VVhy ſtops my Lord? ſhall I not hear my Task?
King. An eaſie Task, 'tis but to love a King.
Wid. That's ſoon perform'd, becauſe I am a Subject.
King. VVhy then, thy Husbands Lands I freely give thee.
Wid. I take my leave with many thouſand thanks.
Rich. The Match is made, ſhe ſeals it with a Curtſie.
King. But ſtay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.
Wid. The fruits of Love, I mean, my loving Liege.
King. I, but I fear me in another ſence.
VVhat Love, think'ſt thou, I ſue ſo much to get?
Wid. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers,
That love which Virtue begs, and Virtue grants.
King. No, by my troth, I did not mean ſuch love.
Wid. VVhy then you mean not as I thought you did.
King. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
Wid. My mind will never grant what I perceive
Your Highneſſe aims at, if I aim aright.
King. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
Wid. To tell you plain, I had rather lye in Priſon.
King. VVhy then thou ſhalt not have thy Husbands Lands.
Wid. VVhy then mine Honeſty ſhall be my Dower,
For by that loſſe I will not purchaſe them.
King. Therein thou wrong'ſt thy Children mightily.
Wid. Herein your Highneſſe wrongs both them & me:
But mighty Lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the ſadneſſe of my ſuit:
Pleaſe you diſmiſſe me, either with I, or No.
King. I, if thou wilt ſay I to my requeſt:
No, if thou do'ſt ſay No to my demand.
Wid. Then No, my Lord: my ſuit is at an end.
Rich. The Widow likes him not, ſhe knits her Brows.
Clarence. He is the bluntſt Wooer in Chriſtendome.
King. Her looks do argue her repleat with modeſty,
Her words do ſhew her wit incomparable,
All her perfections challenge Soveraignty,
One way or other, ſhe is for a King,
And ſhe ſhall be my Love, or elſe my Queen.
Say, that King Edward take thee for his Queen?
Wid. 'Tis better ſaid then done, my gracious Lord:
I am a ſubject fit to jeaſt withall,
But far unfit to be a Soveraign.
King. Sweet Widow, by my State I ſwear to thee,
I ſpeak no more then what my ſoul intends,
And that is, to enjoy thee for my Love.
Wid. And that is more then I will yield unto:
I know, I am too mean to be your Queen,
And yet too good to be your Concubine.
King. You cavill, Widow, I did mean my Queen.
Wid. 'Twill grieve your Grace, my Sons ſhould call you Father.
King. No more, then when my Daughters
Call thee Mother.
Thou art a Widow, and thou haſt ſome Children,
And by Gods Mother, I being but a Batchelor,
Have other-ſome. Why, 'tis a happy thing,
To be the Father unto many Sons:
Anſwer no more, for thou ſhalt be my Queen.
Rich. The Ghoſtly Father now hath done his Shrift.
Cla. When he was made a Shriver, 'twas for a ſhift.
King. Brothers, you muſe what Chat we two have had.
Richard. The VVidow likes it not, for ſhe looks ſad.
King. You'ld think it ſtrange, if I ſhould marry her.
Cla. To whom, my Lord?
King. VVhy Clarence, to my ſelf.

Rich.

Rich. That would be ten dayes wonder at the leaſt.
Clar. That's a day longer then a Wonder laſts.
Rich. By ſo much is the wonder in extremes.
King. Well, jeaſt on Brothers I can tell you both,
Her ſuit is granted for her Husbands Lands.

Enter a Noble man.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Henry your Foe is taken,
And brought your Priſoner to your Palace Gate.
King. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower:
And go we, Brothers, to the man that took him.
To queſtion of his apprehenſion.
Widow, go you along: Lords uſe her honourably.
Exeunt.

Manet Richard.

Rich. I, Edward will uſe Women honourably.
Would he were waſted, Marrow, Bones, and all,
That from his Loyns no hopefull Branch may ſpring,
To croſſe me from the Golden time I look for:
And yet, between my Souls deſire, and me,
The luſtfull Edward's Title buried,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his Son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd-for Iſſue of their Bodies.
To take their Rooms, ere I can place my ſelf:
A cold premeditation for my purpoſe.
Why then I do but dream on Soveraignty,
Like one that ſtands upon a Promontory,
And ſpies a far-off ſhore, where he would tread,
Wiſhing his foot were equall with his eye,
And chides the Sea, that ſunders him from thence,
Saying he'll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I wiſh the Crown, being ſo far off,
And ſo I chide the means that keeps me from it,
And ſo (I ſay) I'le cut the Cauſes off,
Flattering me with impoſſibilities:
My eye's too quick, my heart o're-weens too much,
Unleſſe my Hand and Strength could equall them.
Well, ſay there is no Kingdome then for Richard:
What other pleaſure can the World affoord?
I'le make my Heaven in a Ladies Lap,
And deck my Body in gay Ornaments,
And 'witch ſweet Ladies with my words and looks.
Oh miſerable thought! and more unlikely,
Then to accompliſh twenty Golden Crowns.
Why Love forſwore me in my Mothers Womb:
And for I ſhould not deal in her ſoft Laws,
She did corrupt frail Nature with ſome Bribe,
To ſhrink mine Arm up like a wither'd ſhrub,
To make an envious Mountain on my back,
Where ſits Deformity to mock my body;
To ſhape my Legs of an unequall ſize,
To diſproportion me in every part:
Like to a Chaos, or unlick'd Bear-whelp,
That carries, no impreſſion like the Damme.
And am I then a man to be belov'd?
Oh monſtrous fault, to harbour ſuch a thought.
Then ſince this Earth affoords no Joy to me,
But to command, to check, to o're-bear ſuch,
As are of better Perſon then my ſelf:
I'le make my Heaven, to dream upon the Crown,
And whiles I live, t'account this world but Hell,
Untill this mis-ſhap'd Trunk that bears this Head,
Be round impaled with a glorious Crown.
And yet I know not how to get the Crown,
For many Lives ſtand between me and home:
And I, like one loſt in a thorny Wood,
That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,
Seeking a way, and ſtraying from the way,
Not knowing how to find the open aire,
But toyling deſperately to find it out,
Torment my ſelf to catch the Engliſh Crown:
And from that torment I will free my ſelf,
Or hew my way out with a bloody Axe.
Why I can ſmile, and murther whiles I ſmile,
And cry, Content, to that which grieves my heart,
And wet my Cheeks with artificiall tears,
And frame my face to all occaſions.
I'le drown more Sailors then the Mermaid ſhall,
I'le ſlay more gazers then the Baſilisk,
I'le play the Orator as well as Neſtor,
Deceive more ſlyly then Uliſſes could,
And like a Sinon, take another Troy.
I can adde Colours to the Camelion,
Change ſhapes with Proteus, for advantages,
And ſet the murtherous Machevill to School.
Can I do this, and cannot get a Crown?
Tut, were it farther off, I'le pluck it down. Exit.

Flouriſh.

Enter Lewis the King, his Siſter Bona, his Admirall, call'd Bourbon, Prince Edward, Queen Margaret, and the Earl of Oxford. Lewis ſits, and riſeth up again.

Lewis. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us: it ill befits thy State,
And Birth, that thou ſhould'ſt ſtand, while Lewis doth ſit.
Mar. No, mighty King of France: now Margaret,
Muſt ſtrike her ſail, and learn a while to ſerve,
Where Kings command. I was (I muſt confeſſe)
Great Albion's Queen, in Golden dayes:
But now miſchance hath trod my Title down,
And with diſhonour laid me on the ground,
Where I muſt take like ſeat unto my fortune,
And to my humble ſeat conform my ſelf.
Lewis. Why ſay, fair Queen, whence ſprings this deep deſpair?
Mar. From ſuch a cauſe, as fills mine eyes with tears,
And ſtops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.
Lew. What ere it be, be thou ſtill like thy ſelf,
And ſit thee by our ſide. Seats her by him.
Yield not thy neck to Fortunes yoak,
But let thy dauntleſſe mind ſtill ride in triumph,
Over all miſchance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief,
It ſhall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.
Mar. Thoſe gracious words
Revive my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-ty'd ſorrows leave to ſpeak.
Now therefore be it known to Noble Lewis,
That Henry, ſole poſſeſſor of my Love,
Is, of a King, become a baniſht man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a Forlorne;
While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of York,
Uſurps the Regal Title, and the Seat
Of Englands true anointed lawful King.
This is the cauſe that I, poor Margaret,
With this my Son Prince Edward, Henry's Heir,
Am come to crave thy juſt and lawfull aid:
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath Will to help, but cannot help:

Our

Our people, and our Peers, are both mis-led,
Our Treasure seiz'd, our Souldiers put to flight,
And (as thou seest) our selves in heavy plight.
Lew. Renowned Queen,
With patience calme the Storme,
While we bethink a means to break it off.
Marg. The more we stay, the stronger growes our Foe.
Lew. The more I stay, the more I'le succour thee.
Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwick.

Lew. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?
Marg. Our Earle of Warwick, Edwards greatest friend.
Lewis. Welcome brave Warwick, what brings thee to France?
He descends. She ariseth.
Marg. I, now begins a second Storm to rise,
For this is he that moves both Wind and Tyde.
War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
My Lord and Soveraign, and thy vowed Friend,
I come (in Kindnesse, and unfeined Love)
First, to do greetings to thy Royall Person,
And then to crave a League of Amity:
And lastly, to confirm that Amity
With Nuptiall Knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That vertuous Lady Bona, thy fair Sister,
To Englands King in lawfull Marriage.
Marg. If that go forward, Henries hope is done.
Warw. And gracious Madam, Speaking to Bona.
In our Kings behalf,
I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kisse your Hand, and with my Tongue
To tell the passion of my Soveraigns Heart;
Where Fame, late entring at his heedfull Ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauties Image, and thy Vertue.
Marg. King Lewis, and Lady Bona, hear me speak,
Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edwards well-meant honest Love,
But from Deceit, bred by Necessity:
For how can Tyrants safely govern home,
Unlesse abroad they purchase great allyance?
To prove him Tyrant, this reason may suffice,
That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henries Son.
Look therefore Lewis, that by this League and Marriage
Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-honor:
For though Usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet Heavens are just, and Time suppresseth Wrongs.
War. Injurious Margaret.
Edw. And why not Queen?
War. Because thy father Henry did usurp,
And thou no more art Prince, then she is Queen.
Oxf. Then Warwick disanulls great Jhon of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose Wisdome was a Mirror to the wisest:
And after that wise Prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his Prowesse conquered all France:
From these our Henry lineally descends.
War. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse,
You told not, how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that, which Henry the Fifth had gotten;
Me thinks these Peers of France should smile at that.
But for the rest: you tell a Pedigree
Of three score and two years, a silly time
To make prescription for a Kingdomes worth.
Oxf. Why Warwick, canst thou speak against my Liege
Whom thou obeyd'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy Treason with a blush?
War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a Pedigree?
For shame leave Henry, and call Edward King.
Oxf. Call him my King, by whose injurious doom
My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere
Was done to death? and more then so, my Father,
Even in the down-fall of his mellow'd years,
When Nature brought him to the door of death;
No Warwick, no: while Life upholds this Arme,
This Arme upholds the House of Lancaster.
War. And I the house of York.
Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford
Vouchsafe at our request, to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.
They stand aloofe.
Mar. Heavens grant, that Warwicks words bewitch him not.
Lew. Now Warwick, tell me even upon thy conscience
Is Edward your true King? for I were loth
To link with him, that were not lawfull chosen.
Warw. Thereon I pawn my Credit, and mine Honour.
Lew. But is he gracious in the peoples eyes?
War. The more, that Henry was unfortunate.
Lew. Then further: all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth, the measure of his love,
Unto our Sister Bona.
War. Such it seems,
As may beseem a Monarch like himself,
My self have often heard him say, and swear,
That this his Love was an external Plant,
Whereof the Root was fix'd in Vertues ground,
The Leaves and Fruit maintain'd with Beauties Sun,
Exempt from Envy, but not from Disdain,
Unlesse the Lady Bona quit his pain,
Lew. Now Sister, let us hear your firm resolve.
Bona. Your grant, or your deny, shall be mine,
Yet I confesse, that often ere this day, Speaks to War.
When I have heard your Kings desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgement to desire.
Lew. Then Warwick, this:
Our Sister shall be Edwards.
And now forthwith shall Articles be drawn,
Touching the Joynture that your King must make,
Which with her Dowry shall be counterpoys'd:
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witnesse,
That Bona shall be Wife to the English King.
Prin. Edw. To Edward, but not to the English King.
Marg. Deceitfull Warwick, it was thy device,
By this alliance to make void my suit;
Before thy coming, Lewis was Henries friend.
Lew. And still is friend to him, and Margaret,
But if your Title to the Crown be weak,
As may appear by Edwards good successe:
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd
From giving aid, which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindnesse at my hand,
That your estate requires, and mine can yield.
War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease;

Where having nothing, nothing can he loſe.
And as for you your ſelf (our quondam Queen)
You have a Father able to maintain you,
And better 'twere, you troubled him, then France.
Mar. Peace impudent, and ſhameleſs Warwick, peace,
Proud ſetter up, and puller down of Kings,
I will not hence, till with my Talk and Tears
(Both full of Truth) I make King Lewis behold
Thy ſlye conveyance, and thy Lords falſe love.
Poſt blowing a horn within.
For both of you are Birds of ſelf-ſame Feather.
Lew. Warwick, this is ſome Poſt to us, or thee.
Enter a Poſt.
Poſt. My Lord Ambaſſador,
Theſe Letters are for you. Speaks to Warwick.
Sent from your Brother Marqueſſe Mountague.
Theſe from our King, unto your Majeſty. To Lewis.
And Madam, theſe for you, To Margaret.
From whom, I know not.
They all read their Letters.
Oxf. I like it well, that our fair Queen and Miſtris
Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.
Prin. Edw. Nay mark how Lewis ſtamps as he were nettled. I hope, all's for the beſt.
Lew. Warwick, what are thy News?
And yours, fair Queen?
Mar. Mine ſuch, as fill my heart with unhop'd joyes.
War. Mine full of ſorrow, and hearts diſcontent.
Lew. What? has your King Married the Lady Grey?
And now to ſooth your Forgery, and his,
Sends me a Paper to perſwade me Patience?
In th' Alliance that he ſeeks with France?
Dare he preſume, to ſcorn us in this manner?
Mar. I told your Majeſty as much before:
This proveth Edwards Love, and Warwicks honeſty.
War. King Lewis, I here proteſt in ſight of heaven,
And by the hope I have of heavenly bliſſe,
That I am clear from this miſdeed of Edwards;
No more my King, for he diſhonors me,
But moſt himſelf, if he could ſee his ſhame.
Did I forget, that by the houſe of York
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let paſſe th'abuſe done to my Niece?
Did I impale him with the Regal Crown?
Did I put Henry from his Native Right?
And am I guerdon'd at the laſt, with Shame?
Shame on himſelf, for my Deſert is Honor.
And to repair my Honor loſt for him,
I here renounce him, and return to Henry.
My Noble Queen, let former grudges paſſe,
And henceforth, I am thy true Servitour:
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former ſtate.
Mar. Warwick,
Theſe words have turn'd my Hate, to Love,
And I forgive, and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'ſt King Henries Friend.
War. So much his Friend, I, his unfeigned Friend,
That if King Lewis vouchſafe to furniſh us
With ſome few Bands of choſen Souldiers,
I'le undertake to land them on our Coaſt,
And force the Tyrant from his ſeat by War.
'Tis not his new-made Bride ſhall ſuccour him,
And as for Clarence, as my Letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton Luſt, then Honor,
Or then for ſtrength and ſafety of our Countrey.
Bona. Dear brother, how ſhall Bona be reveng'd,
But by thy help to this diſtreſſed Queen?
Mar. Renowned Prince, how ſhall Poor Henry live,
Unleſſe thou reſcue him from foul deſpair?
Bona. My quarrel, and this Engliſh Queens, are one.
War. And mine fair Lady Bona, joyns with yours.
Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margarets.
Therefore at laſt, I firmly am reſolv'd
You ſhall have aid.
Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all, at once.
Lew. Then Englands Meſſenger, return in Poſt,
And tell falſe Edward, thy ſuppoſed King,
That Lewis of France, is ſending over Maskers
To revel it with him, and his new Bride.
Thou ſeeſt what's paſt, go fear thy King withall.
Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower ſhortly;
I wear the Willow Garland for his ſake.
Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aſide,
And I am ready to put Armor on.
War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'le un-Crown him, er't be long.
There's thy reward be gone. Exit Poſt.
Lew. But Warwick,
Thou and Oxford, with five thouſand men
Shall croſſe the Seas, and bid falſe Edward battell:
And as occaſion ſerves, this Noble Queen
And Prince, ſhall follow with a freſh ſupply,
Yet ere thou go, but anſwer me one doubt:
What Pledge have we of thy firm Loyalty?
War. This ſhall aſſure my conſtant Loyalty,
That if our Queen, and this young Prince agree,
I'le joyn my eldeſt daughter, and my Joy,
To him forthwith, in holy Wedlock bands.
Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your Motion.
Son Edward, ſhe is Fair and Vertuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick,
And with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That onely Warwicks daughter ſhall be thine.
Prin. Ed. Yes, I accept her, for ſhe well deſerves it,
And here to pledge my Vow, I give my hand.
He gives his hand to Warwick.
Lew. Why ſtay we now? theſe ſouldiers ſhall be levied,
And thou Lord Bourbon, our High Admirall
Shalt waft them over with our Royal Fleet.
I long till Edward fall by Warrs miſchance,
For mocking Marriage with a Dame of France.
Exeunt. Manet Warwick.
War. I came from Edward as Ambaſſador,
But I return his ſworn and mortal Foe:
Matters of Marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadfull War ſhall anſwer his demand.
Had he none elſe to make a ſtale but me?
Then none but I, ſhall turn his Jeſt to Sorrow,
I was the Chief that rais'd him to the Crown,
And I'le be Chief to bring him down again:
Not that I pitty Henries miſery,
But ſeek Revenge on Edwards mockery.. Exit.

Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerſet and Mountague.

Rich. Now tell me Brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new Marriage with the Lady Gray?
Hath not our Brother made a worthy choyce?
Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France,
How

How could he ſtay till Warwick made return?
Som. My Lords, forbear this talk: here comes the King.

Flouriſh.

Enter King Edward, Lady Gray, Pembrook, Staffford, Haſtings: four ſtand on one ſide and four on the other.

Rich. And his well-choſen Bride.
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.
King. Now Brother of Clarence,
How like you our Choyce,
That you ſtand penſive, as half malecontent?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France,
Or the Earle of Warwick,
Which are ſo weak of courage, and in judgement,
That they'll take no offence at our abuſe.
King. Suppoſe they take offence without a cauſe:
They are but Lewis and Warwick, I am Edward,
Your King and Warwicks, and muſt have my will.
Rich. And ſhall have your will, becauſe our King:
Yet haſty Marriage ſeldome proveth well.
King. Yes Brother Richard, are you offended too?
Rich. Not I: no:
God forbid, that I ſhould wiſh them ſever'd,
Whom God hath joyn'd together:
I, and 'twere pitty, to ſunder them,
That yoak ſo well together.
King. Setting your skorns, and your miſlike aſide,
Tell me ſome reaſon, why the Lady Gray
Should not become my Wife, and Englands Queen?
And you too, Somerſet and Mountague,
Speak freely what you think.
Clar. Then this is my opinion:
That King Lewis becomes your Enemy,
For mocking him about the Marriage
Of the Lady Bona.
Rich. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now diſhonoured by this New Marriage.
King. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By ſuch invention as I can deviſe?
Mount. Yet, to have joyn'd with France in ſuch alliance,
Would more have ſtrength'ned this our Commonwealth
'Gainſt forrain ſtormes, then any home-bred Marriage.
Haſt. Why, knows not Mountague, that of it ſelf,
England is ſafe, if true within it ſelf?
Mount. Yes, but the ſafer, when 'tis back'd with France.
Haſt. 'Tis better uſing France, then truſting France;
Let us be back'd with God, and with the Seas,
Which he hath giv'n for fence impregnable,
And with their helps, only defend our ſelves:
In them, and in our ſelves, our ſafety lyes.
Clar. For this one ſpeech, Lord Haſtings well deſerves
To have the Heir of the Lord Hungerford.
King. I, what of that? it was my will, and grant,
And for this once, my Will ſhall ſtand for Law.
Rich. And yet me thinks, your Grace hath not done well
To give the Heir and Daughter of Lord Scales
Unto the Brother of your loving Bride;
She better would have fitted me or Clarence:
But in your Bride you bury Brotherhood.
Clar. Or elſe you would not have beſtow'd the Heir
Of the Lord Bonvill on your new Wives Son,
And leave your Brothers to go ſpeed elſewhere.
King. Alas, poor Clarence: is it for a Wife
That thou art malecontent? I will provide thee.
Clar. In chuſing for your ſelf,
You ſhew'd your judgement:
Which being ſhallow, you ſhall give me leave
To play the Brother in mine own behalf;
And to that end, I ſhortly mind to leave you.
King. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be King.
And not be ty'd unto his brothers will.
Lady Gray. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Majeſty
To raiſe my State to Title of a Queen,
Do me but right, and you muſt all confeſſe,
That I was not ignoble of Deſcent,
And meaner then my ſelf have had like fortune.
But as this Title honors me and mine,
So your diſlikes, to whom I would be pleaſing,
Doth cloud my joyes with danger, and with ſorrow.
King. My Love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:
What danger, or what ſorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy conſtant friend,
And their true Soveraign, whom they muſt obey?
Nay, whom they ſhall obey, and love thee too,
Unleſſe they ſeek for hatred at my hands:
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee ſafe,
And they ſhall feel the vengeance of my wrath.
Rich. I hear, yet ſay not much, but think the more.

Enter a Poſt.

King. Now Meſſenger, what Letters, or what News from France?
Poſt. My Soveraign Liege, no Letters, and few words,
But ſuch as I (without your ſpecial pardon)
Dare not relate.
King. Go too, we pardon thee:
Therefore, in brief, tell their words,
As near as thou canſt gueſſe them.
What anſwer makes King Lewis, unto our Letters?
Poſt. At my depart, theſe were his very words:
Go tell falſe Edward, the ſuppoſed King,
That Lewis of France is ſending over Maskers,
To revell it with him, and his new Bride.
King. Is Lewis ſo brave? belike he thinks me Henry.
But what ſaid Lady Bona to my Marriage?
Poſt. Theſe were her words, utt'red with mild diſdain:
Tell him, in hope he'll prove a Widower ſhortly,
I'le wear the Willow Garland for his ſake.
King. I blame not her, ſhe could ſay little leſſe:
She had the wrong. But what ſaid Henries Queen?
For ſo I heard, that ſhe was there in place.
Poſt. Tell him (quoth ſhe)
My mourning Weeds are done,
And I am ready to put Armor on.
King. Belike ſhe means to play the Amazon.
But what ſaid Warwick to theſe injuries?
Poſt. He, more incens'd againſt your Majeſty,
Then all the reſt, diſcharg'd me with theſe words:
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'le uncrown him, er't be long.
King. Ha? durſt the Traitor breath out ſo proud words?
Well, I will arme me, being thus fore-warn'd:
They ſhall have Warrs, and pay for their preſumption.
But ſay, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Poſt. I, gracious Soveraign,
They are ſo link'd in friendſhip,
That young Prince Edward marries Warwicks Daughter.
Clar. Belike, the elder;
Clarence will have the younger.

Now Brother King farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwicks other Daughter,
That though I want a Kingdome, yet in Marriage
I may not prove inferior to your self.
You that love me, and Warwick, follow me.
Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.

Rich. Not I:
My thoughts aim at a further matter:
I stay not for the love of Edward, but the Crown.

King. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick?
Yet I am arm'd against the worst can happen:
And haste is needfull in this desp'rate case.
Pembrook and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for War;
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
My self in person will straight follow you.
Exit Pembrook and Stafford.
But ere I go, Hastings and Mountague
Resolve my doubt: you twain of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick, by bloud, and by allyance:
Tell me, if you love Warwick more then me;
If it be so, then both depart to him:
I rather wish you foes, then hollow friends.
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly Vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mount. So God help Mountague, as he proves true.

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edwards cause.

King. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Rich. I, in despight of all that shall withstand you.

King. Why so: then am I sure of Victory.
Now therefore let us hence, and lose no hour,
Till we meet Warwick, with his forrain power.
Exeunt.

Enter Warwick, and Oxford in England, with French Souldiers.

Warw. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well,
The common people by numbers swarme to us.
Enter Clarence and Somerset.
But see where Somerset and Clarence comes:
Speak suddenly, my Lords, are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my Lord.

Warw. Then gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick,
And welcome Somerset: I hold it cowardize,
To rest mistrustfull, where a Noble Heart
Hath pawn'd an open Hand, in sign of Love:
Else might I think, that Clarence, Edwards brother,
Were but a fained friend to our proceedings:
But welcome sweet Clarence, my daughter shall be thine.
And now, what rests? but in Nights Coverture,
Thy Brother being carelesiely encamp'd,
His Souldiers lurking in the town about,
And but attended by a simple Guard,
We may surprize and take him at our pleasure,
Our Scouts have found the adventure very easie:
That as Ulysses, and stout Diomede,
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus Tents,
And brought from thence the Thracian fatall Steeds;
So we, well cover'd with the Nights black Mantle,
At unawares may beat down Edwards Guard,
And seize himself: I say not, slaughter him,
For I intend but only to surprize him.
You that will follow me to this attempt,
Applaud the Name of Henry, with your Leader.
They all cry Henry.
Why then, let's on our way in silent sort,
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George.
Exeunt.

Enter the Watchmen to guard the Kings Tent.

1. Watch. Come on my Masters, each man take his stand,
The King by this, is set him down to sleep.

2. Watch. What, will he not to Bed?

1. Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn Vow,
Never to lie and take his natural Rest,
Till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppresst.

2. Watch. To morrow then belike shall be the day,
If Warwick be so near as men report.

3. Watch. But say, I pray, what Noble man is that,
That with the King here resteth in his Tent?

1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the Kings chiefest friend.

3. Watch. O, is it so? but why commands the King,
That his chief followers lodge in Towns about him,
While he himself keeps in the cold field?

2. Watch. 'Tis the more honor, because the more dangerous.

3. Watch. I, but give me worship, and quietnesse,
I like it better then a dangerous honor.
If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

1. Watch. Unlesse our Halberds did shut up his passage.

2. Watch. I: wherefore else guard we this Royal Tent,
But to defend his Person from Night-foes?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and French Souldiers, silent all.

War. This is his Tent, and see where stands his Guard:
Courage my Masters: Honor now or never:
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1. Watch. Who goes there?

2. Watch. Stay or thou dyest.
Warwick and the rest cry all, Warwick, Warwick, and set upon the Guard, who flye, crying, Arme, Arme, Warwick and the rest following them.

The Drum playing, and Trumpet sounding.
Enter Warwick, Somerset, and the rest, bringing the King out in a gown, sitting in a Chair: Richard and Hastings flyes over the Stage.

Som. What are they that flye there?

Warw. Richard and Hastings, let them go, here is the Duke.

King Edw. The Duke?
Why Warwick, when we parted,
Thou call'dst me King.

Warw. I, but the case is alter'd.
When you disgrace'd me in my Embassade,
Then I degraded you from being King,
And come now to create you Duke of York.
Alas how should you govern any Kingdome,
That know not how to use Embassadors,
Nor how to be contented with one Wife,
Nor how to use your Brothers brotherly,
Nor how to study for the Peoples Welfare,
Nor how to shrowd your self from Enemies?
King Edw.

K. Edw. Yea, Brother of Clarence,
Art thou here too?
Nay then I see, that Edward needs must down.
Yet Warwick, in despight of all mischance,
Of thee thy self, and all thy Complices,
Edward will alwayes bear himself as King:
Though Fortunes malice overthrow my State,
My mind exceeds the compasse of her Wheel.
War; Then for his mind, be Edward Englands King.

Takes off his Crown.

But Henry now shall wear the English Crown,
And be true King indeed: thou but a shadow.
My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd
Unto my Brother Arch-Bishop of York:
When I have fought with Pembrook, and his fellows,
I'le follow you, and tell what answer
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.
Now for a while farewell good Duke of York.

They lead him out forcibly.

K. Ed. What Fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to resist both wind and tide. Exeunt.
Oxf. What now remains my Lords for us to do,
But march to London with our Souldiers?
War. I, that's the first thing that we have to do,
To free King Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the Regal Throne.
Exit.

Enter Rivers, and the Lady Gray.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?
Gray. Why Brother Rivers, are you yet to learn
What late misfortune is befaln King Edward?
Riv. What? losse of some pitcht battell
Against Warwick?
Gra. No, but the losse of his own Royal person.
Riv. Then is my Soveraign slain?
Gray. I almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,
Either betrayed by falshood of his Guard,
Or by his Foe surpriz'd at unawares:
And as I further have to understand.
Is new committed to the Bishop of York,
Fell Warwicks brother, and by that our Foe.
Riv. These News I must confesse are full of grief,
Yet gracious Madam, bear it as you may,
Warwick may loose, that now hath won the day.
Gray. Till then, fair hope must hinder lives decay.
And I the rather wain me from despair
For love of Edwards Off-spring in my womb:
This is it that makes me bridle my passion,
And bear with Mildnesse my misfortunes crosse:
I, I, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of bloud-sucking sighes,
Least with my sighes or tears, I blast or drown
King Edwards Fruit, true heir to th'English Crown.
Riv. But Madam,
Where is Warwick then become?
Gray. I am inform'd that he comes towards London,
To set the Crown once more on Henries head:
Guesse thou the rest, King Edwards friend must down.
But to prevent the Tyrants violence,
(For trust not him that hath once broken faith)
I'le hence forthwith unto the Sanctuary,
To save (at least) the heir of Edwards right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud:
Come therefore let us flye, while we may flye,
If Warwick take us, we are sure to dye. Exeunt.

Enter Richard, Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley.

Rich. Now my Lord Hastings, and Sir Will. Stanley
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefest Thicket of the Park.
Thus stands the case: you know our King, my Brother,
Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage, and great liberty,
And often but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.
I have advertis'd him by secret means,
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with Horse and Men,
To set him free from his Captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman with him.

Hunt. This way my Lord,
For this way lies the Game.
King Edw. Nay this way man,
See where the Huntsmen stand.
Now brother of Gloster, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the Bishops Deer?
Rich. Brother, the time and case, requireth haste,
Your horse stands ready at the Park-corner,
King Edw. But whither shall we then?
Hast. To Lyn my Lord,
And ship from thence to Flanders.
Rich. Well guest believe me, for that was my meaning.
King. Edw. Stanley, I will require thy forwardnesse.
Rich. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.
King Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou?
Wilt thou go along?
Hunt. Better do so, then tarry and be hang'd.
Rich. Come then away, let's ha no more ado.
King Edw. Bishop farewell,
Shield thee from Warwicks frown,
And pray that I may re-possesse the Crown. Exeunt.

Enter King Henry the sixth, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Henry, Oxford, Mountague, and Lieutenant.

King Hen. M. Lieutenant, now that God and Friends
Have shaken Edward from the Regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joyes,
At our enlargement what are thy due Fees?
Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their Sov'rains
But, if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your Majesty.
King Hen. For what Lieutenant? For well using me?
Nay, be thou sure, I'le well requite thy kindnesse:
For that it made my imprisonment, a pleasure:
I, such a pleasure, as incaged Birds
Conceive; when after many moody Thoughts,
At last, by Notes of Household harmony,
They quite forget their losse of liberty.

But Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefly therefore, I thank God, and thee,
He was the Author, thou the instrument.
Therefore that I may conquer Fortunes spight,
By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed Land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting starrs,
Warwick, although my head still wear the Crown,
I here resign my Government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.
War. Your Grace hath still been fam'd for vertuous,
And now may seem as wise as vertuous,
By spying and avoiding Fortunes malice,
For few men rightly temper with the Starrs:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,
For chusing me, when Clarence is in place.
Clar. No Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the Heavens in thy Nativity,
Adjudg'd an Olive Branch, and Lawrell Crown,
As likely to be blest in Peace and War:
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
War. And I choose Clarence only for Protector.
King Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands.
Now joyn your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
That no dissention hinder Government:
I make you both Protectors of this Land,
While I my self will lead a private Life,
And in devotion spend my latter dayes,
To sins rebuke, and my Creators praise.
Warw. What answers Clarence to his Soveraignes will?
Cla. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent,
For on thy fortune I repose my self.
Warw. Why then, though loth, yet must I be content:
We'll yoak together, like a double shadow
To Henries Body, and supply his place;
I mean, in bearing weight of Government,
While he enjoyes the honor, and his ease.
And Clarence, now then is it more then needfull,
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a Traitor,
And all his Lands and Goods confiscated.
Clar. What else? and that Succession be determined.
War. I, therein Clarence shall not want his part.
King. But with the first, of all your chief affairs,
Let me intreat (for I command no more)
That Margaret your Queen, and my Son Edward,
Be sent for, to return from France with speed:
For till I see them here, by doubtfull fear,
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.
Clar. It shall be done, my Soveraign, with all speed.
King. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that,
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?
Somer. My Liege, it is young Henry, Earle of Richmond.
King. Come hither, Englands Hope:

Layes his Hand on his Head

If secret Powers suggest but truth
To my divining thoughts,
This pretty Lad will prove our Countries bliss.
His looks are full of peacefull Majesty,
His head by nature fram'd to wear a Crown,
His hand to wield a Scepter, and himself
Likely in time to blesse a Regal Throne:
Make much of him, my Lords; for this is he
Must help you more, then you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.

Warw. What news, my friend?
Post. That Edward is escaped from your brother,
And fled (as he hears since) to Burgundy.
Warw. Unsavory news: but how made he escape?
Post. He was convey'd by Richard, Duke of Gloster,
And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush, on the Forrest side,
And from the Bishops Huntsmen rescu'd him:
For Hunting was his daily Exercise.
War. My Brother was too careless of his charge.
But let us hence, my Soveraign, to provide
A salve for any sore, that may betide. Exeunt

Manet Somerset, Richmond, and Oxford.

Som. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edwards:
For doubtless, Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more Warrs befor't be long.
As Henries late presaging Prophecy
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond:
So doth my heart mis-give me, in these Conflicts
What may befall him, to his harme and ours.
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till stormes be past of Civill Enmity.
Oxf. I: for if Edward re-possesse the Crown,
'Tis like that Richmond, with the rest, shall down.
Som. It shall be so: he shall to Brittany.
Come therefore, let's about it speedily. Exeunt.

Enter Edward, Richard, Hastings and Souldiers.

Edw. Now brother Richard, Lord Hastings and the rest,
Yet thus far Fortune maketh us amends,
And sayes, that once more I shall enterchange
My wained state, for Henries Regal Crown.
Well have we pass'd, and now re-pass'd the Seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy.
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh Haven, before the Gates of York,
But that we enter, as into our Dukedome?
Rich. The Gates made fast?
Brother, I like not this.
For many men that stumble at the Threshold,
Are well fore-told, that danger lurks within.
Edw. Tush man, aboadments must not now affright us:
By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.
Hast. My Liege, I'le knock once more, to summon them.

Enter on the Walls, the Mayor of York, and his Brethren.

Mayor. My Lords.
We were fore-warned of your comming,
And shut the Gates, for safety of our selves;
For now we owe allegeance unto Henry.
Edw. But, Master Mayor, if Henry be your King,
Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of York.
Mayor. True, my good Lord, I know you for no lesse.
Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedome,
As being well contentent with that alone.

Rich.

Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Nose,
He'll soon find means to make the Body follow.
Hast. Why, Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the Gates, we are King Henries friends.
Mayor. I, say you so? the Gates shall then be opened.
He descends.
Rich. A wise stout Captain, and soon perswaded.
Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well.
So 'twere not long of him: but being entred,
I doubt not I, but we shall soon perswade
Both him, and all his Brothers, unto reason.

Enter the Mayor, and two Aldermen.

Edw. So, Master Mayor: these Gates must not be shut,
But in the Night, or in the time of War.
What, fear not man, but yield me up the Keys,
Takes his Keys.
For Edward will defend the Town, and thee,
And all those friends, that deign to follow me.

March. Enter Mountgomery, with Drum and Souldiers.

Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Mountgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.
Edwar. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Armes?
Mount. To help King Edward in his time of storm,
As every loyal Subject ought to do.
Edw. Thanks good Mountgomery:
But we now forget the title to the Crown,
And onely claim our Dukedome,
Till God please to send the rest.
Mount. Then fare you well, for I will hence again,
I came to serve a King, and not a Duke:
Drummer strike up, and let us march away.
The Drum begins to March.
Edw. Nay stay, Sir John, a while, and we'll debate
By what safe means the Crown may be recover'd.
Mount. What talk you of debating? in few words,
If you'll not here proclaim your self our King,
I'le leave you to your fortune, and be gone,
To keep them back, that come to succour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no Title?
Rich. Why Brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?
Edw. When we grow stronger,
Then we'll make our Claim:
Till then, 'tis wisdome to conceal our meaning.
Hast. Away with scrupulous Wit, now Armes must rule.
Rich. And fearless minds climb soonest unto Crowns.
Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand,
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.
Edw. Then be it as you will: for 'tis my right,
And Henry but usurps the Diadem.
Mount. I, now my Soveraign speaketh like himself,
And now will I be Edwards Champion.
Hast. Sound Trumpet, Edward shall be here proclaim'd:
Come, fellow Souldier, make thou Proclamation.
Flourish. Sound.
Soul. Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.
Mount. And whosoe're gainsayes King Edwards right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.
Throws down his Gantlet.
All. Long live Edward the Fourth.
Edw. Thanks brave Mountgomery.
And thanks unto you all:
If fortune serve me, I'le requite this kindnesse.
Now for this Night, let's harbor here in York:
And when the Morning Sun shall raise his Car
Above the Border of this Horizon,
We'll forward towards Warwick, and his Mates;
For well I wot, that Henry is no Souldier,
Ah froward Clarence, how evill it beseems thee,
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy Brother?
Yet as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick,
Come on brave Souldiers: doubt not of the Day,
And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay. Exeunt.

Enter the King, Warwick, Mountague, Clarence, Oxford, and Somerset.

War. What counsell, Lords? Edward from Belgia,
With hasty Germanes, and blunt Hollanders,
Hath pass'd in safety through the Narrow Seas,
And with his troups doth march amain to London,
And many giddy people flock to him.
King. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.
Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which being suffer'd, Rivers cannot quench.
War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,
Not mutinous in Peace, yet bold in War,
Those will I muster up: and thou Son Clarence
Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,
The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee.
Thou brother Mountague, and Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire shalt find
Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st.
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,
In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.
My Soveraign, with the loving Citizens,
Like to his Island, girt with the Ocean,
Or modest Dyan, circled with her Nymphs;
Shall rest in London, till we come to him:
Fair Lords take leave, and stand not to reply.
Farewell my Soveraign.
King. Farewell my Hector, and my Troyes true hope.
Clar. In sign of truth, I kisse your Highnesse hand.
King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.
Mount. Comfort, my Lord, and so I take my leave.
Oxf. And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.
King. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Mountague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.
War. Farewell, sweet Lords, let's meet at Coventry.
Exeunt.

King. Here at the Pallace will I rest a while.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your Lordship?
Me thinks, the Power that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.
Exet. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.
King. That's not my fear, my meed hath got me fame:
I have not stopt mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delayes,
My pitty hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildnesse hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears.
I have not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppress them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd.
Then why should they love Edward more then me?
No Exeter these Graces challenge Grace:

And when the Lion fawns upon the Lamb,
The Lamb will never ceaſe to follow him,
Shout within, A Lancaſter, A Lancaſter.
Exe. Heark, heark, my Lord, what Shouts are theſe?

Enter Edward and his Souldiers.

Edw. Seize on the ſhamefac'd Henry, bear him hence,
And once again proclaim us King of England.
You are the Fount, that make ſmall Brooks to flow,
Now ſtops thy ſpring, my Sea ſhall ſuck them dry,
And ſwell ſo much the higher, by their ebbe.
Hence with him to the Tower, let him not ſpeak.
Exit with King Henry.
And Lords, towards Coventry bend we our courſe,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The Sun ſhines hot, and if we uſe delay,
Cold biting Winter marrs our hop'd-for Hay.
Rich. Away betimes, before his forces joyn,
And take the great-grown Traitor unawares:
Brave Warriors, march amain towards Coventry.
Exeunt.

Enter Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Meſſengers, and others upon the Walls.

War. Where is the Poſt that came from valiant Oxford?
How far hence is thy Lord, mine honeſt fellow?
Meſ. 1. By this at Dunſmore, marching hitherward.
War. How far off is our Brother Mountague?
Where is the Poſt that came from Mountague?
Meſ. 2. By this at Daintry, with a puiſſant troop.
Enter Somervile.
War. Say Somervile, what ſayes my loving Son?
And by thy gueſſe, how nigh is Clarence now?
Somerv. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And do expect him here ſome two hours hence.
War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his Drum.
Somer. It is not his, my Lord, here Southam lies:
The Drum your Honor hears, marcheth from Warwick,
War. Who ſhould that be? belike unlook'd for friends.
Somer. They are at hand, and you ſhall quickly know.

March. Flouriſh. Enter Edward, Richard, and Rouldiers.

Edw. Go, Trumpet, to the Walls, ſound a Parle.
Rich. See how the ſurly Warwick mans the Wall.
War. Oh unbid ſpight, is ſportfull Edward come?
Where ſlept our Scouts, or how are they ſeduc'd,
That we could here no news of his repair.
Edw. Now Warwick, wilt thou ope the City Gates,
Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy Knee,
Call Edward King, and at his hands beg Mercy,
And he ſhall pardon thee theſe Outrages?
War. Nay rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confeſſe who ſet thee up, and pluckt thee down,
Call Warwick Patron, and be penitent,
And thou ſhalt ſtill remain the Duke of York.
Rich. I thought at leaſt he would have ſaid the King,
Or did he make the Jeſt againſt his will?
War. Is not a Dukedome, Sir, a goodly gift?
Rich. I, by my faith, for a poor Earle to give,
I'le do thee ſervice for ſo good a gift.
Warw. 'Twas I that gave the Kingdome to thy Brother.
Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwicks gift.
War. Thou art no Atlas for ſo great a weight:
And Weakling, Warwick takes his gift again,
And Henry is my King, Warwick his Subject.
Edw. But Warwicks King is Edwards Priſoner:
And gallant Warwick, do but anſwer this,
What is the Body, when the head is off?
Rich. Alas, that Warwick had no more fore-caſt,
But whiles he thought to ſteal the ſingle Ten,
The King was ſlily finger'd from the Deck:
You left poor Henry at the Biſhops Pallace,
And ten to one you'll meet him in the Tower.
Edw. 'Tis even ſo, yet you are Warwick ſtill.
Rich. Come Warwick,
Take the time, kneel down, kneel down:
Nay when: ſtrike now, or elſe the Iron cools.
War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
And with the other, fling it at thy face,
Then bear ſo low a ſayl, to ſtrike to thee.
Edw. Sayl how thou canſt,
Have Wind and Tide thy friend,
This hand, faſt wound about thy coal-black hair,
Shall, whiles thy head is warm, and new cut off,
Write in the duſt this Sentence with thy bloud,
Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Drum and Colours.

War. Oh chearfull Colours, ſee where Oxford comes.
Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaſter.
Rich. The Gates are open, let us enter too.
Edw. So other foes may ſet upon our backs.
Stand we in good array: for they no doubt
Will iſſue out again, and bid us battell;
If not, the City being but of ſmall defence,
We'll quickly rowze the traitors in the ſame.
War. Oh welcome Oxford, for we want thy help.

Enter Mountague, with Drum and Colours.

Mount. Mountague, Mountague, for Lancaſter.
Rich. Thou and thy Brother both ſhall buy this treaſon
Even with the deareſt bloud your bodies bear.
Edw. The harder match'd, the greater Victory,
My mind preſageth happy gain, and Conqueſt.

Enter Somerſet, with Drum and Colours.

Som. Somerſet, Somerſet, for Lancaſter.
Rich. Two of thy Name, both Dukes of Somerſet,
Have ſold their Lives unto the Houſe of York,
And thou ſhalt be the third, if this Sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Drum and Colours.

War. And loe, where George of Clarence ſweeps along
Of force enough to bid his brother Battell:
With whom, an upright zeal to right, prevails
More then the nature of a Brothers love.
Come Clarence, come: thou wilt, if Warwick call.
Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?
Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:
I will not ruinate my Fathers Houſe,
Who gave his bloud to lyme the ſtones together,
And ſet up Lancaſter. Why, troweſt thou, Warwick,
That Clarence is ſo harſh, ſo blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal inſtruments of War

Againſt

Againſt his brother, and his lawfull King.
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy Oath:
To keep that Oath, were more impiety,
Then Jepthah, when he ſacrific'd his Daughter.
I am ſo ſorry for my Treſpas made,
That to deſerve well at my brothers hands,
I here proclaim my ſelf thy mortal foe:
With reſolution, whereſoe're I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee, if thou ſtir abroad)
To plague thee for thy foul mis-leading me.
And ſo, proud-hearted Warwick, I defie thee,
And to my brother turn my bluſhing Cheeks.
Pardon me Edward, I will make amends:
And Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more unconſtant.

Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd
Then if thou never had'ſt deſerv'd our hate.

Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like.

War. Oh paſſing Traitor, perjur'd and unjuſt.

Edw. What Warwick,
Wilt thou leave the Town, and fight?
Or ſhall we beat the Stones about thine Ears?

Warw. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet preſently,
And bid thee Battell, Edward, if thou dar'ſt.

Edw. Yes Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:
Lords to the field: Saint George, and Victory. Exeunt.

March. Warwick and his company follows.

Alarum, and Excurſions. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwick wounded.

Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear,
For Warwick was a Bug that fear'd us all.
Now Mountague ſit faſt, I ſeek for thee,
That Warwicks Bones may keep thine companie. Exit.

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe,
And tell me who is Victor, York, or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body ſhews,
My bloud, my want of ſtrength, my ſick heart ſhews,
That I muſt yield my body to the Earth,
And by my fall, the conqueſt to my foe.
Thus yields the Cedar to the Axes edge,
Whoſe Armes gave ſhelter to the Princely Eagle,
Under whoſe ſhade the ramping Lion ſlept,
Whoſe top-branch over-peer'd Joves ſpreading tree,
And kept low Shrubs from Winters pow'rfull wind.
Theſe Eyes, that now are dim'd with Deaths black Veyl,
Have been as piercing as the Mid-day Sun,
To ſearch the ſecret Treaſons of the world:
The wrinckles in my Brows, now fill'd with bloud,
Were like'ned oft to Kingly Sepulchers:
For who liv'd King, but I could dig his Grave?
And who durſt ſmile, when Warwick bent his Brow?
Loe, now my Glory ſmear'd in duſt and bloud,
My Parks, my Walks, my Mannors that I had,
Even now forſake me; and of all my Lands,
Is nothing left me, but my bodies length.
Why, what is Pomp, Rule, Reign, but Earth and Duſt?
And live we how we can, yet die we muſt.

Enter Oxford and Somerſet.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,
We might recover all our Loſſe again:
The Queen from France hath brought a puiſſant power
Even now we heard the news, ah, could'ſt thou flye.

Warw. Why then I would not flye. Ah Mountague,
If thou be there, ſweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy Lips keep in my ſoul a while.
Thou lov'ſt me not: for, brother, if thou didſt,
Thy tears would waſh this cold congealed bloud,
That glews my Lips, and will not let me ſpeak.
Come quickly Mountague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah Warwick, Mountague hath breath'd his laſt,
And to the lateſt gaſpe, cry'd out for Warwick:
And ſaid commend me to my valiant Brother.
And more he would have ſaid, and more he ſpoke,
Which ſounded like a Cannon in a Vault,
That mought not be diſtinguiſh'd: but at laſt,
I well might hear, delivered with a groan,
O farewell Warwick.

War. Sweet reſt his ſoul:
Flye Lords, and ſave your ſelves,
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queens great power.
Here they bear away his body. Exeunt

Flouriſh. Enter King Edward in triumph, with Richard, Clarence, and the reſt.

King. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward courſe,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of Victory:
But in the midſt of this bright-ſhining Day,
I ſpye a black ſuſpicious threatning Cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious Sun,
E're he attain his eaſefull Weſtern Bed:
I mean, my Lords, thoſe powers that the Queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arrived our Coaſt,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will ſoon diſperſe that Cloud,
And blow it to the Source from whence it came,
Thy very Beams will dry thoſe Vapours up,
For every Cloud engendeis not a Storm.

Rich. The Queen is valued thirty thouſand ſtrong,
And Somerſet, with Oxford, fled to her:
If ſhe hath time to breath, be well aſſur'd
Her faction will be full as ſtrong as ours.

King. We are advertis'd by our loving friends,
That they do hold their courſe toward Tewkſbury.
We having now the beſt at Barnet field,
Will thither ſtraight, for willingneſſe rids way,
And as we march, our ſtrength will be augmented:
In every County as we go along,
Strike up the Drum, cry courage, and away. Exeunt.

March. Enter the Queen, young Edward, Somerſet, Oxford, and Souldiers.

Q. Great Lords, wiſe men ne're ſit and wail their loſſe
But chearly ſeek how to redreſſe their harms.
What though the Maſt be now blown over-board,
The Cable broke, the holding-Anchor loſt,
And half our Sailors ſwallow'd in the floud?
Yet lives our Pilot ſtill. Is't meet, that he Should leave the Helm, and like a fearfull Lad,
With tearfull Eyes adde water to the Sea,
And give more ſtrength to that which hath too much,
Whiles in his moan, the Ship ſplits on the Rock,
Which Induſtry and Courage might have ſav'd?
Ah what a ſhame, ah what a fault were this.
Say Warwick was our Anchor: what of that?

And Mountague our top-Maſt: what of him?
Our ſlaught'red friends, the Tackles: what of theſe?
Why is not Oxford here, another Anchor?
And Somerſet, another goodly Maſt?
The friends of France our Shrowds and Tacklings?
And though unskilfull, why not Ned and I,
For once allow'd the skilfull Pilots Charge?
We will not from the Helm, to ſit and weep,
But keep our Courſe (though the rough Wind ſay no)
From Shelves and Rocks, that threaten us with Wrack.
As good to chide the Waves, as ſpeak them fair.
And what is Edward, but a ruthleſſe Sea?
What Clarence, but a Quick-ſand of Deceit?
And Richard, but a raged fatal Rock?
All theſe, the Enemies to our poor Bark.
Say you can ſwim, alas 'tis but a while:
Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly ſink,
Beſtride the Rock, the Tyde will waſh you off,
Or elſe you famiſh, that's a three-fold Death.
This ſpeak I (Lords) to let you underſtand,
If caſe ſome one of you would flye from us,
That there's no hop'd-for Mercy with the Brothers,
More then with ruthleſſe Waves, with Sands and Rocks.
Why courage then, what cannot be avoided,
'Twere childiſh weakneſſe to lament, or fear.

Prin. Me thinks a Woman of this valiant ſpirit,
Should, if a Coward heard her ſpeak theſe words,
Infuſe his Breaſt with Magnanimity,
And make him, naked, foyl a man at armes.
I ſpeak not this, as doubting any here:
For did I but ſuſpect a fearfull man,
He ſhould have leave to go away betimes,
Leaſt in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like ſpirit to himſelf.
If any ſuch be here, as God forbid,
Let him depart, before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and Children of ſo high a courage,
And Warriors faint, why 'twere perpetual ſhame,
Oh brave young Prince: thy famous Grandfather
Doth live again in thee; long may'ſt thou live,
To bear his Image, and renew his Glories.

Som. And he that will not fight for ſuch a hope,
Go home to Bed, and like the Owle by day,
If he ariſe, be mock'd and wondred at.

Qu. Thanks gentle Somerſet, ſweet Oxford thanks.

Prin. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing elſe.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand,
Ready to fight: therefore be reſolute.

Oxf. I thought no leſſe: it is his Policy,
To haſt thus faſt, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd, we are in readineſſe.

Qu. This chears my heart, to ſee your forwardneſſe.

Oxf. Here pitch our Battell, hence we will not budge.

March. Enter Edward, Richard, Clarence, and Souldiers.

Edw. Brave followers, yonder ſtands the thorny Wood
Which by Heavens aſſiſtance, and your ſtrength,
Muſt by the Roots be hew'n up yet ere Night.
I need not adde more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot, ye blaze, to burn them out:
Give ſignal to the fight, and to it Lords.

Qu. Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, what ſhould I ſay,
My tears gain-ſay: for every word I ſpeak,
Ye ſee I drink the water of my eye.
Therefore no more but this: Henry your Soveraign
Is Priſoner to the Foe, his State uſurp'd,
His Realm a ſlaughter-houſe, his Subjects ſlain,
His Statutes cancel'd, and his Treaſure ſpent:
And yonder is the Wolf, that makes this ſpoyl.
You fight in Juſtice: then in Gods Name, Lords,
Be valiant, and give ſignal to the fight.

Alarum, Retreat, Excurſions. Exeunt.

Enter Edward, Richard, Queen, Clarence, Oxford, Somerſet.

Edw. Now here's a period of tumultuous Broyls.
Away with Oxford to Hames Caſtle ſtraight:
For Somerſet, off with his guilty Head.
Go bear them hence, I will not hear them ſpeak.

Oxf. For my part, I'le not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but ſtoop with patience to my fortune.
Exeunt.

Que. So part we ſadly in this troblous World,
To meet with Joy in ſweet Jeruſalem.

Edw. Is Proclamation made, That who finds Edward,
Shall have a high Reward, and he his Life?

Rich. It is, and loe where youthfull Edward comes.

Enter the Prince.

Edw. Bring forth the Gallant, let us hear him ſpeak.
What? can ſo young a Thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what ſatisfaction canſt thou make,
For bearing Armes, for ſtirring up my ſubjects,
And all the trouble thou haſt turn'd me to?

Prin. Speak like a Subject, proud ambitious York.
Suppoſe that I am now my Fathers Mouth,
Reſign thy Chair, and where I ſtand kneel thou,
Whil'ſt I propoſe the ſelf-ſame words to thee,
Which (Traitor) thou would'ſt have me anſwer to.

Que. Ah, that thy Father had been ſo reſolv'd.

Rich. That you might ſtill have worn the Petticoat,
And ne're have ſtoln the Breech from Lancaſter.

Prin. Let Æſop fable in a Winters Night,
His Curriſh Riddles ſorts not with this place.

Rich. By Heaven, Brat, I'le plague ye for that word.

Que. I thou waſt born to be a plague to men.

Rich. For Gods ſake, take away this Captive Scold.

Prin. Nay, take away this ſcolding Crook-back, rather.

Edw. Peace wilfull Boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd Lad, thou art too malapert.

Prin. I know my duty, you are all undutifull:
Laſcivious Edward, and thou perjur'd George,
And thou miſ-ſhapen Dick, I tell ye all,
I am your better, Traitors as ye are.
And thou uſurp'ſt my Fathers right and mine.

Edw. Take that, the likeneſſe of this Rayler here.
Stabs him.

Rich. Sprawl'ſt thou? take that, to end thy agony.
Rich. Stabs him.

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury.
Clar. Stabs him.

Que. Oh, kill me too.

Rich. Marry, and ſhall. Offers to kill her.

Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much.

Rich.

Rich. Why should we live, to fill the World with words?

Edw. What? doth she swoun? use means for her recovery.

Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother: I'le hence to London on a serious matter, Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Rich. Tower, the Tower. Exit.

Qu. Oh Ned, sweet Ned, speak to thy Mother Boy. Can'st thou not speak? O Traitors, Murtherers! They that stabb'd Cæsar, shed no bloud at all: Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame, If this foul deed were by, to equall it. He was a Man; this (in respect) a Child, And Men, ne're spend their fury on a Child. What's worse then Murtherer, that I may name it? No, no, my heart will burst, and if I speak, And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. Butchers and Villains, bloudy Canniballs, How sweet a Plant have you untimely cropt: You have no children (Butchers) if you had, The thought of them would have stir'd up remorse; But if you ever chance to have a Child, Look in his youth to have him so cut off. As deathsmen you have rid this sweet young Prince.

King. Away with her, go bear her hence perforce.

Qu. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here: Here sheath thy sword, I'le pardon thee my death: What? wilt thou not? Then Clarence do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Qu. Good Clarence do, sweet Clarence do thou it.

Clar. Did'st thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Qu. I but thou usest to forswear thy self. 'Twas sin before, but now 'tis Charity. What wilt thou not? where is that devils butcher Richard, Hard favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou? Thou art not here; Murther is thy Almsdeed. Petitioner for Bloud, thou ne're pul'st back.

Edw. Away I say, I charge ye bear her hence.

Qu. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince. Exit Queen.

Edw. Where's Richard gone.

Cla. To London all in post, and as I guess: To make a bloudy Supper in the Tower?

Edw. He's sudden if a thing comes in his head, Now march we hence, discharge the common sort With Pay and thanks, and let's away to London, And see our gentle Queen how well she fares, By this (I hope) she hath a Son for me. Exit.

Enter Henry the sixth, and Richard, with the Lieutenant on the Walls.

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what at your Book so hard?

Hen. I my good Lord: my Lord I should say rather, 'Tis sin to flatter, Good was little better: Good Gloster, and Good devill, were alike, And both preposterous: therefore, not Good Lord.

Rich. Sirrha, leave us to our selves, we must confer.

Hen. So flyes the wreakless shepherd from the Wolf: So first the harmlesse Sheep doth yield his Fleece, And next his Throat unto the butchers Knife. What Scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Rich. Suspition alwayes haunts the guilty mind, The Thief doth fear each bush an Officer.

Hen. The Bird that hath been limed in a bush; With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush; And I the helpless Male to one sweet Bird, Have now the fatal Object in my eye, Where my poor young was limb'd, was caught, and kild.

Rich. Why what a peevish Fool was that of Creet, That taught his Son the office of a Fowl, And yet for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

Hen. I Dedalus, my poor Boy Icarus, Thy Father Minos, that deni'd our course, The Sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet Boy. Thy Brother Edward, and thy self, the Sea Whose envious Gulf did swallow up his life: Ah, kill me with thy Weapon, not with words, My breast can better brook thy Daggers point, Then can my ears that Tragick History. But wherefore dost thou come? Is't for my Life?

Rich. Think'st thou I am an Executioner?

Hen. A persecutor I am sure thou art, If murthering Innocents be Executing, Why then thou art an Executioner.

Rich. Thy Son I kill'd for his presumption.

Hen. Hadst thou bin kill'd when first thou didst presume, Thou had'st not liv'd to kill a Son of mine: And thus I prophesie that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear, And many an old mans sigh, and many a Widows, And many an Orphans water-standing-eye, Men for their Sons, Wives for their Husbands fate, And Orphans, for their Parents timeless death, Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born. The Owle shriek'd at thy birth, an evill sign, The Night-Crow cry'd, aboding luckless time, Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees: The Raven rook'd her on the Chimnies top, And chatt'ring Pies in dismal Discords sung: Thy Mother felt more then a Mothers pain, And yet brought forth lesse then a Mothers hope, To wit, an indigested deformed lump, Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. Teeth had'st thou in thy head, when thou was't born, To signifie, thou cam'st to bite the world: And if the rest be true which I have heard, Thou cam'st----------

Rich. I'le hear no more:
Die Prophet in thy speech, Stabs him.
For this (among'st the rest) was I ordain'd.

Hen. I, and for much more slaughter after this, O God forgive my sins, and pardon thee. Dies.

Rich. What? will the aspiring bloud of Lancaster Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted. See how my sword weeps for the poor Kings death. O may such purple tears be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house. If any spark of life be yet remaining, Down, down to hell, and say I sent thee thither. Stabs him again.
I that have neither pitty, love, nor fear. Indeed 'tis true that Henry told me of: For I have often heard my Mother say, I came into the world with my Legs forward. Had I not reason (think ye) to make haste, And seek their Ruine, that usurp'd our Right? The Midwife wonder'd, and the Women cride O Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth,

And

And so I was, which plainly signified,
That I should snarle, and bite, and play the dog:
Then since the Heavens have shap'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my Mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother:
And this word [Love] which Gray-beards call Divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me: I am my self alone.
Clarence beware, thou keep'st me from the light,
But I will sort a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buz abroad such Prophesies,
That Edward shall be fearfull of his life,
And then to purge his fear, I'le be thy death.
King Henry, and the Prince his son are gone,
Clarence thy turn is next, and then the rest,
Counting my self but bad, till I be best.
I'le throw thy body in another room,
And triumph Henry, in thy day of Doom. Exit.

Enter King, Queen, Clarence, Richard, Hastings, Nurse, and Attendants.

King. Once more we sit in Englands Royal Throne,
Re-purchac'd with the blood of Enemies:
What valiant Foe-men, like to Autumns Corn,
Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride?
Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold Renown,
For hardy and undoubted Champions:
Two Cliffords, as the Father and the Son,
And two Northamberlands: two braver men,
Ne're spurr'd their Coursers at the Trumpets sound.
With them, the two brave Bears, Warwick and Mountague,
That in their Chains fetter'd the Kingly Lion,
And made the Forrest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept Suspition from our Seat,
And made our footstool of Security.
Come hither Bess, and let me kisse my Boy:
Young Ned, for thee, thine Uncles, and my self,
Have in our armors watch'd the Winter night,
Went all afoot in Summers scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossesse the Crowne in peace,
And of our Labours thou shalt reap the gain.
Rich. I'le blast his harvest, if your head were laid,
For I yet am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave,
And heave it shall some waight, or break my back,
Work thou the way, and that shall execute.
King. Clarence and Gloster, love my lovely Queen,
And kisse your Princely Nephew Brothers both.
Clar. The duty that I owe your Majesty,
I Seal upon the lips of this sweet Babe.
King. Thanks Noble Clarence, worthy brother thanks.
Ri. And that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st
Witnesse the loving kisse I give the Fruit:
To say the truth, so Judas kist his master,
And cryed all hail, when as he meant all harm.
King. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my Countries peace, and brothers loves.
Clar. What will your Grace have done with Margaret?
Reynard her Father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransome.
King. Away with her, and waft her hence to France:
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With Stately Triumphs, mirthfull Comick shews,
Such as befits the pleasure of the Court.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, farewell sowre annoy,
For here I hope begins our lasting joy. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of Richard the Third:

With the Landing of the Earl of Richmond, and the Battel at Bosworth Field.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloster, solus.

NOw is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glorious Summer by this Son of York:
And all the clouds that lowr'd upon our house
In the deep bosome of the Ocean buried.
Now are our browes bound with Victorious Wreathes,
Our bruised armes hung up for Monuments;
Our stern Alarums chang'd to merry Meetings;
Our dreadfull Marches to delightfull Measures.
Grim-visag'd War, hath smooth'd his wrinkled Front:
And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds,
To fright the Soules of fearfull Adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a Ladie's Chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a Lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glass:
I, that am Rudely stampt, and want Love's Majesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling Nymph:
I, that am curtail'd of this fair Proportion,
Cheated of Feature by dissembling Nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing World, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable,
That dogges bark at me, as I halt by them:
Why I (in this weak piping time of Peace)
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my Shadow in the Sun,
And descant on mine own Deformity.
And therefore, since I cannot prove a Lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken dayes,
I am determined to prove a Villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these dayes.
Plots have I laid, Inductions dangerous,
By drunken Prophesies, Libels, and Dreams,
To set my Brother Clarence and the King
In deadly hate, the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and just,
As I am Subtle, False, and Treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up:
About a Prophesie, which sayes that G,
Of Edward's heirs the murtherer shall be.
Dive thoughts down to my soul, here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, and Brakenbury, guarded.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard
That waits upon your Grace?

Cla. His Majesty tendring my persons safety,
Hath appointed this Conduct to convey me to th' Tower.

Rich. Upon what cause?

Cla. Because my name is George.

Rich. Alack my Lord, that fault is none of yours:
He should for that commit your Grandfathers.
O belike, his Majesty hath some intent,
That you should be new Christned in the Tower.
But what's the matter Clarence, may I know?

Cla. Yea Richard, when I know: but I protest
As yet I do not: But as I can learn,
He hearkens after Prophesies and Dreams,
And from the Cross-row plucks the letter G:
And sayes, a Wizard told him, that by G,
His issue dis-inherited should be.
And for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.
These (as I learn) and such toyes as these,
Hath mov'd his Highness to commit me now.

Rich. Why this it is, when men are rul'd by Women.
'Tis not the King that sends you to the Tower,
My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarence 'tis she,
That tempts him to this harsh Extremity.
Was it not she, and that good man of Worship,
Anthony Woodville her Brother there,
That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower?
From whence this present day he is delivered.
We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.

Cla. By heaven, I think there is no man secure
But the Queen's Kindred, and night-walking Heralds,
That trudge betwixt the King, and Mistris Shore.
Heard you not what an humble Suppliant
Lord Hastings was, for his delivery?

Rich. Humbly complaining to her Deitie,
Got my Lord Chamberlain his liberty.
I'le tell you what, I think it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the King,
To be her man, and wear her Livery:
The jealous o're-worn Widow, and her self,
Since that our Brother dub'd them Gentlewomen,
Are mighty Gossips in our Monarchy.

Bra. I beseech your Graces both to pardon me,
His Majesty hath straightly given in charge,
That no man shall have private Conference
(Of what degree soever) with your Brother.

Rich. Even so, and please your worship Brakenbury,
You may partake of any thing we say:
We speak no Treason man; we say the King
Is wise and virtuous, and his noble Queen
Well stroke in years, fair and not jealous.
We say, that Shore's wife hath a pretty Foot,
A cherry Lip, a bonny Eye, a passing pleasing Tongue:
And that the Queen's Kindred are made Gentle-folks.
How say you, Sir? can you deny all this?

Bra. With this (my Lord) my self have nought to doe.

Rich. Naught to doe with Mistriss Shore?
I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her
(Excepting one) were best to do it secretly alone.

Bra. What one, my Lord?

Rich. Her Husband Knave, would'st thou betray me?

Bra. I do beseech your Grace
To pardon me, and withall forbear
Your Conference with the noble Duke.

Cla. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and will obey.

Rich. We are the Queen's abjects, and must obey.
Brother farewell, I will unto the King,
And whatsoe're you will employ me in,
Were it to call King Edward's widow, Sister,
I will perform it to infranchise you.
Mean time, this deep disgrace of Brotherhood,
Touches me deeper then you can imagine.

Cla. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Rich. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long,
I will deliver you, or else lye for you:
Mean time have patience.

Cla. I must perforce: farewel. Exit Cla.

Rich. Go tread the path that thou shalt ne're return:
Simple plain Clarence, I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy Soul to Heaven,
If Heaven will take the present at our hands,
But who comes here? the new delivered Hastings?

Enter Lord Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious Lord.

Rich. As much unto my good Lord Chamberlain:
Well are you welcome to this open Air,
How hath your Lordship brook'd Imprisonment?

Hast. With patience (noble Lord) as prisoners must:
But I shall live (my Lord) to give them thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Rich. No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Clarence too,
For they that were your Enemies, are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him, as you.

Hast. More pitie, that the Eagles should be mew'd,
Whiles Kites and Buzzards play at liberty.

Rich. What newes abroad?

Hast. No newes so bad abroad, as this at home:
The King is sickly, weak and melancholly,
And his Physicians fear him mightily.

Rich. Now by Saint John, that news is bad indeed.
O he hath kept an evil diet long,
And over-much consum'd his Royal Person:
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.
Where is he, in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Rich. Go you before, and I will follow you.
Exit Hastings.
He cannot live I hope, and must not dye,
'Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to Heaven.
I'le in to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
Which lyes well steel'd with weighty arguments,
And if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,
And leave the world for me to bustle in.
For then, I'le marry Warwick's youngest daughter,
What though I kill'd her Husband, and her Father,
The readiest way to make the wench amends,
Is to become her husband and her father:
The which will I, not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to Market:
Clarence still breathes, Edward still lives and raigns,
When they are gone, then must I count my gaines. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Coarse of Henry the sixth, with Halberds to guard it, Lady Anne being the Mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,
If Honour may be shrowded in a Herse;
Whil'st I a-while obsequiously lament
Th'untimely fall of Virtuous Lancaster,
Poor key-cold Figure of a holy King,
Pale ashes of the House of Lancaster;
Thou bloudless Remnant of that Royal Bloud,
Be it lawfull that I invocate thy Ghost,
To hear the Lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughtred Son,
Stab'd by the selfesame hand that made these wounds.
Loe, in these windows that let forth thy Life,
I pour the helpless Balm of my poor eyes.
O curs'd be the hand that made these holes:
Curs'd the heart, that had the heart to do it:
Curs'd the bloud, that let this bloud from hence,
More direfull hap betide that hated wretch
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Then I can wish to Wolves, to Spiders, Toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives.
If ever he have Child, Abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopefull Mother at the view,
And that be Heir to his unhappiness.
If ever he have Wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Then I am made by my young Lord, and thee.
Come now towards Chertsey with your holy Load,
Taken from Paules, to be interred there.
And still as you are weary of this weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament King Henri's Corse.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloster.

Rich. Stay you that bear the Corse, and set it down.

An. What black Magician conjures up this Fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Rich. Villains set down the Corse; or by S. Paul,
I'le make a Corse of him that disobeys.

Gen.

Gen. My Lord ſtand back, and let the Coffin paſs.
Rich. Unmanner'd Dog,
Stand thou when I command:
Advance thy Halbert higher then my breaſt,
Or by S. Paul I'le ſtrike thee to my Foot,
And ſpurn upon thee, Beggar, for thy boldneſs.
Anne. What do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortal,
And Mortal eyes cannot endure the Devil.
Avant thou dreadfull miniſter of Hell;
Thou had'ſt but power over his Mortal body,
His Soul thou canſt not have: therefore be gone.
Rich. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not ſo curſt.
Anne. Foul Devil,
For God's ſake hence, and trouble us not,
For thou haſt made the happy earth thy Hell:
Fill'd it with curſing cries, and deep exclaimes:
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy Butcheries.
Oh Gentlemen, ſee, ſee dead Henrie's wounds,
Open their congeal'd mouthes, and bleed a-freſh.
Bluſh, bluſh, thou lump of foul Deformity:
For 'tis thy preſence that exhales this bloud
From cold and empty Veins where no bloud dwels.
Thy deeds inhumane and unnatural,
Provokes this Deluge moſt unnatural.
O God! which this Bloud mad'ſt, revenge his death:
O Earth! which this Bloud drink'ſt, revenge his death.
Either Heav'n with Lightning ſtrike the murth'rer dead,
Or Earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou doſt ſwallow up this good King's bloud,
Which this Hell-govern'd arme hath butchered.
Rich. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,
Which renders good for bad, Bleſſings for Curſes.
Anne. Villain, thou know'ſt nor law of God nor Man,
No Beaſt ſo fierce, but knows ſome touch of pitie.
Rich. But I know none, and therefore am no Beaſt.
Anne. O wonderfull, when Devils tell the truth!
Rich. More wonderfull, when Angels are ſo angry:
Vouchſafe (divine perfection of a Woman)
Of theſe ſuppoſed Crimes, to give me leave,
By circumſtance, but to acquit my ſelf.
Anne. Vouchſafe (diffus'd infection of a man)
Of theſe known evils, but to give me leave
By circumſtance, to curſe thy curſed Self.
Rich. Fairer then tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leiſure to excuſe my ſelf.
Anne. Fouler then heart can think thee,
Thou can'ſt make no excuſe currant,
But to hang thy ſelf.
Rich. By ſuch deſpair, I ſhould accuſe my ſelf.
Anne. And by deſpairing ſhalt thou ſtand excuſed,
For doing worthy Vengeance on thy ſelf,
That did'ſt unworthy ſlaughter upon others.
Rich. Say that I ſlew them not.
Anne. Then ſay they were not ſlain:
But dead they are, and, devilliſh ſlave, by thee.
Rich. I did not kill your Husband.
Anne. Why then he is alive.
Rich. Nay, he is dead, and ſlain by Edward's hands.
Anne. In thy foul Throat thou Ly'ſt,
Queen Margaret ſaw
Thy murd'rous Faulchion ſmoaking in his bloud:
The which, thou once didd'ſt bend againſt her breaſt,
But that thy Brothers beat aſide the point.
Rich. I was provoked by her ſland'rous tongue,
That laid their guilt, upon my guiltleſs ſhoulders.
Anne. Thou was't provoked by thy bloudy mind,
That never dream'ſt on ought but butcheries:
Did'ſt thou not kill this King?
Rich. I grant ye.
Anne. Do'ſt grant me, Hedge-hog,
Then God grant me too
Thou may'ſt be damned for that wicked deed:
O he was gentle, milde, and virtuous.
Rich. The better for the King of heaven that hath him.
Anne. He is in heaven where thou ſhalt never come.
Rich. Let him thank me, that holp to ſend him thither:
For he was fitter for that place then earth.
Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.
Rich. Yes one place elſe, if you will hear me name it.
Anne. Some dungeon.
Rich. Your Bed-chamber.
Anne. Ill reſt betide the chamber where thou lyeſt.
Rich. So will it Madam, 'till I lye with you.
Anne. I hope ſo.
Rich. I know ſo. But gentle Lady Anne,
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall ſomething into a ſlower method.
Is not the cauſer of the timeleſs deaths
Of theſe Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blamefull as the Executioner?
Anne. Thou was't the cauſe, and moſt accurſt effect.
Rich. Your beauty was the cauſe of that effect:
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my ſleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one hour in your ſweet boſome.
Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee Homicide,
Theſe Nails ſhould rent that beauty from my Cheeks.
Rich. Theſe eyes could not endure that beauties wrack,
You ſhould not blemiſh it, if I ſtood by;
As all the world is cheered by the Sun,
So I by that: it is my day, my life.
An. Black night o're-ſhade thy day, & death thy life.
Rich. Curſe not thy ſelf, fair Creature,
Thou art both.
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.
Rich. It is a quarrel moſt unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.
Anne. It is a quarrel juſt and reaſonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my Husband.
Rich. He that bereft the Lady of thy Husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.
Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.
Rich. He lives, that loves thee better then he could.
Anne. Name him.
Rich. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why that was he.
Rich. The ſelf-ſame name, but one of better Nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Rich. Here: Spits at him.
Why doſt thou ſpit at me?
Anne. Would it were mortal poiſon, for thy ſake.
Rich. Never came poiſon from ſo ſweet a place.
Anne. Never hung poiſon on a fouler Toad.
Out of my ſight, thou doſt infect mine eyes.
Rich. Thine eyes (ſweet Lady) have infected mine.
Anne. Would they were Baſilisks, to ſtrike thee dead.
Rich. I would they were, that I might dye at once:
For now they kill me with a living death.
Thoſe eyes of thine, from mine have drawn ſalt Tears;

Sham'd their Aſpects with ſtore of childiſh drops:
Theſe eyes, which never ſhed remorſefull tear,
No, when my Father York, and Edward wept.
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
When black-fac'd Clifford ſhook his ſword at him.
Nor when my Warlike Father like a child,
Told the ſad ſtory of my Father's death,
And twenty times, made pauſe to ſob and weep,
That all the ſtanders by had wet their cheeks
Like Trees be-daſh'd with rain: in that ſad time,
My manly eyes did ſcorn an humble tear:
And what theſe ſorrows could not thence exhale,
Thy Beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never ſued to Friend, nor Enemy:
My Tongue could never learn ſweet ſmoothing word.
But now thy Beauty is propos'd my Fee,
My proud heart ſues, and prompts my tongue to ſpeak.
She looks ſcornfully at him.
Teach not thy lip ſuch Scorn; for it was made
For kiſſing Lady, not for ſuch contempt.
If thy revengefull heart cannot forgive,
Loe here I lend thee this ſharp-pointed Sword,
Which if thou pleaſe to hide in this true breaſt,
And let the ſoul forth that adoreth thee,
I lay it naked to thy deadly ſtroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
He layes his breaſt open, ſhe offers at it with his ſword.
Nay do not pauſe: for I did kill King Henry,
But 'twas thy Beauty that provoked me.
Nay now diſpatch: 'Twas I that ſtab'd young Edward,
But 'twas thy Heavenly face that ſet me on.
She falls the ſword.
Take up the ſword again, or take up me.

Anne. Ariſe Diſſembler, though I wiſh thy death,
I will not be thy Executioner.

Rich. Then bid me kill my ſelf, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.

Rich. That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and even with thy word,
This hand, which for thy love, did kill thy Love,
Shall for thy love, kill a far truer Love,
To both their deaths ſhalt thou be acceſſary.

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.

Rich. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me, both are falſe.

Rich. Then never Man was true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your Sword.

Rich. Say then my Peace is made.

Anne. That ſhalt thou know hereafter.

Rich. But ſhall I live in hope?

Anne. All men I hope live ſo.
Vouchſafe to wear this Ring.

Rich. Look how thy Ring encompaſſeth my Finger,
Even ſo thy Breaſt incloſeth my poor heart:
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted Servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou doſt confirm this happineſs for ever.

Anne. What is it?

Rich. That it may pleaſe you leave theſe ſad deſignes,
To him that hath moſt cauſe to be a Mourner,
And preſently repair to Crosbie Houſe:
Where (after I have ſolemnly interr'd
At Chertſey Monaſt'ry this noble King,
And wet his Grave with my Repentant Tears)
I will with all expedient duty ſee you.
For diverſunknown Reaſons, I beſeech you,
Grant me this Boon.

Anne. With all my heart, and much it joyes me too,
To ſee you are become ſo penitent.
Treſſel and Barkley, go along with me.

Rich. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more then you deſerve:
But ſince you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have ſaid farewell already.
Exit two with Anne.

Gent. Towards Chertſey, Noble Lord?

Rich. Now to White Fryers, there attend my coming.
Exit Coarſe.
Was ever woman in this humour Woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour wonne?
I'le have her, but I will not keep her long.
What? I have kill'd her husband, and his father,
To take her in her hearts extreameſt hate,
With curſes in her mouth, teares in her eyes,
The bleeding witneſs of my hatred by,
Having God, her Conſcience, and theſe bars againſt me,
And I no friends to back my ſuite withall,
But the plain Devil and diſſembling looks?
And yet to winne her? All the world to nothing.
Hah!
Hath ſhe forgot already that brave Prince,
Edward, her Lord, whom I (ſome three months ſince)
Stab'd in my angry mood, at Tewksbury?
A ſweeter and a lovelier Gentleman
Fram'd in the prodigality of Nature;
Young, Valiant, Wiſe, and (no doubt) right Royal,
The ſpacious world cannot again afford,
And will ſhe thus abaſe her eyes on me,
That crop't the Golden prime of this ſweet Prince,
And made her Widow to a woſull Bed?
On me, whoſe All not equals Edward's Moytie?
On me, that halts, and am miſhapen thus?
My Dukedome, to a beggarly denier?
I do miſtake my perſon all this while:
Upon my life ſhe finds (although I cannot)
My ſelf to be a marv'lous proper man.
I'le be at charges for a Looking-glaſs,
And entertain a ſcore or two of Taylors,
To ſtudie faſhions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with my ſelf,
I will maintain it with ſome little coſt,
But firſt I'le turn yon fellow in his Grave,
And then return lamenting to my Love.
Shine out fair Sun, 'till I have bought a Glaſs,
That I may ſee my Shadow as I paſs. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Queen Mother, Lord Rivers, and Lord Gray.

Riv. Have patience Madam, there's no doubt his Majeſty
Will ſoon recover his accuſtom'd health.

Gray. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worſe,
Therefore for God's ſake entertain good comfort,
And cheer his Grace with quick and merry eyes.

Queen. If he were dead, what would betide on me?
Gray.

Gray. No other harm, but loſs of ſuch a Lord.
Qu. The loſs of ſuch a Lord, includes all harmes.
Gray. The Heavens have bleſt you with a goodly Son,
To be your Comforter, when he is gone.
Qu. Ah! he is young; and his minority
Is put unto the truſt of Richard Gloſter,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.
Riv. Is it concluded he ſhall be Protector?
Qu. It is determin'd, not concluded yet:
But ſo it muſt be, if the King miſcarry.

Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Gray. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.
Buc. Good time of day unto your Royal Grace.
Derb. God make you Majeſty joyfull, as you have bin.
Qu. The Counteſs Richmond, good my L. of Derby,
To your good prayer will ſcarcely ſay, Amen.
Yet Derby, notwithſtanding ſhe's your Wife,
And loves not me, be you, good Lord, aſſur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.
Derb. I do beſeech you, either not believe
The envious ſlanders of her falſe Accuſers:
Or if ſhe be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakneſs, which I think proceeds
From wayward ſickneſs, and no grounded malice.
Qu. Saw you the King to day my Lord of Derby?
Derb. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,
Are come from viſiting his Majeſty.
Qu. What likelyhood of his amendment Lords?
Buc. Madam good hope, his Grace ſpeaks chearfully.
Qu. God grant him health, did you confer with him?
Buc. I Madam, deſires to make attonement,
Between the Duke of Gloſter, and your Brothers,
And between them, and my Lord Chamberlain,
And ſent to warn them to his Royal preſence.
Qu. Would all were well, but that will never be,
I fear our happineſs is at the height.

Enter Richard.

Rich. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it,
Who is it that complains unto the King,
That I (forſooth) am ſtern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly,
That fill his eares with ſuch diſſentious Rumors.
Becauſe I cannot flatter, and look fair,
Smile in men's faces, ſmooth, deceive, and cogge,
Duck with French nods, and Apiſh curteſie,
I muſt be held a rancorous Enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his ſimple truth muſt be abus'd,
With ſilken, ſlie, inſinuating Jacks?
Gray. To whom in all this preſence ſpeaks your Grace?
Rich. To thee, that haſt nor honeſty, nor Grace:
When have I injur'd thee? When done thee wrong?
Or thee? or thee? or any of your Faction?
A plague upon you all. His Royal Grace
(Whom God preſerve better then you would wiſh)
Cannot be quiet ſcarce a breathing while,
But you muſt trouble him with lewd complaints.
Qu. Brother of Gloſter, you miſtake the matter:
The King on his own Royal diſpoſition,
(And not provok'd by any Suitor elſe)
Aiming (belike) at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action ſhews it ſelf
Againſt my Children, Brothers, and my Self,
Makes him to ſend, that he may learn the ground.
Rich. I cannot tell, the world is grown ſo bad,
That Wrens make prey, where Eagles dare not perch.
Since every Jack became a Gentleman,
There's many a gentle perſon made a Jack.
Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother Gloſter,
You envy my advancement, and my friends:
God grant we never may have need of you.
Rich. Mean time, God grants that I have need of you.
Our Brother is impriſon'd by your means,
My ſelf diſgrac'd, and the Nobility
Held in contempt, while great Promotions
Are daily given to ennoble thoſe
That ſcarce ſome two dayes ſince were worth a Noble.
Qu. By him that rais'd me to this carefull height,
From that contented hap which I enjoy'd.
I never did incenſe his Majeſty
Againſt the Duke of Clarence, but have bin
An earneſt advocate to plead for him.
My Lord you do me ſhamefull injury,
Falſely to draw me in theſe vile ſuſpects.
Rich. You may deny that you were not the mean
Of my Lord Haſtings late impriſonment.
Riv. She may my Lord, for-------
Rich. She may Lord Rivers, why who knows not ſo?
She may do more, ſir, then denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments,
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay thoſe honours on your high deſert.
What may ſhe not? ſhe may, I marry may ſhe.
Riv. What marry may ſhe?
Rich. What marry may ſhe? Marrie with a King,
A batchellor, and a handſome ſtripling too,
I wis your Grandam had a worſer match.
Qu. My Lord of Gloſter, I have too long born
Your blunt upbraidings, and your bitter ſcoffs:
By heaven, I will acquaint his Majeſty
Of thoſe groſs taunts that oft I have endur'd.
I had rather be a Country ſervant maid
Then a great Queen, with this condition,
To be ſo baited, ſcorn'd, and ſtormed at,
Small joy have I in being England's Queen.

Enter old Queen Margaret.

Mar. And leſsned be that ſmall, God I beſeech him,
Thy honour, ſtate, and ſeat, is due to me.
Rich. What? threat you me with telling of the King?
I will avouch't in preſence of the King:
I dare adventure to be ſent to th' Tower.
'Tis time to ſpeak,
My pains are quite forgot.
Margaret. Out Devil,
I do remember them too well:
Thou kill'd'ſt my Husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward my poor Son, at Tewkſbury.
Rich. E're you were Queen,
I, or your Husband King:
I was a pack-horſe in his great affairs:
A weeder out of his proud Adverſaries,
A liberal rewarder of his Friends,
To royalize his bloud, I ſpent mine own.
Margaret. I and much better bloud
Then his, or thine.

Rich. In all which time, you and your Husband Grey
Were factious, for the House of Lancaster;
And Rivers, so were you: was not your Husband,
In Margaret's Battel, at Saint Albans, slain?
Let me put in your minds, if you forget
What you have been e're this, and what you are:
Withall, what I have been and what I am.
Q. M. A murth'rous Villain, and so still thou art.
Rich. Poor Clarence did forsake his Father Warwick,
I, and forswore himself (which Jesu pardon.)
Q. M. Which God revenge.
Rich. To fight on Edward's party, for the Crown,
And for his meed, poor Lord, he is mewed up:
I would to God my heart were Flint, like Edward's,
Or Edward's soft and pitifull, like mine;
I am too childish foolish for this world.
Q. M. Hye thee to Hell for shame, and leave this world
Thou Cacodæmon, there thy Kingdome is.
Riv. My Lord of Gloster: in those busie dayes,
Which here you urge, to prove us Enemies,
We follow'd then our Lord, our Soveraign King,
So should we you, if you would be our King.
Rich. If I should be? I had rather be a Pedler:
Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof.
Qu. As little joy (my Lord) as you suppose
You should enjoy, were you this Countries King,
As little joy you may suppose in me,
That I enjoy, being the Queen thereof.
Q. M. A little joy enjoyes the Queen thereof,
For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient.
Hear me, you wrangling Pyrates that fall out,
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me:
Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?
If not, that I am Queen, you bow like Subjects;
Yet that by you depos'd, you quake like Rebels.
Ah gentle Villain do not turn away. (sight?
Rich. Foul wrinckled Witch, what mak'st thou in my
Q. M. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd,
That will I make, before I let thee go.
Rich. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?
Q. M. I was: but I do find more pain in banishment,
Then death can yield me here, by abode.
A Husband and a Son thou ow'st to me,
And thou a Kingdome; all of you allegiance:
This Sorrow that I have, by right is yours,
And all the Pleasures you usurp are mine.
Rich. The Curse my Noble Father laid on thee,
When thou dio'st Crown his warlike Brows with Paper,
And with thy scornes drew'st rivers from his eyes,
And then to dry them, gav'st the Duke a Clout,
Steep'd in the faultless bloud of pretty Rutland:
His Curses then, from bitterness of Soul,
Denounc'd against thee, are fal'n upon thee:
And God, not we, have plagu'd thy bloudy deed.
Qu. So just is God, to right the innocent.
Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that Babe,
And the most merciless that e're was heard of.
Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.
Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.
Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.
Q. M. What? were you snarling all before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?
Did York's dread Curse prevail so much with Heaven,
That Henrie's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their Kingdomes loss, my wofull banishment,
Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the Clouds and enter Heaven?
Why then give way dull Clouds to my quick Curses.
Though not by War, by Surfet dye your King,
As ours by Murther, to make him a King.
Edward thy Son, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward our Son that was Prince of Wales,
Dye in his youth, by like untimely violence.
Thy self a Queen, for me that was a Queen.
Out-live thy Glory, like my wretched self:
Long may'st thou live, to wail thy Children's death,
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy Rights, as thou art stall'd in mine.
Long dye thy happy dayes, before thy death,
And after many length'ned houres of grief,
Dye neither Mother, Wife, nor England's Queen.
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my Son
Was stab'd with bloudy Daggers: God, I pray him,
That none of you may live his naturall age,
But by some un-look'd-for accident cut off.
Ric. Have done thy Charm, thou hatefull wither'd Hag.
Q. M. And leave out thee? stay Dog, for thou shalt hear
If Heaven have any grievous plague in store, (me.
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O let them keep it, 'till thy sinnes be ripe,
And then hurle down their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poor World's peace.
The worm of Conscience still be-gnaw thy Soul,
Thy Friends suspect for Traytors while thou liv'st,
And take deep Traytors for thy dearest Friends:
No sleep close up that deadly Eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting Dream
Affright thee with a Hell of ugly Devils.
Thou elvish, mark'd, abortive rooting Hog,
Thou that wast seal'd in thy Nativity
The slave of Nature, and the Son of Hell:
Thou slander of thy heavy Mothers womb,
Thou loathed Issue of thy Fathers loyns,
Thou Rag of Honour, thou detested ----
Rich. Margaret.
Q. M. Richard. Rich. Ha.
Q. M. I call thee not.
Rich. I cry thee mercy then: for I did think,
That thou had'st call'd me all these bitter names.
Q. M. Why so I did, but look'd for no reply.
Oh let me make the Period to my Curse.
Rich. 'Tis done by me, and ends in Margaret.
Q. Thus have you breath'd your curse against your self.
Q. M. Poor painted Queen, vain flourish of my fortune,
Why strew'st thou Sugar on that Bottel'd Spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
Fool, fool, thou whet'st a Knife to kill thy self:
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me,
To help thee curse this poysonous Bunch-backt Toad.
Hast. False boading Woman, end thy frantick curse,
Lest to thy harm, thou move our patience.
Q. M. Foul shame upon you, you have all mov'd mine.
Ri. Were you wel serv'd, you would be taught your duty.
Q. M. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your Queen, and you my Subjects:
O serve me well, and teach your selves that duty.
Dors. Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.
Q. M. Peace master Marquess, you are malapert,
Your fire-new stamp of Honour is scarce currant.

O that your young Nobility can judge
What 'twere to loſe it, and be miſerable.
They that ſtand high have many blaſts to ſhake them,
And if they fall, they daſh themſelves to pieces.
Rich. Good counſel marry, learn it, learn it Marqueſs.
Dor. It touches you my Lord, as much as me.
Rich. I, and much more: but I was born ſo high:
Our ayerie buildeth in the Cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind, and ſcorns the Sun.
Mar. And turns the Sun to ſhade: alas, alas,
Witneſs my Son now in the ſhade of death,
Whoſe bright out-ſhining beams, thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal Darkneſs folded up.
Your ayery buildeth in our ayeries Neſt:
O God that ſeeſt it do not ſuffer it,
As it is won with bloud, loſt be it ſo.
Buc. Peace, peace for ſhame: If not for Charity.
Mar. Urge neither Charity, nor Shame to me:
Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And ſhamefully my hopes (by you) are butcher'd.
My Charity is outrage, Life my ſhame,
And in that ſhame, ſtill live my ſorrows rage.
Buc. Have done, have done.
Mar. O Princely Buckingham, I'le kiſs thy hand,
In ſign of League and amity with thee:
Now fair befall thee, and thy Noble houſe:
Thy Garments are not ſpotted with our bloud:
Nor thou within the compaſs of my curſe.
Buc. Nor no one here: for Curſes never paſs
The lips of thoſe that breathe them in the air.
Mar. I will not think but they aſcend the ſky,
And there awake God's gentle ſleeping peace.
O Buckingham, take heed of yonder Dog:
Look when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites,
His venom Tooth will rankle to the death:
Have not to do with him, beware of him,
Sin, death, and hell have ſet their marks on him,
And all their Miniſters attend on him.
Rich. What doth ſhe ſay, my Lord of Buckingham?
Buc. Nothing that I reſpect my gracious Lord.
Mar. What doſt thou ſcorn me
For my gentle counſel?
And ſooth the Devil that I warn thee from.
O but remember this another day:
When he ſhall ſplit thy very heart with ſorrow:
And ſay (poor Margaret) was a Propheteſſe:
Live each of you the ſubjects to his hate,
And he to yours, and, all of you to Gods. Exit.
Buc. My hair doth ſtand an end to hear her curſes.
Riv. And ſo doth mine, I muſe why ſhe's at liberty.
Rich. I cannot blame her, by God's holy Mother,
She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I have done to her.
Der. I never did her any to my knowledge.
Rich. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong:
I was too hot, to do ſome body good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now:
Marry as for Clarence, he is well repayed:
He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains,
God pardon them that are the cauſe thereof.
Riv. A virtuous, and a Chriſtian-like concluſion,
To pray for them that have done ſcath to us.
Rich. So do I ever, being well adviſ'd.
Speaks to himſelf.
For had I curſt now, I had curſt my ſelf.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his Majeſty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord.
Qu. Catesby I come, Lords will you go with me?
Rive. We wait upon your Grace.
Exeunt all but Gloſter.
Rich. I do thee wrong, and firſt begin to brawl.
The ſecret miſchiefs that I ſet a-broach,
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence, whom I indeed have caſt in darkneſs,
I do beweep to many ſimple Gulls,
Namely to Derby, Haſtings, Buckingham,
And tell them 'tis the Queen, and her Allies,
That ſtirre the King againſt the Duke my Brother.
Now they believe it, and withall whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorſet, Grey.
But then I ſigh, and with a piece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I cloath my naked Villany
With odde old ends, ſtol'n forth of holy Writ,
And ſeem a Saint, when moſt I play the Devil.

Enter two Murtherers.

But ſoft, here come my Executioners,
How now my hardy ſtout reſolved Mates,
Are you now going to diſpatch this thing?
Vill. We are my Lord, and come to have the Warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.
Rich. Well thought upon, I have it here about me:
When you have done, repair to Crosby Place;
But ſirs be ſudden in the execution,
Withall obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well-ſpoken, and perhaps
May move your hearts to pitie, if you mark him.
Vill. Tut, tut, my Lord, we will not ſtand to prate;
Talkers are no good doers, be aſſur'd:
We go to uſe our hands, and not our tongues,
Rich. Your eyes drop Mill-ſtones, when Fools eyes fall Teares,
I like you Lads, about your buſineſs ſtraight.
Go, go, diſpatch.
Vill. We will my Noble Lord. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Clarence and Keeper.

Keep. Why looks your Grace ſo heavily?
Cla. O, I have paſt a miſerable night,
So full of fearfull Dreams, of ugly ſights,
That as I am a Chriſtian faithfull man,
I would not ſpend another ſuch a night
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy dayes:
So full of diſmall terrour was the time.
Kee. What was your dream, my Lord, I pray you tel me.
Cla. Me thoughts that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark'd to croſs to Burgundy,
And in my company my Brother Gloſter,
Who from my Cabin tempted me to walk,
Upon the Hatches: There we look'd toward England,
And cited up a thouſand heavy times,

During

During the Warres of York and Lancaster
That had befal'n us. As he pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the Hatches,
Me thought that Gloster ſtumbled, and in falling
Strook me (that thought to ſtay him) over-board,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.
O Lord, me thought what pain it was to drown,
What dreadfull noiſe of water in mine eares,
What ſights of ugly death within mine eyes.
Me thoughts, I ſaw a thouſand fearfull wracks:
A thouſand men that fiſhes gnaw'd upon:
Wedges of Gold, great Anchors, heaps of Pearl,
Ineſtimable Stones, unvalued Jewels,
All ſcattered in the bottom of the Sea:
Some lay in dead-men's Sculls, and in the holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 'twere in ſcorn of Eyes) reflecting Gemmes,
That woo'd the ſlimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay ſcattred by.

Keep. Had you ſuch leiſure in the time of death,
To gaze upon theſe ſecrets of the deep?

Cla. Me thought I had, and often did I ſtrive
To yield the Ghoſt: but ſtill the envious Flood
Stop'd in my ſoul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vaſt, and wand'ring air;
But ſmother'd it within my panting bulk,
Who almoſt burſt, to belch it in the Sea.

Keep. Awak'd you not in this ſore Agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life.
O then, began the Tempeſt to my Soul,
I paſt (me thought) the Melancholly floud,
With that ſowre Ferry-man which Poets write of,
Unto the Kingdome of perpetual Night.
The firſt that there did greet my Stranger-ſoul,
Was my great Father-in-law renowned Warwick,
Who ſpake alowd: What ſcourge for Perjury,
Can this dark Monarchy afford falſe Clarence?
And ſo he vaniſh'd. Then came wand'ring by,
A Shadow like an Angel, with bright hair
Dabbl'd in bloud, and he ſhriek'd out aloud
Clarence is come, falſe, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,
That ſtabb'd me in the field by Tewkſbury:
Seize on him Furies, take him unto torment.
With that (me thought) a Legion of foul Fiends
Inviron'd me, and howled in mine eares
Such hideous cryes, that with the very Noiſe,
I (trembling) wak'd, and for a ſeaſon after,
Could not believe, but that I was in Hell,
Such terrible Impreſſion made my Dream.

Keep. No marvel, Lord, though it affrighted you,
I am afraid (me thinks) to hear you tell it.

Cla. Ah Keeper, Keeper, I have done theſe things
(That now give evidence againſt my Soul)
For Edward's ſake, and ſee how he requites me.
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appeaſe thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my miſdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone:
O ſpare my guiltleſs Wife, and my poor children.
Keeper, I prethee ſit by me a while,
My ſoul is heavy, and I fain would ſleep.

Keep. I wil my Lord, God give your Grace good reſt.

Enter Brakenbury the Lievtenant.

Bra. Sorrow breaks Seaſons, and repoſing houres,
Makes the Night Morning, and the Noon-tide Night:
Princes have but their Titles for their Glories,
An outward Honour, for an inward Toil,
And for unfelt Imaginations
They often feel a world of reſtleſs Cares:
So that between their Titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward Fame.

Enter two Murtherers.

1. Mur. Ho, who's here?

Bra. What would'ſt thou Fellow? And how cam'ſt thou hither?

2. Mur. I would ſpeak with Clarence, and I came hither on my Legges.

Bra. What ſo brief?

1. 'Tis better (ſir) then to be tedious:
Let him ſee our Commiſſion, and talk no more. Reads.

Bra. I am in this, commanded to deliver
The Noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reaſon what is meant hereby,
Becauſe I will be guiltleſs from the meaning.
There lies the Duke aſleep, and there the Keyes.
I'le to the King, and ſignify to him,
That thus I have reſign'd to you my charge. Exit.

1. You may, ſir, 'tis a point of wiſedome:
Fare you well.

2. What, ſhall we ſtab him as he ſleeps?

1. No: he'll ſay 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2. Why he ſhall never wake, until the great Judgement day.

1. Why then he'll ſay, we ſtab'd him ſleeping.

2. The urging of that word Judgement, hath bred a kind of remorſe in me.

1. What? art thou afraid?

2. Not to kill him, having a Warrant.
But to be damn'd for killing him, from the which
No Warrant can defend me.

1. I thought thou had'ſt bin reſolute.

2. So I am, to let him live.

1. I'le back to the Duke of Gloſter, and tell him ſo.

2. Nay, prethee ſtay a little:
I hope this paſſionate humor of mine, will change,
It was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1. How do'ſt thou feel thy ſelf now?

2. Some certain dreggs of Conſcience are yet within me.

1. Remember the Reward, when the deed's done.

2. Come, he dies: I had forgot the Reward.

1. Where's thy Conſcience now?

2. O, in the Duke of Gloſter's purſe.

1. When he opens his purſe to give us our Reward, thy Conſcience flies out.

2. 'Tis no matter, let it go: there's few or none will entertain it.

1. What if it come to thee again?

2. I'le not meddle with it, it makes a man a Coward: A man cannot ſteal, but it accuſeth him: A man cannot Swear, but it Checks him: A man cannot lie with his Neighbour's Wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a bluſhing ſhamefac'd ſpirit, that mutinies in a man's boſome: It fills a man full of Obſtacles. It made me once reſtore a Purſe of Gold that (by chance) I found: It beggars any man that keeps it: It is turn'd out of towns and Cities for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well, endeavours to truſt to himſelf, and live without it.

'Tis

1. 'Tis even now at my elbow, perſwading me not to kill the Duke.

2. Take the Devil in thy minde, and believe him not: He would inſinuate with thee but to make thee ſigh.

1. I am ſtrong fram'd, he cannot prevail with me.

2. Spoke like a tall man, that reſpect ſt thy reputation. Come, ſhall we fall to work?

1. Take him on the Coſtard, with the hilts of thy Sword; and then throw him into the Malmſie-Butte in the next room.

2. O excellent device; and make a ſop of him.

1. Soft, he wakes.

2. Strike.

1. No, we'll reaſon with him.

Cla. Where art thou Keeper? Give me a cup of wine.

2. You ſhall have Wine enough my Lord anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

1. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not as I am Royal.

1. Nor you as we are, Loyal.

Cla. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1. My voice is now the King's, my looks mine own.

Cla. How darkly, and how deadly do'ſt thou ſpeak? Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale? Who ſent you hither? wherefore do you come?

2. To, to, to ---------

Cla. To murther me?

Both. I, I.

Cla. You ſcarcely have the hearts to tell me ſo. And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein my friends have I offended you?

1. Offended us you have not, but the King.

Cla. I ſhall be reconcil'd to him again.

2. Never my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.

Cla. Are you drawn forth among a world of men To ſlay the innocent? What's my offence? Where is the Evidence that doth accuſe me? What lawfull Queſt have given their Verdict up Unto the frowning Judge? Or who pronounc'd The bitter ſentence of poor Clarence death? Before I be convict by courſe of Law, To threaten me with death, is moſt unlawfull. I charge you, as you hope for any goodneſs, That you depart, and lay no hands on me: The deed you undertake is damnable.

1. What we will do, we do upon command.

2. And he that hath commanded, is our King.

Cla. Erroneous Vaſſals, the great King of kings Hath in the Table of his Law commanded That thou ſhalt do no Murther, Will you then Spurn at his Edicts, and fulfill a man's? Take heed: for he holds Vengeance in his hand To hurle upon their heads that break his Law.

2. And that ſame Vengeance doth he hurle on thee, For falſe forſwearing, and for murther too: Thou did'ſt receive the Sacrament, to fight In quarrel of the Houſe of Lancaſter.

1. And like a Traytor to the name of God, Did'ſt break that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade, Unrip'ſt the Bowels of thy Sov'raign's Son.

2. Whom thou was't ſworn to cheriſh and defend.

1. How canſt thou urge God's dreadfull Law to us, When thou haſt broke it in ſuch high degree?

Cla. Alas! for whoſe ſake did I that ill deed? For Edward, for my Brother, for his ſake. He ſends you not to murther me for this: For in that ſin he is as deep as I. If God will be avenged for the deed, O know you yet, he doth it publickly, Take not the quarrel from his powerfull arme: He needs no indirect, or lawleſs courſe, To cut off thoſe that have offended him.

1. Who made thee then a bloudy miniſter, When gallant ſpringing brave Plantagenet, That Princely Novice was ſtruck dead by thee?

Cla. My Brother's love, the Devil, and my Rage.

1. Thy Brother's Love, our Duty, and thy Faults, Provoke us hither now, to ſlaughter thee.

Cla. If you do love my Brother, hate not me: I am his brother, and I love him well: If you are hir'd for meed, go back again, And I will ſend you to my Brother Gloſter: Who ſhall reward you better for my life, Then Edward will for tidings of my death.

2. You are deceiv'd, Your Brother Gloſter hates you.

Cla. Oh no, he loves me, and he holds me dear: Go you to him from me.

1. I ſo we will.

Cla. Tell him, when that our Princely Father York, Bleſt his three Sonnes with his victorious Arme, He little thought of this divided Friendſhip: Bid Gloſter think on this, and he will weep,

1. I, Milſtones, as he leſſoned us to weep.

Cla. O do not ſlander him, for he is kinde.

1. Right, as Snow in Harveſt: Come, you deceive your ſelf, 'Tis he that ſends us to deſtroy you here.

Cla. It cannot be, for he bewept my Fortune, And hugg'd me in his armes, and ſwore with ſobs, That he would labour my delivery.

1. Why ſo he doth, when he delivers you From this earth's thraldome, to the joyes of heaven.

2. Make peace with God, for you muſt die, my Lord.

Cla. Have you that holy feeling in your ſoules, To counſel me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your own ſoules ſo blind, That you will warre with God, by murd'ring me? O ſirs conſider, they that ſet you on To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2. What ſhall we do?

Cla. Relent, and ſave your ſoules: Which of you, if you were a Princes Son, Being pent from Liberty, as I am now, If two ſuch murtherers as your ſelves came to you, Would not intreat for Life, as you would beg Were you in my diſtreſs.

1. Relent? no: 'Tis cowardly and womaniſh.

Cla. Not to relent, is beaſtly, ſavage, devilliſh. My Friend, I ſpy ſome pitie in thy looks: O, if thine eye be not a flatterer, Come thou on my ſide, and intreat for me, A begging Prince, what beggar pities not?

2. Look behind you, my Lord.

1. Take that, and that, if all this will not do, Stabs him. I'le drown you in the Malmſey-Butte within. Exit.

2. A bloudy deed, and deſperately diſpatcht: How fain (like Pilate) would I waſh my hands Of this moſt grievous murther. Enter 1. Murtherer.

1. How now? what mean'ſt thou that thou help'ſt me not? By Heaven the Duke ſhall know how ſlack you have been.

2. Mur. I would he knew that I had ſav'd his brother;
Take thou the Fee, and tell him what I ſay,
For I repent me that the Duke is ſlain. Exit.
1. Mur. So do not I: go Coward as thou art.
Well, I'le go hide the body in ſome hole,
'Till that the Duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my meed, I will away;
For this will out, and then I muſt not ſtay. Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Flourish.
Enter the King ſick, the Queen, Lord Marqueſs, Dorſet, Rivers, Haſtings, Catesby, Buckingham, Woodvill.

King. Why ſo: now have I done a good dayes work.
You Peers, continue this united League:
I, every day expect an Embaſſage
From my Redeemer, to redeem me hence.
And more to peace my ſoul ſhall part to heaven,
Since I have made my Friends at peace on earth.
Dorſet and Rivers, take each others hand,
Diſſemble not your hatred, Swear your love.
Riv. By heaven, my ſoul is purg'd from bearing hate,
And with my hand I ſeal my true heart's-Love.
Haſt. So thrive I, as I truly ſwear the like.
King. Take heed you dally not before your King,
Leſt he that is the ſupreme King of kings
Confound your hidden falſhood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.
Haſt. So proſper I, as I ſwear perfect love.
Rivers. And I, as I love Haſtings with my heart.
King. Madam, your ſelf is not exempt from this:
Nor you ſon Dorſet, Buckingham nor you;
You have been factious one againſt the other.
Wife, love Lord Haſtings, let him kiſs your hand,
And what you do, do it unfeignedly.
Queen. There Haſtings, I will never more remember
Our former hatred, ſo thrive I, and mine.
King. Dorſet, embrace him:
Haſtings, love Lord Marqueſs.
Dor. This interchange of love, I here proteſt
Upon my part, ſhall be inviolable.
Haſt. And ſo ſwear I.
King. Now Princely Buckingham, ſeal thou this league.
With thy embracements to my wives Allies,
And make me happy in your unity.
Buc. When ever Buckingham doth turn his hate
Upon your Grace, but with all dutious love,
Doth cheriſh you and yours, God puniſh me
With hate in thoſe where I expect moſt love,
When I have moſt need to imploy a Friend,
And moſt aſſured that he is a Friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me: this do I beg of Heaven,
When I am cold in love, to you, or yours. Embrace.
King. A pleaſing Cordial, Princely Buckingham
Is this thy Vow, unto my ſickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloſter here,
To make the bleſſed period of this peace.
Buc. And in good time,
Here comes Sir Richard Ratcliff, and the Duke.

Enter Ratcliff, and Gloſter.

Rich. Good morrow to my Soveraign King and Queen,
And Princely Peers, a happy time of day.
King. Happy indeed, as we have ſpent the day:
Gloſter, we have done deeds of Charity,
Made peace of Enmity, fair love of Hate,
Between theſe ſwelling wrong incenſed Peers.
Rich. A bleſſed labour my moſt Soveraign Lord:
Among this Princely heap, if any here
By falſe intelligence, or wrong ſurmiſe
Hold me a Foe: if I unwillingly, or in my rage,
Have ought committed that is hardly born,
To any in this preſence, I deſire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace:
'Tis death to me to be at Enmity:
I hate it, and deſire all good men's love,
Firſt Madam, I intreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchaſe with my dutious ſervice,
Of you my Noble Couſin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us.
Of you and you, Lord Rivers and of Dorſet,
That all without deſert have frown'd on me:
Of you Lord Woodville, and Lord Scales of you,
Dukes, Earls, Lords, Gentlemen, indeed of all.
I do not know that Engliſhman alive,
With whom my ſoul is any jot at odds,
More then the infant that is born to night:
I thank my God for my Humility.
Queen. A holy day ſhall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God all ſtrifes were well compounded.
My Soveraign Lord, I do beſeech your Highneſs
To take our brother Clarence to your Grace.
Rich. Why Madam, have I off'red love for this,
To be ſo flouted in this Royal preſence?
Who knows not that the gentle Duke is dead? They all ſtart.
You do him injury to ſcorn his Coarſe.
King. Who knows not he is dead?
Who knows he is?
Queen. All-ſeeing Heaven, what a world is this?
Buc. Look I ſo pale Lord Dorſet, as the reſt?
Dor. I my good Lord, and no man in the preſence,
But his red colour hath forſook his cheeks.
King. Is Clarence dead? The order was revers'd.
Rich. But he (poor man) by your firſt order dyed,
And that a winged Mercury did bear:
Some tardy Cripple bare the Countermand,
That came too lagge to ſee him buried.
God grant, that ſome leſs Noble, and leſs Loyal,
Nearer in bloudy thoughts, and not in bloud,
Deſerve no worſe then wretched Clarence did,
And yet go currant from ſuſpicion.

Enter Earl of Derby.

Derb. A boon my Soveraign for my ſervice done.
King. I prethee peace, my ſoul is full of ſorrow.
Derb. I will not riſe, unleſs your Highneſs hear me.
King. Then ſay at once, what is it thou requeſt'ſt.
Derb. The forfeit (Soveraign) of my ſervants life,
Who ſlew to day a Riotous Gentleman,
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.
King. Have I a tongue to doom my Brothers death?
And ſhall that tongue give pardon to a ſlave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was Thought,
And yet his puniſhment was bitter death.

Who

Who ſued to me for him? Who (in my wrath)
Kneel'd at my feet; and bid me be adviſ'd?
Who ſpoke of Brotherhood? who ſpoke in love?
Who told me how the poor ſoul did forſake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me:
Who told me in the Field at Tewkſbury,
When Oxford had me down, he reſcued me:
And ſaid, dear Brother live, and be a King?
Who told me, when we both lay in the Field,
Frozen (almoſt) to death, how he did lap me
Even in his Garments, and did give himſelf
(All thin and naked) to the numme cold night?
All this from my Remembrance, brutiſh wrath
Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you
Had ſo much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your Carters, or your waiting Vaſſals
Have done a drunken ſlaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You ſtraight are on your knees for Pardon, pardon,
And I (unjuſtly too) muſt grant it you.
But for my Brother, not a man would ſpeak,
Nor I (ungracious) ſpeak unto my ſelf
For him poor Soul. The proudeſt of you all,
Have been beholding to him in his life:
Yet none of you, would once beg for his life.
O God! I fear thy juſtice will take hold
On me, and you; and mine, and yours for this.
Come Haſtings help me to my Cloſet.
Ah poor Clarence. Exeunt ſome with K. and Queen.

Rich. This is the fruits of raſhneſs: Markt you not,
How that the Kindred of the Queen
Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence death?
O! they did urge it ſtill unto the King,
God will revenge it. Come Lords will you go.
To comfort Edward with our company?

Buc. We wait upon your Grace. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the old Ducheſs of York, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell us, is our Father dead?

Duch. No Boy.

Daugh. Why do you weep ſo oft? and beat your Breaſt?
And cry, O Clarence, my unhappy Son?

Boy. Why do you look on us, and ſhake your head,
And call us Orphans, Wretches, Caſtawayes,
If that our Noble Father were alive?

Duc. My pretty Couſins, you miſtake me both,
I do lament the ſickneſs of the King,
As loath to loſe him, not your Father's death:
It were loſt ſorrow to wail one that's loſt.

Boy. Then you conclude (my Grandam) he is dead:
The King mine Uncle is to blame for it.
God will revenge it, whom I will importune
With earneſt prayers, all to that effect.

Daugh. And ſo will I.

Duc. Peace children, peace: the King doth love you well.
Incapable and ſhallow Innocents,
You cannot gueſs who caus'd your Fathers death.

Boy. Grandam we can: for my good Uncle Gloſter
Told me, the King provok'd to it by the Queen,
Deviſ'd impeachments to impriſon him;
And when my Uncle told me ſo, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiſt my cheek:
Bad me rely on him, as on my Father,
And he would love me dearly as a child.

Duc. Ah! that Deceit ſhould ſteal ſuch gentle ſhape,
And with a virtuous Vizor hide deep Vice.
He is my ſon, I, and therein my ſhame,
Yet from my dugges, he drew not this deceit.

Boy. Think you my Uncle did diſſemble Grandam?

Duc. I Boy.

Boy. I cannot think it. Harke, what noiſe is this?

Enter the Queen with her hair about her eares, Rivers and Dorſet after her.

Queen. Ah! who ſhall hinder me to wail and weep?
To chide my Fortune, and torment my Self.
I'le joyn with black deſpair againſt my Soul,
And to my ſelf become an enemie.

Duc. What means this Scene of rude impatience?

Queen. To make an act of Tragick violence.
Edward my Lord, thy Son, our King is dead.
Why grow the Branches, when the Root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves that want their ſap?
If you will live, Lament: if dye, be brief,
That our ſwift-winged Soules may catch the Kings,
Or like obedient Subjects follow him,
To his new Kingdome of ne're-changing night.

Duc. Ah, ſo much intereſt have I in thy ſorrow,
As I had Title to thy Noble Husband:
I have bewept a worthy Husband's death,
And liv'd with looking on his Images:
But now two Mirrors of his Princely ſemblance,
Are crack'd in pieces, by malignant death,
And I for comfort, have but one falſe Glaſs,
That grieves me, when I ſee my ſhame in him.
Thou art a Widow: yet thou art a Mother,
And haſt the comfort of thy Children left,
But death hath ſnatch'd my Husband from mines armes,
And pluckt two Crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence, and Edward. O, what cauſe have I,
(Thine being but a moity of my moan)
To over-go thy woes, and drown my cries.

Boy. Ah Aunt! you wept not for your Fathers death:
How can we aid you with our Kindred teares?

Daugh. Our fatherleſs diſtreſs was left unmoan'd,
Your Widow-dolour likewiſe be unwept.

Queen. Give me no help in Lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth Complaints:
All Springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I being govern'd by the waterie Moon,
May ſend forth plenteous tears to drown the World.
Ah, for my Husband, for my dear Lord Edward.

Chil. Ah for our Father, for our dear Lord Clarence.

Duc. Alas for both, both mine Edward and Clarence.

Queen. What ſtay had I but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What ſtay had we but Clarence? and he's gone.

Duc. What ſtayes had I but they? and they are gone.

Queen. Was never widow had ſo dear a loſs.

Chil. Were never Orphans had ſo dear a loſs.

Duc. Was never Mother had ſo dear a loſs.
Alas! I am the Mother of theſe Griefs.
Their woes are parcell'd, mine is general.
She for an Edward weeps, and ſo do I:

I for a Clarence weep, ſo doth not ſhe;
Theſe Babes for Clarence weep, ſo do not they.
Alas! you three, on me threefold diſtreſt:
Pour all your teares, I am your ſorrows Nurſe,
And I will pamper it with Lamentation.
Dor. Comfort dear Mother, God is much diſpleas'd,
That you take with unthankfulneſs his doing.
In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungratefull,
With dull unwillingneſs to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent:
Much more to be thus oppoſite with heaven,
For it requires the Royal debt it lent you,
Rivers. Madam, bethink you like a carefull Mother
Of the young Prince your ſon: ſend ſtraight for him,
Let him be Crown'd, in him your comfort lives.
Drown deſperate ſorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joyes in living Edward's Throne.

Enter Richard, Buckingham, Derby, Haſtings, and Ratcliff.

Rich. Siſter have comfort, all of us have cauſe
To wail the dimming of our ſhining Star:
But none can help our harms by wailing them.
Madam, my Mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not ſee your Grace. Humbly on my knee,
I crave your Bleſſing.
Duc. God bleſs thee, and put meekneſs in thy breaſt,
Love, Charity, Obedience, and true Dutie.
Rich. Amen, and make me die a good old man,
That is the butt end of a Mother's bleſſing;
I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.
Buc. You cloudy-Princes, and heart-ſorrowing-Peers,
That bear this heavy mutual load of Moan,
Now cheer each other, in each other's Love:
Though we have ſpent our Harveſt of this King,
We are to reap the harveſt of his Son.
The broken rancour of your high-ſwoln hates,
But lately ſplintred, knit, and joyn'd together,
Muſt gently be preſerv'd, cheriſht, and kept:
Me ſeemeth good, that with ſome little Train,
Forthwith from Ludlow, the young Prince be fet
Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.
Rivers. Why with ſome little Train,
My Lord of Buckingham?
Buc. Marry my Lord, leſt by a multitude
The new-heal'd wound of Malice ſhould break out,
Which would be ſo much the more dangerous,
By how much the eſtate is green, and yet ungovern'd.
Where every Horſe beares his commanding Rein,
And may direct his courſe as pleaſe himſelf,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.
Rich. I hope the King made peace with all of us,
And the compact is firm, and true in me.
Rivers. And ſo in me, and ſo (I think) in all,
Yet ſince it is but green, it ſhould be put
To no apparent likelyhood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be urg'd:
Therefore I ſay with Noble Buckingham,
That it is meet ſo few ſhould fetch the Prince.
Haſt. And ſo ſay I.
Rich. Then be it ſo, and go we to determine
Who they ſhall be that ſtraight ſhall poſte to London.
Madam, and you my Siſter, will you go
To give your cenſures in this buſineſs? Exeunt.

Manent Buckingham, and Richard.

Buck. My Lord, whoever journies to the Prince,
For God's ſake let not us two ſtay at home:
For by the way, I'le ſort occaſion,
As Index to the ſtory we late talk'd of,
To part the Queen's proud Kindred from the Prince.
Rich. My other ſelf, my Counſel's Conſiſtory,
My Oracle, my Prophet, my dear Couſin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction,
Toward London then, for we'll not ſtay behind. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter one Citizen at one door, and another at the other.

1. Cit. Good morrow Neighbour, whither away ſo faſt?
2. Cit. I promiſe you I hardly know my ſelf:
Hear you the Newes abroad?
1. Yes, the King is dead.
2. Ill newes byrlady, ſeldome comes the better:
I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3. Neighborrs, God ſpeed.
1. Give you good morrow ſir.
3. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?
2. I ſir, it is too true, God help the while.
3. Then Maſters look to ſee a troublous world.
1. No, no, by God's good grace, his Son ſhall reign.
3. Woe to that Land that's govern'd by a Child.
2. In him there is a hope of Government.
Which in his non-age, Counſel under him,
And in his full and ripened yeares, himſelf
No doubt ſhall then, and 'till then govern well.
1. So ſtood the ſtate when Henry the ſixth
Was crown'd in Paris, but at nine months old.
3. Stood the State ſo? No, no, good friends, God wot;
For then this Land was famouſly enrich'd
With politick grave Counſel; then the King
Had virtuous Uncles to protect his Grace.
1. Why ſo hath this, both by his Father and Mother.
3. Better it were they all came by his Father.
Or by his Father there were none at all:
For emulation, who ſhall now be neareſt,
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.
O full of danger is the Duke of Gloſter,
And the Queen's Sons, and Brothers, haught and proud.
And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This ſickly Land, might ſolace as before.
1. Come, come, we fear the worſt: all will be well.
3. When Clouds are ſeen, wiſemen put on their cloaks;
When great leaves fall, then Winter is at hand;
When the Sun ſets, who doth not look for night?
Untimely ſtormes, make men expect a Dearth:
All may be well; but if God ſort it ſo,
'Tis more then we deſerve, or I expect.
2. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:
You cannot reaſon (almoſt) with a man,
That looks not heavily, and full of dread.
3. Before the dayes of Change, ſtill is it ſo,
By a divine inſtinct, men's minds miſtruſt

Enſuing

Purſuing danger: as by proof we ſee
The Water ſwell before a boyſt'rous ſtorm:
But leave it all to God, Whither away?
2 Marry we were ſent for to the Juſtices.
3 And ſo was I: I'le bear you company. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Arch-Biſhop, young York, the Queen, and the Dutcheſſe.

Arch. Laſt night I heard they lay at Stony Stratford,
And at Northampton they do reſt to night:
To morrow, or next day, they will be here.
Dut. I long withall my heart to ſee the Prince:
I hope he is much grown ſince laſt I ſaw him.
Qu. But I hear no, they ſay my ſon of York
Ha's almoſt overtane him in his growth.
Yor. I mother, but I would not have it ſo.
Dut. Why, my good Couſin, it is good to grow.
York. Grandam, one night as we did ſit at ſupper,
My Unkle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More then my Brother. I, quoth my Unkle Gloſter,
Small Herbs have grace, great Weeds do grow apace.
And ſince, me thinks I would not grow ſo faſt,
Becauſe ſweet Flowers are ſlow, and Weeds make haſt.
Dut. Good faith, good faith, the ſaying did not hold
In him that did object the ſame to thee.
He was the wretched'ſt thing when he was young,
So long a growing, and ſo leiſurely,
That if his rule were true, he ſhould be gracious.
Yor. And ſo no doubt he is, my gracious Madam.
Dut. I hope he is, but yet let Mothers doubt.
Yor. Now by my troth, if I had been remembred,
I could have given my Unkles Grace, a flout,
To touch his growth, nearer then he touch'd mine.
Dut. How, my young York,
I prethee let me hear it.
Yor. Marry (they ſay) my Unkle grew ſo faſt,
That he could gnaw a cruſt at two hours old,
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.
Grandam, this would have been a biting Jeſt.
Dut. I prethee, pretty York, who told thee this?
Yor. Grandam, his Nurſe.
Dut. His Nurſe? why ſhe was dead, ere thou waſt born.
Yor. If 'twere not ſhe, I cannot tell who told me.
Qu. A parlous Boy: go to, you are too ſhrew'd.
Dut. Good Madam, be not angry with a Child.
Qu. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Arch. Here comes a Meſſenger: What News?
Meſ. Such news my Lord, as grieves me to report.
Qu. How doth the Prince?
Meſ. Well Madam, and in health.
Dut. What is thy News?
Meſ. Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey,
Are ſent to Pomfret, and with them,
Sir Thomas Vaughan, Priſoners.
Dut. Who hath committed them?
Meſ. The mighty Dukes, Gloſter and Buckingham.
Arch. For what offence?
Meſ. The ſum of all I can, I have diſclos'd:
Why, or for what, the Nobles were committed,
Is all unknown to me, my gracious Lord.
Qu. Aye me! I ſee the ruine of my Houſe:
The Tiger now hath ſeiz'd the gentle Hinde,
Inſulting Tyranny begins to Jut
Upon the innocent and aweleſſe Throne:
Welcome Deſtruction, Bloud, and Maſſacre,
I ſee (as in a Map) the end of all.
Dut. Accurſed, and unquiet wrangling dayes,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld;
My Husband loſt his life, to get the Crown,
And often up and down my ſons were toſt,
For me to joy, and weep, their gain and loſſe.
And being ſeated, and Domeſtick broyls
Clean over-blown, themſelves (the Conquerers,)
Make war upon themſelves, Brother to Brother;
Bloud to bloud; ſelf againſt ſelf: O prepoſterous
And frantick outrage! end thy damned ſpleen,
Or let me die, to look on earth no more.
Qu. Come, come, my Boy, we will to Sanctuary.
Madam, farewell.
Dut. Stay, I will go with you.
Qu. You have no cauſe.
Arch. My gracious Lady, go,
And thither bear your Treaſure and your Goods,
For my part, I'le reſign unto your Grace
The Seal I keep, and ſo betide it me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours.
Go, I'le conduct you to the Sanctuary. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prma.

The Trumpets ſound.
Enter young Prince, the Dukes of Gloceſter and Buckingham, Lord Cardinal, with others.

Buc. Welcome ſweet Prince to London,
To your Chamber.
Rich. Welcome dear Coſin, my thoughts Soveraign
The weary way hath made you Melancholly.
Prin. No Unkle, but our croſſes on the way,
Have made it tedious, Weariſome and heavy.
I want more Unkles here to welcome me.
Rich. Sweet Prince, the untainted vertue of your years
Hath not yet div'd into the Worlds deceit:
No more can you diſtinguiſh of a man,
Then of his outward ſhew, which God he knows,
Seldome or never jumpeth with the heart.
Thoſe Unkles which you want, were dangerous:
Your grace attended to their Sugred words,
But look'd not on the poiſon of their hearts:
God keep you from them, and from ſuch falſe Friends.
Prin. God keep me from falſe Friends,
But they were none.
Rich. My Lord, the Major of London comes to greet you.

Enter Lord Major.

Lo. Major. God bleſſe your Grace, with health and happy dayes.
Prin. I thank you, good my Lord, and thank you all:

I thought my Mother, and my Brother York,
Would long, ere this, have met us on the way.
Fie, what a Slug is Haſtings, that he comes not
To tell us, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Lord Haſtings.

Buck. And in good time, here comes the ſweating Lord.

Prince. Welcome, my Lord: what, will our Mother come?

Haſt. On what occaſion God he knows, not I,
The Queen your Mother, and your Brother York,
Have taken Sanctuary: The tender Prince
Would fain have come with me, to meet your Grace,
But by his mother was perforce with-held.

Buc. Fie, what an indirect and peeviſh courſe
Is this of hers? Lord Cardinal will your Grace
Perſwade the Queen, to ſend the Duke of York
Unto his Princely Brother preſently?
If ſhe deny, Lord Haſtings you go with him,
And from her jealous armes pluck him perforce.

Car. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak Oratory
Can from his Mother win the Duke of York,
Anon expect him here: but if ſhe be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God forbid
We ſhould infringe the holy Priviledge
Of bleſſed Sanctuary: not for all this Land,
Would I be guilty of ſo great a ſin.

Buc. You are too ſenceleſſe obſtinate, my Lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditional.
Weigh it but with the groſſeneſſe of this Age,
You break not Sanctuary, in ſeizing him:
The benefit thereof is alwayes granted
To thoſe, whoſe dealings have deſerv'd the place,
And thoſe who have the wit to claim the place:
This Prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deſerv'd it,
Therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it.
Then taking him from thence, that is not there,
You break no Priviledge, nor Charter there:
Oft have I heard of ſanctuary men,
But Sanctuary children, ne're till now.

Car. My Lord, you ſhall o're-rule my mind for once.
Come on, Lord Haſtings, will you go with me?

Haſt. I go my Lord. Exit Cardinal and Haſtings.

Prin. Good Lords, make all the ſpeedy haſt you may.
Say, Unkle Gloceſter, if our Brother come,
Where ſhall we ſojorn, till our Coronation?

Glo. Where it think'ſt beſt unto your Royal ſelf.
If I may counſell you, ſome day or two
Your Highneſſe ſhall repoſe you at the Tower:
Then where you pleaſe, and ſhall be thought moſt fit
For your beſt health and recreation.

Prin. I do not like the Tower of any place:
Did Julius Cæſar build that place, my Lord?

Buc. He did, my gracious Lord, begin that place,
Which ſince, ſucceeding Ages, have re-edify'd.

Prin. It is upon record? or elſe reported
Succeſſively from age to age, he built it?

Buc. Upon record, my gracious Lord.

Prin. But ſay, my Lord, it were not regiſtred,
Me thinks the truth ſhould live from age to age,
As 'twere retail'd to all poſterity,
Even to the general ending day.

Glo. So wiſe, ſo young, they ſay do never live long.

Prin. What ſay you, Unkle?

Glo. I ſay, without Characters, Fame lives long.
Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquity, aſide.
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prin. That Julius Cæſar was a famous man;
With what his Valour did enrich his wit,
His Wit ſet down, to make his Valour live:
Death makes no Conqueſt of his Conqueror,
For now he lives in Fame, though not in Life.
I'le tell you what, Couſin Buckingham.

Buc. What, my gracious Lord?

Prin. And if I live untill I be a man,
I'le win our ancient Right in France again,
Or die a Souldier, as I liv'd a King.

Glo. Short Summers lightly have a forward Spring.

Enter young York, Haſtings, and Cardinal.

Buck. Now in good time, here comes the Duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York, how fares our Noble Brother?

Yor. Well, my dear Lord, ſo muſt I call you now.

Prin. I, Brother, to our grief as it is yours:
Too late he dy'd, that might have kept that Title,
Which by his death hath loſt much Majeſty.

Glo. How fares our Couſin, Noble Lord of York?

Yor. I thank you, gentle Unkle. O my Lord,
You ſaid, that idle Weeds are faſt in growth:
The Prince my Brother, hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my Lord.

Yor. And therefore is he idle?

Glo. Oh my fair Couſin, I muſt not ſay ſo.

Yor. Then he is more beholding to you, then I.

Glo. He may command me as my Soveraign,
But you have power in me, as in a Kinſman.

Yor. I pray you, Unkle, give me this Dagger.

Glo. My Dagger, little Couſin? with all my heart.

Prin. A Beggar, Brother?

Yor. Of my kind Unkle, that I know will give,
And being a Toy, it is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift then that, I'le give my Couſin.

Yor. A greater gift? O, that's the Sword to it.

Glo. I, gentle Couſin, were it light enough.

Yor. O then I ſee, you will part but with light gifts,
In weightier things you'll ſay a Begger nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your Grace to wear.

Yor. I wegh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my Weapon, little Lord?

Yor. I would that I might thank you, as you call me.

Glou. How?

Yor. Little.

Prin. My Lord of York will ever be croſſe in talk:
Unkle, your Grace knows how to bear with him.

Yor. You mean to bear me, not to bear with me:
Unkle, my Brother mocks both you and me,
Becauſe that I am little, like an Ape,
He thinks that you ſhould bear me on your ſhoulders.

Buc. With what a ſharp provided wit he reaſons:
To mitigate the ſcorn he gives his Unkle,
He prettily, and aptly taunts himſelf:
So cunning, and ſo young, is wonderfull.

Glo. My Lord, wilt pleaſe you paſſe along?
My ſelf, and my good Couſin Buckingham,
Will to your Mother, to entreat of her
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

Yor. What

Yor. What, will you go unto the Tower my Lord?
Prin. My Lord Protector will have it so.
Yor. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, what should you fear?
Yor. Marry, my Uncle Clarence angry Ghost:
My Grandam told me he was murther'd there.
Prin. I fear no Uncles dead.
Glo. Nor none that live, I hope,
Prin. And if they live, I hope I need not fear.
But come my Lord: and with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.
Exeunt Prince, York, Hastings, and Dorset.

Manet Richard, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buc. Think you, my Lord, this little prating York
Was not incenst by his subtle Mother,
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glost. No doubt, no doubt: Oh 'tis a perillous Boy,
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable:
He is all the Mothers, from top to toe.
Buc. Well, let them rest: Come hither Catesby,
Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend,
As closely to conceal what we impart:
Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way,
What think'st thou? is it not an easie matter,
To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
For the installment of this Noble Duke
In the seat Royal of this famous Isle?
Cates. He for his fathers sake so loves the Prince,
That he will not be won to ought against him.
Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? Will not he?
Cates. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.
Buc. Well then, no more but this:
Go gentle Catesby, and as it were far off,
Sound thou Lord Hastings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpose,
And summon him to morrow to the Tower,
To sit about the Coronation.
If thou do'st finde him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too, and so break off the talk,
And give us notice of his inclination:
For we to morrow hold divided Councels,
Wherein thy self shalt highly be employ'd.
Rich. Commend me to Lord William: tell him (Catesby)
His ancient Knot of dangerous Adversaries
To morrow are let bloud at Pomfret Castle,
And bid my Lord, for joy of this good news,
Give Mistresse Shore one gentle Kisse the more.
Buc. Good Catesby, go effect this business soundly.
Cates. My good Lords both, with all the heed I can.
Rich. Shall we hear from you Catesby, ere we sleep?
Cates. You shall, my Lord.
Rich. At Crosby House there shall you find us both.
Exit Catesby.
Buc. Now, my Lord,
What shall we do, if we perceive
Lord Hastings will not yield to our Complots?
Rich. Chop off his Head:
Something we will determine:
And look when I am King, claim thou of me
The Earldome of Hereford, and all the moveables
Whereof the King, my Brother, was possest.
Buc. I'le claim that promise at your Graces hand.
Rich. And look to have it yielded with all kindnesse.
Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some forme.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter a Messenger to the door of Hastings.

Mes. My Lord, my Lord.
Hast. Who knocks?
Mes. One from the Lord Stanley.
Hast. What is't a Clock?
Mes. Upon the stroak of four.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious Nights?
Mes. So it appears by what I have to say:
First, he commends him to your Noble self.
Hast. What then?
Mes. Then certifies your Lordship, that this Night
He dreamt, the Bore had rased off his Helm:
Besides, he sayes there are two Councels kept;
And that may be determin'd at the one,
Which may make you and him to rue at th'other.
Therefore he sends to know your Lordships pleasure,
If you will presently take Horse with him,
And with all speed post with him toward the North,
To shun the danger that his soul divines.
Hast. Go fellow, go return unto thy Lord,
Bid him not fear the seperated counsell:
His Honor and my self are at the one,
And at the other is my good friend Catesby;
Where nothing can proceed, that toucheth us,
Whereof I shall not have intelligence:
Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance.
And for his Dreams, I wonder he's so simple,
To trust the mock'ry of unquiet slumbers.
To fly the Bore, before the Bore pursues,
Were to incense the Bore to follow us,
And make pursuit, where he did mean to chase.
Go, bid thy Master rise, and come to me,
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where he shall see the Bore will use us kindly.
Mes. I'le go, my Lord, and tell him what you say.
Exit.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Many good morrows to my Noble Lord.
Hast. Good morrow Catesby, you are early stirring:
What news, what news in this our tott'ring State?
Cates. It is a reeling World indeed, my Lord:
And I believe will never stand upright,
Till Richard wear the Garland of the Realm.
Hast. How wear the Garland?
Do'st thou mean the Crown?
Cates. I, my good Lord.
Ha. I'le have this Crown of mine cut from my shoulders,
Before I'le see the Crown so foul mis-plac'd:
But canst thou guesse, that he doth aim at it?

Cates. I, on my life, and hopes to find you forward,
Upon his party, for the gain thereof:
And thereupon he sends you this good news,
That this same very day your enemies,
The Kindred of the Queen, must die at Pomfret.
Hast. Indeed I am no mourner for that news,
Because they have been still my adversaries:
But, that I'le give my voice on Richards side,
To bar my Masters Heirs in true Descent,
God knows I will not do it, to the death.
Cates. God keep your Lordship in that gracious minde.
Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month hence,
That they which brought me in my Masters hate,
I live to look upon their Tragedy.
Well Catesby, ere a fort-night make me older,
I'le send some packing, that yet think not on't.
Cates. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious Lord,
When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it.
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out
With Rivers, Vaughan, Gray: and so 'twill do
With some men else, that think themselves as safe
As thou and I, who (as thou know'st) are dear
To Princely Richard, and Buckingham.
Cates. The Princes both make high account of you,
For they account his Head upon the Bridge.
Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter Lord Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your Boar-spear man?
Fear you the Boar, and go so unprovided?
Stan. My Lord Good morrow, good morrow Catesby:
You may jeast on, but by the holy Rood,
I do not like these several Counsels, I.
Hast. My Lord, I hold my Life as dear as yours,
And never in my dayes, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me, as 'tis now:
Think you, but that I know the state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?
St. The Lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,
Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were sure,
And they indeed had no cause to mistrust:
But yet you see, how soon the day o're-cast.
This sudden stab of Rancour I misdoubt:
Pray God (I say) I prove a needless Coward.
What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.
Hast. Come, come, have with you:
Wot you what, my Lord,
To day the Lords you talk of, are beheaded.
St. They, for their truth, might better wear their Heads,
Then some that have accus'd them, wear their Hats.
But come, my Lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before, I'le talk with this good fellow.
Exit Lord Stanley and Catesby.
How now, Sirrha? how goes the World with thee?
Purs. The better, that your Lordship please to ask.
Hast. I tell thee man, 'tis better with me now,
Then when thou met'st me last, where now we meet:
Then was I going Prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the Queens Allyes.
But now I tell thee (keep it to thy self)
This day those Enemies are put to death,
And I in better state then ere I was.
Purs. God hold it, to your Honors good content.
Hast. Gramercy fellow: there drink that for me.
Throws him his Purse.
Purs. I thank your Honor. Exit Pursuivant.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to see your Honor.
Hast. I thank thee good Sir John, with all my heart.
I am in your debt, for your last Exercise:
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.
Priest. I'le waite upon your Lordship.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a Priest, Lord Chamberlain?
Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the Priest,
Your Honor hath no shriving work in hand.
Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talk of, came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower?
Buck. I do, my Lord, but long I cannot stay there:
I shall return before your Lordship thence.
Hast. Nay like enough, for I stay Dinner there.
Buc. And Supper too, although thou know'st it not.
Come, will you go?
Hast. I'le wait upon your Lorship. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliffe, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfret.

Rivers. Sir Richard Ratcliffe, let me tell thee this,
To day shalt thou behold a Subject die,
For Truth, for Duty, and for Loyalty.
Grey God blesse the Prince from all the Pack of you,
A Knot you are, of damned Bloud-suckers.
Vaugh. You live, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.
Rat. Dispatch, the limit of your Lives is out,
Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloudy Prison!
Fatall and ominous to Noble Peers:
Within the guilty Closure of thy Walls,
Richard the Second here was hackt to death:
And for more slander to thy dismal Seat,
We give to thee our guiltlesse bloud to drink.
Grey. Now Margarets Curse is fain upon our Heads,
When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by, when Richard stab'd her Son.
Riv. Then curs'd she Richard,
Then curs'd she Buckingham,
Then curs'd she Hastings. O remember God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us:
And for my Sister, and her Princely Sons,
Be satisfi'd, dear God, with our true bloud,
Which as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.
Rat. Make hast, the hour of death is now expir'd,
Riv. Come Grey, come Vaughan, let us here embrace,
Farewell, untill we meet again in Heaven.
Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Quarta.

Enter Buckingham, Darby, Haſtings, Biſhop of Ely, Norfolk, Ratcliffe, Lovell, with others, at a Table.

Haſt. Now Noble Peers, the cauſe why we are met,
Is to determine of the Coronation:
In Gods Name ſpeak, when is the Royal day?
Buc. Is all things ready for the Royal time?
Darb. It is, and wants but nomination.
Ely. To morrow then I judge a happy day.
Buc. Who knows the Lord Protectors mind herein?
Who is moſt inward with the Noble Duke?
Ely. Your Grace, we think, ſhould ſooneſt know his minde.
Buc. We know each others Faces: for our Hearts,
He knows no more of mine, then I of yours,
Or I of his, my Lord, then you of mine:
Lord Haſtings, you and he are near in love.
Haſt. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well:
But for his purpoſe in the Coronation,
I have not ſounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleaſure any way therein:
But you, my Honorable Lord, may name the time,
And in the Dukes behalf I'le give my Voice,
Which I preſume he'll take in gentle part.

Enter Glouceſter.

Ely. In happy time here comes the Duke himſelf.
Rich. My Noble Lords, and Couſins all, good morrow:
I have been long a ſleeper: but I truſt,
My abſence doth neglect no great deſigne,
Which by my preſence might have been concluded.
Buc. Had you not come upon your Q. my Lord,
William, Lord Haſtings, had pronounc'd your part;
I mean your Voice, for Crowning of the King.
Rich. Then my Lord Haſtings, no man might be bolder,
His Lordſhip knows me well, and loves me well.
My Lord of Ely, when I was laſt in Holborn,
I ſaw good Strawberries in your Garden there,
I do beſeech you, ſend for ſome of them.
Ely. Marry and will, my Lord, with all my heart.
Exit Biſhop.
Rich. Couſin of Buckingham, a word with you.
Catesby hath ſounded Haſtings in our buſineſſe,
And finds the teſty Gentleman ſo hot,
That he will loſe his Head, ere give conſent
His Maſters Child, as worſhipfully he tearmes it,
Shall loſe the Royalty of Englands Throne.
Buc. Withdraw your ſelf a while, I'le go with you.
Exeunt.
Dar. We have not yet ſet down this day of Triumph:
To morrow, in my judgement, is too ſudden,
For I my ſelf am not ſo well provided,
As elſe I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Enter the Biſhop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Gloſter?
I have ſent for theſe Strawberries.
Ha. His Grace looks chearfully & ſmooth this morning,
There's ſome conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with ſuch ſpirit.
I think there's never a man in Chriſtendome
Can leſſer hide his love, or hate then he,
For by his Face ſtraight ſhall you know his Heart.
Darb. What of his Heart perceive you in his Face,
By any livelyhood he ſhew'd to day?
Haſt. Marry that with no man here he is offended:
For were he, he had ſhewn it in his Looks.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham.

Rich. I pray you all, tell me what they deſerve,
That do conſpire my death with diveliſh Plots
Of damned Witchcraft, and that have prevail'd
Upon my Body with their Helliſh Charmes.
Haſt. The tender love I bear your Grace, my Lord,
Makes me moſt forward, in this Princely preſence,
To doom th'Offenders, whoſoe're they be:
I ſay, my Lord, they have deſerved death.
Rich. Then be your eyes the witneſſe of their evill,
Look how I am bewitch'd: behold, mine Arme
Is like a blaſted Sapling, wither'd up:
And this is Edwards Wife, that monſtrous Witch,
Conſorted with that Harlot, Strumpet Shore,
That by their Witchcraft thus have marked me.
Haſt. If they have done this deed, my Noble Lord.
Rich. If? thou Protector of this damned Strumpet,
Talk'ſt thou to me of Iffs: thou art a Traitor,
Off with his Head; now by Saint Paul I ſwear,
I will not dine, untill I ſee the ſame.
Lovell and Ratcliffe, look that it be done:
The reſt that love me, riſe, and follow me. Exeunt.

Manet Lovell and Ratcliffe, with the Lord Haſtings.

Haſt. Woe, woe for England, not a whit for me,
For I, too fond, might have prevented this:
Stanley did dream, the Boar did rowze our Helmes,
And I did ſcorn it, and diſdain to flye:
Three times to day my Foot-Cloth-Horſe did ſtumble,
And ſtarted, when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loth to bear me to the ſlaughter-houſe.
O now I need the Prieſt, that ſpake to me:
I now repent I told the Purſuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine Enemies
To day at Pomfret bloudily were butcher'd,
And I my ſelf ſecure, in grace and favour.
Oh Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy Curſe
Is lighted on poor Haſtings wretched Head.
Ra. Come, come diſpatch, the Duke would be at dinner:
Make a ſhort Shrift, he longs to ſee your Head.
Haſt. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for, then the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in aire of your good Looks,
Lives like a drunken Sailor on a Maſt,
Ready with every Nod to tumble down,
Into the fatal Bowels of the Deep.
Lov. Come, come, diſpatch, 'tis bootleſſe to exclaim.
Haſt. O bloudy Richard: miſerable England,
I propheſie the fearfull'ſt time to thee,
That ever wretched Age hath look'd upon.
Come, lead me to the Block, bear him my Head,
They ſmile at me, who ſhortly ſhall be dead.
Exeunt.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham, in rotten Armor marvellous ill-favoured.

Rich. Come Couſin,
Canſt thou quake, and change thy colour,
Murther thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and ſtop again,
As if thou were diſtraught, and mad with terror?

Buc. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep Tragedian,
Speak, and look back, and prie on every ſide,
Tremble, and ſtart at wagging of a Straw:
Intending deep ſuſpition, gaſtly Looks:
Are at my ſervice, like enforced Smiles;
And both are ready in their Offices,
At any time to grace my Stratagems.
But what is Catesby, gone?

Rich. He is, and ſee he brings the Mayor along.

Enter the Mayor and Catesby.

Buc. Lord Mayor.

Rich. Look to the Draw-Bridge there.

Buc. Heark, a Drum.

Rich. Catesby, o're-look the Walls.

Buc. Lord Mayor, the reaſon we have ſent.

Rich. Look back, defend there, here are enemies.

Buc. God and our Innocency defend, and guard us.

Enter Lovell and Ratcliffe, with Haſtings Head.

Rich. Be patient, they are friends: Ratcliffe & Lovel.

Lov. Here is the Head of that ignoble Traitor,
The dangerous and unſuſpected Haſtings.

Rich. So dear I lov'd the man, that I muſt weep:
I took him for the plaineſt harmleſſe Creature,
That breath'd upon the Earth, a Chriſtian:
Made him my Book, wherein my Soul recorded
The Hiſtory of her ſecret thoughts.
So ſmooth he daub'd his Vice with ſhew of Vertue,
That his apparent open Guilt omitted,
I mean his converſation with Shores Wife,
He liv'd from all attainder of ſuſpects.

Buc. Well, well, he was the covertſt ſhelterd Traitor
That ever liv'd.
Would you imagine, or almoſt believe,
Wer't not, that by great preſerveration
We live to tell it, that the ſubtle Traitor
This day had plotted, in the Counſell-Houſe,
To murther me, and my good Lord of Gloſter.

Ma. Had he done ſo?

Rich. What? think you we are Turks, or Infidels?
Or that we would, againſt the form of Law,
Proceed thus raſhly in the Villains death,
But that the extream perill of the caſe,
The Peace of England, and our Perſons ſafety,
Enforc'd us to this Execution.

Ma. Now fair befall you, he deſerv'd his death,
And your good Graces both have well proceeded,
To warn falſe Traitors from the like Attempts.

Buc. I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Miſtris Shore:
Yet had we not determin'd he ſhould die,
Untill your Lordſhip came to ſee his end,
Which now the loving haſte of theſe our friends,
Something againſt our meanings, have prevented;
Becauſe, my Lord, I would have had you heard
The traitor ſpeak, and timerouſly confeſſe
The manner and the purpoſe of his Treaſons:
That you might well have ſignify'd the ſame
Unto the Citizens, who haply may
Miſconſter us in him, and wail his death.

Ma. But, my good Lord, your Graces words ſhall ſerve,
As well as I had ſeen, and heard him ſpeak:
And do not doubt, right Noble Princes both,
But I'le acquaint our dutious Citizens
With all your juſt proceedings in this caſe.

Rich. And to that end we wiſh'd your Lordſhip here,
T'avoid the Cenſures of the carping World.

Buc. Which ſince you come too late of our intent,
Yet witneſſe what you hear we did intend:
And ſo, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell.

Exit Mayor.

Rich. Go after, after, Couſin Buckingham.
The Mayor towards Guild-Hall hyes him in all poſt:
There, at your meeteſt vantage of the time,
Infer the Baſtardy of Edwards Children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a Citizen,
Only for ſaying, he would make his Son
Heir to the Crown, meaning indeed his houſe,
Which, by the Signe thereof was termed ſo.
Moreover, urge his hatefull Luxury,
And beſtial appetite in change of Luſt,
Which ſtretch'd unto their Servants, Daughters, Wives,
Even where his raging eye, or ſavage heart,
Without controll, luſted to make a prey.
Nay for a need, thus far come near my Perſon:
Tell them, when that my Mother went with Child
Of that inſatiate Edward, Noble York,
My Princely Father, then had Warrs in France,
And by true computation of the time,
Found, that the Iſſue was not his begot:
Which well appeared in his Lineaments,
Being nothing like the Noble Duke, my Father:
Yet touch this ſparingly, as t'were far off,
Becauſe, my Lord, you know my Mother lives.

Buc. Doubt not, my Lord, I'le play the Orator,
As if the Golden Fee, for which I plead,
Were for my ſelf: and ſo, my Lord, adieu.

Rich. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynards Caſtle,
Where you ſhall find me well accompanied
With reverend Fathers, and well-learned Biſhops.

Buc. I go, and towards three or four a Clock
Look for the News that the Guild-Hall affords.

Exit Buckingham.

Rich. Go Lovell with all ſpeed to Doctor Shaw,
Go thou to Fryar Benker, bid them both
Meet me within this hour at Baynards Caſtle. Exit.
Now will I go to take ſome privy order,
To draw the Brats of Clarence out of ſight,
And to give order, that no manner perſon
Have any time recourſe unto the Princes. Exit.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scr. Here is the Indictment of the good Lord Haſtings,
Which in a ſet hand fairly is engroſs'd,
That it may be to day read o're in Pauls.
And mark how well the ſequell hangs together:
Eleven hours I have ſpent to write it over,
For yeſter-night by Catesby was it ſent me,
The Precedent was full as long a doing,
And yet within theſe five houis Haſtings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty.
Here's a good World the while; who is ſo groſſe,
That cannot ſee this palpable device?

Yet

Yet who so bold, but sayes he sees it not?
Bad is the World, and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought. Exit.

Enter Richard and Buckingham at several doors.

Rich. How now, how now, what say the Citizens?
Buc. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord,
The Citizens are mum, say not a word.
Rich. Touch't you the Bastardy of Edwards Children?
Buc. I did, with his Contract with Lady Lucy,
And his Contract by Deputy in France,
Th'unsatiate greedinesse of his desire,
And his enforcement of the City Wives,
His tyranny for Trifles, his own Bastardy,
As being got, your Father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the Duke.
Withall, I did infer your Lineaments,
Being the right Idea of your Father,
Both in your form, and Nobleness of Mind:
Laid open all your Victories in Scotland,
Your Discipline in War, Wisdome in Peace,
Your Bounty, Vertue, fair Humility:
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose,
Untoucht, or slightly handled in discourse.
And when my Oratory drew toward end,
I bid them that did love their Countries good,
Cry, God save Richard, Englands Royal King.
Rich. And did they so?
Buc. No, so God help me, they spake not a word,
But like dumb Statues, or breathing Stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale:
Which when I saw, I reprehended them,
And ask'd the Mayor, what meant this wilfull silence?
His answer was, the people were not used
To be spoke to, but by the Recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my Tale again:
Thus saith the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferr'd,
But nothing spoke, in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At lower end of the Hall, hurld up their Caps,
And some ten voices cry'd, God save King Richard:
And thus I took the vantage of those few.
Thanks gentle Citizens, and friends, quoth I,
This general applause, and chearfull shout,
Argues your wisdome, and your love to Richard:
And even here brake off, and came away.
Rich. What tongue-lesse Blocks were they,
Would they not speak?
Will not the Mayor then, and his Brethren, come?
Buc. The Mayor is here at hand: intend some fear,
Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:
And look you get a Prayer-Book in you hand,
And stand between two Church-men, good my Lord,
For on that ground I'le make a holy Descant:
And be not easily won to our requests,
Play the Maids part, still answer nay, and take it.
Rich. I go: and if you plead as well for them,
As I can say nay to thee for my self,
No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.
Buc. Go, go up to the Leads, the Lord Mayor knocks.

Enter Lord Mayor, and Citizens.

Welcome my Lord, I dance attendance here,
I think the Duke will not be spoke withall.

Enter Catesby.

Buc. Now Catesby, what sayes your Lord to my request?
Cates. He doth entreat your Grace, my Noble Lord,
To visit him to morrow, or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend Fathers,
Divinely bent to Meditation,
And in no worldly suits would he be movid,
To draw him from his holy Exercise.
Buc. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke,
Tell him, my self, the Mayor and Aldermen,
In deep designes, in matter of great moment,
No lesse importing then our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his Grace.
Cates. I'le signifie so much unto him straight. Exit.
Buc. Ah ha, my Lord, this Prince is not an Edward,
He is not lulling on a lewd Love-Bed:
But on his Knees at Meditation:
Not dallying with a Brace of Curtizans,
But meditating with two deep Divines:
Not sleeping, to engrosse his idle Body,
But praying, to enrich his watchfull Soul.
Happy were England, would this vertuous Prince
Take on his Grace the Soveraignty thereof.
But sure I fear we shall not win him to it.
Mayor. Marry God defend his Grace should say us nay.
Buc. I fear he will: here Catesby comes again.

Enter Catesby.

Now Catesby, what sayes his Grace?
Cates. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of Citizens, to come to him.
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:
He fears, my Lord, you mean no good to him.
Buc. Sorry I am, my Noble Cousin should
Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By Heaven, we come to him in perfect love,
And so once more return, and tell his Grace. Exit.
When holy and devout Religious men
Are at their Beads, 'tis much to draw them thence,
So sweet is zealous Contemplation.

Enter Richard aloft, between two Bishops

Ma. See where his Grace stands, 'tween two Clergy men.
Buc. Two Props of Vertue, for a Christian Prince,
To stay him from the fall of Vanity:
And see a Book of Prayer in his hand,
True Ornaments to know a holy man.
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious Prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests,
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy Devotion, and right Christian Zeal.
Rich. My Lord, there needs no such Apology:
I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
Who earnest in the service of th'high God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.
But leaving this, what is your Graces pleasure?
Buc. Even that (I hope) which pleaseth God above,
And all good men, of this ungovern'd Ile.
Rich. I do suspect I have done some offence,
That seems disgracious in the Cities eye,
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buc. You

Buc. You have, my Lord:
Would it might pleaſe your Grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault.
Rich. Elſe wherefore breath I in a Chriſtian Land.
Buc. Know then, it is your fault, that you reſigne
The Supream Seat, the Throne Majeſtical,
The Sceptred office of your Anceſtors,
Your State of Fortune, and your Due of Birth,
The Lineal Glory of your Royal Houſe,
To the corruption of a blemiſht Stock:
Whiles in the mildneſſe of your ſleepy thoughts,
(Which here we waken to our Countries good,)
The Noble Iſle doth want his proper Limbs:
His Face defac'd with ſkarrs of Infamy,
His Royal Stock grafft with ignoble Plants,
And almoſt ſhoulder'd in the ſwallowing Gulf
Of dark forgetfulneſſe, and deep Oblivion.
Which to recure, we heartily ſolicit
Your gracious ſelf to take on you the charge
And Kingly Government of this your Land:
Not as Protector, Steward, Subſtitute,
Or lowly Factor, for anothers gain;
But as ſucceſſively, from Blood to Blood,
Your Right of Birth, your Empiry, your own.
For this, conſorted with the Citizens,
Your very Worſhipfull and loving friends,
And by their vehement inſtigation,
In this juſt Cauſe come I to move your Grace.
Rich. I cannot tell, if to depart in ſilence,
Or bitterly to ſpeak in your reproof,
Beſt fitteth my Degree, or your Condition.
For not to anſwer, you might haply think,
Tongue-ty'd Ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the Golden Yoak of Soveraignty,
Which fondly you would here impoſe on me.
If to reprove you for this ſuit of yours,
So ſeaſon'd with your faithfull love to me,
Then on the other ſide I check'd my friends.
Therefore to ſpeak, and to avoid the firſt,
And then in ſpeaking, not to incur the laſt,
Definitively thus I anſwer you.
Your love deſerves my thanks, but my deſert
Unmeritable, ſhuns your high requeſt.
Firſt, if all Obſtacles were cut away,
And that my Path were even to the Crown,
As the ripe Revenue, and due of Birth:
Yet ſo much is my poverty of ſpirit,
So mighty, and ſo many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my Greatneſs,
Being a Bark to brook no mighty Sea;
Then in my Greatneſſe covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my Glory ſmother'd.
But God be thank'd, there is no need of me,
And much I need to help you, were there need:
The Royal Tree hath left us Royal Fruit,
Which mellow'd by the ſtealing hours of time,
Will well become the Seat of Majeſty,
And make us (no doubt) happy by his Reign.
On him I lay that, you would lay on me,
The Right and Fortune of his happy Starrs,
Which God defend that I ſhould wring from him.
Buc. My Lord, this argues Conſcience in your Grace,
But the reſpects thereof are nice, and trivial,
All circumſtances well conſidered.
You ſay, that Edward is your Brothers Son,
So ſay we too, but not by Edwards Wife:
For firſt was he contract to Lady Lucy,
Your Mother lives a witneſſe to his Vow,
And afterward by ſubſtitute betroth'd
To Bona, Siſter to the King of France.
Theſe both put off, a poor Petitioner,
A Care-cras'd Mother to a many Sons,
A Beauty-waining, and diſtreſſed Widow,
Even in the after-noon of her beſt dayes,
Made prize and purchaſe of his wanton Eye,
Seduc'd the pitch, and height of his degree,
To baſe declenſion, and loath'd Bigamie.
By her, in his unlawfull Bed, he got
This Edward, whom our Manners call the Prince.
More bitterly could I expoſtulate,
Save that for reverence of ſome alive,
I give a ſparing limit to my Tongue.
Then good my Lord, take to you Royal ſelf
This proffer'd benefit of Dignity:
If not to bleſſe us and the Land withall,
Yet to draw forth your Noble Anceſtry
From the corruption of abuſing times,
Unto a Lineal true derived courſe.
Mayor. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entreat you.
Buc. Refuſe not mighty Lord, this proffer'd love.
Cates. O make them joyfull, grant their lawfull ſuit.
Rich. Alas, why would you heap this Care on me?
I am unfit for State, and Majeſty:
I do beſeech you take it not amiſſe,
I cannot, nor I will not yield to you.
Buc. If you refuſe it, as in love and zeal,
Loth to depoſe the Child your Brothers Son,
As well we know your tenderneſſe of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorſe,
Which we have noted in you to your Kindred,
And equally indeed to all Eſtates:
Yet know, where you accept our ſuit, or no,
Your Brothers Son ſhall never reign our King,
But we will plant ſome other in the Throne,
To the diſgrace and down-fall of your Houſe:
And in this reſolution here we leave you.
Come Citizens, we will entreat no more. Exeunt.
Cates. Call him again, ſweet Prince, accept their ſuit:
If you deny them, all the Land will rue it.
Rich. Will you enforce me to a world of Cares?
Call them again, I am not made of Stones,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,
Albeit againſt my Conſcience and my Soul.
Enter Buckingham and the reſt.
Couſin of Buckingham, and ſage grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burthen, whether, I will or no,
I muſt have patience to endure the Load:
But if black Scandal, or four-fac'd Reproach,
Attend the ſequell of your Impoſition,
Your meer enforcement ſhall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and ſtains thereof,
For God doth know, and you may partly ſee,
How far I am from the deſire of this.
Mayor. God bleſſe your Grace, we ſee it, and will ſay it.
Rich. In ſaying ſo, you ſhall but ſay the truth.
Buc. Then I ſalute you with this Royal Title,
Long live King Richard, Englands worthy King.
All. Amen.
Buc. To morrow may it pleaſe you to be Crown'd?
Rich. Even when you pleaſe, for you will have it ſo.

Buc. To

Buc. To morrw then we will attend your Grace,
And so most joyfully we take our leave.
Rich. Come, let us to our holy Work again.
Farewell my Cousins, farewell gentle friends. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Queen, Anne Duchess of Glouceſter, the Duchess of York, and Marquess of Dorset.

Duch. York. Who meets us here?
My Niece Plantagenet,
Led in the hand of her kind Aunt of Gloſter?
Now, for my Life, she's wandring to the Tower,
On pure hearts love, to greet the tender Prince.
Daughter, well met.
An. God give your Graces both a happy
And a joyfull time of day.
Qu. As much to you, good Sister: whither away?
An. No farther then the Tower, and as I guesse,
Upon the like devotion as your selves,
To gratulate the gentle Princes there.
Qu. Kind Sister thanks, we'll never enter all together:

Enter the Lieutenant.

And in good time, here the Lieutenant comes.
Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the Prince, and my young Son of York?
Lieu. Right well, dear Madam: by your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them,
The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.
Qu. The King? who's that?
Lieu. I mean the Lord Protector.
Qu. The Lord protect him from that Kingly Title.
Hath he set bounds between their love, and me?
I am their Mother, who shall bar me from them?
Duch. York. I am their Fathers Mother, I will see them.
An. Their Aunt I am in Law, in love their Mother:
Then bring me to their sights, I'le bear thy blame,
And take thy Office from thee, on my perill.
Lieu. No, Madam, no, I may not leave it so:
I am bound by Oath, and therefore pardon me.
Exit Lieutenant.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Let me but meet you Ladies one hour hence,
And I'le salute your Grace of York as Mother,
And reverend looker on of two fair Queens.
Come Madam, you must straight to Westminster,
There to be crowned Richards Royal Queen.
Qu. Ah, cut my Lace asunder,
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.
An. Despightfull tidings, O unpleasing news.
Dorf. Be of good chear: Mother, how fares your Grace?
Qu. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone,
Death and Destruction dogs thee at thy heels,
Thy Mothers Name is ominous to Children.
If thou wilt out-strip Death, go crosse the Seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of Hell.
Go hye thee, hye thee from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou encrease the number of the dead,
And make me die the thrall of Margarets Curse,
Nor Mother, Wife, nor Englands counted Queen.
Stan. Full of wise care, is this your counsell, Madam:
Take all the swift advantage of the hours:
You shall have Letters from me to my Son,
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'ne tardy by unwise delay.
Duc. Yor. O ill dispersing Wind of Misery,
O my accursed Womb, the Bed of Death:
A Cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the World,
Whose unavoided Eye is murtherous.
Stan. Come, Madam, come, I in all hast was sent.
An. And I with all unwillingnesse will go.
O would to God, that the inclusive Verge
Of Golden Metal, that must round my Brow,
Were red hot Steel, to sear me to the Brains,
Anointed let me be with deadly Venome,
And die ere men say, God save the Queen.
Qu. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory,
To feed my humor, wish thy self no harme.
An. No: why? When he that is my Husband now,
Came to me, as I follow'd Henrie's Corse,
When scarce the bloud was well washt from his hands,
Which issued from my other Angel Husband,
And that dear Saint, which then I weeping follow'd:
O, when I say, I look'd on Richards Face,
This was my Wish: Be thou (quoth I) accurst,
For making me, so young, so old a Widow:
And when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy Bed:
And be thy Wife, if any be so mad,
More miserable, by the Life of thee,
Then thou hast made me, by my dear Lords death.
Loe, e're I can repeat this Curse again,
Within so small a time, my Womans heart
Grossely grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own Souls Curse,
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest:
For never yet one hour in his Bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timerous Dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my Father Warwick,
And will (no doubt) shortly be rid of me.
Qu. Poor heart adieu, I pitty thy complaining.
An. No more, then with my soule I mourn for yours.
Dorf. Farewell, thou woefull welcommer of glory.
Anne. Adieu, poor soule, that tak'st thy leave of it.
Duc. York. Go to Richmond, to Dorset, to Anne, to the Queen, and good fortune guide thee,
Go thou to Richard, and good Angels tend thee,
Go thou to Sanctuary, and good thoughts possesse thee:
I to my Grave, where peace and rest lye with me.
Eighty odde years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hours joy wrackt with a week of teen.
Qu. Stay, yet look back with me unto the Tower.
Pitty, you ancient Stones, those tender Babes,
Whom Envy hath immur'd within your Walls,
Rough Cradle for such little pretty ones,
Rude ragged Nurse, old sullen Play-fellow,
For tender Princes: use my Babies well;
So foolish Sorrows bids your Stones farewell.
Exeunt.

Sound:

Scena Secunda.

Sound a Sonnet. Enter Richard in pomp, Buckingham, Catesby, Ratcliffe, Lovel.

Rich. Stand all apart Cousin of Buckingham.
Buck. My gracious Soveraign.
Rich. Give me thy hand. Sound.
Thus high, by thy advice, and thy assistance,
Is King Richard seated:
But shall we wear these Glories for a day?
Or shall they last, and we rejoyce in them?
Buc. Still live they, and for ever let them last.
Rich. Ah Buckingham, now do I play the Touch,
To try if thou be current Gold indeed:
Young Edward lives, think now what I would speak.
Buc. Say on, my loving Lord.
Rich. Why Buckingham, I say I would be King.
Buc. Why so you are, my thrice-renowned Lord.
Rich. Ha? am I King? 'tis so: but Edward lives.
Buc. True, Noble Prince.
Rich. O bitter consequence!
That Edward still should live true noble Prince.
Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull.
Shall I be plain? I wish the Bastards dead,
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be brief.
Buck. Your Grace may do your pleasure.
Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all Ice, thy kindnesse freezes:
Say, have I thy consent, that they shall die?
Bu. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear Lord,
Before I positively speak in this:
I will resolve you herein presently. Exit Buck.
Cates. The King is angry, see he gnaws his Lip,
Rich. I will converse with Iron-witted Fools,
And unrespective Boyes: none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes,
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.
Boy.
Page. My Lord.
Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting Gold
Will tempt unto a close exploit of Death?
Page. I know a discontented Gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit:
Gold were as good as twenty Orators,
And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.
Rich. What is his Name?
Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tirrell.
Rich. I partly know the man: go call him hither. Exit.
Boy.
The deep revolving witty Buckingham,
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsells.
Hath he so long held out with me untyr'd,
And stops he now for breath? Well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanley, what's the news?
Stan. Know my loving Lord, the Marquess Dorset
As I hear, is fled to Richmond,
In the parts where he abides
Rich. Come hither Catesby, rumor it abroad,
That Anne my Wife is very grievous sick,
I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean poor Gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence Daughter:
The Boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look how thou dream'st: I say again, give out,
That Anne, my Queen, is sick, and like to die.
About it, for it stands me much upon
To stop all hopes, whose growth may damage me.
I must be married to my Brothers Daughter,
Or else my Kingdome stands on brittle Glasse:
Murther her Brothers, and then marry her,
Uncertain way of gain. But I am in
So far in bloud, that sin will pluck on sin,
Tear-falling Pitty dwells not in this Eye.

Enter Tirrell.

Is thy thy Name Tirrell?
Tir. James Tirrell, and your most obedient subject.
Rich. Art thou indeed?
Tir. Prove me, my gracious Lord.
Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?
Tir. Please you:
But I had rather kill two enemies.
Rich. Why then thou hast it: two deep enemies,
Foes to my Rest, and my sweet sleeps disturbers,
Are they that I would have the deal upon:
Tirrell, I mean those Bastards in the Tower.
Tir. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'le rid you from the fear of them.
Rich. Thou sing'st sweet Musick:
Heark, come hither Tirrel, Whispers.
Go by this token: rise, and lend thine Ear,
There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.
Tir. I will dispatch it straight. Exit.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. My Lord, I have consider'd in my mind,
The late request that you did sound me in.
Rich. Well, let that rest: Dorset is fled to Richmond.
Buc. I hear the news, my Lord.
Rich. Stanley, he is your Wives Son: well, look unto it.
Buck. My Lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,
For which your Honour and your Faith is pawn'd.
Th'Earldome of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.
Rich. Stanley look to your Wife: if she convey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.
Buc. What says your Highnesse to my just request?
Rich. I do remember me, Henry, the Sixth
Did prophesie, that Richmond should be King,
When Richmond was a little peevish Boy.
A King perhaps.
Buc. May it please you to resolve me in my suit.
Rich. Thou troublest me, I am not in the vein. Exit.
Buc. And is it thus? repayes he my deep service
With such contempt? made I him King for this?
O let me think on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecnock, while my fearfull Head is on. Exit.

Enter Tirrel.

Tir. The tyrannous and bloudy Act is done,
The most arch deed of pitious massacre

The

That ever yet this Land was guilty of:
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did ſuborn
To do this piece of ruthfull Butchery,
Albeit they were fleſht Villains, bloudy Dogs,
Melted with tenderneſſe, and milde compaſſion,
Wept like to Children, in their deaths ſad Story,
O thus (quoth Dighton) lay the gentle Babes:
Thus, thus (quoth Forreſt) girdling one another
Within their Alablaſter innocent armes:
Their lips were four red Roſes on a ſtalk,
And their Summer Beauty kiſt each other.
A Book of Prayers on their pillow lay,
Which one (quoth Forreſt) almoſt chang'd my mind:
But oh the Devill, there the Villain ſtopt:
When Dighton thus told on, we ſmothered
The moſt replenifhed ſweet work of nature,
That from the prime Creation ere ſhe framed.
Hence both are gone with Conſcience and Remorſe,
They could not ſpeak, and ſo I left them both,
To bear theſe tydings to the bloudy King.

Enter Richard.

And here he comes. All health my Soveraign Lord.
Rich. Kind Tirrel, am I happy in the News.
Tir. If to have done the thing you gave in charge,
Beget your happineſſe, be happy then,
For it is done.
Rich. But did'ſt thou ſee them dead?
Tir. I did my Lord.
Rich. And buried, gentle Tirrel?
Tir. The Chaplain of the Tower hath buried them,
But where (to ſay the truth) I do not know.
Rich. Come to me Tirrel ſoon, and after Supper,
When thou there ſhalt tell the proceſſe of their death.
Mean time, but think how I may do thee good.
And be inheritor of thy deſire.
Farewell till then.
Tir. I humbly take leave.
Rich. The Son of Clarence have I pent up cloſe,
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage,
The Sons of Edward ſleep in Abrahams boſome,
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.
Now for I know the Brittain Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth my Brothers daughter,
And by that knot looks proudly on the Crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.
Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'ſt in ſo bluntly?
Rat. Bad news my Lord, Mourton is fled to Richmond,
And Buckingham backt with the hardy Welſhmen
Is in the field, and ſtill his power encreaſeth.
Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near,
Then Buckingham and his raſh levied Strength.
Come, I have learn'd, that fearfull commenting
Is leaden ſervitor to dull delay.
Delay leads impotent and Snail-pac'd Beggery:
Then fiery expedition be my wing,
Joves Mercury, and Herald for a King:
Go muſter men: My counſell is my Shield,
We muſt be brief, when Traitors brave the Field.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Old Queen Margaret.

Mar. So now proſperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death:
Here in theſe Confines ſlily have I lurkt,
To watch the waining of mine enemies.
A dire induction, am I witneſſe to,
And will to France, hoping the conſequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and Tragicall.
Withdraw thee wretched Margaret, who comes here?

Enter Dutcheſſe and Queen.

Qu. Ah my poor Princes! ah my tender Babes!
My unblown Flowers, new appearing ſweets:
If yet your gentle ſouls flye in the Aire,
And be not fixt in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mothers Lamentation.
Mar. Hover about her, ſay that right for right
Hath dim'd your Infant morn, to Aged night.
Dut. So many miſeries have craz'd my voyce,
That my woe-wearied tongue is ſtill and mute.
Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?
Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward, payes a dying debt.
Qu. Wilt thou, O God flye from ſuch gentle Lambs,
And throw them in the intrails of the Wolf?
Why didſt thou ſleep, when ſuch a deed was done?
Mar. When holy Henry died, and my ſweet Son.
Dut. Dead life, blind ſight, poor mortal living ghoſt,
Woes Scene, Worlds ſhame, Graves due, by life uſurpt,
Brief abſtract and record of tedious dayes,
Reſt thy unreſt on Englands lawfull earth,
Unlawfully made drunk with innocent bloud.
Qu. Ah that thou would'ſt as ſoon afford a Grave,
As thou canſt yield a melancholly ſeat:
Then would I hide my bones, not reſt them here,
Ah who hath any cauſe to mourn but we?
Mar. If ancient ſorrow be moſt reverent,
Give mine the benefit of ſigneury,
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand
If ſorrow can admit Society.
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:
I had a Husband, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou had'ſt an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou had'ſt a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.
Dut. I had a Richard too, and thou did'ſt kill him;
I had a Rutland too, thou holp'ſt to kill him.
Mar. Thou had'ſt a Clarence too,
And Richard kill'd him.
From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A Hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death:
That Dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry Lambs, and lap their gentle bloud:
That foul defacer of Gods handy work:
That reigns in gauled eyes of weeping ſouls:
That excellent grand Tyrant of the earth,
Thy womb let looſe to chaſe us to our graves.
O upright, juſt, and true diſpoſing God,
How do I thank thee, that this carnal Cur

Preyes

Preys on the iſſue of his mothers body,
And makes her Pue-fellow with others mone.
Dut. Oh Harries wife, triumph not in my woes:
God witneſſe with me, I have wept for thine.
Mar. Bear with me: I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward.
The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward:
Young York, he is but boot, becauſe both they
Match'd not the high perfection of my loſſe.
Thy Clarence he is dead, that ſtab'd my Edward,
And the beholders of this frantick play,
Th'adulterate Haſtings, Rivers, Vaughan, Gray,
Untimely ſmother'd in their dusky Graves.
Richard yet livss, Hells black Intelligencer,
Only reſerv'd their Factor, to buy ſouls,
And ſend them hither: But at hand,
Inſues his pitteous and unpittied end.
Earth gapes, Hell burns, Fiends roar, Saints pray,
To have him ſuddenly convey'd from hence:
Cancell his bond of life, dear God, I pray,
That I may live and ſay, The Dog is dead.
Qu. O thou did'ſt propheſie, the time would come,
That I ſhould wiſh for thee to help me curſe
That bottel'd Spider, that foul bunch-back'd Toad.
Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flouriſh of my fortune:
I call'd thee then, poor Shadow, painted Queen,
The repreſentation of but what I was;
The flattering Index of a direfull Pageant,
One heav'd a high, to be hurl'd down below:
A mother onely mockt with two fair Babes;
A dream of what thou waſt, a gariſh Flag
To be the aim of every dangerous Shot;
A ſign of Dignity, a Breath, a Bubble:
A Queen in leaſt, only to fill the Scene.
Where is thy Husband now? Where be thy Brothers?
Where be thy two Sons? Wherein doſt thou Joy?
Who ſues, and kneels, and ſaies, God ſave the Queen?
Where be the bending Peers that flattered thee?
Where be the thronging Troops that followed thee?
Decline all this, and ſee now what thou art.
For happy Wife, a moſt diſtreſſed Widow:
For joyfull Mother, one that wails the name:
For one being ſued to, one that humbly ſues:
For Queen a very Caytiffe, crown'd with care:
For ſhe that ſcorn'd at me, now ſcorn'd of me:
For ſhe being feared of all, now fearing one:
For ſhe commanding all, obey'd of none.
Thus hath the courſe of Juſtice whirl'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time,
Having no more but Thought of what thou waſt,
To torture thee the more, being what thou art,
Thou didſt uſurp my place, and doſt thou not
Uſurp the juſt proportion of my Sorrow?
Now thy proud Neck, bears half my burthen'd yoak,
From which, even here I ſlip my wearied head,
And leave the burthen of it all, on thee.
Farewell Yorks wife, and Queen of ſad miſchance,
Theſe Engliſh woes, ſhall make me ſmile in France.
Qu. O thou well skill'd in Curſes, ſtay a while,
And teach me how to curſe mine enemies.
Mar. Forbear to ſleep the night, and faſt the day:
Compare dead happineſſe, with living woe:
Think that thy Babes were ſweeter then they were,
And he that ſlew them fouler then he is:
Bett'ring thy loſſe, makes the bad cauſer worſe,
Revolving this, will teach thee how to Curſe.
Qu. My words are dull, O quicken them with thine.
Mar. Thy woes will make them ſharp,
And pierce like mine. Exit Margaret.
Dut. Why ſhould calamity be full of words?
Qu. Windy Attornies to their Clients Woes,
Airy ſucceeders of inteſtine joyes,
Poor breathing Orators of miſeries,
Let them have ſcope, though what they will impart,
Help nothing elſe, yet do they eaſe the heart.
Dut. If ſo then, be not Tongue-ty'd: go with me,
And in the breath of bitter words, let's ſmother
My damned Son, that thy two ſweet Sons ſmother'd.
The Trumpet ſounds, be copious in exclaims.

Enter King Richard, and his Train.

Rich. Who intercepts me in my Expedition?
Dut. O ſhe, that might have intercepted thee
By ſtrangling thee in her accurſed womb,
From all the ſlaughters (Wretch) that thou haſt done.
Qu. Hid'ſt thou that Forhead with a Golden Crown
Where't ſhould be branded, if that right were right?
The ſlaughter of the Prince that ow'd that Crown,
And the dyre death of my poor Sons and Brothers.
Tell me, thou Villain-ſlave, where are my Children?
Dut. Thou Toad, thou Toad,
Where is thy Brother Clarence?
And little Ned Plantagenet his Son?
Qu. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Gray?
Dut. Where is kind Haſtings?
Rich. A flouriſh Trumpets, ſtrike Alarum Drums:
Let not the Heavens hear theſe Tell-tale women.
Rail on the Lords Annointed. Strike I ſay.
Flouriſh Alarums.
Either be patient, and intreat me fair,
Or with the clamorous reports of War,
Thus will I drown your exclamations.
Dut. Art thou my Son?
Rich. I, I thank God, my Father, and your ſelf.
Dut. Then patiently hear my impatience.
Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
That cannot brook the accent of reproof.
Dut. O let me ſpeak.
Rich. Do then, but I'le not hear.
Dut. I will be mild, and gentle in my words.
Rich. And brief, good Mother) for I am in haſt.
Dut. Art thou ſo haſty? I have ſtaid for thee
(God knows) in torment and in agony.
Rich. And came I not at laſt to comfort you?
Dut. No by the holy Rood, thow know'ſt it well,
Thou cam'ſt on earth, to make the earth my Hell.
A grievous burthen was thy Birth to me,
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy.
Thy School-dayes frightfull, deſp'rate, wild, and furious,
Thy prime of Man-hood, daring, bold, and venturous:
Thy Age confirm'd, proud, ſubtle, ſlye, and bloudy,
More mild, but yet more harmfull, Kind in hatred:
What comfortable hour canſt thou name,
That ever grac'd me with thy company?
Rich. Faith none, but Humfrey Hower,
That call'd your Grace
To breakfaſt once, forth of my company.
If I be ſo diſgracious in your eye,
Let me march on, and not offend you Madam.
Strike up the Drum.
Dut. I prethee hear me ſpeak.

Rich.

Rich. You speak too bitterly.
Dut. Hear me a word:
For I shall never speak to thee again.
Rich. So.
Dut. Either thou wilt die by Gods just ordinance
Ere from this warre thou turn a Conqueror:
Or I with grief and extreame age shall perish,
And never more behold thy face again.
Therefore take with thee my most grievous Curse,
Which in the day of Battell tyre thee more
Then all the compleat Armour that thou wear'st.
My Prayers on the adverse Party fight,
And there the little soules of Edwards Children,
Whisper the Spirits of thine Enemies,
And promise them Successe and Victory:
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end:
Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend. Exit.
Quee. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to (curse
Abides in me, I say Amen to her.
Rich. Stay, Madam, I must talk a word with you.
Quee. I have no more Sons of the Royall blood
For thee to slaughter. For my Daughters (Richard)
They shall be praying Nunnes, not weeping Queens:
And therefore levell not to hit their lives.
Rich. You have a Daughter call'd Elizabeth,
Virtuous and Fair, Royall and Gracious.
Quee. And must she dye for this? O let her live,
And I'le corrupt her Manners, stain her Beauty,
Slander my self, as false to Edwards bed:
Throw over her the vaile of infamy,
So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confesse she was not Edwards Daughter.
Rich. Wrong not her Birth, she is a Royall Princesse.
Quee. To save her life, I'le say she is not so.
Rich. Her life is safest onely in her Birth.
Quee. And onely in that safety di'd her Brothers.
Rich. Loe, at their Birth good starres were opposite.
Quee. No; to their lives ill friends were contrary.
Rich. All unavoided is the doom of Destiny.
Quee. True: when avoided Grace makes Destiny.
My Babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If Grace had blest thee with a fairer life.
Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my Cousins?
Quee. Cousins indeed, and by their Uncle cozen'd,
Of Comfort, Kingdome, Kindred, Freedom, Life,
Whose hands soever lanch'd their tender hearts,
Thy head (all indirectly) gave direction.
No doubt the murd'rous Knife was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revell in the intrailes of my Lambs.
But that still use of grief, makes wilde grief tame,
My tongue should to thy eares not name my Boyes,
Till that my Nailes were anchor'd in thine eyes:
And I in such a desp'rate Bay of death,
Like a poor Bark, of sailes and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy Rocky bosome.
Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprize,
And dangerous successe of bloody warres,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Then ever you and yours by me were harm'd.
Quee. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,
To be discovered, that can do me good?
Rich. Th'advancement of your Children, gentle Lady.
Quee. Up to some Scaffold, there to lose their heads.
Rich. Unto the dignity and height of fortune,
The high Imperiall Type of this earths glory.
Quee. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:
Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour
Canst thou devise to any Childe of mine.
Rich. Even all I have; I, and my self and all,
Will I withall endow a Child of thine:
So in the Lethe of thy angry soule,
Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs,
Which thou supposest I have done to thee.
Quee. Be brief, least that the processe of thy kindnesse
Last longer telling then thy kindnesse date.
Rich. Then know,
That from my Soule I love thy Daughter.
Quee. My Daughters Mother thinks it with her Soule.
Rich. What doe you think?
Qu. That thou dost love my Daughter from thy Soul,
So from thy Soules love didst thou love her Brothers,
And from thy hearts love, I do thank thee for it.
Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:
I mean that with my soule I love thy Daughter,
And doe intend to make her Queen of England.
Qu. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her King.
Rich. Even he that makes her Queen.
Who else should be?
Quee. What, thou?
Rich. Even so: how think you of it?
Quee. How canst thou woo her?
Rich. That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Quee. And wilt thou learn of me?
Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Quee. Send to her by the man that slew her Brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts: thereon engrave
Edward and York, then haply will she weep:
Therefore present to her, as sometime Margaret
Did to thy Father, steept in Rutlands blood,
A Hand-kerchiffe, which say to her did drain
The purple sappe from her sweet Brothers body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall.
If this inducement move her not to love,
Send her a Letter of thy Noble deeds:
Tell her, thou mad'st away her Uncle Clarence,
Her Uncle Rivers; I, (and for her sake)
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good Aunt Anne.
Rich. You mock me, Madam, this is not the way
To win your Daughter.
Quee. There is no other way,
Unlesse thou could'st put on some other shape,
And not be Richard, that hath done all this.
Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.
Qu. Nay then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee,
Having bought love with such a bloody spoyle.
Rich. Look what is done, cannot be now amended:
Men shall deale unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours gives leisure to repent.
If I did take the Kingdome from your Sons,
To make amends, I'le give it to your Daughter:
If I have kill'd the issue of your wombe,
To quicken your encrease, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood, upon your Daughter:
A Grandams name is little lesse in love,
Then is the doting Title of a Mother;
They are as Children but one step below,
Even of your mettle, of your very blood:
Of all one pain, save for a night of groans
Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.
Your Children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your Age,
The losse you have, is but a Son being King,
And by that losse, your Daughter is made Queen.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindnesse as I can.
Dorset your Son, that with a fearfull soule,
Leads discontented steps in forreign soyle,
This fair Alliance, quickly shall call home
To high Promotions, and great Dignity.
The King that calls your beautious Daughter Wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset Brother:
Again shall you be Mother to a King:
And all the Ruines of distressefull times,
Repair'd with double riches of Content.
What? we have many goodly dayes to see:
The liquid drops of teares that you have shed,
Shall come again, transform'd to Orient Pearle,
Advantaging their Love, with interest
Often-times double gain of happinesse.
Go then (my Mother) to thy Daughter, go,
Make bold her bashfull yeares, with your experience,
Prepare her eares to hear a Wooers tale.
Put in her tender heart, th'aspiring flame
Of golden Soveraignty: Acquaint the Princesse
With the sweet silent houres of Marriage joyes;
And when this Arme of mine hath chastised
The petty Rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with triumphant Garlands will I come,
And lead thy Daughter to a Conquerors bed:
To whom I will retaile my Conquest won,
And she shall be sole Victoresse, Cæsars Cæsar.

Quee. What were I best to say, her Fathers Brother
Would be her Lord? or shall I say her Unckle?
Or he that slew her Brothers? and her Unckles?
Under what Title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the Law, my Honour, and her Love,
Can make seem pleasing to her tender yeares?

Rich. Inferre fair Englands peace by this Alliance.

Qu. which she shall purchase with still lasting warre.

Rich. Tell her, the King that may command, intreats.

Qu. That at her hands, which the Kings King forbids.

Rich. Say she shall be a high and mighty Queene.

Qu. To vaile the Title, as her Mother doth.

Rich. Say I will love her everlastingly.

Qu. But how long, shall that title ever last?

Rich. Sweetly in force, unto her fair lives end.

Qu. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

Rich. As long as Heaven and Nature lengthens it.

Qu. As long as hell and Richard likes of it.

Rich. Say, I her Soveraign, am her Subject low.

Qu. But she your Subject loathes such Soveraignty.

Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Qu. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.

Rich. Then plainly to her, tell my loving tale.

Qu. Plain and not honest, is too harsh a style.

Rich. Your Reasons are too shallow, and too quick.

Qu. O no, my Reasons are too deep and dead,
Too deep and dead (poor Infants) in their graves,
Harp on it still shall I, till heart-strings break.

Rich. Harp not on that string, Madam, that is past.
Now by my George, my Garter, and my Crown.

Qu. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurpt.

Rich. I swear.

Qu. By nothing, for this is no Oath:
Thy George profan'd, hath lost his Lordly honour;
Thy Garter blemish'd, pawn'd his Kingly Virtue;
Thy Crown usurpt, disgrac'd his Kingly Glory:
If something thou would'st swear to be believ'd,
Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

Rich. Then by my self.

Qu. Thy self, is self-misus'd.

Rich. Now by the World.

Qu. 'Tis full of thy foule wrongs.

Rich. My Fathers death.

Qu. Thy life hath it dishonour'd.

Rich. Why then, by Heaven.

Qu. Heavens wrong is most of all:
If thou didst fear to break an Oath with him,
The unity the King my Husband made,
Thou hadst not broken, nor my Brothers di'd,
If thou hadst fear'd to break an Oath by him,
Th'Imperiall Mettall, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender Temples of my Child,
And both the Princes had been breathing here,
Which now two tender Bed-fellows for dust,
Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormes.
What canst thou swear by now?

Rich. The time to come.

Qu. That thou hast wronged in the time o're-past:
For I my self have many teares to wash
Hereafter time, for time past wrong'd by thee,
The Children live, whose Fathers thou hast slaughter'd,
Ungovern'd youth, to waile it with their age:
The Parents live, whose Children thou hast butcher'd,
Old barren Plants, to waile it with their age.
Swear not by time to come, for that thou hast
Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd repast.

Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent:
So thrive I in my dangerous Affaires
Of hostile Armes: My self, my self confound:
Heaven, and Fortune barre me happy houres:
Day, yield me not thy light? nor Night, thy rest.
Be opposite all Planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if with dear hearts love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beautious Princely Daughter.
In her consists my happinesse and thine:
Without her follows to my self and thee,
Her self, the Land, and many a Christian soule,
Death, Desolation, Ruine, and Decay:
It cannot be avoided, but by this:
It will not be avoided, but by this.
Therefore dear Mother (I must call you so)
Be the Atturney of my love to her:
Plead what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:
Urge the necessity and state of times,
And be not peevish found in great Designs.

Qu. Shall I be tempted of the Devil thus?

Rich. I, if the Devil tempt you to doe good.

Qu. Shall I forget my self to be my self?

Rich. I, if your selfs remembrance wrong your self.

Quee. Yet thou didst kill my Children.

Rich. But in your Daughters womb I bury them.
Where in that Nest of Spicery they will breed
Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.

Qu. Shall I go win my Daughter to thy will?

Rich. And be a happy Mother by the deed.

Qu. I go, write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me her mind. Exit Qu.

Rich. Bear her my true loves kisse, and so farewell.
Relenting Foole, and shallow-changing Woman.

How

How now, what newes?

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. Most mighty Soveraign, on the Western Coast
rideth a puissant Navy: to our Shores
Throng many doubtfull hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back.
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their Admirall:
And there they hull, expecting but the aid
of Buckingham, to welcome them ashore,
Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk: Ratcliffe, thy self, or Catesby, where is he? (folk,
Cat. Here, my good Lord.
Rich. Catesby, flye to the Duke.
Cat. I will, my Lord, with all convenient haste,
Rich. Catesby, come hither, post to Salisbury.
When thou com'st thither: Dull unmindfull Villain.
Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the Duke?
Cat. First, mighty Liege, tell me your highness pleasure,
What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.
Rich. O true, good Catesby, bid him levy straight
The greatest strength and power that he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.
Cat. I go. Exit.
Rat. What, may it please you, shall I doe at Salisbury.
Rich. Why, what would'st thou doe there before I go?
Rat. Your Highnesse told me I should poste before.
Rich. My minde is chang'd:

Enter Lord Stanley.

Stanley, what newes with you?
Sta. None, good my Liege, to please you with the hearing,
Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.
Rich. Hoyday, a Riddle, neither good nor bad!
What need'st thou run so many miles about,
When thou may'st tell thy tale the neerest way?
Once more, what newes?
Stan. Richmond is on the Seas.
Rich. There let him sink, and be the Seas on him,
White-liver'd Run-a-gate, what doth he there?
Stan. I know not, mighty Soveraign, but by guesse.
Rich. Well, as you guesse.
Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton.
He makes for England, here to claim the Crown.
Rich. Is the Chayre empty? is the Sword unsway'd?
Is the King dead? the Empire unpossest?
What heir of York is there alive, but we?
And who is Englands King, but great York's heir?
Then tell me, what makes he upon the Seas?
Stan. Unlesse for that, my Liege, I cannot guesse.
Rich. Unlesse for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot guesse wherefore the Welch-man comes.
Thou wilt revolt, and flye to him, I fear.
Stan. No, my good Lord, therefore mistrust me not.
Rich. Where is thy power then to beat him back?
Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the Western shore,
Safe-conducting the Rebels from their Ships?
Stanley. No, my good Lord, my friends are in the North.
Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the North,
When they should serve their Soveraign in the West?
Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King,
Pleaseth your Majesty to give me leave,
I'le muster up my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where, and what time your Majesty shall please.
Rich. I, thou would'st be gone, to joyn with Richmond:
But I'le not trust thee.
Stan. Most mighty Soveraign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtfull,
I never was, nor never will be false.
Rich. Go then, and muster men: but leave behind
Your Son George Stanley: look your heart be firm,
Or else his heads assurance is but faile.
Stan. So deale with him as I prove true to you.
Exit Stanley.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious Soveraign, now in Devon-shire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty Prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder Brother,
With many more Confederates are in Armes.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. In Kent, my Liege, the Guilfords are in Armes,
And every hour more Competitors
Flock to the Rebels, and their power growes strong.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My Lord, the Army of great Buckingham.
Rich. Out on ye, Owles, nothing but Songs of Death.
He striketh him.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better newes,
Mess. The newes I have to tell your Majesty,
Is, that by sudden Floods, and fall of Waters,
Buckingham's Army is dispers'd and scatter'd,
And he himself wandred away alone,
No man knows whether.
Rich. I cry thee mercy;
There is my Purse, to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well adviséd friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the Traytor in?
Mess. Such Proclamation hath been made, my Lord.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. Sir Thomas Lovell, and Lord Marquesse Dorset,
'Tis said, my Liege, in York-shire are in Armes:
But this good comfort bring I to your Highnesse,
The Britain Navy is dispers'd by Tempest.
Richmond in Dorset-shire sent out a Boat
Unto the shore, to aske those on the Banks,
If they were his Assistants, yea, or no?
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham,
Upon his party: he mistrusting them,
Hoys'd saile, and made his course again for Britain.
Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in Armes,
If not to fight with Forreign Enemies,
Yet to beat down these Rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the best newes, that the Earl of Richmond

Is with a mighty power Landed at Milford,
Is colder newes, but yet they must be told.
Rich. Away towards Salisbury while we reason here,
A Royall Battell might be won and lost:
Some one take order Buckingham be brought
To Salisbury, the rest march on with me. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Derby, and Sir Christopher.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the stye of the most deadly Boar,
My Son George Stanley is frankt up in hold:
If I revolt, off goes young George's head,
The fear of that holds off my present aide.
So get thee gone: commend me to thy Lord.
Withall say, that the Queen hath heartily consented
He should espouse Elizabeth her Daughter.
But tell me, where is Princely Richmond now?
Chri. At Penbrook, or at Hertford West in Wales.
Der. What men of Name resort to him,
Chri. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned Souldier,
Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Penbrook, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.
Der. Well hye thee to thy Lord: I kisse his hand,
My Letter will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Buckingham with Halberds, led to Execution.

Buc. Will not King Richard let me speak with him?
Sher. No, my good Lord, therefore be patient.
Buc. Hastings, and Edwards Children, Gray & Rivers,
Holy King Henry, and thy fair Son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By under-hand corrupted foul injustice,
If that your moody discontented soules,
Do through the Clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction.
This is All-Soules Day (Fellow) is it not?
Sher. It is.
Buc. Why then All Soules Day, is my bodies doomsday.
This is the Day, which in King Edwards time
I wisht might fall on me, when I was found
False to his Children, and his Wives Allies.
This is the day, wherein I wisht to fall
By the false Faith of him whom most I trusted.
This, this All-soules Day to my fearfull Soule,
Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs:
That high All-seer, which I dallied with,
Hath turn'd my feigned Prayer on my head,
And given in earnest, what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the Swords of wicked men
To turn their own points in their Masters bosomes.
Thus Margarets curse falls heavy on my neck:
When he (quoth she) will split thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a Prophetesse:
Come lead me Officers to the Block of shame,
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
Exeunt Buckingham with Officers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Richmond, Oxford, Blunt, Herbert, and others, with Drum and Colours.

Richm. Fellows in Armes, and my most loving Friends,
Bruis'd underneath the yoake of Tyranny,
Thus farre into the bowels of the Land,
Have we marcht on without impediment;
And here receive we from our Father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement:
The wretched, bloody, and usurping Boar,
(That spoyl'd your Summer-Fields, and Fruitfull Vines)
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough
In your embowell'd bosomes: This foule Swine
Is now even in the Center of this Isle,
Near to the Town of Leicester, as we learn:
From Tamworth thither, is but one dayes march.
In Gods name cheerely on, courageous Friends,
To reap the Harvest of perpetuall peace,
By this one bloody tryall of sharp Warre.
Oxf. Every mans Conscience is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty Homicide.
Her. I doubt not but his Friends will turn to us.
Blun. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear,
Which in his dearest need will flye from him.
Rich. All for our vantage, then in Gods name march,
True hope is swift, and flyes with Swallows wings,
Kings it makes Gods, and meaner creatures Kings
Exeunt omnes.

Enter King Richard in Armes, with Norfolk, Ratcliffe, and the Earl of Surrey.

Rich. Here pitch our Tent, even here in Bosworth (field;
My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?
Sur. My heart is ten times lighter then my looks.
Rich. My Lord of Norfolk.
Nor. Here, most gracious Liege.
Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks:
Ha, must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take my loving Lord.
Rich. Up with my Tent, here will I lie to night,
But where to morrow? well, all's one for that.
Who hath descried the number of the Traytors?
Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.
Rich. Why our Battalia trebble that account:
Besides, the Kings name is a Tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse Faction want.
Up with the Tent: Come Noble Gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground.
Call for some men of sound direction:

Let's

Let's lack no Diſcipline, make no delay,
For, Lords, to morrow is a buſie day. Exeunt.

Enter Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and Dorſet.

Richm. The weary Sun hath made a Golden ſet,
And by the bright Tract of his fiery Carre,
Gives token of a goodly day to morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you ſhall bear my Standard:
Give me ſome Ink and Paper in my Tent:
I'le draw the Form and Modell of our Battell,
Limit each Leader to his ſeverall Charge,
And part in juſt proportion our ſmall Power.
My Lord of Oxford, you Sir William Brandon,
And you Sir Walter Herbert ſtay with me:
The Earl of Pembrook keeps his Regiment;
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,
And by the ſecond hour in the Morning,
Deſire the Earl to ſee me in my Tent:
Yet one thing more (good Captain) doe for me:
Where is Lord Stanley Quarter'd, doe you know?

Blunt. Unleſſe I have miſtane his Colours much,
(Which well I am aſſur'd I have not done)
His Regiment lies half a Mile at leaſt
South, from the mighty power of the King.

Rich. If without perill it be poſſible,
Sweet Blunt, make ſome good means to ſpeak with him,
And give him from me, this moſt needfull Note.

Blunt. Vpon my ſelf, my Lord, I'le undertake it,
And ſo God give you quiet reſt to night.

Rich. Good night, good Captain Blunt:
Come Gentlemen,
Let us conſult upon to morrows Buſineſſe;
Into my Tent, the Dew is raw and cold.
They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter Richard, Ratcliffe, Norfolk, and Catesby.

Rich. What is't a Clock?

Cat. It's Supper time, my Lord, it's nine a Clock.

King. I will not ſup to night,
Give me ſome Ink and Paper:
What, is my Beaver eaſier then it was?
And all my Armour laid into my Tent?

Cat. It is, my Liege: and all things are in readineſſe.

Rich. Good Norfolk hie thee to thy charge,
Uſe carefull Watch, chuſe truſty Centinells.

Nor. I go, my Lord.

Rich. Stir with the Larke to morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my Lord. Exit.

Rich. Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Send out a Purſuivant at Armes
To Stanley's Regiment: bid him bring his power
Before Sun-riſing, leaſt his Son George fall
Into the blind Cave of eternall night.
Fill me a Bowle of Wine: give me a Watch:
Saddle white Surrey for the field to morrow:
Look that my ſtaves be ſound, & not too heavy. Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Saw'ſt the melancholly Lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himſelf,
Much about Cock ſhut time, from Troop to Troop
Went through the Army, cheering up the Souldiers.

King. So, I am ſatisfied: give me a Bowle of Wine,
I have not that alacrity of Spirit,
Nor cheer of Mind, that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is Ink an Paper ready?

Rat. It is my Lord.

Rich. Bid my Guard watch. Leave me.
Ratcliffe, about the mid of night come to my Tent
And help to Arme. Leave me I ſay. Exit Ratcliffe.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his Tent.

Derb. Fortune and Victory ſit on thy Helme.

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can affoord,
Be to thy perſon, noble Father-in-law.
Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother?

Der. I, by Attourney, bleſſe thee from thy Mother,
Who prayes continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that. The ſilent houres ſteale on,
And flaky darkneſſe breaks within the Eaſt.
In brief, for ſo the ſeaſon bids us be,
Prepare thy Battell early in the morning,
And put thy Fortune to th' Arbitrement
Of bloody ſtroaks, and mortall ſtaring Warre:
I, as I may, that which I would, I cannot,
With beſt advantage will deceive the time,
And aide thee in this doubtfull ſhock of Armes.
But on thy ſide I may not be too forward,
Leaſt being ſeen, thy Brother, tender George,
Be executed in his Fathers ſight.
Farewell: the leiſure, and the fearfull time
Cuts off the ceremonious Vows of Love,
And ample enterchange of ſweet Diſcourſe,
Which ſo long ſundred Friends ſhould dwell upon:
God give us leiſure for theſe rites of Love.
Once more adieu, be valiant, and ſpeed well.

Richm. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment:
I'le ſtrive with troubled noyſe, to take a Nap.
Leaſt leaden ſlumber poize me down to morrow,
When I ſhould mount with wings of Victory:
Once more, good night kind Lords and Gentlemen.
Exeunt. Manet Richmond.
O thou, whoſe Captain I account my ſelf,
Look on my Forces with a gracious Eye:
Put in their hands thy bruiſing Irons of wrath,
That they may cruſh down with a heavy fall,
Th' uſurping Helmets of our Adverſaries:
Make us thy Miniſters of Chaſtiſement,
That we may praiſe thee in thy Victory:
To ſee thee I doe commend my watchfull ſoule,
Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes:
Sleeping, and waking, oh defend me ſtill. Sleeps.

Enter the Ghoſt of Prince Edward, Son to Henry the Sixt.

Gh. to Ri. Let me ſit heavy on thy ſoule to morrow:
Think how thou ſtabb'ſt me in the prime of youth
At Tewkſbury; deſpaire therefore, and die.

Ghoſt to Richm. Be cheerfull, Richmond,
For the wronged ſoules
Of Butcher'd Princes, fight in thy behalf:
King Henry's iſſue, Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghoſt of Henry the ſixt.

Ghoſt. When I was mortall, my Annointed body
By thee was punched full of holes;
Think on the Tower, and me: Deſpaire, and die.
Henry the ſixt, bids thee deſpaire, and die.

To Richm. Virtuous and holy, be thou Conqueror:
Harry that prophecied thou ſhould'ſt be King,
Doth comfort thee in ſleep: live, and flouriſh.

Enter the Ghoſt of Clarence.

Ghoſt. Let me ſit heavy in thy ſoule to morrow.
I that was waſh'd to death in Fulſome Wine:
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death:
To morrow in the Battell think on me,
And fall thy edgeleſſe Sword, deſpaire and dye.

To Richm. Thou off-ſpring of the Houſe of Lancaſter,
The wronged heires of York doe pray for thee,
Good Angels guard thy Battell, live and flouriſh.

Enter the Ghoſts of Rivers, Gray, and Vaughan.

Riv. Let me ſit heavy in thy ſoule to morrow,
Rivers, that di'd at Pomfret: deſpaire, and die.

Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy ſoule deſpaire.

Vaugh. Think upon Vaughan, and with guilty fear
Let fall thy Lance, deſpair and die.

All to Richm. Awake.
And think our wrongs in Richard's Boſome,
Will conquer. Awake and win the day.

Enter the Ghoſt of Lord Haſtings.

Ghoſt. Bloudy and guilty: guilty awake,
And in a bloudy Battell end thy dayes.
Think on Lord Haſtings; deſpair, and die.

Haſt. To Richm. Quiet untroubled ſoul,
Awake, awake:
Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair Englands ſake.

Enter the Ghoſts of the two young Princes.

Ghoſts. Dream on thy Couſins
Smothered in the Tower:
Let us be laid within thy boſome Richard,
And weigh the down to ruine, ſhame, and death.
Thy Nephews ſoul bids thee deſpair and die.

Ghoſts to Richm. Sleep Richmond,
Sleep in peace, and wake in joy,
Good Angels guard thee from the Boares annoy,
Live, and beget a happy race of Kings.
Edward's unhappy Sons, doe bid thee flouriſh:

Enter the Ghoſt of Anne his Wife.

Ghoſt. to Rich. Richard, thy Wife,
That wretched Anne thy Wife,
That never ſlept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy ſleep with perturbations,
To morrow in the Battell think on me,
And fall thy edgeleſſe Sword, deſpaire and dye.

Ghoſt to Richm. Thou quiet ſoule,
Sleep thou a quiet ſleep:
Dream of ſucceſſe, and happy victory,
Thy Adverſaries Wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghoſt of Buckingham.

Ghoſt to Rich. The firſt was I
That help'd thee to the Crown:
The laſt was I that felt thy Tyranny.
O, in the Battell think on Buckingham,
And dye in terror of thy guiltineſſe.
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death,
Fainting deſpaire; deſpairing yield thy breath.

Ghoſt to Richm. I di'd for hope
Ere I could lend thee aide;
But cheer thy heart, and be thou not diſmay'd:
God, and good Angels fight on Richmond's ſide,
And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

Richard ſtarts out of his dreame.

Rich. Give me another Horſe, bind up my Wounds:
Have mercy Jeſu. Soft. I did but dreame.
O coward Conſcience! how doſt thou afflict me?
The Lights burn blew. It is not dead midnight,
Cold fearfull drops ſtand on my trembling fleſh:
What? doe I fear my ſelf? There's none elſe by,
Richard loves Richard, that is, I am I.
Is there a Murtherer here? No; Yes, I am:
Then flye? what from my ſelf? Great reaſon: why?
Leſt I revenge. What? my ſelf upon my ſelf?
Alack, I love my ſelf. Wherefore? For any good
That I my ſelf, have done upon my ſelf?
O no. Alaſs, I rather hate my ſelf,
For hatefull Deeds committed by my ſelf.
I am a Villain: yet I Lye, I am not.
Fool, of thy ſelf ſpeak well: Fool, do not flatter.
My Conſcience hath a thouſand ſeverall Tongues,
And every tongue brings in a ſeverall tale,
And every tale condemns me for a Villain;
Perjury, in the high'ſt Degree,
Murther, ſtern murther, in the dyr'ſt degree,
All ſeverall ſins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng all to th' Barre, crying all, Guilty, Guilty,
I ſhall deſpair, there is no Creatures loves me;
And if I die, no ſoul ſhall pitty me.
Nay, wherefore ſhould they? ſince that I my ſelf,
Finde in my ſelf, no pitty to my ſelf.
Me thought, the ſoules of all that I had murther'd
Came to my Tent, every one did threat
To morrows vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

King. Who's there?

Rat. Ratcliffe my Lord, 'tis I: the early Village Cock
Hath twice done ſalutation to the Morn,
Your friends are up, and buckle on their Armour.

King. O Ratcliffe, I fear, I fear.

Rat. Nay, good my Lord, be not afraid of ſhadows.

King. By the Apoſtle Paul, ſhadows to night
Have ſtroke more terrour to the ſoule of Richard,
Then can the ſubſtance of ten thouſand Souldiers
Armed in proof, and led by ſhallow Richmond.
'Tis not yet near day. Come go with me,
Under our Tents; I'le play the Eaſe-dropper,
To hear if any man ſhrink from me.

Exeunt Richard and Ratcliffe.

Enter the Lords to Richmond ſitting in his Tent.

Lords. Good morrow Richmond.

Rich. Cry you mercy Lords, and watchfull Gentlemen,
That you have tane a tardy ſluggard here?

Lords. How have you ſlept, my Lord?

Richm. The ſweeteſt ſleep,
And faireſt boading Dreames,
That ever entred in a drowſie head,
Have I ſince your departure had my Lords.
Me thought their ſoules, whoſe bodies Richard murther'd,
Came to my Tent, and cried on Victory:
I promiſe you my heart is very jocond,
In the remembrance of ſo fair a Dream.
How farre into the Morning is it, Lords?

Lord. Upon the ſtroke of four.

Rich. Why then 'tis time to Arme, and give direction.

His Oration to his Souldiers.

More then I have ſaid, loving Countrymen,
The leiſure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell upon: yet remember this,

God

God, and our good cauſe, fight upon our ſide,
The Prayers of holy Saints and wronged ſoules,
Like high rear'd Bulwarks, ſtand before our Faces,
(Richard except) thoſe whom we fight againſt,
Had rather have us win, then him they follow.
For, what is he they follow? Truly Gentlemen,
A bloody Tyrant, and a Homicide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood eſtabliſh'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And ſlaughter'd thoſe that were the means to help him:
A baſe foule Stone, made precious by the ſoyle
Of Englands Chayre, where he is falſly ſet:
One that hath ever been Gods Enemy.
Then if you fight againſt Gods Enemy,
God will in juſtice ward you as his Souldiers.
If you do ſwear to put a Tyrant down,
You ſleep in peace, the Tyrant being ſlain:
If you do fight againſt your Countreys Foes,
Your Countreys Fat ſhall pay your pains the hire.
If you doe fight in ſafeguard of your Wives,
Your Wives ſhall welcome home the Conquerors.
If you doe free your Children from the Sword,
Your Childrens Children quits it in your Age.
Then in the name of God and all theſe rights,
Advance your Standards, draw your willing Swords.
For me, the ranſome of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold Corps on the Earth's cold face.
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt,
The leaſt of you ſhall ſhare his part thereof.
Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldly, and cheerfully,
God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victory.

Enter King Richard, Ratcliffe, and Catesby.

King. What ſaid Northumberl. as touching Richmond?
Ratc. That he was never trained up in Armes.
King. He ſaid the truth: and what ſaid Surrey then?
Ratc. He ſmil'd and ſaid, the better for our purpoſe.
King. He was in the right, and ſo indeed it is.
Tell the Clock there. Clock ſtrikes.
Give me a Kalender: who ſaw the Sun to day?
Ratc. Not I, my Lord.
King. Then he diſdains to ſhine: for by the Book
He ſhould have brav'd the Eaſt an hour ago,
A black day will it be to ſome body. Ratcliffe.
Rat. My Lord.
King. The Sun will not be ſeen to day,
The ſky doth frown, and lowre upon our Army.
I would theſe dewy teares were from the ground.
Not ſhine to day? why, what is that to me
More then to Richmond? for the ſelf-ſame Heaven
That frowns on me, looks ſadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lord, the foes vaunts in the field.
King. Come, buſtle, buſtle. Capariſon my Horſe.
Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will lead forth my Soldiers to the plain,
And thus my Battell ſhall be ordered.
My foreward ſhall be drawn in length,
Conſiſting equally of Horſe and Foot:
Our Archers ſhall be placed in the midſt;
John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the Foot and Horſe.
They thus directed, we will follow
In the main Battell, whole puiſſance on either ſide
Shall be well wing'd with our chiefeſt Horſe:
This, and Saint George to boot.
What think'ſt thou, Norfolk?
Nor. A good direction, warlike Soveraign,
This found I on my Tent this Morning.
Jocky of Norfolk, be not ſo bold,
For Dickon thy Maſter is bought and ſold.
King. A thing deviſed by the Enemy.
Go Gentlemen, every man to his Charge,
Let not our babling Dreames affright our Soules:
For conſcience is a word that Cowards uſe,
Devis'd at firſt to keep the ſtrong in awe,
Our ſtrong Armes be our Conſcience, Swords our Law.
March on, joyn bravely, let us too't pell mell,
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.
What ſhall I ſay more then I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withall,
A ſort of Vagabonds, Raſcalls, Run-awayes,
A ſcum of Britains, and baſe Lackey-Pezants,
Whom their o're-cloyed Countrey vomits forth
To deſperate Adventures, and aſſur'd Deſtruction.
You ſleeping ſafe, they bring you to unreſt:
You having Lands, and bleſt with beautious Wives,
They would reſtrain the one, diſtain the other.
And who doth lead them, but a paltry Fellow?
Long kept in Britain at our Mothers coſt,
A Milk-ſop, one that never in his life
Felt ſo much cold, as over ſhooes in Snow:
Let's whip theſe ſtraglers o're the Seas again,
Laſh hence theſe over-weening Ragges of France,
Theſe famiſh'd Beggars, weary of their lives,
Who (but for dreaming on this fond exploit)
For want of means (poor Rats) had hang'd themſelves.
If we be conquered, let men conquer us,
And not theſe baſtard-Britains, whom our Fathers
Have in their own Land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And on Record, left them the heires of ſhame.
Shall theſe enjoy our Lands? lie with our Wives?
Raviſh our Daughters? Drumme afar off.
Heark, I hear their Drumme,
Right Gentlemen of England, fight boldly yeomen,
Draw Archers, draw your Arrowes to the head,
Spurre your proud Horſes hard, and ride in blood,
Amaze the welkin with your broken ſtaves.

Enter a Meſſenger.

What ſayes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?
Meſ. My Lord, he doth deny to come.
Kin. Off with his Son George's head.
Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is paſt the Marſh:
After the Battell let George Stanley die.
King. A thouſand hearts are great within my boſome.
Advance our Standards, ſet upon our Foes,
Our ancient word of Courage, fair Saint George
Inſpire us with the ſpleen of fiery Dragons:
Upon them, Victory ſits on our helps.

Alarum. Excurſions. Enter Catesby.

Cat. Reſcue, my Lord of Norfolk,
Reſcue, Reſcue:
The King enacts more wonders then a man,
Daring an oppoſite to every danger:
His Horſe is ſlain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Reſcue, fair Lord, or elſe the day is loſt.
Alarums. Enter.

Enter Richard.

Rich. A Horſe, a Horſe, my Kingdome for a Horſe.
Cat. Withdraw, my Lord, I'le help you to a Horſe.
Rich. Slave, I have ſet my life upon a caſt,
And I will ſtand the hazard of the Die:
I think there be ſix Richmonds in the field,
Five have I ſlain to day, in ſtead of him.
A Horſe, a Horſe, my Kingdome for a Horſe.

Alarum. Enter Richard and Richmond, they fight, Richard is ſlain.

Retreat, and Flouriſh. Enter Richmond, Derby bearing the Crown, with divers other Lords.

Richm. God and your Armes
Be prais'd, Victorious Friends;
This day is ours, the bloody Dog is dead.
Der. Couragious Richmond,
Well haſt thou acquit thee: Loe,
Here theſe long uſurped Royalties,
From the dead Temples of this bloody Wretch,
Have I pluckt off, to grace thy Browes withall.
Wear it, and make much of it.
Richm. Great God of heaven, ſay Amen to all.
But tell me, is young George Stanley living?
Der. He is, my Lord, and ſafe in Leiceſter Town,
Whether (if you pleaſe) we may with-draw us.
Richm. What men of note are ſlain on either ſide?
Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferris,
Sir Robert Brokenbury, and Sir William Brandon.
Rich. Interre their Bodies, as become their Births,
Proclaim a Pardon to the Souldiers fled,
That in ſubmiſſion will return to us,
And then, as we have tane the Sacrament,
We will unite the White Roſe, and the Red.
Smile heaven upon this fair Conjunction,
That long have frown'd upon their Enmity:
What Traitor heares me, and ſayes not Amen?
England hath long been mad, and ſcarr'd her ſelf;
The Brother blindly ſhed the Brothers blood;
The Father raſhly ſlaughter'd his own Son;
The Sons compell'd, been Butcher to the Sire:
All this divided York and Lancaſter,
Divided, in their dire Diviſion.
O now let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true Succeeders of each Royall Houſe,
By Gods fair ordinance, conjoyn together:
And let thy Heires (God if thy will be ſo)
Enrich the time to come, with Smooth-fac'd Peace,
With ſmiling Plenty, and fair proſperous dayes.
Abate the edge of Traitors, Gracious Lord,
That would reduce theſe bloody dayes again,
And make poor England weep in ſtreames of Blood.
Let them not live to taſte this Lands encreaſe,
That would with Treaſon, wound this fair Lands peace
Now Civil wounds are ſtopp'd, Peace lives agen;
That ſhe may long live here, God ſay, Amen. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Famous Hiſtory of the Life of King Henry the Eighth.

The Prologue.

I Come no more to make you laugh ; Things now,
That bear a Weighty, and a Serious Brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of State and Woe :
Such Noble Scenes, as draw the Eye to flow
We now preſent. Thoſe that can Pitty, here
May (if they think it well) let fall a Tear,
The Subject will deſerve it. Such as give
Their Money out of hope they may believe,
May here find Truth too. Thoſe that come to ſee
Onely a ſhow or two, and ſo agree,
The Play may paſſe : If they be ſtill, and willing,
I'le undertake may ſee away their ſhilling
Richly in two ſhort houres. Onely they
That come to hear a merry, bawdy Play,
A noyſe of Targets : Or to ſee a Fellow
In a long Motley Coat, garded with Yellow,
Will be deceiv'd : For gentle Hearers, know
To rank our choſen Truth with ſuch a ſhow
As Fool, and Fight is, beſide forfeiting
Our own Brains, and the Opinion that we bring
To make that onely true, we now intend,
Will leave us never an underſtanding Friend.
Therefore, for Goodneſſe ſake, and as you are known
The Firſt and Happieſt Hearers of the Town,
Be ſad, as we would make ye. Think ye ſee
The very Perſons of our Noble Story,
As they were Living : Think you ſee them Great,
And follow'd with the generall throng, and ſweat
Of thouſand Friends : then, in a moment, ſee
How ſoon this Mightineſſe, meets Miſery.
And if you can be merry then, I'le ſay,
A Man may weep upon his Wedding Day.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk at one door. At the other, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Aburgavenny.

Buckinham.

GOod morrow, and well met. How have ye done
Since laſt we ſaw y'in France?

Nor. I thank your Grace :
Healthfull, and ever ſince a freſh admirer
Of what I ſaw there.

Buck. An untimely Ague
Staid me a Priſoner in my Chamber, when
Thoſe Sons of Glory, thoſe two Lights of Men
Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde,
I was then preſent, ſaw them ſalute on Horſe-back,
Beheld them when they lighted, how they clung
In their Embracement, as they grew together,
Which had they,
What four Thron'd ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one ?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my Chambers Priſoner.

Nor. Then you loſt
The view of earthly glory : Men might ſay
Till this time Pomp was ſingle, but now married
To one above it ſelf. Each following day
Became the next dayes maſter, till the laſt
Made former Wonders, it's. To day the French,
All Clinquant all in Gold, like Heathens Gods
Shone down the Engliſh ; and to morrow, they Made Britain, India : Every man that ſtood,
Shew'd like a Mine. Their Dwarfiſh Pages were
As Cherubins, all gilt : the Madams too,
Not us'd to toyle, did almoſt ſweat to bear
The Pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them, as a Painting. Now this Maske
Was cri'd incomparable ; and th'enſuing night
Made it a fool, and Beggar. The two Kings
Equall in luſtre, were now beſt, now worſt
As preſence did preſent them : him in Eye,
Still him in praiſe, and being preſent both,
'Twas ſaid they ſaw but one, and no Diſcerner
Durſt wag his Tongue in cenſure, when theſe Suns
(For ſo they phraſe 'em) by their Heralds challeng'd
The Noble ſpirits to Armes, they did perform

Beyond

Beyond thoughts compaſſe, that former fabulous Story
Being now ſeen, poſſible enough, got credit
That Bevis was believ'd.
Buc. Oh you go farre.
Nor. As I belong to worſhip, and affect
In honour, honeſty, the tract of ev'ry thing,
Would by a good Diſcourſer loſe ſome life,
Which Actions ſelf, was tongue to.
Buc. All was Royall,
To the diſpoſing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view. The Office did
Diſtinctly his full Function: who did guide,
I mean who ſet the Body, and the Limbs
of this great Sport together?
Nor. As you gueſſe:
Once certes, that promiſes no Element
In ſuch a buſineſſe.
Buc. I pray you who, my Lord?
Nor. All this was ordered by the good Diſcretion
Of the right Reverend Cardinall of York.
Buck. The devil ſpeed him: No mans Pye is freed from his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in theſe fierce Vanities? I wonder,
That ſuch a Keech can with his very bulk
Take up the Rayes oth' beneficiall Sun;
And keep it from the Earth.
Nor. Surely, Sir,
There's in him ſtuffe, that put's him to theſe ends:
For being not propt by Anceſtry, whoſe grace
Chalks Succeſſors their way; nor call'd upon
For high feats done to th' Crown; neither Allied
To eminent Aſſiſtants; but Spider-like
Out of his ſelf-drawing Web. O! gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way,
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buyes
A place next to the King.
Abur. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let ſome Graver eye
Pierce into that, but I can ſee his Pride
Peep through each part of him: whence has he that,
If not from Hell? the Devil is a Niggard,
Or has given him all before, and he begins
A new hell in himſelf.
Buc. Why the Devil,
Upon this French going out, took he upon him
(Without the privity o'th' King) t'appoint
Who ſhould attend on him? He makes up the File
Of all the Gentry; for the moſt part ſuch
To whom as great a Charge, as little Honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own Letter
The Honourable Board of Councel, out
Muſt fetch him in, he Papers.
Abur. I do know
Kinſmen of mine, three at the leaſt, that have
By this, ſo ſicken'd their Eſtates, that never
They ſhall abound as formerly.
Buc. O many
Have broke their Backs with laying Mannors on 'em
For this great Journey. What did this vanity
But miniſter communication of
A moſt poor iſſue.
Nor. Grievingly, I think.
The Peace between the French and us, not values
The Coſt that did conclude it.
Buc. Every man,
After the hideous ſtorm that follow'd, was
A thing inſpired, and not conſulting, broke
Into a generall Propheſie; That this Tempeſt
Daſhing the Garment of this Peace, aboaded
The ſudden breach on't.
Nor. Which is budded out:
For France hath flaw'd the League, and hath attach'd
Our Merchants goods at Burdeaux.
Abur. Is it therefore
Th'Ambaſſador is ſilenc'd?
Nor. Marry is't.
Abur. A proper Title of a Peace, and purchas'd
At a ſuperfluous rate.
Buc. Why all this buſineſſe
Our Reverend Cardinall carried.
Nor. Like it your Grace,
The State takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you, and the Cardinall. I adviſe you
(And take it from a heart that wiſhes towards your Honour, and plentious ſafety) that you read
The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency
Together: To conſider further, that
What his high Hatred would effect, wants not
A Miniſter in his Power. You know his Nature,
That he's revengefull; and I know, his Sword
Hath a ſharp edge: It's long, and't may be ſaid
It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Boſome up my counſell,
You'll find it wholeſome. Loe, where comes that Rock
That I adviſe your ſhunning.

Enter Cardinall Wolſey, the Purſe born before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers: the Cardinall in his paſſage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of diſdain.

Car. The Duke of Buckinghams Surveyor? Ha?
Where's his Examination?
Secr. Here, ſo pleaſe you.
Car. Is he in perſon ready?
Secr. I, an't pleaſe your Grace.
Car. Well, we ſhall then know more, and Buckingham ſhall leſſen his big look.
Exeunt Cardinall and his train.
Buc. This Butchers Curre is venom'd-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him, therefore beſt
Not wake him in his ſlumber. A Beggars book,
Out-worths a Nobles blood.
Nor. What, are you chaf'd?
Aske God for Tem'prance, that's th'appliance onely
Which your diſeaſe requires.
Buc. I read in's looks
Matter againſt me, and his eye revil'd
Me as his abject object, at this inſtant
He bores me with ſome trick; He's gone to th' King:
I'le follow, and out-ſtare him.
Nor. Stay, my Lord,
And let your Reaſon with your Choller queſtion
What 'tis you go about: to climbe ſteep hills
Requires ſlow pace at firſt. Anger is like
A full hot Horſe, who being allow'd his way
Self-mettle tires him: Not a man in England
Can adviſe me like you: Be to your ſelf,
As you would to your Friend.
Buc. I'le to the King,
And from a mouth of Honour, quite cry down

This

This Ipswich fellows insolence; or proclaime,
There's difference in no persons.
Norf. Be advis'd;
Heat not a Furnace for your foe so hot
That it doe singe your self. We may out-run
By violent swiftnesse that which we run at;
And lose by over-running: know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor til't run o're,
In seeming to augment it, wastes it: be advis'd;
I say again, there is no English soule
More stronger to direct you then your self:
If with with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay the fire of passion.
Buc. Sir,
I am thankfull to you, and I'le go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions, by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as Founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravell; I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.
Norf. Say not treasonous.
Buc. To th'King I'le say't, and make my vouch as strong
As shore of Rock: attend. This holy Fox,
Or Wolf, or both (for he is equall rav'nous
And he is subtle, and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform't) his minde, and place
Infecting one another; yea reciprocally,
Onely to shew his pomp, as well in France,
As here at home, suggests the King our Master
To this costly Treaty: Th'enterview,
That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glasse
Did break ith' wrenching.
Norf. Faith, and so it did.
Buc. Pray give me favour, Sir: This cunning Cardinal
The Articles oth' Combination drew
As himself pleas'd: and they were ratifi'd
As he cri'd, thus let it be, to as much end,
As give a Crutch to th' dead. But our Count-Cardinall
Has done this, and 'tis well: for worthy Wolsey
(Who cannot erre) he did it. Now this follows,
(Which as I take it, is a kind of Puppy
To th' old damme Treason) Charles the Emperour,
Under pretence to see the Queen his Aunt,
(For 'twas indeed his Colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey) here makes visitation,
His feares were that the Interview betwixt
England and France, might through their amity
Breed him some prejudice; for from this League,
Peep'd harmes that menac'd him. He privily
Deales with our Cardinall, and as I trow,
Which I doe well; for I am sure the Emperour
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted
Ere it was ask'd. But when the way was made,
And pav'd with Gold: the Emperour thus desir'd,
That he would please to alter the Kings course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the King know
(As soon he shall by me) that thus the Cardinall
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.
Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.
Buck. No, not a syllable:
I doe pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon, a Serjeant at Armes before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Brandon. Your Office Serjeant: execute it.
Serjeant. Sir,
My Lord the Duke of Buckingham and Earl
Of Hertford, Stafford and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high Treason, in the name
Of our most Soveraign King.
Buc. Loe you, my Lord,
The net has fain upon me, I shall perish
Under device and practice.
Bran. I am sorry,
To see you tane from liberty, to look on
The businesse present. 'Tis his Highnesse pleasure
You shall to th' Tower.
Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine Innocence: for that dye is on me,
Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of Heav'n
Be done in this and all things: I obey.
O my Lord Aburgany: Fare you well.
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. The King
Is pleas'd you shall to th' Tower, till you know,
How he determines further.
Abur. As the Duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the Kings pleasure
By me obey'd.
Bran. Here is a warrant from
The King, t'attach Lord Mountacute, and the bodies
Of the Dukes Confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his Counsellour.
Buck. So, so;
These are the Limbs oth' Plot, no more I hope.
Bra. A Monk oth' Chartreux
Buck. O Michaell Hopkins.
Bra. He.
Buck. My Surveyor is false; the o're great Cardinall
Hath shew'd him gold; my life is spann'd already:
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose Figure even this instant Cloud puts on,
By darkning my cleer Sun. My Lords, Farewell. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, leaning on the Cardinalls shoulder: the Nobles, and Sir Thomas Lovell: the Cardinall places him under the Kings feet on his right side.

King. My life it self, and the best heart of it,
Thanks you for this great care: I stood i'th' level
Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that choak'd it. Let be call'd before us
That Gentleman of Buckinghams, in person,
I'le hear him his Confessions justifie,
And point by point the Treasons of his Master,
He shall again relate.

A noyse with crying room for the Queen, Usher'd by the Duke of Norfolk. Enter the Queen, Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. King riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

Quee. Nay, we must longer kneele; I am a Suitor.
King. Arise, and take place by us; half your Suit
Never name to us; you have half our power:

The

The other moiety ere you aske is given,
Repeat your will, and take it.
Quee. Thank your Majesty
That you would love your self, and in that love
Not unconsidered leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your Office; is the point
Of my Petition.
King. Lady mine, proceed.
Quee. I am sollicited not by a few,
And those of true condition; That your Subjects
Are in great grievance: There have been Commissions
Sent down among'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their Loyalties; wherein, although
My good Lord Cardinall, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exactions: yet the King, our Master, (not
Whose honour heaven shield from soyle; even he escapes
Language unmannerly: yea, such which breaks
The sides of Loyalty, and almost appeares
in loud Rebellion.
Norf. Not almost appeares,
It doth appear: for, upon these Taxations,
The Clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The Spinsters, Carders, Fullers. Weavers, who
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger,
And lack of other meanes, in desperate manner
Daring th' event to th' teeth, are all in uprore,
And danger serves among them.
King. Taxation?
Wherein? and what Taxation? My Lord Cardinall,
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this Taxation?
Card. Please you, Sir,
I know but of a single part in ought
Pertains to th' State: and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.
Quee. No, my Lord?
You know no more then others? But you frame
Things that are known alike, which are not wholsome
To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions
(Whereof my Soveraign would have note) they are
Most pestilent to th' hearing, and to bear 'em,
The Back is Sacrifice to th' load; They say
They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.
King. Still Exaction:
The nature of it, in what kind, let's know,
Is this Exaction?
Quee. I am much too venterous
In tempting of your patience, but am boldned
Under your promis'd pardon. The Subjects grief
Comes through Commissions, which compells from each
The sixt part of his Substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your Wars in France: this makes bold mouths,
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now
Live where their prayers did: and it's come to passe,
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed Will: I would your Highnesse
Would give it quick consideration; for
There is no primer basenesse.
King. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.
Card. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, then by
A single voyce, and that not past me, but
By learned approbation of the Judges: if I am
Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The Chronicles of my doing: Let me say,
'Tis but the fate of Place, and the rough Brake
That Virtue must go through; we must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious Censurers, which ever,
As ravinous Fishes doe a Vessell follow
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further
Then vainly longing. What we oft doe best,
By sick interpreters (once weak ones) is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft
Hitting a grosser quality, is cri'd up
For our best Act: if we stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd, or carp'd at,
We should take root here, where we sit;
Or sit State Statues onely.
King. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a President
Of this Commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our Subjects from our Lawes,
And stick them in our Will. Sixt part of each?
A trembling Contribution: why, we take
From every tree, lop, bark, and part oth' timber:
And though we leave it with a root thus hackt,
The Aire will drink the Sap. To every County
Where this is question'd, send our Letters, with
Free pardon to each man that has deni'd
The Force of this Commission: pray look too't;
I put it to your care.
Card. A word with you.
Let there be Letters writ to every Shire,
Of the Kings grace and pardon: the grieved Commons
Hardly conceive of me. Let it be nois'd,
That through our Intercession, this Revokement
And Pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. Exit Secret.

Enter Surveyor.

Quee. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.
Quee. It grieves many:
The Gentleman is Learn'd, and a most rare Speaker,
To Nature none more bound, his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great Teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself: yet see,
When these so Noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Then ever they were fair. This man so compleat,
Who was enrolld 'mongst wonders; and when we Almost with ravisht listning, could not find
His hour of speech, a minute: He, (my Lady)
Hath into monstrous habits put the Graces
That once were his, and is become as black,
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us, you shall hear
(This was his Gentleman in trust) of him
Things to strike Honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practises, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Card.

Card. Stand forth & with bold spirit relate what you
Most like a careful Subject have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.
Kin. Speak freely.
Sur. First, it was usuall with him; every day
It would infect his Speech: That if the King
Should without issue dye; hee'l carry it so
To make the Scepter his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his Sonne in Law,
Lord Aburgany, to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the Cardinall.
Card. Please your Highnesse, note
This dangerous conception in this point,
Not friended by his wish to your High person;
His will is most malignant, and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.
Queen. My learned Lord Cardinall,
Deliver all with Charity.
Kin. Speak on;
How grounded he his Title to the Crown
Vpon our faile; to this point hast thou heard him,
At any time speak ought?
Sur. He was brought to this,
By a vain Prophesie of Nicholas Henton.
Kin. What was that Henton?
Sur. Sir, a Chartreux Fryer,
His Confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of Soveraignty.
Kin. How know'st thou this?
Sur. Not long before your Highnesse sped to France,
The Duke being at the Rose, within the Parish
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners,
Concerning the French Journey. I repli'd,
Men fear the French would prove perfidious
To the King's danger: presently, the Duke
Said, 'twas the fear indeed, and that he doubted
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy Monk, that oft, sayes he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my Chaplain, a choyce houre
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the Commissions Seale,
He sollemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My Chaplain to no Creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure Confidence,
This pawsingly entu'd; neither the King nor's Heires
(Tell you the Duke) shall prosper, bid him strive
To the love oth' Commonalty, the Duke
Shall govern England.
Queen. If I know you well,
You were the Duke's Surveyor, and lost your Office
On the complaint oth' Tenants; take good heed
You charge not in your spleen a Noble person,
And spoyle your Noble Soule; I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily I beseech you.
Kin. Let him on. Go forward.
Sur. On my Soule, I'le speak but truth.
I told my Lord the Duke, by th' Devils illusions
The Monk might be deceiv'd, and that 'twas dangerous
For this to ruminate on this so farre, untill
It forg'd him some design, which being believ'd
It was much like to doe: He answer'd, Tush,
It can doe me no damnage; adding further,
That had the King in his last sicknesse fail'd,
The Cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.
Kin. Ha? What, so rank? Ah, ha,
There's mischief in this man; canst thou say further?
Sur. I can, my Liege.
Kin. Proceed.
Sur. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highnesse had reprov'd the Duke
About Sir William Blumer.
Kin. I remember of such a time, being my sworn ser-(vant,
The Duke retein'd him his. But on: what hence?
Sur. If (quoth he) I for this had been committed,
As to the Tower, I thought; I would have plaid
The Part my Father meant to act upon
Th' Usurper Richard, who being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence; which if granted,
(As he made semblance of his duty) would
Have put his Knife into him.
Kin. A Gyant Traytor,
Card. Now, Madam, may his Highness live in freedome,
And this man out of Prison.
Queen. God mend all. (say'st?
Kin. There's something more would out of thee; what
Sur. After the Duke his Father, with the Knife
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his Dagger,
Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible Oath, whose tenour
Was, were he evil us'd, he would out-go
His Father, by as much as a performance
Do's an irresolute purpose.
Kin. There's his period,
To sheath his Knife in us: he is attach'd,
Call him to present Triall: if he may
Find mercy in the Law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of us: By day and night
He's Traytor to th' height. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlain, and L. Sandys.
L. Ch. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange Mysteries?
L. San. New customes,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay let 'em be unmanly) yet are follow'd.
L. Ch. As farre as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late Voyage, is but meerly
A fit or two oth' face, (but they are shrewd ones)
For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly
Their very Noses had been Counsellours
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep State so.
L. San. They have all new legs,
And lame ones; one would take it,
That never see 'em pace before, the Spaven
A Spring-halt reign'd among 'em.
L. Ch. Death, my Lord,
Their cloathes are after such a Pagan cut too',
That sure th' have worn out Christendome: how now?
What newes, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.
Lovell. Faith my Lord,
I hear of none but the new Proclamation,
That's clapt upon the Court Gate.

L. Cham. What is't for?
Lov. The reformation of our travell'd Gallants,
That fill the Court with quarrels, talk, and Taylors,
L. Cham. I'me glad 'tis there;
Now I would pray our Mounſieurs
To think an Engliſh Courtier may be wiſe,
And never ſee the Lovure.
Lov. They muſt either,
(For ſo run the Conditions) leave thoſe remnants
Of Foole and Feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto; as Fights and Fire-works,
Abuſing better men then they can be
Out of a forreign wiſedome, renouncing clean
The faith they have in Tennis and tall Stockings,
Short bliſtred Breeches, and thoſe types of Travell;
And underſtand again like honeſt men,
Or pack to their old Play-fellowes; there I take it,
They may Cum Privilegio, wear away
The Lag end of their lewdneſſe, and be laugh'd at.
L. San. 'Tis time to give him Phyſick, their diſeaſes
Are grown ſo catching.
L. Cham. What a loſſe our Ladies
Will have of theſe trim vanities?
Lovell. I marry,
There will be woe indeed, Lords, the ſlye whorſons
Have got a ſpeeding trick to lay down Ladies.
A French Song, and a Fiddle, has no Fellow.
L. San. The Devil fiddle 'em.
I am glad they are going,
For ſure there's no converting of 'em: now
An honeſt Country Lord as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain Song,
And have an hour of hearing, and by'r Lady
Held currant Muſick too.
L. Cham. Well ſaid Lord Sands,
Your Colts tooth is not caſt yet?
L. San. No, my Lord,
Nor ſhall not while I have a ſtump.
L. Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whether were you a going?
Lov. To the Cardinalls;
Your Lordſhip is a gueſt too.
L. Cham. O, 'tis true;
This night he makes a Supper, and a great one,
To many Lords and Ladies; there will be
The Beauty of this Kingdome I'le aſſure you.
Lov. That Churchman
Beares a bounteous mind indeed,
A hand as fruitfull as the Land that feeds us,
His dewes fall every where,
L. Cham. No doubt he's Noble;
He had a black mouth that ſaid other of him.
L. San. He may my Lord,
Ha's wherewithall in him;
Sparing would ſhew a worſe ſin, then ill Doctrine.
Men of his way, ſhould be moſt liberall,
They are ſet here for examples.
L. Cham. True they are ſo;
But few now give ſo great ones:
My Barge ſtayes;
Your Lordſhip ſhall along: Come, good Sir Thomas,
We ſhall be late elſe, which I would not be,
For I was ſpoke to, with Sir Henry Guilford
This night to be Comptrollers.
L. San. I am your Lordſhips. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Hoboyes. A ſmall Table under a State for the Cardinall, a longer Table for the Gueſts. Then enter Anne Bullen, and divers other Ladies and Gentlemen, as Gueſts at one door; at another door enter Sir Henry Guilford.

S. Hen. Guilf. Ladies,
A generall welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all: This night he dedicates
To fair content, and you: None here he hopes
In all this Noble Bevy, has brought with her
One care abroad: he would have all as merry:
As firſt, good Company, good Wine, good Welcome,
Can make good people.

Enter L. Chamberlain, L. Sands, and Lovell.
O my Lord, y'are tardy;
The very thought of this fair Company,
Clapt wings to me.
Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guilford.
San. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the Cardinall
But half my Lay-thoughts in him, ſome of theſe
Should find a running Banket, ere they reſted,
I think would better pleaſe 'em: by my life,
They are a ſweet ſociety of fair ones.
Lov. O that your Lordſhip were but now Confeſſor,
To one or two of theſe.
San. I would I were,
They ſhould finde eaſie penance.
Lov. Faith how eaſie?
San. As eaſie as a down Bed would afford it.
Cham. Sweet Ladies will it pleaſe you ſit; Sir Harry,
Place you that ſide, I'le take the charge of this:
His Grace is entring. Nay, you muſt not freeze,
Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather:
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking:
Pray ſit between theſe Ladies.
San. By my faith,
And thank your Lordſhip: by your leave, ſweet Ladies
If I chance to talk a little wilde, forgive me:
I had it from my Father.
An. Bul. Was he mad, Sir?
San. O very mad, exceeding mad, in love too;
But he would bite none, juſt as I doe now,
He would kiſſe you twenty with a breath.
Cham. Well ſaid, my Lord:
So now y'are fairly ſeated: Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you; if theſe fair Ladies
Paſſe away frowning.
San. For my little Cure,
Let me alone.

Hoboyes. Enter Cardinall Wolſey, and takes his State.
Card. Y'are welcome my fair Gueſts; that noble Lady
Or Gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my Friend. This to confirm my welcome,
And to you all good health.
San. Your Grace is Noble,
Let me have ſuch a Bowle may hold my thanks,
And ſave me ſo much talking.
Card. My Lord Sands.

I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbour:
Ladies, you are not merry; Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?
San. The red Wine first must rise
In their fair Cheeks, my Lord, then we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.
An. Bu. You are a merry Gamester,
My Lord Sands.
San. Yes, if I make my play:
Here's to your Ladiship, and pledge it, Madam:
For 'tis to such a thing.
An. B. You cannot shew me.
Drumme and Trumpet, Chambers discharged.
San. I told your Grace, they would talk anon.
Card. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of ye.
Car. What warlike voyce.
And to what end is this? Nay, Ladies, fear not;
By all the lawes of Warre y'are priviledg'd.

Enter a Servant.

Cham. How now, what is't?
Serv. A noble troup of Strangers,
For so they seem; th'have left their Barge and Landed,
And hither make, as great Embassadors
From forrain Princes.
Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine,
Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue
And pray receive 'em Nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.
All arise, and Tables remov'd.
You have now a broken Banket, but wee'l mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more
I showre a welcome on ye: welcome all

Hoboyes. Enter King and others as Maskers, habited like Shepheards, usher'd by the Lord Chamberlain. They passe directly before the Cardinall, and gratefully salute him.

A Noble Company: what are their pleasures?
Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd
To tell your Grace: that having heard by fame
Of this so Noble and so fair assembly,
This night to meet here, they could doe no lesse,
(Out of the great respect they bear to beauty)
But leave their Flocks, and under your fair conduct
Crave leave to view these Ladies, and entreat
An hour of Revels with 'em.
Card. Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace:
For which I pay 'em a thousand thanks,
And pray 'em take their pleasures.
Choose Ladies, King and Anne Bullen.
King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd: O Beauty,
Till now I never knew thee.
Musick, Dance.
Card. My Lord.
Cham. Your Grace.
Card. Pray tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em by his person
More worthy this place then my self, to whom
(If I but knew him) with my love and duty
I would surrender it. Whisper.
Cham. I will, my Lord.
Car. What say they?
Cham. Such a one, they all confesse
There is indeed, which they would have your Grace
Find out, and he will take it.
Card. Let me see then,
By all your good leaves, Gentlemen, here I'le make
My royall choyce.
Kin. Ye have found him Cardinall,
You hold a fair Assembly, you doe well, Lord.
You are a Church-man, or I'le tell you Cardinall,
I should judge now unhappily.
Card. I am glad
Your Grace is grown so pleasant.
Kin. My Lord Chamberlain,
Prethee come hither, what fair Lady's that?
Cham. An't please your Grace,
Sir Thomas Bullens Daughter, the Viscount Rochford,
One of her Highnesse women.
Kin. By Heaven she is a dainty one; Sweet heart,
I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kisse you. A health Gentlemen,
Let it go round.
Card. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the Banquet ready
I'th' Privy Chamber?
Lov. Yes, my Lord.
Card. Your Grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated.
Kin. I fear too much.
Card. There's fresh aire, my Lord,
In the next Chamber.
Kin. Lead in your Ladies every one: Sweet Partner,
I must not yet forsake you: let's be merry,
Good my Lord Cardinall: I have half a dozen healths
To drink to these fair Ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again, and then let's dreame
Who's best in favour. Let the Musick knock it.
Exeunt with Trumpets.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen at severall doors.

1. Whether away so fast?
2. O, God save ye:
Even to the Hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.
1. I'le save you,
That labour, Sir. All's now done but the Ceremony
Of bringing back the Prisoner.
2. Were you there?
1. Yes indeed was I.
2. Pray speak what has happen'd.
1. You may guesse quickly what.
2. Is he found guilty?
1. Yes truly is he,
And condemn'd upon't.
2. I am sorry for't
1. So are a number more.
2. But pray how past it?
1. I'le tell you in a little. The great Duke
Came to the Barre; where, to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alledged
Many sharp reasons to defeat the Law.
The King's Attorney on the contrary;
Urg'd on the Examinations, proofs, confessions

Of divers witneſſes, which the Duke deſir'd
To him brought viva voce to his face;
At which appear'd againſt him, his Surveyor,
Sir Gilbert Pecke his Chancellour, and John Car,
Confeſſor to him, with that Devill Monke,
Hopkins, that made this miſchief.
2. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies.
1. The ſame,
All theſe accus'd him ſtrongly which he fain
Would have flung from him; but indeed he could not;
And ſo his Peeres upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high Treaſon. Much
He ſpoke, and learnedly for life: But all
Was either pittied in him, or forgotten.
2. After all this, how did he bear himſelf?
1. When he was brought agen to th' Bar, to hear
His Knell rung out, his Judgement, he was ſtirr'd
With ſuch an Agony, he ſweat extreamly,
And ſomething ſpoke in choller, ill, and haſty:
But he fell to himſelf again, and ſweetly,
In all the reſt ſhew'd a moſt noble patience.
2. I doe not think he feares death.
1. Sure he does not,
He never was ſo womaniſh, the cauſe
He may a little grieve at.
2. Certainly,
The Cardinall is the end of this.
1. 'Tis likely,
By all conjectures: Firſt Kildares Attaindure;
Then Deputy of Ireland, who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was ſent thither, and in haſte too,
Leaſt he ſhould help his Father.
2. That trick of State
Was a deep envious one.
1. At his return,
No doubt he will requite it; this is noted
(And generally) who ever the King favours,
The Cardinall inſtantly will find employment,
And far enough from Court too.
2. All the Commons
Hate him perniciouſly, and o' my Conſcience
Wiſh him ten faddom deep: This Duke as much
They love and doat on: call him bountious Buckingham,
The Mirror of all courteſie.

Enter Buckingham from his Arraignment. Tipſtaves before him, the Axe with the edge towards him, Halberds on each ſide, accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell; Sir Nicholas Vaux, Walter Sands, and common people, &c.

1. Stay there Sir,
And ſee the noble ruin'd man you ſpeak of.
2. Let's ſtand cloſe and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
You that thus have come to pitty me;
Hear what I ſay, and then go home and loſe me.
I have this day receiv'd a Traytors judgement,
And by that name muſt die; yet heaven bear witneſſe,
And if I have a Conſcience, let it ſink me,
Even as the Axe falls, if I be not faithfull.
To th' Law I bear no malice for my death,
'T has done upon the premiſes, but juſtice:
But thoſe that ſought it, I could wiſh more Chriſtians:
(Be what they will) I heartily forgive 'em;
Yet let 'em look they glory not in miſchief;
Nor build their evils on the Graves of great men;
For then, my guiltleſſe blood muſt cry again 'em.
For further life in this world I ne're hope,
Nor will I ſue, although the King have mercies
More then I dare make faults.
You few that lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His Noble Friends and Fellowes; whom to leave
Is onely bitter to him, onely dying:
Go with me like good Angels to my end,
And as the long divorce of Steele falls on me,
Make of your Prayers one ſweet ſacrifice,
And lift my Soule to heaven.
Lead on a Gods name.
Lovell. I doe beſeech your Grace for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid againſt me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all.
There cannot be thoſe numberleſſe offences
Gainſt me, that I cannot take peace with:
No black envy ſhall make my Grave.
Commend me to his Grace:
And if he ſpeak of Buckingham; pray tell him,
You met him half in heaven: my vowes and prayers
Yet are the Kings; and till my Soule forſake,
Shall cry for bleſſings on him. May he live
Longer then I have time to tell his yeares;
Ever belov'd and loving, may his Rule be;
And when old time ſhall lead him to his end,
Goodneſſe and he, fill up one Monument.
Lov. To th' water ſide I muſt conduct your Grace,
Then give my Charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare there,
The Duke is comming: See the Barge be ready,
And fit it with ſuch furniture as ſuits
The Greatneſſe of his perſon.
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my ſtate now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Conſtable,
And Duke of Buckingham: now, poor Edward Bohun;
Yet I am richer then my baſe Accuſers,
That never knew what Truth meant: I now ſeale it;
And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for't.
My Noble Father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who firſt rais'd head againſt Uſurping Richard,
Flying for ſuccour to his Servant Baniſter,
Being diſtreſt, was by that wretch betraid,
And without Tryall, fell; Gods peace be with him.
Henry the Seventh ſucceeding, truly pittying
My Fathers loſſe; like a moſt Royall Prince
Reſtor'd me to my Honours: and out of ruines
Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Son,
Henry the Eight, Life, Honour, Name, and all
That made me happy; at one ſtroke has taken
For ever from the World. I had my Tryall,
And muſt needs ſay, a Noble one; which makes me
A little happier then my wretched Father:
Yet thus farre are we one in Fortunes, both
Fell by our Servants, by thoſe Men we lov'd moſt:
A moſt unnaturall and faithleſſe Service.
Heaven has an end in all: yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberall of your loves and Counſells,
Be ſure you be not looſe; for thoſe you make friends,

And

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The leaſt rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to ſink ye: all good people
Pray for me, I muſt now forſake ye; the laſt hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me:
Farewell; and when you would ſay ſomething that is ſad,
Speak how I fell.
I have done; and God forgive me.

Exeunt Duke and train.

1. O, this is full of pitty; Sir it calls,
I fear, too many curſes on their heads
That were the Authors.
2. If the Duke be guiltleſſe,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inckling
Of an enſuing evil, if it fall,
Greater then this.
1. Good Angels keep it from us:
What may it be? you doe not doubt my faith, Sir?
2. This Secret is ſo weighty 'twill require
A ſtrong faith to conceale it.
1. Let me have it;
I doe not talk much.
2. I am confident;
You ſhall, Sir: Did you not of late dayes hear
A buzzing of a Separation
Between the King and Katherine?
1. Yes, but it held not;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger
He ſent command to the Lord Mayor ſtraight
To ſtop the rumour, and allay the tongues
That duſt diſperſe it.
2. But that ſlander, Sir,
Is a ſound truth now: for it growes agen
Freſher then e're it was; and held for certain
The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinall,
Or ſome about him near, have out of malice
To the good Queen, poſſeſt him with a ſcruple
That will undoe her: To confirm this too,
Cardinall Campeius is arriv'd, and lately,
As all think, for this buſineſſe.
1. 'Tis the Cardinall;
And meerly to revenge him on the Emperour,
For not beſtowing on him at his asking,
The Arch-Biſhoprick of Toledo, this is purpos'd.
2. I think
You have hit the marke; but is't not cruell,
That ſhe ſhould feel the ſmart of this? the Cardinall
Will have his will, and ſhe muſt fall.
1. 'Tis wofull.
We are too open here to argue this:
Let's think in private more. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, reading this Letter.

My Lord, the Horſe, your Lordſhip ſent for, with all the care I had, I ſaw well choſen, ridden, and furniſh'd. They were young and handſome, and of the beſt breed in the North. When they were ready to ſet out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinalls, by Commiſſion, and main power took 'em from me, with this reaſon: His Maſter would be ſerv'd before a Subject, if not before the King, which ſtopp'd our mouthes, Sir.

I fear he will indeed; well, let him have them; he will have all I think.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlain, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Norf. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.
Cham. Good day to both your Graces.
Suf. How is the King employ'd?
Cham. I left him private,
Full of ſad thoughts and troubles.
Nor. What's the cauſe?
Cham. It ſeems the Marriage with his Brothers Wife
Has crept too near his Conſcience.
Suf. No, his Conſcience
Has crept too near another Lady.
Norf. 'Tis ſo;
This is the Cardinalls doing: the King-Cardinall,
That blind Prieſt, like the eldeſt Son of Fortune,
Turnes what he liſt. The King will know him one day.
Suf. Pray God he doe,
He'll never know himſelf elſe.
Norf. How holily he works in all his buſineſſe,
And with what zeale? For now he has crackt the League
Between us and the Emperor (the Queens great Nephew)
He dives into the Kings Soule, and there ſcatters
Dangers, Doubts, wringing of the Conſcience,
Feares, and Deſpaires, and all theſe for his Marriage.
And out of all theſe, to reſtore the King,
He counſells a Divorce, a loſſe of her,
That like a Jewell, has hung twenty yeares
About his neck, yet never loſt her luſtre;
Of her that loves him with that excellence,
That Angels love good men with: Even of her,
That when the greateſt ſtroke of Fortune falls
Will bleſſe the King: and is not this courſe pious?
Cham. Heaven keep me from ſuch counſell: 'tis moſt true,
Theſe newes are every where, every tongue ſpeaks 'em,
And every true heart weeps for't. All that dare
Look into theſe affaires, ſee this main end,
The French Kings Siſter. Heaven will one day open
The Kings eyes, that ſo long have ſlept upon
This bold bad man.
Suff. And free us from his ſlavery.
Norf. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this Imperious man will work us all
From Princes into Pages: all mens honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be faſhion'd
Into what pitch he pleaſe.
Suff. For me, my Lords,
I love him not, nor fear him, there's my Creed:
And I am made without him, ſo I'le ſtand,
If the King pleaſe: his Curſes and his Bleſſings
Touch me alike: th'are breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; ſo I leave him
To him that made him proud, the Pope.
Norf. Let's in;
And with ſome other buſineſſe, put the King
From theſe ſad thoughts, that work too much upon him:
My Lord, you'll bear us company?
Cham. Excuſe me,
The King has ſent me other-where: Beſides
You'll find a moſt unfit time to diſturbe him:
Health to your Lordſhips.

Norfolk. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.
Exit Lord Chamberlain, and the King drawes the Curtain, and sits reading pensively.
Suff. How sad he looks; sure he is much afflicted.
Kin. Who's there? Ha?
Norf. Pray God he be not angry. (selves
Kin. Who's there I say? how dare you thrust your
Into my private Meditations?
Who am I? ha?
Norf. A gracious King, that pardons all offences
Malice ne're meant: Our breach of Duty this way,
Is businesse of Estate; in which, we come
To know your Royall pleasure.
Kin. Ye are too bold:
Go to; I'le make ye know your times of businesse:
Is this an houre for temporall affaires? ha?
Enter Wolsey and Campeius with a Commission.
Who's there? my good Lord Cardinall? O my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded Conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for the King; you'r welcome,
Most Learned Reverend Sir, into our Kingdome,
Use us, and it: my good Lord, have great care,
I be not found a Talker.
Wol. Sir, you cannot:
I would your Grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.
Kin. We are busie; go.
Nor. This Priest has no pride in him?
Suf. Not to speak of:
I would not be so sick though for his place:
But this cannot continue.
Norf. If it doe, I'le venture one heave at him.
Suf. I another.
Exeunt Norfolk, and Suffolk.
Wol. Your Grace has given a President of wisedome
Above all Princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voyce of Christendome:
Who can be angry now? what Envy reach you?
The Spaniard tied by blood and favour to her,
Must now confesse, if they have any goodnesse,
The Triall just and noble. All the Clerks,
(I mean the Learned ones in Christian Kingdomes)
Have their free voyces. Rome (the Nurse of Judgement,
Invited by your noble self hath sent
One generall Tongue unto us. This good man,
This just and Learned Priest, Cardinall Campeius,
Whom once more I present unto your Highnesse.
Kin. And once more in mine armes I bid him welcome,
And thank the holy Conclave for their loves,
They have sent me such a Man I would have wish'd for.
Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers loves,
You are so Noble: To your Highnesse hand
I tender my Commission; by whose virtue,
The Court of Rome commanding: You my Lord
Cardinall of York, are joyn'd with me their Servant,
In the impartiall judging of this businesse.
Kin. Two equall men: The Queen shall be acquainted
Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?
Wol. I know your Majesty has always lov'd her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A Woman of lesse Place might ask by Law;
Schollars allow'd freely to argue for her.
Kin. I, and the best she shall have; and my favour
To him that does best, God forbid else: Cardinall,
Prethee call Gardiner to me, my new Secretary,
I find him a fit fellow.

Enter Gardiner.
Wol. Give me your hand: much joy & favour to you;
You are the Kings now.
Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me.
Kin. Come hither Gardiner.
Walks and whispers.
Camp. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace
In this man's place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Camp. Was he not held a Learned man?
Wol. Yes surely.
Camp. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then
Even of your self Lord Cardinall.
Wol. How? of me?
Camp. They will not stick to say, you envi'd him;
And fearing he would rise (he was so virtuous)
Kept him a forreign man still, which so griev'd him,
That he ran mad, and di'd.
Wol. Heavens peace be with him:
That's Christian care enough: for living murmurers,
There's places of rebuke. He was a Foole;
For he would needs be virtuous. That good Fellow,
If I command him, followes my appointment,
I will have none so ne're else. Learn this Brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
Kin. Deliver this with modesty to th' Queen.
Exit Gardiner.
The most convenient place that I can think of,
For such receipt of Learning, is Black Fryers:
There ye shall meet about this weighty businesse.
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my Lord,
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a Bedfellow? But Conscience, Conscience;
O 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. (Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Anne Bullen, and old Lady.

An. Not for that neither, here's the pang that pinches.
His Highnesse, having liv'd so long with her, and she
So good a Lady, that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life,
She never knew harm-doing: Oh, now after
So many courses of the Sun enthroned,
Still growing in a Majesty and pomp, the which
To leave, a thousand fold more bitter, then
'Tis sweet at first t'acquire. After this Processe,
To give her the avant, it is a pitty
Would move a Monster.
Old La. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her,
An. Oh Gods will, much better
She ne're had known pomp; though't be temporall,
Yet if that quarrell, Fortune, doe divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance, panging
As Soule and bodies severing.
Old La. Alas poor Lady,
She's stranger now again.
An. So much the more
Must pitty drop upon her; verily
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,

And

And range with humble livers in Content,
Then to be perk'd up in a glistring grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.
Old. L. Our content
Is our best having.
Anne. By my troth, and Maidenhead,
I would not be a Queen.
Old L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture Maidenhead for't, and so would you
For all this spice of your hypocrisie;
You that have so fair parts of Woman on you,
Have (too) a Womans heart, which ever yet
Affected Eminence, Wealth, Soveraignty;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and which gifts
(Saving your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft Chiverell Conscience, would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.
An. Nay, good troth.
Old.L. Yes troth & troth: you would not be a Queen?
An. No, not for all the riches under heaven.
Old.L. 'Tis strange; a three-pence bow'd now would Old as I am, to Queen it: but I pray you, (hire me,
What think you of a Dutchesse? have you limbs
To bear that load of Title?
An. No in truth.
Old. L. Then you are weakly made, pluck off a little,
I would not be a young Count in your way,
For more then blushing comes to: If your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a Boy.
An. How you doe talk;
I swear again, I would not be a Queen,
For all the world.
Old. L. In faith for little England
You'll venture an emballing: I my self
Would for Carnarvanshire, although there long'd
No more to th' Crown but that: Lo, who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlain. (know
L. Cham. Good morrow, Ladies; what wer't worth to
The secret of your conference?
An. My good Lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our Mistris Sorrowes we were pitying.
Cham. It was a gentle businesse, and becomming
The action of good women, there is hope
All will be well.
An. Now I pray God, Amen.
Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heav'nly blessings
Follow such Creatures. That you may, fair Lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high notes
Tane of your many virtues; the Kings Majesty
Commends his good opinion of you, to you; and Do's purpose honour to you no lesse flowing,
Then Marchioness of Pembrook; to which Title,
A thousand pound a year, Annuall support,
Out of his Grace, he addes.
An. I doe not know
What kind of my obedience, I should tender;
More then my All, is nothing: Nor my Prayers
Are not words duely hallowed, nor my Wishes
More worth then empty vanities: yet prayers and wishes
Are all I can return. 'Beseech your Lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing Handmaid, to his Highnesse;
Whose health and Royalty I pray for.
Cham. Lady;
I shall not fail t'approve the fair conceit
The King hath of you. I have perus'd her well,
Beauty and Honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the King: and who knowes yet
But from this Lady, may proceed a Jemme,
To lighten all this Isle? I'le to the King,
And say I spoke with you.
Exit Lord Chamberlain.
An. My honour'd Lord.
Old. L. Why this it is: See, see,
I have been begging sixteen yeares in Court
(Am yet a Courtier beggarly) nor could
Come pat betwixt too early, and too late
For any suit of pounds: and you, (oh fate)
A very fresh Fish here; fie, fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune: have your mouth fill'd up,
Before you open it.
An. This is strange to me.
Old. L. How tastes it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no:
There was no Lady once ('tis an old Story)
That would not be a Queen, that would she not
For all the mud in Egypt; have you heard it?
An. Come, you are pleasant.
Old. L. With your Theame, I could
O're-mount the Larke: The Marchioness of Pembrook?
A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect?
No other obligation? by my Life,
That promises moe thousands: Honours train
Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time
I know your back will bear a Dutchesse. Say,
Are you not stronger then you were?
An. Good Lady,
Make your self mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being
If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me
To think what followes.
The Queen is comfortlesse, and we forgetfull
In our long absence: pray doe not deliver,
What here y' have heard to her.
Old. L. What doe you think me------Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Trumpets, Sonnet, and Cornets.

Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them two Scribes in the habits of Doctors: after them, the Bishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and S. Asaph: next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the great Seale, and a Cardinals Hat: then two Priests, bearing each a Silver Crosse: then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Serjeant at Armes, bearing a Mace: then two Gentlemen, bearing two great Silver Pillars: after them, side by side, the two Cardinals, two Noble-men, with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the Cloth of State. The two Cardinals sit under him as Judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the Court in manner of a Consistory: Below them the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the Stage.

Card-

Car. Whil'ſt our Commiſſion from Rome is read,
Let ſilence be commanded.
King. What's the need?
It hath already publickly been read,
And on all ſides th'Authority allow'd,
You may then ſpare that time.
Car. Be't ſo, proceed.
Scri. Say, Henry K. of England, come into the Court.
Cryer. Henry King of England, &c.
King. Here.
Scribe. Say, Katherine Queen of England,
Come into the Court.
Crier. Katherine Queen of England, &c.
The Queen makes no anſwer, riſes out of her Chayre, goes about the Court, comes to the King, and kneeles at his Feet. Then ſpeaks.
Sir, I deſire you doe me right and Juſtice,
And to beſtow your pitty on me; for
I am a moſt poor Woman, and a ſtranger,
Born out of your Dominions: having here
No Judge indifferent, nor no more aſſurance
Of equall Friendſhip and Proceeding. Alaſs, Sir,
In what have I offended you? What cauſe
Hath my behaviour given to your diſpleaſure,
That thus you ſhould proceed to put me off,
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witneſſe,
I have been to you a true and humble Wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in fear to kindle your Diſlike,
Yea, ſubject to your Countenance: Glad, or ſorry,
As I ſaw it inclin'd? when was the hour
I ever contradicted your Deſire?
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your Friends
Have I not ſtrove to love, although I knew
He were mine Enemy? What Friend of mine,
That had to him deri'vd your Anger, did I
Continue in my Liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence diſcharg'd? Sir, call to minde,
That I have been your Wife, in this Obedience,
Upward of twenty yeares, and have been bleſt
With many Children by you. If in the courſe
And proceſſe of this time you can report,
And prove it too, againſt mine Honour ought;
My bond to Wedlock, or my love and duty
Againſt your Sacred Perſon; in Gods name
Turn me away: and let foul'ſt Contempt
Shut door upon me, and ſo give me up
To the ſharp'ſt kind of Juſtice. Pleaſe you, Sir,
The King your Father, was reputed for
A Prince moſt prudent; and an excellent
And unmatch'd Wit and Judgement. Ferdinand
My Father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wiſeſt Prince, that there had reign'd, by many
A year before. It is not to be queſtion'd,
That they had gather'd a wiſe Council to them
Of every Realme, that did debate this buſineſſe,
Who deem'd our Marriage lawfull. Wherefore I humbly
Beſeech you, Sir, to ſpare me, till I may
Be by my Friends in Spain advis'd; whoſe Counſell
I will implore. If not, ith' name of God
Your pleaſure be fulfill'd.
Wol. You have here, Lady,
(And of your choyce) theſe Reverend Fathers, men
Of ſingular Integrity and Learning:
Yea, the elect oth' Land, who are aſſembled
To plead your Cauſe. It ſhall be therefore bootleſſe,
That longer you deſire the Court, as well
For your own quiet, as to rectifie
What is unſettled in the King.
Camp. His Grace
Hath ſpoken well, and juſtly; Therefore, Madam,
It's fit this Royall Seſſion doe proceed,
And that (without delay) their Arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.
Queen. Lord Cardinall, to you I ſpeak.
Wol. Your pleaſure, Madam.
Qu. Sir, I am about to weep; but thinking that
We are a Queen (or long have dream'd ſo) certain
The Daughter of a King, my drops of teares,
I'le turn to ſparkes of fire.
Wol. Be patient yet.
Qu. I will, when you are humble; nay before,
Or God will puniſh me. I doe believe
(Induc'd by potent Circumſtances) that
You are mine Enemy, and make my Challenge.
You ſhall not be my Judge. For it is you
Have blown this Coal, betwixt my Lord, and me;
(Which Gods dew quench) therefore, I ſay again,
I utterly abhorre; yea, from my Soule
Refuſe you for my Judge, whom yet once more
I hold my moſt malicious Foe, and think not
At all a Friend to truth.
Wol. I doe profeſſe
You ſpeak not like your ſelf: who ever yet
Have ſtood to Charity: and diſplay'd th'effects
Of diſpoſition gentle, and of wiſdome,
O're-topping womans power. Madam, you doe me wrong,
I have no ſpleen againſt you, nor injuſtice
For you, or any: how farre I have proceeded,
Or how farre further (ſhall) is warranted
By a Commiſſion from the Conſiſtory;
Yea, the whole Conſiſtory of Rome. You charge me,
That I have blown this Coale: I doe deny it,
The King is preſent: If it be known to him,
That I gainſay my Deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my Falſhood, yea, as much
As you have done my Truth. If he know
That I am free of your Report, he knowes
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me, and the cure is to Remove theſe thoughts from you. The which before
His Highneſſe ſhall ſpeak in, I doe beſeech
You (gracious Madam) to unthink your ſpeaking,
And to ſay no more.
Quee. My Lord, my Lord,
I am a ſimple woman, much too weak
T'oppoſe your cunning. Y'are meek, & humble-mouth'd,
You ſign your Place, and Calling, in full ſeeming,
With Meekneſſe and Humility: But your heart
Is cramm'd with Arrogance, Spleen, and Pride.
You have by fortune, and his Highneſſe favours,
Gone ſlightly o're low ſteps, and now are mounted
Where Powers are your Retainers, and your words
(Domeſticks to you) ſerve your will; as't pleaſe
Your ſelf pronounce their Office. I muſt tell you,
You tender more your perſons Honour, then
Your high profeſſion Spirituall. That agen
I doe refuſe you for my Judge, and here
Before you all, Appeale unto the Pope,
To bring my whole Cauſe 'fore his Holineſſe,
And to be judg'd by him.
She curtſies to the King, and offers to depart.

Camp. The Queen is obſtinate,
Stubborn to Juſtice, apt to accuſe it, and
Diſdainfull to be tri'd by't; 'tis not well.
She's going away.

Kin. Call her again.

Cryer. Katherine Q. of England, come into the Court.

Gent. Uſh. Madam, you are call'd back.

Que. What need you note it? pray you keep your way,
When you are call'd return. Now the Lord help,
They vex me paſt my patience, pray you paſſe on;
I will not tarry: no, nor ever more
Upon this buſineſſe my appearance make,
In any of their Courts.

Exit Queen, and her Attendants.

Kin. Go thy wayes Kate,
That man ith' world, who ſhall report he has
A better Wife, let him in nought be truſted,
For ſpeaking falſe in that; Thou art alone,
(If thy rare qualities, ſweet gentleneſſe,
Thy meekneſſe Saint-like, Wife-like Government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Soveraign and Pious, could ſpeak thee out)
The Queen of earthly Queens: She's Noble born:
And like her true Nobility, ſhe has Carried her ſelf towards me.

Wol. Moſt gracious Sir,
In humbleſt manner I require your Highneſſe,
That it ſhall pleaſe you to declare in hearing
Of all theſe eares (for where I am robb'd and bound,
There muſt I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully ſatisfi'd) whether ever I
Did broach this buſineſſe to your Highneſſe, or Laid any ſcruple in your way, which might
Induce you to the queſtion on't: or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for ſuch
A Royall Lady, ſpake one, the leaſt word that might
Be to the prejudice of her preſent State,
Or touch of her good Perſon?

Kin. My Lord Cardinall,
I doe excuſe you; yea, upon mine Honour,
I free you from't: You are not to be taught
That you have many Enemies, that know not
Why they are ſo, but like the Village Curres,
Bark when their fellows doe. By ſome of theſe
The Queen is put in anger; y'are excus'd:
But will you be more juſtifi'd? You ever
Have wiſh'd the ſleeping of this buſineſs, never deſir'd
It to be ſtirr'd; but oft have hindred, oft
The paſſages made toward it; on my Honour,
I ſpeak, my good Lord Cardinall to this point;
And thus farre clear him.
Now, what mov'd me too't,
I will be bold with time and your attention: (too't:
Then marke th'inducement. Thus it came; give heed
My Conſcience firſt receiv'd a tenderneſſe,
Scruple, and prick, on certain Speeches utter'd
By th'Biſhop of Bayon, then French Embaſſador,
Who had been hither ſent on the debating
And Marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleance, and
Our Daughter Mary: Ith' Progreſſe of this buſineſſe,
Ere a determinate reſolution, he
(I mean the Biſhop) did require a reſpite,
Wherein he might the King his Lord advertiſe,
Whether our Daughter were legitimate,
Reſpecting this our Marriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brothers Wife. This reſpite ſhook
The boſome of my Conſcience, enter'd me;
Yea with a ſplitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my Breaſt, which forc'd ſuch way,
That many maz'd conſiderings, did throng
And preſt in with this Caution. Firſt, me thought
I ſtood not in the ſmile of Heaven, who had Commanded Nature, that my Ladies womb
If it conceiv'd a Male-child by me, ſhould
Doe no more Offices of life to't, then
The Grave does to th' dead: For her Male Iſſue,
Or dyed where they were made, or ſhortly after
This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a Judgement on me, that my Kingdome
(Well worthy the beſt Heir oth' world) ſhould not
Be glad in't by me. Then follows, that
I weigh'd the danger that my Realmes ſtood in
By this my Iſſues faile, and that gave tome
Many a groaning throw: thus hulling in
The wilde ſea of my Conſcience, I did ſteer
Towards this remedy, whereupon we are
Now preſent here together: that's to ſay,
I meant to rectifie my Conſcience, which
I then did feel full ſick, and yet not well,
By all the Reverend Fathers of the Land,
And Doctors Learn'd. Firſt I began in private,
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppreſſion I did reek
When I firſt mov'd you.

B. Lin. Very well, my Liege.

Kin. I have ſpoke long, be pleas'd your ſelf to ſay
How farre you ſatisfi'd me.

Lin. So pleaſe your Highneſſe,
The queſtion did at firſt ſo ſtagger me,
Bearing a ſtate of mighty moment in't,
And conſequence of dread, that I committed
The daringſt Counſell which I had to doubt,
And did intreat your Highneſſe in this courſe,
Which you are running here.

Kin. I then mov'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this preſent Summons unſolicited.
I left no reverend perſon in this Court,
But by particular conſent proceeded
Under your Hands and Seales: therefore go on,
For no diſlike ith' world againſt the perſon
Of our good Queen; but the ſharp thorny points
Of my alledged reaſons drives this forward:
Prove but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life
And Kingly Dignity, we are contented
To wear her mortall State to come, with her,
(Katherine our Queen) before the primeſt Creature
That's Parragon'd oth' World.

Camp. So pleaſe your Highneſſe,
The Queen being abſent, 'tis a needfull fitneſſe,
That we adjourn this Court to a further day;
Mean while muſt be an earneſt motion
Made to the Queen, to call back her appeale
She intends unto his Holineſſe.

Kin. I may perceive
Theſe Cardinals trifle with me: I abhorre
This dilatory ſloth, and tricks of Rome.
My Learn'd and welbeloved Servant Cranmer,
Prethee return, with thy approach: I know,
My comfort comes along: break up the Court;
I ſay, ſet on.

Exeunt, in manner as they enter'd

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Queen and her Woman, as at work.

Queen. Take thy Lute, Wench,
My Soule growes ſad with troubles,
Sing, and diſperſe 'em if thou canſt: leave working:

SONG.

Orpheus with his Lute made Trees,
And the Mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themſelves when he did ſing.
To his Muſick, Plants and Flowers
Ever ſpring; as Sun and Showers,
There had made a laſting Spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the Billowes of the Sea,
Hung their Heads, and then lay by.
In ſweet Muſick is ſuch Art,
Killing care, and grief of heart,
Fall aſleep, or hearing dye.

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now?
Gent. And't pleaſe your Grace, the two great Cardinals
Wait in the preſence.
Queen. Would they ſpeak with me?
Gent. They will'd me ſay ſo, Madam.
Queen. Pray their Graces
To come neat: what can be their buſineſſe
With me, a poor weak woman, faln from favour,
I doe not like their comming; now I think on't,
They ſhould be good men, their affaires are righteous,
But, All Hoods make not Monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, Wolſey and Campian.

Wolſ. Peace to your Highneſſe.
Qu. Your Graces find me here part of a Houſwife,
(I would be all) againſt the worſt may happen:
What are your pleaſures with me, Reverend Lords?
Wol. May it pleaſe you, Noble Madam, to withdraw
Into your private Chamber; we ſhall give you
The full cauſe of our comming.
Queen. Speak it here.
There's nothing I have done yet o' my Conſcience
Deſerves a Corner: would all other Women
Could ſpeak this with as free a Soule as I doe,
My Lords, I care not (ſo much I am happy
Above a number) If my actions
Were tri'd by every tongue, every eye ſaw 'em,
Envy and baſe opinion ſet againſt 'em,
I know my life ſo even. If your buſineſſe
Seek me out, and that way I am Wife in;
Out with it boldly: Truth loves open dealing.
Card. Tanta eſt erga te mentis integritas (Regina ſe-
Queen. Good my Lord, no Latine; (reniſſima.)
I am not ſuch a Truant ſince my comming,
As not to know the Language I have liv'd in: (ous:

Pray ſpeak in Engliſh; here are ſome will thank you,
If you ſpeak truth, for their poor Miſtris ſake;
Believe me ſhe has had much wrong. Lord Cardinall,
The willing'ſt ſin I ever yet committed,
May be abſolv'd in Engliſh.
Card. Noble Lady,
I am ſorry my integrity ſhould breed,
(And ſervice to his Majeſty and you)
So deep ſuſpition, where all faith was meant;
We come not by the way of Accuſation,
To taint that honour every good Tongue bleſſes;
Nor to betray you any way to ſorrow;
You have too much, good Lady: But to know
How you ſtand minded in the weighty difference
Between the King and you, and to deliver
(Like free and honeſt men) our juſt opinions,
And comforts to your cauſe.
Camp. Moſt honoured Madam,
My Lord of York, out of his Noble nature,
Zeale and obedience he ſtill bore your Grace,
Forgetting (like a good man) your late Cenſure
Both of his truth and him (which was too farre)
Offers, as I doe, in a ſign of peace,
His Service, and his Counſell.
Queen. To betray me.
My Lords, I thank you both for your good wills,
Ye ſpeak like honeſt men, (pray God ye prove ſo)
But how to make ye ſuddenly an Anſwer
In ſuch a point of weight, ſo near mine Honour,
(More near my Life I fear) with my weak wit;
And to ſuch men of Gravity and Learning;
In truth I know not. I was ſet at work,
Among my Maids, full little (God knowes) looking
Either for ſuch men, or ſuch buſineſſe;
For her ſake that I have been, for I feele
The laſt fit of my Greatneſſe; good your Graces
Let me have time and Counſel for my Cauſe:
Alaſs, I am a Woman friendleſſe, hopeleſſe.
Wol. Madam,
You wrong the Kings love with theſe feares,
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Queen. In England,
But little for my profit: can you think, Lord,
That any Engliſh-man dare give me Counſell?
Or be a known friend 'gainſt his Highneſſe pleaſure,
(Though be be grown ſo deſperate to be honeſt)
And live a Subject? Nay forſooth my friends,
They that muſt weigh out my afflictions,
They that my truſt muſt grow to, live not here,
They are (as all my other comforts) far hence
In mine own Country, Lords.
Camp. I would your Grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my Counſell.
Queen. How, Sir?
Camp. Put your main cauſe into the Kings protection,
He's loving and moſt gracious. 'Twill be much,
Both for your Honour better, and your Cauſe:
For if the Tryall of the Law o're-take ye,
You'l part away diſgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you rightly.
Queen. Ye tell me what ye wiſh for both, my ruine:
Is this your Chriſtian Counſell? Out upon ye.
Heaven is above all yet; there ſits a Judge,
That no King can corrupt.
Camp. Your rage miſtakes us.
Queen. The more ſhame for ye; holy men I thought ye,
Upon my Soule, two Reverend Cardinall Virtues:
But Cardinall Sins, and hollow hearts I fear ye:
Mend 'em for ſhame my Lords: Is this your comfort?
The Cordiall that ye bring a wretched Lady?
A woman loſt among ye, laugh'd at, ſcorn'd?
I will not wiſh ye half my miſeries,

I have more Charity. But say I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heavens sake take heed, least at once
The burthen of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Car. Madam, this is a meer distraction,
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Quee. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye,
And all such false professors. Would you have me
(If you have any Justice, any Pitty,
If ye be any thing but Churchmens habit)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alass, ha's banisht me his bed already,
His Love, too long ago. I am old, my Lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is onely by obedience. What can happen
To me, above this wretchednesse? All your Studies
Make me a Curse, like this:
Camp. Your feares are worse.
Qu. Have I liv'd thus long (let me speak my self,
Since Virtue finds no friends) a Wife, a true one?
A Woman (I dare say without Vain-glory)
Never yet branded with suspition?
Have I, with all my full Affections
Still met the King? Lov'd him next Heav'n? Obey'd him?
Bin (out of fondnesse) superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my Prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, Lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her Husband,
One that ne're dream'd a Joy, beyond his pleasure;
And to that Woman (when she has done most)
Yet will I adde an honour; a great Patience.
Car. Madam, you wander from the good
We ayme at.
Quee. My Lord,
I dare not make my self so guilty,
To give up willingly that Noble Title
Your Master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e're divorce my Dignities.
Card. Pray hear me.
Qu. Would I had never trod this English Earth,
Or felt the Flatteries that grow upon it:
Ye have Angels Faces, but Heaven knowes your hearts.
What shall become of me now, wretched Lady?
I am the most unhappy Woman living.
Alass (poor Wenches) where are now your Fortunes?
Shipwrack'd upon a Kingdome, where no Pitty,
No Friends, no Hope, no Kindred weep for me?
Almost no Grave allow'd me? Like the Lilly
That once was Mistris of the Field, and flourish'd,
I'le hang my head, and perish.
Car. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
You'ld feel more comfort. Why should we (good Lady)
Upon what cause wrong you? Alass, our Places,
The way of our Profession is against it;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodness sake, consider what you doe,
How you may hurt your self: I, utterly
Grow from the Kings Acquaintance, by this Carriage.
The hearts of Princes kisse Obedience,
So much they love it. But to stubborn Spirits,
They swell and grow as terrible as stormes.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper;
A Soule as even as a Calme; Pray think us,
Those we professe, Peace-makers, Friends, and Servants.
Camp. Madam, you'll find it so:
You wrong your Virtues
With these weak Womens feares. A Noble Spirit
As yours was, put into you, ever casts
Such doubts as false Coyn from it. The King loves you,
Beware you loose it not: For us (if you please
To trust us in your businesse) we are ready
To use our utmost Studies in your service.
Qu. Doe what you will, my Lords:
And pray forgive me;
If I have us'd my self unmannerly,
You know I am a Woman lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his Majesty,
He has my heart yet, and shall have my Prayers
While I shall have my life. Come reverend Fathers,
Bestow your Counsells on me. She now begs
That little thought when she set footing here,
She should have bought her Dignities so dear. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, Duke of Suffolk, Lord Surrey, and Lord Chamberlain.

Norf. If you will now unite in your Complaints,
And force them with a Constancy, the Cardinall
Cannot stand under them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces,
With these you bear already.
Sur. I am joyfull
To meet the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my Father-in-Law the Duke,
To be reveng'd on him.
Suf. Which of the Peeres
Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? When did he regard
The stamp of Nobleness in any person
Out of himself?
Cham. My Lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me, I know:
What we can do to him (though now the time Gives way to us) I much fear. If you cannot,
Barre his accesse to th' King, never attempt
Any thing on him: for he hath a witchcraft
Over the King in's Tongue.
Nor. O fear him not,
His spell in that is out: the King hath found
Matter against him, that for ever marres
The Hony of his Language. No, he's setled
(Not to come off) in his displeasure.
Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such Newes as this
Once every houre.
Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the Divorce, his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded: wherein he appeares,
As I would wish mine Enemy.
Sur. How came
His practises to light?
Suf. Most strangely.
Sur. O how? how?
Suf. The Cardinals Letters to the Pope miscarried,

And come to th' eye oth' King, wherein was read
How that the Cardinall did entreat his Holineſſe
To ſtay the Judgement oth' Divorce; for if
It did take place, I doe (quoth he) perceive
My King is tangled in affection, to
A Creature of the Queens, Lady Anne Bullen.
Sur. Ha's the King this?
Suf. Beleeve it.
Sur. Will this work?
Cham. The King in this perceives him, how he coaſts
And hedges his own way. But in this point,
All his tricks founder, and he brings his Phyſick
After his patients death; the King already
Hath married the fair Lady.
Sur. Would he had.
Suf. May you be happy in your wiſh, my Lord,
For I profeſſe you have it.
Sur. Now all my joy
Trace the Conjunction.
Suf. My Amen too't.
Nor. All mens.
Suf. There's order given for her Coronation:
Marry this is yet but young, and may be left
To ſome eares unrecounted. But, my Lords,
She is a gallant Creature, and compleat
In minde and feature, I perſwade me, from her
Will fall ſome bleſſing to this Land, which ſhall
In it be memoriz'd.
Sur. But will the King
Digeſt this Letter of the Cardinals?
The Lord forbid.
Nor. Marry Amen.
Suf. No, no:
There be moe Waſps that buz about his Noſe,
Will make this ſting the ſooner. Cardinall Campeius,
Is ſtoln away to Rome, hath tane no leave,
Ha's left the cauſe to th' King unhandled, and
Is poſted as the Agent of our Cardinall,
To ſecond all his plot. I doe aſſure you,
The King cri'd Ha, at this.
Cham. Now God incenſe him,
And let him cry Ha, louder.
Norf. But, my Lord,
When returns Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which
Have ſatisfi'd the King for his Divorce,
Together with all famous Colledges
Almoſt in Chriſtendome: ſhortly (I believe)
His ſecond Marriage ſhall be publiſhed, and
Her Coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be call'd Queen, but Princeſſe Dowager,
A Widow to Prince Arthur.
Nor. This ſame Cranmer's
A worthy Fellow, and hath tane much pain
In the Kings buſineſſe.
Suf. He has, and we ſhall ſee him
For it, an Arch-Biſhop.
Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis ſo.

Enter Wolſey and Cromwell.

The Cardinall.
Nor. Obſerve, obſerve, he's moody.
Car. The Packet, Cromwell,
Gav't you the King?
Crom. To his own hand, in's Bed-chamber.
Card. Look'd he oth' in-ſide of the Paper?
Crom. Preſently
He did unſeale them, and the firſt he view'd.
He did it with a ſerious minde: a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bad
Attend him here this Morning.
Card. Is he ready to come abroad?
Crom. I think by this he is,
Card. Leave me a while. Exit Cromwell.
It ſhall be to the Dutcheſſe of Alanſon,
The French Kings Siſter; He ſhall marry her.
Anne Bullen? No: I'le no Anne Bullens for him,
There's more in't then fair Viſage. Bullen?
No, we'll no Bullens: Speedily I wiſh
To hear from Rome. The Marchioneſſe of Penbrook?
Nor. He's diſcontented.
Suf. May be he heares the King
Does whet his anger to him.
Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord for thy Juſtice.
Car. The late Queens Gentlewoman?
A Knights Daughter
To be her Miſtris Miſtris? the Queens Queen?
This Candle burns not cleer, 'tis I muſt ſnuffe it,
Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous
And well-deſerving? yet I know her for
A ſpleeny Lutheran, and not wholſome to
Our cauſe, that ſhe ſhould lie ith' boſome of
Our hard rul'd King. Again, there is ſprung up
An Heretick, an Arch-one; Cranmer, one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the King,
And is his Oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at ſomething.

Enter King reading of a Schedule.

Sur. I would 'twere ſomething that would fret the ſtring
The Maſter cord on's heart.
Suf. The King, the King.
King. What piles of Wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion? and what expence by th' hour
Seems to flow from him? how, ith' name of Thrift
Does he rake this together? Now, my Lords,
Saw you the Cardinall?
Nor. My Lord, we have
Stood here obſerving him. Some ſtrange Commotion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip and ſtarts,
Stops on a ſudden, looks upon the ground,
Then layes his finger on his Temple: ſtraight
Springs out into faſt gate, then ſtops again,
Strikes his breſt hard, and anon, he caſts
His eye againſt the Moon: in moſt ſtrange Poſtures
We have ſeen him ſet himſelf.
King. It may well be,
There is a mutiny in's minde. This morning,
Papers of State he ſent me, to peruſe
As I requir'd: and wot you what I found
There (on my Conſcience put unwittingly)
Forſooth an Inventory, thus importing
The ſeverall parcels of his Plate, his Treaſure,
Rich Stuffes and Ornaments of Houſhold, which
I finde at ſuch proud Rate, that it out-ſpeaks
Poſſeſſion of a Subject.
Nor. It's heavens will,
Some Spirit put this Paper in the Packet,
To bleſſe your eye withall.
King. If we did think

His

His Contemplations were above the earth,
And fixt on spiritual object, he should still
Dwell in his Musings, but I am afraid
His Thinkings are below the Moon, nor worth
His serious considering.

King takes his Seat, whispers Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Car. Heaven forgive me,
Ever God blefs your Highnefs.

King. Good my Lord,
You are full of Heavenly ſtuff, and bear the Inventory,
Of your beſt Graces, in your minde; the which,
You were now running o're: you have ſcarce time
To ſteal from Spiritual leiſure, a brief ſpan
To keep your earthly Audit, ſure in that
I deem you an ill Husband, and am glad
To have you therein my Companion.

Car. Sir,
For Holy Offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of buſineſs, which
I bear i'th' State: and Nature does require
Her times of preſervation, which perforce
I her frail ſon, among ſt my Brethren mortal,
Muſt give my tendance to.

King. You have ſaid well.

Car. And ever may your Highneſs yoke together,
(As I will lend you cauſe) my doing well,
With my well ſaying.

King. 'Tis well ſaid agen,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to ſay well,
And yet words are no deeds. My Father lov'd you,
He ſaid he did, and with this deed did Crown
His ſword upon you. Since I had my Office,
I have kept you next my Heart, have not alone
Imploy'd you where high Profits might come home,
But par'd my preſent Havings, to beſtow
My Bounties upon you.

Car. What ſhould this mean?

Sur. The Lord increaſe this buſineſs.

King. Have I not made you
The prime man of the State? I pray you tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true:
And if you may confeſs it, ſay withall
If you are to bound to us, or no. What ſay you?

Car. My Soveraign, I confeſs your Royal graces
Showr'd on me daily, have been more then could
My ſtudied purpoſes require, which went
Beyond all man's endeavours. My endeavours,
Have ever come too ſhort of my Deſires,
Yet fill'd with my Abilities: Mine own ends.
Have been ſo, that ever more they pointed
To th'good of your moſt Sacred Perſon, and
The profit of the State. For your great Graces
Heap'd upon me (poor Undeſerver) I
Can nothing render but Allegiant thanks,
My Prayers to heaven for you; my Loyalty
Which ever has, and ever ſhall be growing,
'Till death (that Winter) kill it.

King. Fairly anſwer'd:
A Loyal, and obedient Subject is
Therein illuſtrated, the Honour of it
Does pay the Act of it, as i'th' contrary
The foulneſs is the puniſhment. I preſume,
That as my hand has open'd Bounty to you,
My heart drop'd Love, my pow'r rain'd Honour, more
On you, then any: So your Hand, and Heart.
Your Brain, and every Function of your power,
Should, notwithſtanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in Love's particular, be more
To me your Friend, then any.

Car. I do profeſs,
That for your Highneſs good, I ever labour'd
More then mine own: that am, have, and will be (Though all the world ſhould crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their Soul; though perils did
Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em, and
Appear in forms more horrid, yet my Duty,
As doth a Rock againſt the chiding Floud,
Should the approach of this wild River break)
And ſtand unſhaken, yours.

King. 'Tis Nobly ſpoken;
Take notice Lords, he has a Loyal breaſt,
For you have ſeen him open't. Read o're this,
And after this, and then to Breakfaſt with
What appetite you have.

Exit King, frowning upon the Cardinal, the Nobles throng after him whiſpering, and ſmiling.

Car. What ſhould this mean?
What ſudden Anger's this? How have I reap'd it?
He parted Frowning from me, as if Ruine
Leap'd from his Eyes. So looks the chafed Lyon
Upon the daring Huntſman that has gall'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I muſt read this paper:
I fear the Story of his Anger. 'Tis ſo:
This paper has undone me: 'Tis th'Account
Of all that world of Wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends, (Indeed to gain the Popedome
And ſee my Friends in Rome.) O Negligence!
Fit for a Fool to fall by: What croſs Devil
Made me put this main Secret in the Packet
I ſent the King? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his Brains?
I know 'twill ſtir him ſtrongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in ſpight of Fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this? To th'Pope?
The Letter (as I live) with all the Buſineſs
I writ to's Holineſs. Nay then, farewell:
I have touch'd the higheſt point of all my Greatneſs,
And from that full Meridian of my Glory,
I haſte now to my Setting, I ſhall fall
Like a bright Exhalation in the Evening,
And no man ſee me more.

Enter to Woolſey, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the King's pleaſure Cardinal,
Who commands you
To render up the Great Seal preſently
Into our hands, and to Confine your ſelf
To Aſher-houſe, my Lord of Wincheſter's,
'Till you hear further from his Highneſs.

Car. Stay:
Where's your Commiſſion? Lords, words cannot carry
Authority ſo mighty.

Suff. Who dare croſs 'em,
Bearing the King's will from his mouth expreſsly?

Car. 'Till I finde more then will, or words to do it,
(I mean your Malice) know, Officious Lords,
I dare, and muſt deny it. Now I feel
Of what courſe Mettal ye are molded, Envy;
How eagerly ye follow my Diſgraces

As if it fed ye, and how fleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruine?
Follow your envious courſes, men of Malice;
You have a Chriſtian warrant for 'em, and no doubt
In time will find their fit Rewards. That Seal
You ask with ſuch a Violence, the King
(Mine, and your Maſter) with his own hand, gave me:
Bad me enjoy it, with the Place, and Honours
During my life; and to confirm his Goodneſs,
Tide it by Letters Patents. Now, who'll take it?
Sur. The King that gave it.
Car. It muſt be himſelf then.
Sur. Thou art a proud Traytor, Prieſt.
Car. Proud Lord, thou lyeſt:
Within theſe fourty houres, Surrey durſt better
Have burnt that Tongue, then ſaid ſo.
Sur. Thy Ambition
(Thou Scarlet ſinner) robb'd this bewailing Land
Of Noble Buckingham, my Father-in-Law,
The heads of all thy Brother Cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy beſt parts bound together)
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy,
You ſent me Deputy for Ireland,
Far from his ſuccour; from the King, from all
That might have mercy on the fault, thou gav'ſt him:
Whil'ſt your great Goodneſs, out of holy pitie,
Abſolv'd him with an Axe.
Wol. This, and all elſe
This talking Lord can lay upon my credit,
I anſwer, is moſt falſe. The Duke by Law
Found his deſerts. How innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His Noble Jury, and foul Cauſe can witneſs.
If I lov'd many words, Lord, I ſhould tell you,
You have as little Honeſty, as Honour,
That in the way of Loyalty, and Truth,
Toward the King, my ever Royal Maſter,
Dare mate a ſounder man then Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.
Sur. By my Soul,
Your long Coat (Prieſt) protects you,
Thou ſhould'ſt feel
My Sword i'th'life bloud of thee elſe. My Lords,
Can ye endure to hear this Arrogance?
And from this Fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus Jaded by a piece of Scarlet,
Farewell Nobility: let his Grace go forward,
And dare us with his Cap, like Larks.
Car. All Goodneſs
Is poiſon to thy Stomack.
Sur. Yes, that Goodneſs
Of gleaning all the Land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands (Card'nal) by Extortion:
The goodneſs of your intercepted Packets
You writ to th'Pope, againſt the King: your goodneſs
Since you provoke me, ſhall be moſt notorious.
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly Noble,
As you reſpect the common good, the State
Of our diſpis'd Nobility, our Iſſues,
(Who if he live, will ſcarce be Gentlemen)
Produce the grand ſumme of his ſinnes, the Articles
Collected from his life. I'le ſtartle you
Worſe then the Sacring Bell, when the brown Wench
Lay kiſſing in your armes, Lord Cardinal.
Car. How much me thinks, I could deſpiſe this man,
But that I am bound in Charity againſt it.
Nor. Thoſe Articles, my Lord, are in the Kings hand:
But thus much, they are foul ones.
Wol. So much fairer
And ſpotleſs, ſhall mine Innocence ariſe,
When the King knows my Truth.
Sur. This cannot ſave you:
I thank my Memory, I yet remember
Some of theſe Articles, and out they ſhall.
Now, if you can bluſh, and cry guilty Cardinal,
You'll ſhew a little Honeſty.
Wol. Speak on Sir,
I dare your worſt Objections: If I bluſh,
It is to ſee a Nobleman want manners.
Sur. I had rather want thoſe, then my head;
Have at you.
Firſt, that without the King's aſſent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a Legate, by which power
You maim'd the Juriſdiction of all Biſhops.
Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or elſe
To Foreign Princes, Ego & Rex meus,
Was ſtill inſcrib'd: in which you brought the King
To be your Servant.
Suff. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of King or Councel, when you went
Ambaſſador to the Emperour, you made bold
To carry into Flanders, the Great Seal.
Sur. Item, You ſent a large Commiſſion
To Gregory de Caſſado, to conclude
Without the King's will, or the States allowance,
A League between his Highneſs, and Ferrara.
Suf. That out of mere Ambition, you have caus'd
Your holy-Hat to be ſtampt on the King's Coin.
Sur. Then, that you have ſent innumerable ſubſtance,
(By what means got, I leave to your own Conſcience)
To furniſh Rome, and to prepare the wayes
You have for Dignities, to the mere undoing
Of all the Kingdome. Many more there are,
Which ſince they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.
Cham. O my Lord,
Preſs not a falling man too far: 'tis Virtue:
His faults lye open to the Lawes, let them
(Not you) correct him. My heart weeps to ſee him
So little, of his great Self.
Sur. I forgive him.
Suff. Lord Cardinal, the King's further pleaſure is,
Becauſe all thoſe things you have done of late
By your power Legantive within this Kingdome,
Fall into th'compaſs of a Præmunire;
That therefore ſuch a Writ be ſued againſt you,
To forfeit all your Goods, Lands, Tenements,
Caſtles, and whatſoever, and to be
Out of the King's protection. This is my Charge.
Nor. And ſo we'll leave you to your Meditations
How to live better. For your ſtubborn anſwer
About the giving back the Great Seal to us,
The King ſhall know it, and (no doubt) ſhall thank you.
So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal.
Exeunt all but Wolſey.
Wol. So farewell, to the little good you bear me.
Farewell? A long farewell to all my Greatneſs.
This is the ſtate of Man; to day he puts forth
The tender Leaves of Hopes, to morrow Bloſſoms,
And beares his bluſhing Honours thick upon him:
The third day, comes a Froſt; a killing Froſt,
And when he thinks, good eaſie man, full ſurely

His

His Greatneſs is a ripening, nips his Root,
And then he falls as I do. I have ventur'd
Like little wanton Boyes that ſwim on bladders:
This many Summers in a Sea of Glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown Pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me
Weary, and old with ſervice, to the mercy
Of a rude ſtream, that muſt for ever hide me.
Vain pomp, and glory of the World, I hate ye,
I feel my heart new open'd. Oh how wretched
Is that poor man, that hangs on Princes favours?
There is betwixt that ſmile we would aſpire to,
That ſweet Aſpect of Princes, and their ruine,
More pangs, and feares then warres, or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter Cromwell, ſtanding amazed.

Why how now Cromwell?

Crom. I have no power to ſpeak Sir.

Car. What, amaz'd
At my misfortunes? Can the Spirit wonder
A great man ſhould decline. Nay, and you weep
I am fal'n indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace?

Card. Why well:
Never ſo truly happy, my good Cromwell,
I know my ſelf now, and I feel within me,
A peace above all earthly Dignities,
A ſtill, and quiet Conſcience. The King has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his Grace: and from theſe ſhoulders
This ruin'd Pillet, out of Pitie, taken
A load, would ſink a Navy, (too much Honour.)
O 'tis a burden Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man, that hopes for Heaven.

Crom. I am glad your Grace,
Ha's made that right uſe of it.

Card. I hope I have:
I am able now (me thinks)
(Out of a fortitude of Soul, I feel)
To endure more Miſeries, and greater far
Then my Weak-hearted Enemies, dare offer.
What Newes abroad?

Crom. The heavieſt, and the worſt,
Is your diſpleaſure with the King.

Card. God bleſs him.

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas Moor is choſen
Lord Chancellor, in your place.

Card. That's ſomewhat ſodain.
But he's a Learned man. May he continue
Long in his Highneſs favour, and do Juſtice
For truth's-ſake, and his Conſcience; that his bones,
When he has run his courſe, and ſleeps in Bleſſings,
May have a tombe of Orphan's teares wept on him.
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome;
Inſtall'd Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury.

Card. That's Newes indeed.

Crom. Laſt, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the King hath in ſecrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his Queen,
Going to Chappel: and the voice is now
Only about her Coronation.

Card. There was the weight that pull'd me down.
O Cromwell,
The King has gone beyond me: All my Glories
In that one woman, I have loſt for ever.
No Sun, ſhall ever uſher forth mine Honours,
Or gild again the Noble Troops that waited
Upon my ſmiles. Go get thee from me Cromwel,
I am a poor fal'n man, unworthy now
To be thy Lord, and Maſter. Seek the King
(That Sun, I pray may never ſet) I have told him,
What, and how true thou art; he will advance thee:
Some little memory of me, will ſtir him
(I know his Noble Nature) not to let
Thy hopefull ſervice periſh too. Good Cromwel,
Neglect him not; make uſe now, and provide
For thine own future ſafety.

Crom. O my Lord,
Muſt I then leave you? Muſt I needs forgoe
So good, ſo Noble, and ſo true a Maſter?
Bear witneſs, all that have not hearts of Iron,
With what a ſorrow Cromwel leaves his Lord.
The King ſhall have my ſervice; but my prayers
For ever and for ever ſhall be yours.

Card. Cromwel, I did not think to ſhed a tear
In all my miſeries: But thou haſt forc'd me
(Out of thy honeſt truth) to play the Woman.
Let's dry our eyes: And thus far hear me Cromwel,
And when I am forgotten, as I ſhall be,
And ſleep in dull cold Marble, where no mention
Of me, more muſt be heard of: Say I taught thee;
Say Wolſey, that once trod the wayes of Glory,
And ſounded all the Depths and Shoals of Honour,
Found thee a way (out of his wrack) to riſe in:
A ſure, and ſafe one, though thy Maſter miſt it.
Mark but my Fall, and that that Ruin'd me:
Cromwel, I charge thee, fling away Ambition,
By that ſin fell the Angels: how can man then
(The Image of his Maker) hope to win by it?
Love thy ſelf laſt, cheriſh thoſe hearts that hate thee:
Corruption win not more then Honeſty,
Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace
To ſilence envious tongues. Be juſt, and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'ſt at, be thy Countries,
Thy God's, and truth's: then if thou fall'ſt (O Cromwel)
Thou fall'ſt a bleſſed Martyr.
Serve the King: and prethee lead me in:
There take an Inventory of all I have,
To the laſt penny, 'tis the King's. My Robe,
And my Integrity to Heaven, is all,
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwel, Cromwel
Had I but ſerv'd my God, with half the Zeal
I ſerv'd my King: he would not in mine Age
Have left me naked to mine Enemies.

Crom. Good Sir, have patience.

Card. So I have. Farewell
The Hopes of Court, my Hopes in Heaven do dwell.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1. Y'are well met once again.
2. So are you.
1. You come to take your ſtand here, and behold
The Lady Anne paſs from her Coronation.

2. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The Duke of Buckingham came from his Tryal.
1. 'Tis very true. But that time offer'd sorrow,
This general joy.
2. 'Tis well: the Citizens
I am sure have shewn at full their Royal minds,
As let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward
In Celebration of this day with Shewes,
Pageants, and Sights of Honour.
1. Never greater,
Nor I'le assure you better taken Sir.
2. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That Paper in your hands?
1. Yes, 'tis the List
Of those that claim their Offices this day,
By custome of the Coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high Steward; next the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be Earl Marshal: you may read the rest.
1. I thank you Sir: Had I not known those customes,
I should have been beholding to your Paper:
But I beseech you, what's become of Katherine
The Princess Dowager? How goes her business?
1. That I can tell you too: the Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned, and Reverend Fathers of this Order,
Held a late Court at Dunstable; six miles off
From Ampthill, where the Princess lay, to which
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:
And to be short, for not Appearance, and
The King's late Scruple, by the main assent
Of all these Learned men, she was divorc'd,
And the late Marriage made of none effect:
Since which, she was remov'd to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.
2. Alas good Lady.
The trumpets sound: stand close,
The Queen is coming. Ho-boyes.

The Order of the Coronation.

1. A lively Flourish of Trumpets.
2. Then two Judges.
3. Lord Chancellour, with Purse and Mace before him.
4. Quirristers singing. Musick.
5. Mayor of London, bearing the Mace. Then Garter, in his Coat of Armes, and on his head he wore a Gilt Copper Crown.
6. Marquess of Dorset, bearing a Scepter of Gold, on his head, a Demi-Coronal of Gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey bearing the Rod of Silver with the Dove, Crowned with an Earle's Coronet. Collars of Esses.
7. Duke of Suffolk, in his Robe of Estate, his Coronet on his head, bearing a long white Wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the Rod of Marshalship, a Coronet on his head. Collars of Esses.
8. A Canopy, borne by four of the Cinque-Ports, under it the Queen in her Robe, in her hair, richly adorned with Pearl, Crowned. On each side her the Bishops of London and Winchester.
9. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a Coronal of Gold, wrought with Flowers, bearing the Queen's Train.
10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain Circlets of Gold, without Flowers.

Exeunt, first passing over the Stage in Order and State, and then, A great Flourish of Trumpets.

2 A Royal Train believe me: these I know:
Who's that bears the Scepter?
1. Marquess Dorset,
And that the Earl of Surrey, with the Rod.
2. A bold brave Gentleman. That should be
The Duke of Suffolk.
1. 'Tis the same: high Steward.
2. And that my Lord of Norfolk?
1. Yes.
2. Heaven bless thee,
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.
Sir, as I have a Soul, she is an Angel;
Our King has all the Indies in his Armes,
And more, & richer, when he strains that Lady,
I cannot blame his Conscience.
1. They that bear
The Cloath of Honor over her, are four Barons
Of the Cinque-Ports.
2. Those men are happy,
And so are all, are near her,
I take it, she that carries up the Train,
Is that old Noble Lady, Duchess of Norfolk.
1. It is, and all the rest are Countesses.
2. Their Coronets say so. These are Starres indeed,
And sometimes falling ones.
1. No more of that.

Enter a third Gentleman.

1. God save you Sir. Where have you bin broiling?
3. Among the crowd i' th' Abbey, where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.
2. You saw the Ceremony?
3. I did.
1. How was it?
3. Well worth the seeing.
2. Good Sir, speak it to us.
3. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of Lords, and Ladies, having brought the Queen
To a prepar'd place in the Quire, fell off
A distance from her; while her Grace sate down
To rest a while, some half an hour, or so,
In a rich Chair of State, opposing freely
The Beauty of her Person to the People.
Believe me Sir, she is the goodliest Woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a Noise arose,
As the shrowds make at Sea, in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes. Hats, Cloaks,
(Doublets, I think) flew up, and had their Faces
Bin loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-belly'd Women,
That had not half a week to go, like Rammes
In the old time of War, should shake the presse
And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living
Could say this is my wife there, all were woven
So strangly in one piece.
2. But what follow'd?
3. At length, her Grace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the Altar, where she kneel'd, and Saint-like
Cast her fair eyes to Heaven, and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people:
When by the Arch-bishop of Canterbury,
She had all the Royal makings of a Queen;
As holy Oyl, Edward Confessor's Crown,
The Rod, and Bird of Peace, and all such Emblems
Laid Nobly on her: which perform'd, the Quire

With

With all the choiceſt Muſick of the Kingdome,
Together ſung Te Deum. So ſhe parted,
And with the ſame full State pac'd back again
To York-Place, where the Feaſt is held.
1. Sir.
You muſt no more call it York-place, that's paſt:
For ſince the Cardinal fell, that title's loſt,
'Tis now the King's, and call'd Whitehall.
3. I know it:
But 'tis ſo lately alter'd, that the old name
Is freſh about me.
2. What two Reverend Biſhops
Were thoſe that went on each ſide of the Queen?
3. Stokeley and Gardiner, the one of Wincheſter,
Newly preferr'd from the King's Secretary:
The other London.
2. He of Wincheſter
Is held no great good lover of the Archbiſhop,
The virtuous Cranmer.
3. All the Land knows that:
How ever, yet there is no great breach, when it comes
Cranmer will find a Friend will not ſhrink from him.
2. Who may be that, I pray you.
3. Thomas Cromwel,
A man in much eſteem with th'King, and truly
A worthy Friend. The King has made him
Maſter o'th' Jewel Houſe,
And one already of the Privy Councel.
2. He will deſerve more.
3. Yes without all doubt.
Come Gentlemen, ye ſhall go my way,
Which is to th'Court, and there ye ſhall be my Gueſts:
Something I can command: as I walk thither
I'le tell ye more.
Both. You may command us Sir. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Katherine Dowager, ſick, led between Griffith, her Gentleman-Uſher, and Patience her Woman.

Grif. How do's your Grace?
Kath. O Griffith, ſick to death:
My Legges like loaded Branches bow to th'Earth,
Willing to leave their burthen: Reach a Chair,
So, now (me thinks) I feel a little eaſe.
Did'ſt thou not tell me Griffith, as thou lead'ſt me,
That the great Child of Honour, Cardinal Wolſey
Was dead?
Grif. Yes Madam: but I think your Grace
Out of the pain you ſuffer'd, gave no ear to't.
Kath. Prythee good Griffith, tell me how he dy'de.
If well, he ſtept before me happily
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voice goes Madam,
For after the ſtout Earl Northumberland
Arreſted him at York, and brought him forward
As a man ſorely tainted, to his anſwer,
He fell ſick ſuddenly, and grew ſo ill
He could not ſit his Mule.
Kath. Alas poor man.
Grif. At laſt, with eaſie Roads he came to Leiceſter,
Lodg'd in the Abbey; where the reverend Abbot
With all his Covent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave theſe words. O Father Abbot,
An old man, broken with the ſtorms of State,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye:
Give him a little earth for Charity.
So went to bed; where eagerly his ſickneſs
Purſu'd him ſtill, and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himſelf
Foretold ſhould be his laſt, full Repentance,
Continual Meditations, Tears, and Sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world agen,
His bleſſed part to heaven, and ſlept in peace.
Kath. So may he reſt,
His faults lye on him.
Yet thus far Griffith, give me leave to ſpeak him,
And yet with Charity: he was, a man
Of an unbounded ſtomack, ever ranking
Himſelf with Princes. One that by ſuggeſtion
Ty'de all the Kingdome, Simony was fair play,
His own Opinion was his Law. I'th'preſence
He would ſay untruths, and be ever double
Both in his words, and meaning. He was never
(But where he meant to Ruine) pitifull.
His Promiſes, were as he then was, Mighty:
But his Performance, as he is now, Nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The Clergy ill example.
Grif. Noble Madam:
Men's evil manners, live in Braſs, their Virtues
We write in Water. May it pleaſe your Highneſs
To hear me ſpeak his good now?
Kath. Yes good Griffith,
I were malicious elſe.
Grif. This Cardinal,
Though from an humble Stock, undoubtedly
Was faſhion'd to much honour. From his Cradle
He was a Scholar, and a ripe, and good one:
Exceeding wiſe, fair ſpoken, and perſwading:
Lofty, and ſowre to them that lov'd him not:
But to thoſe men that ſought him, ſweet as Summer.
And though he were unſatisfied in getting,
(Which was a ſin) yet in beſtowing, Madam,
He was moſt Princely: Ever witneſs for him
Thoſe twinnes of Learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipſwich and Oxford: one of which, fell with him,
Unwilling to out-live the good that did it.
The other (though unfiniſh'd) yet ſo Famous,
So excellent in Art, and ſtill ſo riſing,
That Chriſtendome ſhall ever ſpeak his Virtue.
His Overthrow, heap'd Happineſs upon him:
For then, and not 'till then, he felt himſelf,
And found the Bleſſedneſs of being little.
And to adde greater Honours to his Age
Then man could give him; he dy'd, fearing God.
Kath. After my death, I wiſh no other Herald,
No other ſpeaker of my living Actions,
To keep mine Honour, from Corruption,
But ſuch an honeſt Chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I moſt hated Living, thou haſt made me
With thy Religious Truth, and Modeſty,
(Now in his Aſhes) Honour: Peace be with him.
Patience, be near me ſtill, and ſet me lower.
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cauſe the Muſicians play me that ſad note
I nam'd my Knell; whil'ſt I ſit meditating.

On that Celestial Harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn Musick.

Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her. Softly gentle Patience.

The Vision.

Enter solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white Robes, wearing on their head Garlands of Bayes, and golden Vizards on their faces, Branches of Bayes or Palm in their hands. They first Congee unto her, then Dance: and at certain Changes, the first two hold a spare Garland over her Head, at which the other four make reverend Curtsies. Then the two that held the Garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their Changes, and holding the Garland over her head. Which done, they deliver the same Garland to the last two: who likewise observe the same Order. At which (as it were by inspiration) she makes (in her sleep) signes of rejoycing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so, in their Dancing vanish, carrying the Garland with them. The Musick continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?
And leave me here in wretchedness, behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for,
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, Madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not even now a blessed troop
Invite me to a Banquet, whose bright faces
Cast a thousand beams upon me, like the Sun?
They promis'd me eternal Happiness,
And brought me Garlands (Griffith) which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyfull Madam, such good dreames
Possess your Fancy.

Kath. Bid the Musick leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. Musick ceases.

Patience. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the sodain?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,
And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes.

Grif. She is going Wench. Pray, pray.

Pati. Heaven comfort her.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. And't like your Grace -------

Kat. You are a sawcy Fellow,
Deserve we no more Reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not loose her wonted Greatness
To use so rude behaviour. Go to, kneel.

Mes. I humbly do intreat your Highness pardon,
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying
A Gentleman sent from the King, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance Griffith. But this Fellow
Let me ne're see again. Exit Messeng.

Enter Lord Capuchius.

If my sight fail me not,
You should be Lord Ambassador from the Emperor,
My Royal Nephew, and your name Capuchius.

Cap. Madam the same. Your Servant.

Kath. O my Lord,
The times and titles now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me.
But I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble Lady,
First mine own service to your Grace, the next
The King's request, that I would visit you,
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his Princely commendations,
And heartily intreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good Lord, that comfort comes too late,
'Tis like a Pardon after Execution;
That gentle Physick given in time, had cur'd me:
But now I am past all Comforts here, but Prayers.
How does his Highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do, and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with Wormes, and my poor name
Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter
I caus'd you write, yet sent away.

Pat. No Madam.

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my Lord the King.

Cap. Most willingly Madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The Model of our chaste loves: his young daughter,
The dewes of Heaven fall thick in Blessings on her,
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding.
She is young, and of a Noble modest Nature,
I hope she will deserve well, and a little
To love her for her Mother's sake: that lov'd him:
Heaven knows how dearly.
My next poor Petition
Is, that his Noble Grace would have some pitie
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my Fortunes, faithfully,
Of which there is not one, I dare avow
(And now I should not lye) but well deserve
For Virtue, and true Beauty of the Soul,
For honesty, and decent Carriage
A right good Husband (let him be a Noble)
And sure those men are happy that shall have 'em.
The last is for my men, they are the poorest,
(But poverty could never draw 'em from me)
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by.
If Heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole Contents, and good my Lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to Soules departed,
Stand these poor peoples Friend, and urge the King
To do me this last right.

Cap. By Heaven I will.
Or let me loose the fashion of a man.

Kath. I thank you honest Lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his Highness:
Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world. Tell him in death I blest him
(For so I will:) mine eyes grow dimme. Farewell
My Lord. Griffith farewell. Nay Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed,
Call in more Women. When I am dead, good Wench,
Let me be us'd with Honour; strew me over
With Maiden Flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chast Wife to my Grave: Embalm me,
Then lay me forth (although un-Queen'd) yet like
A Queen, and Daughter to a King inter me.
I can no more.

Exeunt leading Katherine.

Acts

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovel.

Gard. It's one a clock Boy, is't not.
Boy. It hath strook.
Gard. These should be houres for necessities,
Not for delights: times to repair our Nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas:
Whither so late?
Lov. Came you from the King, my Lord?
Gard. I did, Sir Thomas, and left him at Primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.
Lov. I must to him too
Before he goe to Bed. I'le take my leave.
Gard. Not yet Sir Thomas Lovel: what's the matter?
It seems you are in haste: and if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your Friend
Some touch of your late business: Affairs that walk
(As they say Spirits do) at midnight, have
In them a wilder Nature, then the business
That seeks dispatch by day.
Lov. My Lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier then this work. The Queen's in Labor
They say in great Extremity, and fear'd
She'll with the Labour, end.
Gard. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may finde
Good time, and live: but for the Stock Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.
Lov. Me thinks I could
Cry the Amen, and yet my Conscience sayes
She's a good Creature, and sweet Lady, do's
Deserve our better wishes.
Gard. But Sir, Sir.
Hear me, Sir Thomas, y'are a Gentleman
Of mine own way. I know you are Wise, Religious,
And let me tell you, it will ne're be well;
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovel, tak't of me,
'Till Cranmer, Cromwel, her two hands, and she Sleep in their Graves.
Lov. Now Sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i'th' Kingdome: as for Cromwel,
Beside that of the Jewel-House, is made Master
O'th' Rolles, and the King's Secretary. Further Sir
Stands in the gap and trade of moe Preferments,
With which the Lime will load him. Th'Archbishop
Is the King's hand, or tongue, and who dare speak
One syllable against him?
Gard. Yes, yes. Sir Thomas,
There are that Dare, and I my self have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and indeed this day,
Sir (I may tell it you) I think I have
Incenst the Lords of the Councel, that he is
(For so I know he is, they know he is)
A most Arch-Heretick, a Pestilence
That does infect the Land: with which, they moved
Have broken with the King, who hath so far
Given ear to our Complaint, of his great Grace,
And Princely Care, fore-seeing those fell Mischiefes,
Our Reasons laid before him, hath commanded
To morrow morning to the Councel Board
He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your Affairs
I hinder you too long: Good night, Sir Thomas.
Exit Gardiner and Page.
Lov. Many good nights, my Lord, I rest your servant.
Enter King and Suffolk.
King. Charles, I will play no more to night,
My mind's not on't, you are too hard for me.
Suff. Sir, I did never win of you before.
King. But little Charles,
Nor shall not when my Fancie's on my Play.
Now Lovel, from the Queen what is the News.
Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman,
I sent your Message, who return'd her thanks
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your Highness
Most heartily to pray for her.
King. What say'st thou? Ha?
To pray for her? What, is she crying out?
Lov. So said her woman, and that her suff'rance made
Almost each pang, a death.
King. Alas good Lady.
Suff. God safely quit her of her Burthen, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your Highness with an Heir.
King. 'Tis midnight, Charles.
Prythee to bed, and in thy Prayers remember
Th'estate of my poor Queen. Leave me alone,
For I must think of that, which company
Would not be friendly to.
Suff. I wish your Highness
A quiet night, and my good Mistriss will Remember in my Prayers.
King. Charles, good night. Exit Suffolk.
Well Sir, what follows?
Enter Sir Anthony Denny.
Den. Sir, I have brought my Lord the Archbishop,
As you commanded me.
King. Ha? Canterbury?
Den. I my good Lord.
King. 'Tis true: where is he Denny?
Den. [illegible]tends your Highness pleasure.
King. [illegible] him to Us.
Lov. This is about that, which the Bishop spake,
I am [illegible] further.
Enter Cranmer and Denny.
King. Avoid the Gallery. Lovel seemeth to stay.
Ha? I have said, be gone.
Exeunt Lovel and Denny.
Cran. I am fearfull: Wherefore frowns he thus?
'Tis his Aspect of terror. All's not well.
King. How now my Lord?
You do desire to know wherefore
I sent for you.
Cran. It is my duty
T'attend your Highness pleasure.
King. Pray you arise
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury:
Come, you and I must walk a turn together:
I have News to tell you.
Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah my good Lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows,
I have, and most unwillingly of late

Heard

Heard many grievous; I do say my Lord
Grievous complaints of you; which being consider'd,
Have mov'd Us, and our Councel, that you shall
This morning come before us, where I know
You cannot with such freedome purge your self,
But that 'till further Trial, in those Charges
Which will require your Answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Towre: you, a Brother of us
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your Highness,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most throughly to be winnowed, where my Chaffe
And Corn shall flie asunder. For I know
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues,
Then I my self, poor man.

King. Stand up, good Canterbury,
Thy Truth, and thy Integrity is rooted
In us thy Friend. Give me thy hand, stand up,
Prythee let's walk. Now by my Holydame,
What manner of man are you? My Lord, I look'd
You would have given me your Petition, that
I should have ta'ne some pains, to bring together
Your self, and your Accusers, and to have heard you
Without indurance further.

Cran. Most dread Liege,
The good I stand on, is my Truth and Honesty:
If they shall fail, I with mine Enemies
Will triumph o're my person, which I waigh not,
Being of those Virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

King. Know you not
How your state stands i'th'world, with the whole world?
Your Enemies are many, and not small; their practices
Must bear the same proportion, and not ever
The Justice and the Truth o'th'question carries
The due o'th Verdict with it; at what ease
Might corrupt minds procure, Knaves as corrupt
To swear against you: Such things have been done.
You are potently oppos'd, and with a Malice
Of as great size. Ween you of better luck,
I mean in perjur'd Witness, then your Master,
Whose Minister you are, whiles here he liv'd
Upon this naughty Earth? Go to, go to,
You take a Precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God, and your Majesty
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

King. Be of good cheer,
They shall no more prevail, then we give way to:
Keep comfort to you, and this Morning see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance
In charging you with matters, to commit you:
The best perswasions to the contrary
Fail not to use; and with what vehemencie
Th'occasion shall instruct you. If intreaties
Will render you no remedy, this Ring
Deliver them, and your Appeal to us
There make before them. Look, the good man weeps:
He's honest on mine Honour. God's blest Mother,
I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul
None better in my Kingdome. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. Exit Cranmer.
He has strangled all his Language in his tears.

Enter Old Lady.

Gent. within. Come back: what mean you?

Lady. I'le not come back, the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners. Now good Angels
Fly o're thy Royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings.

King. Now by thy looks
I guess thy Message. Is the Queen deliver'd?
Say I, and of a Boy.

Lady. I, I my Liege;
And of a lovely Boy; the God of heaven
Both now, and ever bless her: 'Tis a Girle
Promises Boyes hereafter. Sir, your Queen
Desires your Visitation, and to be
Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you
As Cherry, is to Cherry

King. Lovel.

Lov. Sir.

King. Give her an hundred Marks.
I'le to the Queen. Exit King.

Lady. An hundred Marks? By this light, I'le ha'more.
An ordinary Groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this, the Girl was like to him? I'le
Have more, or else unsay't: and now, while 'tis hot,
I'le put it to the issue. Exit Lady.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the Gentleman
That was sent to me from the Councel, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? What means this? Hoa?
Who waits there? Sure you know me?

Enter Keeper.

King. Yes; my Lord:
But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your Grace must wait 'till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Cran. So.

Butts. This is a piece of Malice: I am glad
I came this way so happily. The King
Shall understand it presently. Exit Butts.

Cran. 'Tis Butts,
The King's Physician, as he past along
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me:
Pray heaven he found not my disgrace: for certain
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,
(God turn their hearts, I never sought their malice)
To quench mine honour; they would shame to make me
Wait else at door: a fellow Councellor
'Mong Boyes, Groomes, and Lackeyes.
But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King, and Butts, at a Window above.

Butts. I'le shew your Grace the strangest sight.

King. What's that Butts?

Butts.

Butts. I think your Highneſs ſaw this many a day.
King. Body a me: where is it?
Butts. There my Lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his State at doore 'mongſt Purſevants,
Pages, and Foot-boys.
King. Ha? 'tis he indeed.
Is this the Honour they do one another?
'Tis well there's one above'em yet; I had thought
They had parted ſo much honeſty among'em,
At leaſt good manners; as not thus to ſuffer
A man of his Place, and ſo near our favour
To dance attendance on their Lordſhips pleaſures,
And at the doore too, like a Poſte with Packets:
By holy Mary (Butts) there's knavery;
Let'em alone, and draw the Curtain cloſe:
We ſhall hear more anon.

A Councel Table brought in with Chairs and Stools, and placed under the State. Enter Lord Chancellour, places himſelf at the upper end of the Table, on the left hand. A Seat being left void above him, as for Canterburies Seat. Duke of Suffolk, Duke of Norfolk, Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, ſeat themſelves in Order on each ſide. Cromwell at lower end, as Secretary.

Chan. Speak to the buſineſs, Mr. Secretary;
Why are we met in Councel?
Crom. Pleaſe your Honours,
The chief cauſe concerns his Grace of Canterbury.
Gard. Ha's he had knowledge of it?
Crom. Yes.
Norf. Who waits there?
Keep. Without my Noble Lords.
Gard. Yes.
Keep. My Lord Archbiſhop:
And ha's done half an hour to know your pleaſures.
Chan. Let him come in.
Keep. Your Grace may enter now.

Cranmer approaches the Councel Table.

Chan. My good Lord Archbiſhop, I'm very ſorry
To ſit here at this preſent, and behold
That Chair ſtand empty: But we all are men
In our own natures frail, and capable
Of our fleſh, few are Angels; out of which frailty
And want of wiſdome, you that beſt ſhould teach us,
Have miſdemean'd your ſelf, and not a little:
Toward the King firſt, then his Lawes, in filling
The whole Realm, by your teaching and your Chaplains
(For ſo we are inform'd) with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous; which are Hereſies;
And not reform'd, may prove pernicious.
Gard. Which Reformation muſt be ſudden too
My Noble Lords, for thoſe that tame wild Horſes,
Pace'em not in their hands to make'em gentle;
But ſtop their mouthes with ſtubborn Bits and ſpurre'em,
'Till they obey the manage. If we ſuffer
Out of our eaſineſs and childiſh pitie
To one man's Honour, this contagious ſickneſs;
Farewell all Phyſick: and what follows then?
Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole State: of late dayes our neighbours,
The upper Germany can dearly witneſs:
Yet freſhly pitied in our memories.
Cran. My good Lords; Hitherto, in all the Progreſs
Both of my Life and Office, I have labour'd,
And with no little ſtudy, that my teaching
And the ſtrong courſe of my Authority,
Might go one way, and ſafely; and the end
Was ever to do well: nor is there living,
(I ſpeak it with a ſingle heart my Lords)
A man that more deteſts, more ſtirres againſt,
Both in his private Conſcience, and his place,
Defacers of a publick Peace then I do:
Pray Heaven the King may never find a heart
With leſs Allegiance in it. Men that make
Envy, and crooked malice, nouriſhment;
Dare bite the beſt. I do beſeech your Lordſhips,
That in this caſe of Juſtice, my Accuſers,
Be what they will, may ſtand forth face to face,
And freely urge againſt me.
Suff. Nay, my Lord,
That cannot be; you are a Counſellor,
And by that virtue no man dare accuſe you.
Gard. My Lord, becauſe we have buſineſs of more moment,
We will be ſhort with you. 'Tis his Highneſs pleaſure
And our conſent, for better tryal of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower,
Where being but a private man again,
You ſhall know many dare accuſe you boldly,
More then (I fear) you are provided for.
Cran. Ah my good Lord of Winchester: I thank you,
You are alwayes my good Friend, if your will paſs,
I ſhall both find your Lordſhip, Judge and Juror;
You are ſo mercifull. I ſee your end,
'Tis my undoing. Love and meekneſs, Lord
Become a Churchman better then Ambition:
Win ſtraying Soules with modeſty again,
Caſt none away. That I ſhall clear my ſelf,
Lay all the waight ye can upon my patience,
I make a little doubt as you do conſcience,
In doing daily wrongs. I could ſay more,
But reverence to your calling, makes me modeſt.
Gard. My Lord, my Lord, you are a Sectary,
That's the plain truth; your painted gloſs diſcovers
To men that underſtand you, words and weakneſs.
Crom. My Lord of Winchester, y'are a little,
By your good favour, too ſharp; Men ſo Noble,
However faulty, yet ſhould find reſpect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.
Gard. Good Mr. Secretary,
I cry your Honour mercy; you may worſt
Of all this table ſay ſo.
Crom. Why my Lord?
Gard. Do not I know you for a Favourer
Of this new Sect? ye are not ſound.
Crom. Not ſound?
Gard. Not ſound I ſay.
Crom. Would you were half ſo honeſt:
Men's prayers then would ſeek you, not their fears.
Gard. I ſhall remember this bold Language.
Crom. Do.
Remember your bold life too.
Cham. This is too much.
Forbear for ſhame my Lords.
Gard. I have done.
Crom. And I.
Cham. Then thus for you my Lord, it ſtands agreed,
I take it, by all voices: that forthwith,
You be convey'd to th' Tower a Priſoner;
There to remain till the Kings further pleaſure
Be known unto us; are you all agreed Lords.

All

All. We are.
Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I muſt needs to th'Tower my Lords?
Gard. What other,
Would you expect? You are ſtrangely troubleſome:
Let ſome o'th'Guard be ready there.
Enter the Guard.
Cran. For me?
Muſt I go like a Traitor thither?
Gard. Receive him,
And ſee him ſafe i'th'Tower.
Cran. Stay good my Lords,
I have a little yet to ſay. Look there my Lords,
By virtue of that Ring, I take my cauſe
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it
To a moſt Noble Judge, the King my Maſter.
Cham. This is the King's Ring.
Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.
Suff. 'Tis his right Ring, by Heav'n: I told ye all,
When we firſt put this dangerous ſtone a rowling,
'Twould fall upon our ſelves.
Norf. Do you think my Lords
The King will ſuffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?
Cham. 'Tis now too certain,
How much more is his Life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on't.
Crom. My mind gave me,
In ſeeking tales and Informations
Againſt this man, whoſe honeſty the Devil
And his diſciples only envy at,
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye.

Enter King frowning on them, takes his Seat.
Gard. Dread Soveraign.
How much are we bound to Heaven,
In daily thanks; that gave us ſuch a Prince;
Not only good and wiſe, but moſt Religious:
One that in all obedience, makes the Church
The chief aime of his Honour, and to ſtrengthen
That holy duty of our dear reſpect,
His Royal ſelf in Judgement comes to hear
The cauſe betwixt her, and this great offender.
King. You were ever good at ſudden Commendations
Biſhop of Wincheſter. But know I come not
To hear ſuch flattery now, and in my preſence,
They are too thin, and baſe to hide offences,
To me you cannot reach. You play the Spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win me:
But whatſoe're thou tak'ſt me for; I'm ſure
Thou haſt a cruel Nature and a bloudy.
Good man ſit down: Now let me ſee the proudeſt
He, that dares moſt, but wag his finger at thee.
By all that's holy, he had better ſtarve,
Then but once think his place becomes thee not.
Sur. May it pleaſe your Grace,------
King. No Sir, it doe's not pleaſe me,
I had thought, I had had men of ſome underſtanding,
And wiſedome of my Councel; but I find none:
Was it diſcretion Lords, to let this man,
This good man (few of you deſerve the title)
This honeſt man, wait like a lowſie Foot-boy
At Chamber door? and one, as great as you are?
Why, what a ſhame was this? Did my Commiſſion
Bid ye ſo far forget your ſelves? I gave ye
Power, as he was a Counſellour to try him,
Not as a Groom: there's ſome of ye, I ſee,
More out of Malice then Integrity,
Would try him to the utmoſt, had ye mean,
Which ye ſhall never have while I do live.
Cham. Thus far
My moſt dread Soveraign, may it like your Grace,
To let my tongue excuſe all. What was purpos'd
Concerning his Impriſonment, was rather
(If there be faith in men) meant for his tryal,
And fair purgation to the world then malice,
I'm ſure in me.
King. Well, well my Lords reſpect him,
Take him, and uſe him well, he's worthy of it.
I will ſay thus much for him, if a Prince
May be beholding to a Subject; I
Am for his love and ſervice, ſo to him.
Make me no more adoe, but all embrace him;
Be friends for ſhame my Lords: My Lord of Canterbury
I have a Suite which you muſt not deny me.
That is, a fair young Maid that yet wants Baptiſme,
You muſt be Godfather, and anſwer for her.
Cran. The greateſt Monarch now alive may glory
In ſuch an honour: how may I deſerve it,
That am a poor and humble Subject to you?
King. Come, come my Lord, you'd ſpare your ſpoons:
You ſhall have two Noble Partners with you: the old
Ducheſs of Norfolk, and Lady Marqueſs of Dorſet?
Will theſe pleaſe you?
Once more my Lord of Wincheſter, I charge you
Embrace, and love this man.
Gard. With a true heart,
And Brothers love I do it.
Cran. And let Heaven
Witneſs how dear, I hold this Confirmation.
King. Good Man, thoſe joyfull teares ſhew thy true heart,
The common voice I ſee is verified.
Of thee, which ſayes thus: Do my Lord of Canterbury
A ſhrewd turn, and he's your friend for ever:
Come Lords, we trifle time away: I long
To have this young one made a Chriſtian.
As I have made ye one Lords, one remain:
So I grow ſtronger, you more Honour gain. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Noiſe and Tumult within: Enter Porter and his man.

Port. You'll leave your noiſe anon ye Raſcals: do you take the Court for Pariſh Garden: ye rude Slaves, leave your gaping.
Within. Good Mr. Porter I belong to th'Larder.
Por. Belong to th'Gallows, and be hang'd ye Rogue, Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-tree ſtaves, and ſtrong ones; theſe are but ſwitches to 'em: I'le ſcratch your heads; you muſt be ſeeing Chriſtenings? Do you look for Ale, and Cakes here, you rude Raſcalls?
Man. Pray Sir be patient; 'tis as much impoſſible, Unleſs we ſwept them from the door with Cannons, To ſcatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em ſleep On May-day Morning, which will never be: We may as well puſh againſt Poule's as ſtir 'em.
Por. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man.

Man. Alas I know not, how gets the Tide in?
As much as one found Cudgel of four foot,
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare Sir
Port. You did nothing Sir.
Man. I am not Sampson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colebrand,
To mow'em down before me: but if I spar'd any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, Cuckold or Cuckold-maker;
Let me ne're hope to see a Chine again,
And that I would not for a Cow, God save her,
With. Do you hear, Mr. Porter?
Port. I shall be with you presently, good Mr. Puppy.
Keep the door close Sirrha.
Man. What would you have me do?
Por. What should you do,
But knock 'em down by th' dozens? Is this Moor-fields to muster in? Or have we some strange Indian with the great Toole, come to Court, the women so besiege us? Bless me! what a fry of Fonication is at the door? On my Christian Conscience this one Christening will beget a thousand, here will be Father, God-father, and all together.
Man. The Spoons will be the bigger Sir: there is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a Brasier by his face, for o' my conscience twenty of the Dog-dayes now reign in's Nose; all that stand about him are under the Line, they need no other penance: that Fire-Drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his Nose discharged against me; he stands there like a Morter-piece to blow us up. There was a Habberdasher's Wife of small Wit, near him, that rail'd upon me, till her pinck'd porrenger fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the State. I mist the Meteor once, and hit that Woman, who cryed out Clubbs, when I might see from far, some fourty Truncheons draw to her succour, which were the hope o' th' Strond where she was quartered; they fell on, I made good my place; at length they came to th' broom-staff to me, I defi'de 'em still, when suddenly a File of Boyes behind 'em, loose shot, deliver'd such a shower of Pibbles, that I was fain to draw mine Honour in, and let 'em winne the Work, the Devil was amongst 'em I think surely.
Por. These are the youths that thunder at a Play-house, and fight for bitten Apples, that no Audience but the tribulation of Tower-Hill, or the Limbs of Lime-House, their dear Brothers are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three dayes; besides the running Banquet of two Beadles, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chamberlain.

L. Cham. Mercy o' me: what a Multitude are here?
They grow still too; from all Parts they are coming,
As if we kept a Fair here? Where are these Porters?
These lazy knaves? Y' have made a fine hand fellows?
There's a trim rabble let in: are all these
Your faithfull friends o'th' Suburbs? We shall have Great store of room no doubt, left for the Ladies,
When they pass back from the Christening?
Por. And't please your Honour,
We are but men, and what so many may doe,
Not being torn a pieces, we have done:
An Army cannot rule 'em.
Cham. As I live,
If the King blame me for't; I'le lay ye all
By th' heels, and suddenly: and on your heads
Clap round Fines for neglect: y'are lazy knaves,
And here ye lye baiting of Bombards, when
Ye should do Service. Harke the Trumpets sound,
Th'are come already from the Christening,
Go break among the preass, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly; or I'le find
A Marshalsey, shall hold ye play these two Moneths.
Por. Make way there, for the Princess.
Man. You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'le make your head ake.
Por. You i'th' Chamblet, get up o'th' raile,
I'le peck you o're the pales else. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Trumpets sounding: Then two Aldermen, L. Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk with his Marshall's Staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noble men, bearing great standing Bowls for the Christening Gifts: Then four Noble men bearing a Canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, God-mother, bearing the Child richly habited in a Mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady: The follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other God-mother, and Ladies. The Troop pass once about the Stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven
From thy endless Goodness, send prosperous life,
Long, and ever happy, to the high and Mighty
Princess of England, Elizabeth.

Flourish. Enter King and Guard.

Cran. And to your Royal Grace, and the good Queen,
My Noble Partners, and my self thus pray
All comfort, joy in this most gracious Lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make Parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye.
King. Thank you good Lord Arch-bishop;
What is her Name?
Cran. Elizabeth.
King. Stand up Lord,
With this Kiss, take my Blessing: God protect thee,
Into whose hand, I give thy Life.
Cran. Amen.
King. My Noble Gossips, y'have been too Prodigal,
I thank ye heartily: So shall this Lady,
When she has so much English.
Cran. Let me speak Sir,
For Heaven now bids me; and the words I utter,
Let none think Flattery; for they'll find 'em Truth.
This Royal Infant, Heaven still move about her,
Though in her Cradle; yet now promises
Upon this Land a thousand thousand Blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be,
(But few now living can behold that goodness)
A Pattern to all Princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never
More covetous of Wisdome, and fair Virtue
Then this pure Soul shall be. All Princely Graces
That mould up a mighty Piece as this is,
With all the Virtues that attend the Good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall Nurse her,

Holy

Holy and heavenly thoughts ſtill Counſel her:
She ſhall be lov'd and fear'd. Her own ſhall bleſs her;
Her Foes ſhake like a Field of beaten Corn,
And hang their heads with ſorrow:
Good growes with her.
In her dayes, Every Man ſhall eat in ſafety,
Under his own Vine what he plants; and ſing
The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours.
God ſhall be truly known, and thoſe about her,
From her ſhall read the perfect way of honour,
And by thoſe claim their Greatneſs; not by Bloud.
Nor ſhall this peace ſleep with her: But as when
The Bird of Wonder dyes, the Maiden Phœnix,
Her aſhes new create another heir,
As great in admiration as her ſelf.
So ſhall ſhe leave her Bleſſedneſs to One,
(When Heaven ſhall call her from this cloud of darkneſs)
Who, from the ſacred Aſhes of her honour
Shall Star-like riſe, as great in fame as ſhe was,
And ſo ſtand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Love, Truth, Terrour,
That were the Servants to this choſen Infant,
Shall then be his, and like a Vine grow to him;
Where ever the bright Sun of heaven ſhall ſhine,
His honour, and the greatneſs of his name,
Shall be, and make new Nations. He ſhall flouriſh,
And like a Mountain Cedar, reach his branches,
To all the Plains about him: Our Children's Children
Shall ſee this, and bleſs Heaven.

King. Thou ſpeakeſt wonders.

Cran. She ſhall be, to the happineſs of England,
An aged Princeſs; many dayes ſhall ſee her,
And yet no day without a deed to Crown it.
Would I had known no more: But ſhe muſt dye,
She muſt, the Saints muſt have her; yet a Virgin,
A moſt unſpotted Lilly ſhall ſhe paſs
To th'ground, and all the world ſhall mourn her.

King. O Lord Archbiſhop
Thou haſt made me now a man: never, before
This happy Child, did I get any thing.
This Oracle of comfort, has ſo pleas'd me,
That when I am in heaven, I ſhall deſire
To ſee what this child does, and praiſe my Maker,
I thank ye all. To you my good Lord Mayor,
And you good Brethren, I am much beholding:
I have receiv'd much honour by your preſence,
And ye ſhall find me thankfull. Lead the way Lords,
Ye muſt all ſee the Queen, and ſhe muſt thank ye.
She will be ſick elſe. This day, no man think
'Has buſineſs at his houſe; for all ſhall ſtay:
This little-One ſhall make it Holy-day. Exeunt.

The Epilogue.

'Tis ten to one, this Play can never pleaſe
All that are here: Some come to take their eaſe,
And ſleep out an Act or two; but thoſe we feare
We have affrighted with our Trumpets: ſo 'tis clear,
They'll ſay it's naught. Others to hear the City
Abus'd extremely, and to cry that's witty,
Which we have not done neither; that I fear
All the expected good w'are like to hear,
For this Play at this time, is only in
The mercifull conſtruction of good Women;
For ſuch a one we ſhew'd 'em: If they ſmile,
And ſay 'twill doe; I know within a while,
All the beſt men are ours; for 'tis ill hap,
If they hold, when their Ladies bid 'em clap.

FINIS.

THE PROLOGUE.

IN Troy there lies the Scæne: from Iles of Greece
The Princes Orgillous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the Port of Athens sent their ships
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel Warr: Sixty and nine that wore
Their Crownets Regal, from th'Athenian Bay
Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made
To ransack Troy, within whose strong Immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus Queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps, and that's the Quarrel.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing Barks do there disgorge
Their Warlike frautage: now on Dardan Plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave Pavillions. Priams six-gated City,
Dardan, and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenonidus with massy Staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling Bolts
Stirr up the Sons of Troy.
Now Expectation tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Troian and Greek,
Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come,
A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of Authors pen, or Actors voice; but suited
In like conditions, as our Argument;
To tell you (fair Beholders) that our Play
Leaps ore the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle: starting thence away,
To what may be digested in a Play:
Like, or find fault, do as your pleasures are,
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warr.

THE TRAGEDY OF
Troilus and Creſsida,

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus.

Troilus.

CAll here my Varlet, Ile unarm again.
Why ſhould I warr without the walls of Troy
That find ſuch cruel battel here within?
Each Troian that is maſter of his heart,
Let him to field, Troilus alas hath none.

Pan. Will this geer ne'r be mended? (ſtrength,

Troi. The Greeks are ſtrong, and ſkilful to their
Feirce to their skill, and to their feirceneſs Valiant:
But I am weaker than a womans tear:
Tamer than ſleep, fonder than ignorance;
Leſs valiant than the Virgin in the night,
And skilleſs as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: For my part, Ile not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a Cake out of the Wheat, muſt needs tarry the grinding.

Troi. Have I not tarried?

Pan. I the grinding; but you muſt tarry the boulting.

Troi. Have I not tarried?

Pan. I the boulting; but you muſt tarry the leav'ning.

Troi. Still have I tarried.

Pan. I, to the leavening: but heres yet in the word hereafter, the Kneading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Oven, and the Baking; nay, you muſt ſtay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Troi. Patience her ſelf, what Goddeſs ere ſhe be,
Doth leſſer blench at ſufferance, than I do:
At Priams Royal Table I ſit;
And when fair Creſſid comes into my thoughts,
So (Traitor) then ſhe comes, when ſhe is thence—

Pan. Well:
She look'd yeſternight fairer, than ever I ſaw her look,
Or any woman elſe.

Troi. I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As wedged with a ſigh, would rive in twain,
Leſt Hector, or my father ſhould perceive me:
I have (as when the Sun doth light a-ſcorn)
Buried this ſigh, in wrinkle of a ſmile:
But ſorrow, that is couch'd in ſeeming gladneſs,
Is like that mirth, Fate turns to ſudden ſadneſs.

Pan. And her hair were not ſomewhat darker than Helens, well go to, there were no more compariſon between the Women. But for my part ſhe is my Kinſwoman, I would not (as they tearm it) praiſe it, but I would ſome-body had heard her talk yeſterday as I did: I will not diſpraiſe your ſiſter Caſſandra's wit, but——

Troi. O Pandarus! I tell thee Pandarus;
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lye drown'd:
Reply not in how many Fadomes deep
They lye indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad in Creſſids love. Thou anſwer'ſt ſhe is Fair,
Powr'ſt in the open Ulcer of my heart,
Her Eyes, her Hair, her Cheek, her Gate, her Voice,
Handleſt in thy diſcourſe. O that her Hand
(In whoſe compariſon, all whites are Ink
Writing their own reproach) to whoſe ſoft ſeizure,
The Cignets Down is harſh, and ſpirit of Senſe
Hard as the Palm of Ploughman. This thou tell'ſt me;
As true thou tell'ſt me, when I ſay I love her:
But ſaying thus, inſtead of Oyl and Balm,
Thou lai'ſt in every gaſh that love hath given me,
The Knife that made it.

Pan. I ſpeak no more than truth.

Troi. Thou do'ſt not ſpeak ſo much.

Pan. Faith, Ile not meddle in't. Let her be as ſhe is, if ſhe be fair, 'tis the better for her: and ſhe be not, ſhe ha's the mends in her own hands.

Troi. Good Pandarus; How now Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my labour for my travel, ill thought on of her, and ill thought on of you: Gone between and between, but ſmall thanks for my labour.

Troi. What art thou angry Pandarus? what with me?

Pan. Becauſe ſhe is Kin to me, therefore ſhe's not ſo fair as Helen, and ſhe were not Kin to me, ſhe would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and ſhe were a Black-a-Moor, 'tis all one to me.

Troi. Say I ſhe is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a Fool to ſtay behind her Father: Let her to the Greeks, and ſo Ile tell her the next time I ſee her: for my part, Ile meddle nor make no more i'th' matter.

Troi. Pandarus?

Pan. Not I.

Troi. Sweet Pandarus.

Pan. Pray you ſpeak no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there's an end Exit Pand.

Sound Alarum

Troi. Peace you ungracious Clamors, peace rude ſounds,
Fools on both ſides, Helen muſt needs be fair,
When with your blood, you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this Argument:
It is too ſtarv'd a ſubject for my Sword,
But Pandarus: O gods! How do you plague me?
I cannot come to Creſſid but by Pandar,
And he's as teachy to be woo'd to woe,
As ſhe is ſtubborn, chaſt, againſt all ſute.
Tell me Apollo for thy Daphnes Love
What Creſſid is, what Pandar, and what we:
Her bed is India, there ſhe lyes, a Pearl,
Between our Ilium, and where ſhe reſides
Let it be call'd the mild and wandring flood,
Our ſelf the Merchant, and this ſayling Pandar,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our Bark.

Alarum. Enter Æneas.

Æne. How now Prince Troilus?
Wherefore not afield?

Troi. Becauſe not there; this womans anſwer ſorts,
For womaniſh it is to be from thence:
What news Æneas from the field to day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Troi. By whom Æneas?

Æne. Troilus by Menelaus.

Troi. Let Paris bleed, 'tis but a ſcar to ſcorn.
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus horn. Alarum.

Æne. Heark what good ſport is out of town to day.

Troi. Better at home, if would I might were may;
But to the ſport abroad, are you bound thither?

Æne. In all ſwift haſt.

Troi. Come go we then together. Exeunt.

Enter Creſſid and her man.

Cre. Who were thoſe went by?

Man. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cre. And whither go they?

Man. Up to the Eaſtern Tower,
Whoſe height commands as ſubject all the vale,
To ſee the battel; Hector whoſe patience,
Is as a Virtue fixt, to day was mov'd:
He chides Andromache, and ſtrook his Armorer,
And like as there were husbandry in Warr
Before the Sun roſe, he was harneſt light,
And to the field goes he; where every flower
Did as a Prophet weep what it foreſaw,
In Hector's wrath.

Cre. What was his cauſe of anger?

Man. The noiſe goes this;
There is among the Greeks,
A Lord of Troian blood, Nephew to Hector.
They call him Ajax.

Cre. Good; and what of him?

Man. They ſay he is a very man per ſe and ſtands alone.

Cre. So do all men, unleſs they are drunk, ſick, or have no legs.

Man. This man, Lady, hath robb'd many beaſts of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lion, churliſh as the Bear, ſlow as the Elephant: a man into whom nature hath ſo crowded humors, that his valour is cruſht into folly, his folly ſauced with diſcretion: there is no man hath a virtue, that he hath not a glimpſe of, nor any man an attaint but he carries ſome ſtain of it. He is melancholy without cauſe, and merry againſt the hair, he hath the joynts of every thing, but every thing ſo out of joynt, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no uſe; or purblinded Argus, all eyes and no ſight.

Cre. But how ſhould this man that makes me ſmile, make Hector angry?

Man. They ſay he yeſterday cop'd Hector in the battel and ſtrook him down, the diſdain and ſhame whereof, hath ever ſince kept Hector faſting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cre. Who comes here?

Man. Madam, your Uncle Pandarus.

Cre. Hector's a gallant man.

Man. As may be in the world Lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cre. Good morrow Uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow Cozen Creſſid: what do you talk of? good morrow Alexander: how do you Cozen? when were you at Ilium?

Cre. This morning Uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? VVas Hector arm'd and gone ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up? was ſhe?

Cre. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'ne ſo; Hector was ſtirring early.

Cre. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cre. So he ſayes here.

Pan. True he was ſo; I know the cauſe too, he'l lay about him to day I can tell them that, and there's Troilus will not come farr behind him, let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cre. What is he angry too?

Pan. Who Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cre. Oh Jupiter; there's no compariſon.

Pan. What not between Troilus and Hector? do you know a man if you ſee him?

Cre. I, if I ever ſaw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well I ſay Troilus is Troilus.

Cre. Then you ſay as I ſay,
For I am ſure he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in ſome degrees.

Cre. 'Tis juſt, to each of them he is himſelf.

Pan. Himſelf? alas poor Troilus I would he were.

Cre. So he is.

Pan. Condition I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cre. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himſelf? no? he's not himſelf, would a were himſelf; well, the gods are above, time muſt friend or end: well Troilus well, I would my heart were in her body; no, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cre. Excuſe me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cre. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th'others not come too't, you ſhall tell me another tale when th'others come too't: Hector ſhall not have his will this year.

Cre. He ſhall not need it if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cre. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cre. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgement Neece; Helen her ſelf ſwore th'other day, that Troilus for a brown favour (for ſo 'tis I muſt confeſs) not brown neither.

Cre. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith to ſay truth, brown and not brown

Cre. To ſay the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cre. VVhy Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cre. Then Troilus ſhould have too much, if ſhe prais'd him him above, his complexion is higher than his, he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lieve Helens golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you,
I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cre. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay I am sure she does, she came to him th'other day into the compast window, and you know he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cre. Indeed a Tapsters Arithmetique may soon bring his particulars therein, to a total.

Pand. Why he is very young, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cre. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him, she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin.

Cre. Juno have mercy, how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know 'tis dimpled,
I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrigia.

Cre. Oh he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cre. Oh yes, and 'twere a clow'd in Autumn.

Pan. Why go to then, but to prove to you that Hellen loves Troilus.

Cre. Troilus will stand to the
Proof, if you'l prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cre. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i'th'shell.

Pan. I cannot chuse but laugh to think how she tickled his chin, indeed she has a marvel's white hand I must needs confess.

Cre. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spye a white hair on his chin.

Cre. Alas poor chin? many a wart is richer.

Pand. But there was such laughing, Queen Hecuba laught that her eyes run ore.

Cre. With Milstones.

Pan. And Cassandra laught.

Cre. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run ore too?

Pan. And Hector laught.

Cre. At what was all this laughing?

Pand. Marry at the white hair that Hellen spied on Troilus chin.

Cre. And 'thad been a green hair, I should have laught too.

Pand. They laught not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cre. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin; and one of them is white.

Cre. This is her question.

Pand. That's true, make no question of that: two and fifty hairs quoth he, and one white, that white hair is my Father, and all the rest are his Sons. Jupiter quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? The forked one quoth he, pluck't out and give it him: but there was such laughing, and Helen so blusht, and Paris so chaft, and all the rest so laught, that it past.

Cre. So let it now,
For it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well Cozen,
I told you a thing yesterday, think on't.

Cre. So I do.

Pand. Ile be sworn 'tis true, he will weep you an 'twere a man born in April. Sound a retreat.

Cre. And Ile spring up in his tears, an'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Hark they are comming from the field, shall we stand up here and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good Neece do, sweet Neece Cressida.

Cre. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place, here we may see most bravely, Ile tell you them all by their names, as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Enter Æneas.

Cre. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Æneas, is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy I can tell you, but mark Troilus, you shall see anon.

Cre. Who's that? Enter Antenor.

Pan. That's Antenor, he has a shrew'd wit I can tell you, and he's a man good enough, he's one o'th' soundest judgment in Troy whosoever, and a proper man of person: when comes Troilus? Ile shew you Troilus anon, if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cre. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cre. If he do, the rich shall have more.

Enter Hector.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that there's a fellow. Go thy way Hector, there's a brave man Neece, O brave Hector! Look how he looks? there's a countenance; is't not a brave man?

Cre. O brave man!

Pan. Is a not? It does a mans heart good, look you what hacks are on his Helmet, look you yonder, do you see? Look you there? There's no jesting, laying on, tak't off who will, as they say, there be hacks.

Cre. Be those with swords?

Enter Paris.

Pan. Swords, any thing he cares not, and the Devil come to him, it's all one, by God-lid it does ones heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder Neece, is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why this is brave now: who said he came hurt home to day? He's not hurt, why this will do Helens heart good now, ha? Would I could see Troilus now, you shall see Troilus anon.

Cre. Whose that?

Enter Helenus.

Pan. That's Hellenus, I marvel where Troilus is, that's Helenus, I think he went not forth to day: that's Helenus.

Cre. Can Helenus fight Uncle?

Pan. Helenus no: yes he'l fight indifferent well, I marvel where Troilus is; hark, do you not hear the people cry Troilus? Helenus is a Priest.

Cre. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Where? Yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! There's a man Neece, hem; Brave Troilus the Prince of Chivalry.

Cre. Peace, for shame peace.

Pand. Mark him, note him: O brave Troilus: look well upon him Neece, look you how his Sword is bloudied, and his Helm more hackt than Hectors, and how he looks looks, and how he goes, O admirable youth! he ne'r ſaw three and twenty. Goe thy way Troilus, go thy way, had I a ſiſter were a Grace, or a daughter a Goddeſs, he ſhould take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is durt to him, and I warrant, Hellen to change, would give money to boot.

Enter common Souldiers.

Cre. Here come more.

Pan. Aſſes, fools, dolts, chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat. I could live and dye i'th' eyes of Troilus. Ne'r look, ne'r look; the Eagles are gone, Crows and Daws, Crows and Daws: I had rather be ſuch a man as Troilus, then Agamemnon, and all Greece.

Creſ. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a Dray-man, a Porter, a very Camel.

Cre. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well? Why have you any diſcretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good ſhape, diſcourſe, manhood, learning, gentleneſs, virtue, youth, liberality, and ſo forth, the Spice, and ſalt that ſeaſons a man?

Cre. I, a minc'd man, and then to be bak'd with no Date in the pye, for then the mans dates out.

Pan. You are ſuch another woman, one knows not at what ward you lie.

Creſ. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my ſecrecie, to defend mine honeſty; my Mask, to defend my beauty, and you to defend all theſe: and at all theſe wards I lie, at a thouſand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cre. Nay Ile watch you for that, and that's one of the chiefeſt of them too; if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unleſs it ſwell paſt hiding, and then is paſt watching.

Enter Boy.

Pan. You are ſuch another.

Boy. Sir, my Lord would inſtantly ſpeak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own houſe.

Pan. Good Boy tell him I come, I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well good Neece.

Creſ. Adieu Unkle.

Pan. Ile be with you Neece by and by.

Creſ. To bring Unkle.

Pan. I, a token from Troilus.

Creſ. By the ſame token, you are a Bawd. Exit Pand.
Words, vows, gifts, tears, and loves full ſacrifice,
He offers in anothers enterpriſe:
But more in Troilus thouſand fold I ſee,
Than in the glaſs of Pandar's praiſe may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are Angels wooing,
Things won are done, the ſouls joy lyes in doing:
That ſhe belov'd, knows nought, that knows not this:
Men prize the thing ungain'd, more than it is.
That ſhe was never yet, that ever knew
Love go ſo ſweet, as when deſire did ſue:
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach;
"Atchievment, is command: ungain'd, beſeech.
That though my hearts Contents firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that ſhall from mine eyes appear. Exit.

Sonet. Enter Agamemnon, Neſtor, Ulyſſes, Diomedes, Menelaus, with others.

Agam. Princes:
What grief hath ſet the Jaundies on your cheeks?
The ample propoſition that hopes makes
In all deſigns, begun on Earth below
Fails in the promiſt largeneſs: checks and diſaſters
Grow in the veins of actions higheſt rear'd.
As knots by the conflux of meeting ſap,
Infect the ſound Pine, and diverts his Grain
Tortive and errant from his courſe of growth.
Nor Princes, is it matter new to us,
That we come ſhort of our ſuppoſe ſo farr,
That after ſeven years ſiege, yet Troy walls ſtand,
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have Record, tryal did draw
Bias and thwart, not anſwering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gave't ſurmiſed ſhape. Why then (you Princes)
Do you with cheeks abaſh'd, behold our works,
And think them ſhame, which are (indeed) nought elſe
But the protractive trials of great Jove,
To find perſiſtive conſtancy in men?
The fineneſs of which Metal is not found
In Fortunes love: for then, the Bold and Coward,
The Wiſe and Fool, the Artiſt and un-read,
The hard and ſoft, ſeem all affin'd, and kin.
But in the Wind and Tempeſt of her frown,
Diſtinction with a loud and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath maſs, or matter by it ſelf,
Lies rich in Virtue, and unmingled.

Neſt. With due obſervance of thy godly ſeat,
Great Agamemnon, Neſtor ſhall apply
Thy lateſt words.
In the reproof of Chance,
Lies the true proof of men: The Sea being ſmooth,
How many ſhallow bauble Boats dare ſail
Upon her patient breaſt, making their way
With thoſe of noble bulk?
But let the Ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
The ſtrong ribb'd Bark, through liquid mountains cuts
Bounding between the two moiſt Elements
Like Perſeus Horſe. Where's then the ſawcy Boat,
Whoſe weak untimber'd ſides but even now
Co-rival'd Greatneſs? Either to harbour fled,
Or made a Toſt for Neptune. Even ſo,
Doth valours ſhew, and valours worth divide
In ſtorms of Fortune.
For, in her ray and brightneſs,
The Herd hath more annoyance by the Brize
Than by the Tyger: But, when the ſplitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted Oaks,
And flyes fled under ſhade, why then
The thing of Courage,
As rowz'd with rage, with rage doth ſympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in ſelf-ſame key,
Retires to chiding Fortune.

Vlyſ. Agamemnon.
Thou great Commander, Nerve, and Bone of Greece,
Heart of our Numbers, ſoul, and only ſpirit,
In whom the tempers, and the minds of all
Should be ſhut up; Hear what Vlyſſes ſpeaks,
Beſides th'applauſe and approbation
The which (moſt mighty) for thy place and may,

And thou moſt reverend for thy ſtretcht-out life,
I give to both your ſpeeches: which were ſuch,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in Braſs: and ſuch again
As venerable Neſtor (hatch'd in Silver)
Should with a bond of ayr, ſtrong as the Axeltree
On which the Heavens ride, knit all Greeks ears
To his experienc'd tongue: yet let it pleaſe both (Thou Great, and Wiſe) to hear Vlyſſes ſpeak.
Aga. Speak Prince of Ithaca, and be't of leſs expect;
That matter needleſs of importleſs burthen
Divide thy lips: then we are confident
When rank Therſites opes his Maſtick jaws,
We ſhall hear Muſick, Wit, and Oracle.
Vlyſ. Troy yet upon his baſis had been down,
And the great Hectors ſword had lack'd a Maſter
But for theſe inſtances.
The ſpeciality of Rule hath been neglected;
And look how many Grecian Tents do ſtand
Hollow upon this Plain, ſo many hollow Factions.
When that the General is not like the Hive,
To whom the Forragers ſhall all repair,
What Hony is expected? Degree being vizarded,
Th' unworthieſt ſhews as fairly in the Mask.
The Heavens themſelves, the Planets, and this Centre,
Obſerve degree, priority, and place,
Inſiſture, courſe, proportion, ſeaſon, form,
Office, and cuſtom, in all line of Order:
And therefore is the glorious Planet Sol
In noble eminence, enthron'd and ſphear'd
Amidſt the other, whoſe med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill Aſpects of Planets evil,
And poſts like the Command'ment of a King,
Sans check, to good and bad. But when the Planets
In evil mixture to diſorder wander,
What Plagues, and what portents, what mutiny?
What raging of the Sea? ſhaking of Earth?
Commotion in the Winds? Frights, changes, horrors,
Divert, and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity, and married calm of States
Quite from their fixture? O, when degree is ſhak'd,
(Which is the Ladder to all high deſigns)
The enterprize is ſick. How could Communities,
Degrees in Schools, and brother-hoods in Cities,
Peaceful Commerce from dividable ſhores,
The Primogenitive, and due of Birth,
Prerogative of Age, Crowns, Scepters, Lawrels,
(But by degree) ſtand in Authentique place?
Take but degree away, un-tune that ſtring,
And hark what Diſcord follows: each thing meets
In meer oppugnancy. The bounded Waters,
Should lift their boſomes higher than the Shores,
And make a ſopp of all this ſolid Globe:
Strength ſhould be Lord of imbecillity,
And the rude Son ſhould ſtrike his father dead:
Force ſhould be right, or rather, right and wrong,
(Between whoſe endleſs jarr, juſtice reſides)
Should loſe their names, and ſo ſhould juſtice too.
Then every thing includes it ſelf in Power,
Power into Will, Will into Appetite,
And Appetite (an univerſal Wolf,
So doubly ſeconded with Will, and Power)
Muſt make perforce an univerſal prey,
And laſt, eat up himſelf.
Great Agamemnon;
This Chaos, when degree is ſuffocate,
Follows the choaking:
And this neglection of Degree, is it
That by a pace goes backward in a purpoſe
It hath to climb. The General's diſdain'd
By him one ſtep below; he, by the next,
That next, by him beneath: ſo every ſtep
Exampled by the firſt pace that is ſick
Of his Superiour, grows to an envious Feaver
Of pale, and bloodleſs Emulation.
And 'tis this Feaver that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own ſinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakneſs lives, not in her ſtrength.
Neſt. Moſt wiſely hath Vlyſſes here diſcover'd
The Feaver, whereof all our power is ſick.
Aga. The Nature of the ſickneſs found (Vlyſſes)
What is the remedy?
Vlyſſ. The great Achilles, whom Opinion crowns
The ſinew, and the fore-hand of our Hoſt,
Having his ear full of his ayery Fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his Tent
Lies mocking our deſigns. With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy Bed, the live-long day
Breaks ſcurril Jeſts,
And with ridiculous and aukward action,
(Which, Slanderer, he imitation call's)
He Pageants us. Sometime great Agamemnon,
Thy topleſs deputation he puts on;
And like a ſtrutting Player, whoſe conceit
Lies in his Ham-ſtring, and doth think it rich
To hear the woodden Dialogue and ſound
'Twixt his ſtretcht footing, and the Scaffolage,
(Such to-be-pitted, and ore-reſted ſeeming
He acts thy Greatneſs in:) and when he ſpeaks,
'Tis like a Chime a mending. With tearms unſquar'd,
Which from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropt,
Would ſeem Hyperboles. At this fuſty ſtuff,
The large Achilles (on his preſt-bed lolling)
From his deep Cheſt, laughs out a lowd applauſe,
Cries excellent, 'tis Agamemnon juſt.
Now play me Neſtor; hum, and ſtroke thy beard
As he, being dreſt to ſome Oration,
That's done, as neer as the extremeſt ends
Of paralels; as like, as Vulcan and his wife,
Yet good Achilles ſtill cryes excellent,
'Tis Neſtor right. Now play him (me) Patroclus,
Arming to anſwer in a night-Alarm,
And then (forſooth) the faint defects of Age
Muſt be the Scene of mirth, to cough and ſpit,
And with a palſie fumbling on his Gorget,
Shake in and out the River: and at this ſport
Sir Valour dies; cries, O enough Patroclus,
Or, give me ribs of Steel, I ſhall ſplit all
In pleaſure of my ſpleen. And in this faſhion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, ſhapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Atchievments, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or ſpeech for truce,
Succeſs or loſs, what is, or is not, ſerves
As ſtuff for theſe two, to make paradoxes.
Neſt. And in the imitation of theſe twain,
Who (as Vlyſſes ſayes) Opinion crowns
With an Imperial voyce, many are infect:
Ajax is grown ſelf-will'd, and bears his head
In ſuch a reign, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles, and keeps his Tent like him;
Makes factious Feaſts, rails on our ſtate of Warr

Bold as an Oracle, and ſets Therſites
A ſlave (whoſe Gall coins ſlanders like a Mint,)
To match us in compariſons with durt,
To weaken and diſcredit our expoſure,
How rank ſoever rounded in with danger.
Vlyſ. They tax our Policy, and call it Cowardice,
Count Wiſdom as no member of the Warr,
Fore-ſtall preſcience, and eſteem no act
But that of hand: The ſtill and mental parts,
That do contrive how many hands ſhall ſtrike
When fitneſs calls them on, and know by meaſure
Of their obſervant toyl, the Enemies waight,
Why this hath not a fingers dignity:
They call this Bedwork, Mapp'ry, Cloſſet-Warr:
So that the Ramm that batters down the wall,
For the great ſwing and rudeneſs of his poize,
They place before his hand that made the Engine,
Or thoſe that with the fineneſs of their ſouls,
By Reaſon guide his execution.
Neſt. Let this be granted, and Achilles horſe
Makes many Thetis ſons. Tucket
Aga. What Trumpet? Look Menelaus.
Men. From Troy. Enter Æneas.
Aga. What would you 'fore our Tent?
Æne. Is this great Agamemnons Tent, I pray you?
Aga. Even this.
Æne. May one that is a Herald, and a Prince,
Do a fair meſſage to his Kingly ears?
Aga. With ſurety ſtronger than Achilles arm,
'Fore all the Greekiſh heads, which with one voyce
Call Agamemnon Head and General.
Æne. Fair leave, and large ſecurity. How may
A ſtranger to thoſe moſt Imperial looks,
Know them from eyes of other Mortals?
Aga. How?
Æne. I: I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And on the cheek be ready with a bluſh
Modeſt as morning, when ſhe coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus:
Which is that God in office guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?
Aga. This Troian ſcorns us, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious Courtiers.
Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonnair; unarm'd,
As bending Angels: that's their Fame, in peace:
But when they would ſeem Souldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, ſtrong joynts, true ſwords, and Joves accord
Nothing ſo full of heart. But peace Æneas,
Peace Troian, lay thy finger on thy lips,
The worthineſs of praiſe diſtains his worth,
If that he prais'd himſelf, bring the praiſe forth:
What the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows, that praiſe ſole pure tranſcends.
Aga. Sir, you of Troy, call you your ſelf Æneas?
Æne. I Greek, that is my name.
Aga. What's your affair I pray you?
Æne. Sir pardon, 'tis for Agamemnons ears.
Aga. He hears nought privately
That comes from Troy.
Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whiſper him,
I bring a Trumpet to awake his ear,
To ſet his ſenſe on the attentive bent,
And then to ſpeak.
Aga. Speak frankly as the wind,
It is not Agamemnons ſleeping hour;
That thou ſhalt know Troian he is awake,
He tells thee ſo himſelf.
Æne. Trumpet blow loud.
Send thy braſs voyce through all theſe lazy Tents,
And every Greek of metal, let him know,
What Troy means fairly, ſhall be ſpoke alowd.
The Trumpets ſound.
We have great Agamemnon, here in Troy,
A Prince call'd Hector, Priam is his Father:
Who in this dull and long continu'd Truce
Is ruſty grown, He bad me take a Trumpet,
And to this purpoſe ſpeak: Kings, Princes, Lords,
If there be one among'ſt the fayr'ſt of Greece,
That holds his Honor higher than his eaſe,
That ſeeks his praiſe, more than he fears his peril,
That knows his Valour, and knows not his Fear,
That loves his Miſtris more than in confeſſion,
(With truant vows to her own lips he loves)
And dare avow her Beauty, and her Worth,
In other arms than hers: to him this Challenge.
Hector, in view of Troians, and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his beſt to do it.
He hath a Lady, wiſer, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compaſs in his arms,
And will to morrow with his Trumpet call,
Midway between your Tents, and walls of Troy,
To rowze a Grecian that is true in love.
If any come, Hector ſhall honour him:
If none, he'l ſay in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian Dames are ſunburnt, and not worth
The ſplinter of a Lance: Even ſo much.
Aga. This ſhall be told our Lovers, Lord Æneas.
If none of them have ſoul in ſuch a kind,
We left them all at home: But we are Souldiers,
And may that Souldier a meer recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love;
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector, if none, Ile be he.
Neſ. Tell him of Neſtor, one that was a man
When Hectors Granſire ſuckt; he is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecian mould,
One Noble man, that hath one ſpark of fire
To anſwer for his Love; tell him from me,
Ile hide my Silver beard in a Gold Beaver,
And in my Vantbrace put this wither'd brawn,
And meeting him, will tell him, that my Lady
Was fairer than his Grandame, and as chaſt
As may be in the world: his youth in flood,
Ile pawn this truth with my three drops of blood.
Æne. Now heavens forbid ſuch ſcarcity of youth,
Vlyſ. Amen.
Aga. Fair Lord Æneas,
Let me touch your hand:
To our Pavillion ſhall I lead you firſt:
Achilles ſhall have word of this intent,
So ſhall each Lord of Grecee from Tent to Tent;
Your ſelf ſhall Feaſt with us before you goe,
And find the welcome of a Noble Foe. Exeunt.
Manent Ulyſſes, and Neſtor.
Ulyſ. Neſtor.
Neſ. What ſayes Ulyſſes?
Ulyſ. I have a young conception in my brain,
Be you my time to bring it to ſome ſhape.
Neſ. What is't?
Ulyſ. This 'tis:
Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the ſeeded Pride
That hath to this maturity blown up

In

In rank Achilles, must or now be cropt,
Or (shedding) breed a Nursery of like evil
To over-bulk us all.
Nest. Well, and how?
Vlyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
How ever it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.
Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grosness little characters sum up,
And in the publication make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, though (Apollo knows)
'Tis dry enough, will with great speed of judgement,
I, with celerity, find Hectors purpose
Pointing on him.
Vlyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?
Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet; whom may you else oppose
That can from Hector bring his Honor off,
If not Achilles; though't be a sportful Combate,
Yet in this tryal, much opinion dwels.
For here the Troians tast our deer'st repute
With their fin'st Palate: and trust to me Vlysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly poiz'd
In this wild action. For the success
(Although particular) shall give a scantling
Of good or bad, unto the General:
And in such Indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent Volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the Gyant-mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He that meets Hector, issues from our choice;
And choice being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes Merit her election, and doth boyl
As 'twere, from forth us all: a man distill'd
Out of our Virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart from hence receives the conq'ring part
To steel a strong opinion to themselves
Which entertain'd, Limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are Swords and Bows
Directive by the Limbs.
Vlyss. Give pardon to my speech:
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector:
Let us (like Merchants) shew our fowlest Wares,
And think perchance they'l sell: if not,
The lustre of the better yet to shew,
Shall shew the better. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet:
For both our Honour, and our Shame in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange Followers.
Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?
Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
(Were he not proud) we all should wear with him:
But he already is too insolent,
And we were better parch in Africk Sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he scape Hector fair. If he were foyld,
Why then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a Lott'ry,
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: Among our selves,
Give him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will physick the great Myrmidon
Who broyls in lowd applause, and make him fall
His Crest, that prowder than blew Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
Wee'l dress him up in voyces: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But hit or miss,
Our projects life this shape of sence assumes,
Ajax imploy'd, plucks down Achilles Plumes.
Nest. Now Ulysses, I begin to relish thy advice,
And I will give a tast of it forthwith
To Agamemnon, goe we to him straight;
Two Currs shall tame each other, Pride alone
Must tarr the Mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone, Exeunt.

Enter Ajax, and Therſites.

Aja. Therſites?
Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had Biles (full) all over generally.
Aja. Therſites?
Ther. And those Biles did run, say so; did not the General run, were not that a botchy core?
Aja. Dogg.
Ther. Then there would come some matter from him: I see none now.
Aja. Thou Bitch-Wolfs Son, canst thou not hear? Feel then. Strikes him.
Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee thou Mungrel beef-witted Lord.
Aja. Speak then you whinid'st leaven speak, I will beat thee into handsomness.
Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but I think thy horse will sooner con an Oration, than thou learn a prayer without book: Thou canst strike, canst thou? A red Murren o'thy Jades tricks.
Aja. Toads stool, learn me the Proclamation.
Ther. Doest thou think I have no sence thou strik'st me thus?
Aja. The Proclamation.
Ther. Thou art proclam'd a fool, I think.
Aja. Do not Porpentine, do not: my fingers itch.
Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee, I would make thee the lothsom'st scab in Greece.
Aja. I say the Proclamation.
Ther. Thou grumblest and raylest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty. I, that thou bark'st at him.
Aja. Mistress Therſites.
Ther. Thou should'st strike him.
Aja. Coblose.
Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a Sailor breaks a bisket.
Aja. You horsen Curr. Ther. Doe, doe.
Aja. Thou stool for a Witch.
Ther. I doe, doe, thou sodden-witted Lord: thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows: An Asinico may tutor thee. Thou scurvy valiant Ass, thou art here but to thresh Troians, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels thou.
Aja. You dogg.
Ther. You scurvy Lord.
Aja. You Curr.
Ther. Mars his Ideot: do rudeness, do Camel, do, do.

Enter Achilles, and Patroclus.

Achil. Why how now Ajax? wherefore do you this? How now Therſites? what's the matter man?
Ther. You see him there, do you?
Achil. I, what's the matter?
Ther. Nay look upon him.
Achil. So I do, what's the matter?

Ther.

Ther. Nay but regard him well.
Achil. Well, why I do ſo.
Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for whoſoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.
Achil. I know that fool.
Ther. I, but that fool knows not himſelf.
Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.
Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters: his evaſions have ears thus long. I have bobb'd his Brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine Sparrows for a penny, and his Piamater is not worth the ninth part of a Sparrow. This Lord (Achilles) Ajax who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, Ile tell you what I ſay of him.
Achil. What?
Ther. I ſay this Ajax———
Achil. Nay good Ajax.
Ther. Has not ſo much wit———
Achil. Nay I muſt hold you.
Ther. As will ſtop the eye of Helens Needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace fool.
Ther. I would have peace and quietneſs, but the fool will not: he there, that he, look you there.
Ajax. O thou damn'd Curr, I ſhall———
Achil. Will you ſet your wit to a Fools?
Ther. No I warrant you, for a fools will ſhame it.
Pat. Good words Therſites.
Achil. What's the quarrel?
Ajax. I bid thee vile Owl, go learn me the tenure of the Proclamation, and he rails upon me.
Ther. I ſerve thee not.
Ajax. Well, go to, go to.
Ther. I ſerve here voluntary.
Achil. Your laſt ſervice was ſufferance, 'twas not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary and you as under an Impreſs.
Ther. E'he ſo, a great deal of your wit too lies in your ſinnews, or elſe there be Liars: Hector ſhall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains, he were as good crack a fuſty nut with no kernel.
Achil. What with me too Therſites?
Ther. There's Ulyſſes, and old Neſtor, whoſe Wit was mouldy ere their Grandſires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draft-Oxen, and make you plough up the wair.
Achil. What? what?
Ther. Yes good ſooth, to Achilles, to Ajax, to———
Ajax. I ſhall cut out your tongue.
Ther. 'Tis no matter, I ſhall ſpeak as much as thou afterwards.
Pat. No more words Therſites.
Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles Brooch bids me, ſhall I?
Achil. There's for you Patroclus.
Ther. I will ſee you hang'd like Clotpoles ere I come any more to your Tents; I will keep where there is wit ſtirring, and leave the faction of fools. Exit.
Pat. A good riddance.
Achil. Marry this Sir is proclam'd through all our hoſt, That Hector by the fifth hour of the Sun, Will with a Trumpet, 'twixt our Tents and Troy To morrow morning call ſome Knight to Arms, That hath a ſtomack, and ſuch a one that dare Maintain I know not what: 'tis traſh. Farewel.
Ajax. Farewel? who ſhall anſwer him?
Achil. I know not, 'tis put to Lottry: otherwiſe He knew his man.
Aja. O meaning you, I will go learn more of it. Exit.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After ſo many hours, lives, ſpeeches ſpent, Thus once again ſayes Neſtor from the Greeks, Deliver Helen, and all damage elſe (As honour, loſs of time, travel, expence, Wounds, friends, and what elſe dear that is conſum'd In not diſgeſtion of this cormorant Warr) Shall be ſtroke off. Hector, what ſay you too't.
Hect. Though no man leſſer fears the Greeks than I, As farr as touches my particular: yet dread Priam, There is no Lady of more ſofter bowels, More ſpungy, to ſuck in the ſenſe of fear, More ready to cry out, who knows what follows, Than Hector is: the wound of peace is ſurety, Surety ſecure: but modeſt doubt is call'd The Beacon of the wiſe: the Tent that ſearches To'th'bottom of the worſt. Let Helen go. Since the firſt ſword was drawn about this queſtion, Every tythe ſoul 'mongſt many thouſand diſmes, Hath been as dear as Helen: I mean of ours: If we have loſt ſo many tenths of ours To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us (Had it our name) the value of one ten; What merit's in that reaſon which denies The yielding of her up?
Troi. Fye, fie, my Brother; Weigh you the worth and honour of a King (So great as our dread Father) in a Scale Of common Ounces? Will you with Counters ſum The paſt proportion of his infinite? And buckle in a waſt moſt fathomleſs, With ſpans and inches ſo diminutive, As fears and reaſons? Fye for godly ſhame?
Hel. No marvel though you bite ſo ſharp at reaſons, You are empty of them, ſhould not our father Bear the great ſway of his affairs with reaſons, Becauſe your ſpeech hath none that tells him ſo?
Troi. You are for dreams and ſlumbers brother Prieſt, You furr your gloves with reaſon: here are your reaſons You know an enemy intends you harm. You know, a ſword imploy'ed is perilous, And reaſon flyes the object of all harm, Who marvels then when Helenus beholds A Grecian and his ſword, if he do ſet The very wings of reaſon to his heels: Or like a Starr diſorb'd. Nay, if we talk of reaſon, And flye like chidden Mercury from Jove, Let's ſhut our gates and ſleep: Manhood and Honour Shold have hard hearts, would they but fat their thoughts With this cramm'd reaſon: reaſon and reſpect, Makes lovers pale, and luſtyhood deject.
Hect. Brother, ſhe is not worth What ſhe doth coſt the holding.
Troi. What's aught, but as 'tis valu'd?
Hect. But value dwells not in particular will, It holds his eſtimate and dignity As well, wherein 'tis precious of it ſelf, As in the prizer: 'Tis made Idolatry, To make the ſervice greater than the god, And the will dotes that is inclineable To what infectiouſly it ſelf affects, Without ſome image of th'affected merit.
Troi. I take to day a Wife, and my election Is led on in the conduct of my will;

My

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded Pylots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of Will and Judgement. How may I avoid
(Although my will distast what it elected)
The Wife I chose, there can be no evasion
To blench from this, and to stand firm by honour.
We turn not back the Silks upon the Merchant
When we have spoil'd them; nor the remainder Viands
We do not throw in unrespective place,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks;
Your breath of full consent bellied his Sails,
The Seas and Winds (old Wranglers) took a Truce,
And did him service; he touch'd the Ports desir'd,
And for an old Aunt whom the Greeks held Captive,
He brought a Grecian Queen, whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apolloes, and makes stale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our Aunt:
Is she worth keeping? Why she is a Pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand Ships,
And turn'd Crown'd Kings to Merchants.
If you'l avouch, 'twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cri'd, Go, go:)
If you'l confess, he brought home Noble prize,
(As you must needs, for you all clapt your hands)
And cri'd inestimable; why do you now
The issue of your proper Wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that Fortune never did?
Begger the estimation which you priz'd,
Richer than Sea and Land? O Theft most base!
That we have stoln what we do fear to keep.
But Thieves unworthy of a thing so stoln,
That in their Country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our Native place.

Enter Cassandra with her hair about her ears.

Cres. Cry Troians cry.

Priam. What noyse? what shreek is this?

Troi. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. Cry Troians.

Hec. It is Cassandra.

Cas. Cry Troians Cry; lend me ten thousand eyes;
And I will fill them with Prophetick tears.

Hec. Peace sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and Boys; mid-age and wrinkled old,
Soft infancy, that nothing can but cry,
Add to my clamour: let us pay betimes
A moity of that mass of moan to come.
Cry Troians cry, practise your eyes with tears,
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand,
Our fire-brand Brother Paris burns us all.
Cry Troians cry, a Helen and a woe;
Cry, cry, Troy burns, or else let Helen go. Exit.

Hec. Now youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our Sister, work
Some touches of remorse? Or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualifie the same?

Troi. Why brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such, and no other than event doth form it,
Nor once deject the courage of our minds;
Because Cassandra's mad, her brainsick raptures
Cannot distast the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several Honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd, than all Priams sons,
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen,
To fight for, and maintain.

Par. Else might the world convince of levity,
As well my under-takings as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what (alas) can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one mans valour
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power, as I have will,
Paris should ne'r retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one be-sotted on your sweet delights;
You have the Hony still, but these the Gall,
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not meerly to my self,
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it:
But I would have the soyl of her fair Rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.
What Treason were it to the ransack'd Queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set foot in your generous bosomes?
There not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended: nor none so Noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject. Then (I say)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well:
And on the cause and question now in hand,
Have gloz'd, but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear Moral Philosophy,
The Reasons you allege, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong: For pleasure and revenge,
Have ears more deaf than Adders, to the voyce
Of any true decision. Nature craves
All dues be rendred to their Owners; now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than Wife is to the Husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds of partial indulgence
To their benummed wills resist the same,
There is a Law in each well-ordered Nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's King
(As it is known she is) these Moral Laws
Of Nature, and of Nation, speak aloud
To have her back return'd. Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hectors opinion

Is this in way of truth: yet nere the less,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance,
Upon our joynt and several dignities.

Troi. Why? there you toucht the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Troian blood,
Spent more in her defence. But worthy Hector,
She is a theam of honour and renown,
A spurr to valiant and magnanimous deeds,
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize us.
For I presume brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the fore-head of this action,
For the wide worlds revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant off-spring of great Priamus,
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsie spirits.
I was advertiz'd, their great General slept,
Whil'st emulation in the army crept:
This I presume will wake him. Exeunt.

Enter Thersites solus.

Now now Thersites? what lost in the Labyrinth of thy fury? shall the Elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction, would it were otherwise: that I could beat him, whil'st he rail'd at me: Sfoot, Ile learn to conjure and raise Devils, but Ile see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then ther's Achilles, a rare Enginier. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the King of gods: and Mercury, lose all the Serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if thou take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have, which short-arm'd ignorance it self knows, is so abundant scarse, it will not in circumvention deliver a Fly from a Spider, without drawing the massie Irons and cutting the web: after this, the vengeance on the whole Camp, or rather the bone-ach, for that me thinks is the curse dependant on those that warr for a placket. I have said my prayers, and devil, Envy, say Amen: What ho? my Lord Achilles?

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites. Good Thersites come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembred a guilt counterfeit, thou would'st not have slipt out of my contemplation, but it is no matter, thy self upon thy self. The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance be thine in great revenue; heaven bless thee from a Tutor, and Discipline come not near thee. Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death, then if she that layes thee out sayes thou art a fair course, Ile be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrowded any but Lazars, Amen. Wher's Achilles?

Patr. What art thou devout? wast thou in a prayer?

Ther. I, the heavens hear me.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my Lord.

Achil. Where, where, art thou come? why my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not serv'd thy self into my Table, so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy Commander Achilles; then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy Lord Thersites: then tell me I pray thee, what's thy self?

Ther. Thy knower Patroclus: then tell me Patroclus what art thou?

Patr. Thou mai'st tell that know'st.

Achil. O tell, tell.

Ther. Ile decline the whole question: Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my Lord, I am Patroclus knower, and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal.

Ther. Peace fool I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileg'd man, proceed Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool, Achilles is a fool, Thersites is a fool, and as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this: come?

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles, Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon, Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool: and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Enter Agamemnon, Vlysses, Nestor, Diomedes, Ajax, and Chalcas.

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator, it suffises me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, Ile speak with no body: come in with me Thersites. Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such jugling, and such knavery: all the argument is a Cuckold and a Whore, a good quarrel to draw emulatious factions, and bleed to death upon: Now the dry Serpego on the subject, and Warr and Lechery confound all.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his Tent, but ill dispos'd my Lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here:
He sent our Messengers, and we lay by
Our appertainments, visiting of him:
Let him be told of, lest perchance he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Pat. I shall so say to him.

Vlys. We saw him at the opening of his Tent,
He is not sick.

Aja. Yes, Lion sick, sick of a proud heart: you may call it Melancholy if you will favour the man, but by my head, 'tis pride; but why, why, let him shew us the cause? A word my Lord.

Nes. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Vlys. Achilles hath inveigled his Fool from him.

Nes. Who, Thersites?

Vlys. He.

Nes. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his Argument.

Vlys. No, you see he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

Nes. All the better, their fraction is more our wish than their faction; but it was a strong counsell that a Fool could disunite.

Vlys. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Enter Patroclus.

Here

Patroclus.
Aga. No Achilles with him?
Ulyſ. The Elephant hath joynts, but none for courteſie;
His legs are legs for neceſſity, not for flight.
Patro. Achilles bids me ſay, he is much ſorry,
If any thing more than your ſport and pleaſure,
Did move your greatneſs, and this noble State,
To call upon him; he hopes it is no other,
But for your health, and your diſgeſtion ſake;
An after Dinners breath.
Aga. Hear you Patroclus:
VVe are too well acquainted with theſe anſwers:
But his evaſion wing'd thus ſwift with ſcorn,
Cannot outflye our apprehenſions.
Much attribute he hath, and much the reaſon,
VVhy we aſcribe it to him, yet all his virtues,
(Not virtuouſly of his own part beheld)
Do in our eyes, begin to loſe their gloſs;
And like fair Fruit in an unwholſome diſh,
Are like to rot untaſted; go and tell him,
VVe come to ſpeak with him, and you ſhall not ſin,
If you do ſay, we think him over proud,
And under honeſt: in ſelf aſſumption greater (ſelf.
Than in the note of judgement: and worthier than him-
Here tends the ſavage ſtrangeneſs he puts on,
Diſguiſe the holy ſtrength of their command:
And under write in an obſerving kind
His humorous predominance, yea watch
His pettiſh lines, his ebs, his flows, as if
The paſſage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tyde. Go tell him this, and add,
That if he over-hold his price ſo much,
VVe'l none of him; but let him, like an Engine
Not portable, lye under this report.
Bring action hither, this cannot go to warr:
A ſtirring Dwarf, we do allowance give,
Before a ſleeping Gyant: tell him ſo.
Pat. I ſhall, and bring his anſwer preſently.
Aga. In ſecond voice we'l not be ſatisfied,
VVe come to ſpeak with him, Ulyſſes enter you.
Exit Ulyſſes.
Ajax. What is he more than another?
Aga. No more than what he thinks he is.
Ajax. Is he ſo much? do you not think, he thinks himſelf a better man than I am?
Aga. No queſtion.
Ajax. Will you ſubſcribe his thought, and ſay he is?
Aga. No, Noble Ajax, you are as ſtrong as valiant, as wiſe, no leſs noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.
Ajax. Why ſhould a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.
Aga. Your mind is the clearer Ajax, and your virtues the fairer; he that is proud, eats up himſelf, Pride is his own Glaſs, his own Trumpet, his own Chronicle, and what ever praiſes it ſelf but in the deed, devours the deed in the praiſe.
Enter Ulyſſes.
Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendring of Toads.
Neſt. Yet he loves himſelf: is't not ſtrange?
Ulyſ. Achilles will not to the field to morrow,
Aga. What's his excuſe?
Ulyſ. He doth rely on none,
But carries on the ſtream of his diſpoſe,
Without obſervance or reſpect of any,
In will peculiar, and in ſelf admiſſion.
Aga. Why, will he not upon our fair requeſt,
Untent his perſon, and ſhare the ayr with us?
Ulyſ. Things ſmall as nothing, for requeſts ſake only
He makes important: poſſeſt he is with greatneſs,
And ſpeaks not to himſelf, but with a pride
That quarrels at ſelf-breath. Imagin'd wrath
Holds in his blood ſuch ſwoln and hot diſcourſe,
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters 'gainſt it ſelf; what ſhould I ſay?
He is ſo plaguy proud, that the death-tokens of it,
Cry no recovery.
Aga. Let Ajax go to him.
Dear Lord, go you and greet him in his Tent;
'Tis ſaid he holds you well, and will be led
At your requeſt a little from himſelf.
Ulyſ. O Agamemnon, let it not be ſo.
We'l conſecrate the ſteps that Ajax makes,
When they go from Achilles; ſhall the proud Lord,
That baſts his arrogance with his own ſeam,
And never ſuffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, ſave ſuch as do revolve
And ruminate himſelf; ſhall he be worſhipt,
Of that we hold an Idol, more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant Lord,
Muſt not ſo ſtaul his Palm, nobly acquir'd,
Nor by my will aſſubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is, by going to Achilles,
That were to enlard his fat already pride,
And add more Coles to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This L. go to him? Jupiter forbid,
And ſay in thunder, Achilles go to him.
Neſt. O this is well, he rubs the vein of him.
Dio. And how his ſilence drinks up this applauſe.
Aja. If I go to him, with my armed fiſt Ile paſh him ore the face.
Aga. O no, you ſhall not go.
Aja. And a be proud with me, ile pheſe his pride: let me go to him.
Ulyſ. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.
Aja. A paultry inſolent fellow.
Neſt. How he deſcribes himſelf.
Aja. Can he not be ſociable?
Ulyſ. The Raven chides blackneſs.
Aja. Ile let his humors blood.
Aga. He will be the Phyſician that ſhould be the patient.
Aja. And all men were a my mind,
Ulyſ. Wit would be out of faſhion.
Aja. A ſhould not bear it ſo, a ſhould eat Swords firſt: ſhall pride carry it?
Neſt. And 'twould, you'd carry half.
Ulyſ. A would have ten ſhares.
Aja. I will knede him, Ile make him ſupple, he's not yet through warm.
Neſt. force him with praiſes, pour in, pour in, his ambition is dry.
Ulyſ. My L. you feed too much on this diſlike.
Neſt. Our noble General, do not do ſo.
Dio. You muſt prepare to fight without Achilles.
Ulyſ. Why, 'tis this naming of him doth him harm.
Here is a man, but 'tis before his face,
I will be ſilent.
Neſt. Wherefore ſhould you ſo?

He

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Vlyſ. 'Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Aja. A horſon dog, that ſhall palter thus with us, would he were a Trojan.

Neſt. What a vice were it in Ajax now ——

Vlyſ. If he were proud.

Dio. Or covetous of praiſe.

Ulyſ. I, or ſurly born.

Dio. Or ſtrange, or ſelf-affected.

Vl. Thank the heavens L. thou art of ſweet compoſure;
Praiſe him that got thee, ſhe that gave thee ſuck:
Fame be thy Tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thrice fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition;
But he that diſciplin'd thy arms to fight,
Let Mars divide Eternity in twain,
And give him half, and for thy vigor,
Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
To ſinnowie Ajax: I will not praiſe thy wiſdome,
Which like a bourn, a pale, a ſhore confines
Thy ſpacious and dilated parts; here's Neſtor
Inſtructed by the Antiquary times:
He muſt, he is, he cannot but be wiſe.
But pardon Father Neſtor, were your dayes
As green as Ajax, and your brain ſo temper'd,
You ſhould not have the eminence of him,
But he as Ajax.

Aja. Shall I call you Father?

Vlyſ. I my good Son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him Lord Ajax.

Vlyſ. There is no tarrying here, the Hart Achilles
Keeps thicket: pleaſe it our General,
To call together all this ſtate of warr;
Freſh Kings are come to Troy; to morrow
We muſt with all our main of power ſtand faſt:
And here's a Lord (come Knights from Eaſt to Weſt,
And cull their flowr) Ajax ſhall cope the beſt.

Ag. Go we to Counſel, let Achilles ſleep;
Light Bores may ſail ſwift, though greater bulks draw deep. Exeunt. Muſick ſounds within.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you, pray you a word: Do not you follow the young Lord Paris?

Ser. I ſir, When he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him I mean?

Ser. Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble Gentleman: I muſt needs praiſe him.

Ser. The Lord be praiſed.

Pa. You know me, do you not?

Ser. Faith ſir, ſuperficially.

Pa. Friend know me better, I am the Lord Pandarus.

Ser. I hope I ſhall know your Honour better.

Pa. I do deſire it.

Ser. You are in the ſtate of Grace?

Pa. Grace, not ſo friend, Honour and Lordſhip are my titles: What Muſick is this?

Ser. I do but partly know ſir: it is Muſick in parts.

Pa. Know you the Muſicians?

Ser. Wholly ſir.

Pa. Who play they to?

Ser. To the hearers ſir,

Pa. At whoſe pleaſure Friend?

Ser. At mine ſir, and theirs that love Muſick.

Pa. Command, I mean friend.

Ser. Who ſhall I command ſir?

Pa. Friend, we underſtand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whoſe requeſt do theſe men play?

Ser. That's to't indeed ſir: marry ſir, at the requeſt of Paris my L. who's there in perſon; with him the mortal Venus, the heart blood of Beauty, loves inviſible ſoul.

Pa. Who? my Coſin Creſſida.

Ser. No, ſir, Helen, could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pa. It ſhould ſeem fellow, that thou haſt not ſeen the Lady Creſſida. I come to ſpeak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complemental aſſault upon him, for my buſineſs ſeethes.

Ser. Sodden buſineſs, there's a ſtewd phraſe indeed.

Enter Paris and Helena.

Pan. Fair be to you my Lord, and to all this fair company: fair deſires in all fair meaſure fairly guide them, eſpecially to you fair Queen, fair thoughts be your fair pillow.

Hel. Dear L. you are full of fair words.

Pan. You ſpeak your fair pleaſure ſweet Queen: fair Prince, here is good broken Muſick.

Par. You have broken it Coſin: and by my life you ſhall make it whole again, you ſhall piece it out with a peece of your performance. Nel. he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly Lady no.

Hel. O ſir.

Pan. Rude in ſooth, in good ſooth very rude.

Paris. Well ſaid my Lord: well, you ſay ſo in fits,

Pan. I have buſineſs to my Lord, dear Queen: my Lord will you vouchſafe me a word?

Hel. Nay, this ſhall not hedge us out, wee'l hear you ſing certainly.

Pan. Well ſweet Queen, you are pleaſant with me; but, marry thus my Lord, my dear Lord, and moſt eſteemed friend your brother Troilus ——

Hel. My Lord Pandarus, hony ſweet Lord.

Pan. Go to ſweet Queen, go to.
Commends himſelf moſt affectionately to you.

Hel. You ſhall not bob us out of our melody:
If you do, our melancholy upon your head.

Par. Sweet Queen, ſweet Queen, that's a ſweet Queen Ifaith ——

Hel. And to make a ſweet Lady ſad, is a ſowre offence.

Pan. Nay, that ſhall not ſerve your turn, that ſhall it not in truth la. Nay, I care not for ſuch words, no, no. And my Lord he deſires you, that if the King call for him at Supper, you will make this excuſe.

Hel. My Lord Pandarus.

Pan. What ſayes my ſweet Queen, my very, very ſweet Queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand, where ſups he to night?

Hel. Nay but my Lord.

Pan. What ſays my ſweet Queen? my Coſin will fall out with you.

Hel. You muſt not know where he ſups.

Par. With my diſpoſer Creſſida?

Pan. No, no, no ſuch matter, you are wide, come your diſpoſer is ſick.

Par. Well, Ile make excuſe.

Pan. I good my Lord: why ſhould you ſay Creſſida? no, your poor diſpoſer's ſick.

Par. I ſpy.

Pan. You ſpie, what do you ſpie? come, give me an Inſtrument now ſweet Queen.

Hel. Why this is kindly done.

Pan. My Neece is horrible in love with a thing you have ſweet Queen.

Hel. She ſhall have it my Lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pand. He? no ſhe'l none of him, they two are twain.

Hel. Falling in after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, Ile hear no more of this, Ile ſing you a ſong now.

Hel. I, I, prithee now: by my troth ſweet Lord thou haſt a fine fore-head.

Pan. I you may, you may.

Hel. Let thy ſong be love: this love will undo us all. Oh Cupid, Cupid, Cupid.

Pan. Love? I that it ſhall yfaith.

Par. I, good now love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth it begins ſo.

Love, love, nothing but love, ſtill more:
For O loves Bow,
Shoots both Buck and Doe:
The Shaft confounds not that it wounds,
But tickles ſtill the ſore:
Theſe Lovers cry, oh ho they dye;
Yet that which ſeems they wound to kill,
Doth turn oh ho, to ha ha he:
So dying love lives ſtill,
O ho a while, but ha ha ha;
O ho groans out for ha ha ha—hey ho.

Hel. In love yfaith to the very tip of the noſe.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? Hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds, why they are Vipers, is Love a generation of Vipers?
Sweet Lord whoſe a field to day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Anthenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would fain have arm'd to day, but my Nell would not have it ſo.
How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Hel. He hangs the lip at ſomething; you know all Lord Pandarus?

Pan. Not I hony ſweet Queen: I long to hear how they ſped to day:
You'l remember your brothers excuſe?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewel ſweet Queen.

Hel. Commend me to your Neece.

Pan. I will ſweet Queen. Sound a retreat.

Par. They're come from field: let us to Priams Hall
To greet the warriors. Sweet Hellen, I muſt woo you,
To help unarm our Hector: his ſtubborn buckles,
With theſe your white enchanting fingers toucht,
Shall more obey than to the edge of Steel,
Or force of Greekiſh ſinews, you ſhall do more
Than all the Iland Kings, diſarm great Hector.

Hel. 'Twill make us proud to be your ſervant Paris:
Yea what he ſhall receive of us in duty,
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have:
Yea overſhines our ſelf.
Sweet above thought I love thee. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus Man.

Pan. How now, where's thy Maſter, at my Couſin Creſſidas?

Man. No ſir, he ſtays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. O here he comes: How now, how now?

Troi. Sirra walk off.

Pan. Have you ſeen my Couſin?

Troi. No Pandarus: I ſtalk about her door
Like a ſtrange ſoul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for waftage. O be thou my Charon,
And give me ſwift tranſportance to thoſe fields,
Where I may wallow in the Lilly beds
Propos'd for the deſerver. O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupids ſhoulder pluck his painted wings,
And flie with me to Creſſid.

Pan. Walk here i'th' Orchard, Ile bring her ſtraight.

Exit Pandarus.

Troi. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round,
Th' imaginary reliſh is ſo ſweet,
That it inchants my ſenſe: what will it be
When that the watry palats taſt indeed
Loves thrice reputed Nectar? Death I fear me
Sounding deſtruction, or ſome joy too fine,
Too ſubtile, potent, and too ſharp in ſweetneſs,
For the capacitie of my ruder powers;
I fear it much, and I do fear beſides,
That I ſhall loſe diſtinction in my joyes,
As doth a battel, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying. Enter Pandarus.

Pan. She's making her ready, ſhe'l come ſtraight; you muſt be witty now, ſhe does ſo bluſh & fetches her wind ſo ſhort, as if ſhe were fraid with a ſprite: Ile fetch her; it is the prettieſt villain, ſhe fetches her breath ſo ſhort as a new ta'en ſparrow. Exit. Pand.

Troi. Even ſuch a paſſion doth embrace my boſome:
My heart beats thicker than a feavourous pulſe,
And all my powers do their beſtowing loſe,
Like vaſſalage at unawares encountring
The eye of Majeſty.

Enter Pandarus and Creſſida.

Pan. Come, come, what need you bluſh?
Shames a babie; here ſhe is now, ſwear the oaths now to her, that you have ſworn to me. What are you gone again, you muſt be watcht ere you be made tame, muſt you? come your wayes, come your wayes, and you draw backward we'l put you i'th' files: why do you not ſpeak to her? Come draw this Curtain, & lets ſee your picture. Alaſs the day, how loath you are to offend day light? and 'twere dark you'ld cloze ſooner. So, ſo, rub on, and kiſs the miſtreſs; how now, a kiſs in fee-farm? build there Carpenter; the ayr is ſweet. Nay, you ſhall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The Faulcon, as the Tercel, for all the Ducks i'th' River: go to, go to.

Troi. You have bereft me of all words Lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts; giver her deeds: but ſhe'l bereave you o'th' deeds too, if ſhe call your activity in queſtion: what billing again? here's in witneſs where-of the Parties interchangeably. Come in, come in, Ile go get a fire. Exit Pand.

Creſ. Will you walk in my Lord?

Troi. O Creſſida, how often have I wiſht me thus?

Creſ. Wiſht my Lord? the gods grant? O my Lord.

Troi. What ſhould they grant; what makes this pretty abruption: what too curious dreg eſpies my ſweet Lady in the fountain of our love?

Creſ. More

Creſ. More dregs than water, if my tears have eyes.
Troi. Fears make devils of Cherubins, they never ſee truly.
Creſ. Blind fear, that ſeeing reaſon leads, finds ſafer footing, than blind reaſon, ſtumbling without fear: to fear the worſt, oft cures the worſe.
Troi. Oh let my Lady apprehend no fear,
In all Cupids Pageant there is preſented no monſter.
Creſ. Nor nothing monſtrous neither?
Troi. Nothing but their undertakings, when we vow to weep ſeas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame Tygers, thinking it harder for our Miſtreſs to deviſe impoſition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty impoſed. This is the monſtroſitie in love (Lady,) that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd; that the deſire is boundleſs, and the act a ſlave to limit.
Creſ. They ſay all lovers ſwear more performance than they are able, and yet reſerve an ability that they never perform: vowing more than the perfection of ten; and diſcharging leſs than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of Lions, and the act of Hares, are they not monſters?
Troi. Are there ſuch? ſuch are not we: Praiſe us as we are taſted, allow us as we prove: our head ſhall go bare till merit crown it: no perfection in reverſion ſhall have a praiſe in preſent: we will not name deſert before his birth, and being born, his addition ſhall be humble: few words to fair faith. Troilus ſhall be ſuch to Creſſid, as what envy can ſay worſt, ſhall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can ſpeak trueſt, not truer than Troilus.
Creſ. Will you walk in my Lord?

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. What bluſhing ſtill? have you not done talking yet?
Creſ. Well Unkle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.
Pan. I thank you for that: if my Lord get a Boy of you, you'l give him me: be true to my Lord, if he flinch, chide me for it.
Troi. You know now your hoſtages: your Unkles word and my firm faith.
Pan. Nay, Ile give my word for her too: our kindred though they be long ere they are wooed, they are conſtant being won: they are Burs I can tell you, they'l ſtick where they are thrown.
Creſ. Boldneſs comes to me now, and brings me heart: Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day, for many weary months.
Troi. Why was my Creſſid then ſo hard to win?
Creſ. Hard to ſeem won: but I was won my Lord
With the firſt glance that ever: pardon me,
If I confeſs much you will play the tyrant:
I love you now, but not till now ſo much
But I might maſter it; in faith I lye:
My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too head-ſtrong for their mother: ſee we fools,
Why have I blab'd? who ſhall be true to us
When we are ſo unſecret to our ſelves?
But though I lov'd you well, I wooed you not;
And yet good faith I wiſht my ſelf a man;
Or that the women had mens privilege
Of ſpeaking firſt. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,
For in this rapture I ſhall ſurely ſpeak
The thing I ſhall repent: ſee, ſee your ſilence
Comming in dumbneſs, from my weakneſs draws
My ſoul of counſel from me. Stop my mouth.
Troi. And ſhall, albeit ſweet Muſick iſſues thence.
Pan. Pretty yfaith.
Creſ. My Lord, I do beſeech you pardon me;
'Twas not my purpoſe thus to beg a kiſs:
I am aſham'd; O Heavens, what have I done!
For this time will I take my leave my Lord.
Troi. Your leave ſweet Creſſid?
Pan. Leave! and you take leave till to morrow morning——
Creſ. Pray you content you.
Troi. What offends you Lady?
Creſ. Sir mine own company.
Troi. You cannot ſhun your ſelf.
Creſ. Let me go and try.
I have a kind of ſelf reſides with you:
But an unkind ſelf, that it ſelf will leave,
To be anothers fool. Where is my wit?
I would be gone: I ſpeak I know not what.
Troi. Well know they what they ſpeak, that ſpeak ſo wiſely.
Creſ. Perchance my Lord, I ſhow more craft than love.
And fell ſo roundly to a large confeſſion,
To angle for your thoughts: but you are wiſe,
Or elſe you love not: for to be wiſe and love,
Exceeds mans might, that dwels with gods above.
Troi. O that I thought it could be in a woman:
And if it can, I will preſume in you,
To feed for ay her lamp and flames of love,
To keep her conſtancie in plight and youth,
Out-living beauties outward, with a mind
That doth renew ſwifter than blood decayes:
Or that perſwaſion could but thus convince me,
That my integritie and truth to you,
Might be affronted with the match and waight
Of ſuch a winnowed puritie in love:
How were I then up-lifted! but alas,
I am as true, as truths ſimplicitie,
And ſimpler than the infancy of truth.
Creſ. In that Ile warr with you.
Troi. O vertuous fight,
When right with right wars, who ſhall be moſt right?
True ſwains in love, ſhall in the world to come
Approve their truths by Troilus when their rimes,
Full of proteſt, of oath, and big compare,
Want ſimiles: truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as ſteel, as plantage to the Moon,
As Sun to day, as Turtle to her mate,
As Iron to Adamant, as Earth to th' Center:
Yet after all compariſons of truth,
(As truths authentick author to be cited)
As true as Troilus, ſhall crown up the Verſe,
And ſanctifie the numbers.
Creſ. Prophet may you be:
If I be falſe, or ſwerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot it ſelf,
When water-drops have worn the ſtones of Troy,
And blind oblivion ſwallow'd Cities up,
And mighty ſtates characterleſs are grated
To duſtie nothing; yet let memory,
From falſe to falſe, among falſe Maids in love,
Upbraid my falſehood, when they've ſaid as falſe;
As Air, as Water, as Wind, as ſandie earth;
As Fox to Lamb; as Wolf to Heifers Calf;
Pard to the Hind, or Stepdame to her Son;
Yea, let them ſay, to ſtick the heart of falſehood,

As falſe as Creſſid.

Pand. Go to, a bargain made: ſeal it, ſeal it, Ile be the witneſs, here I hold your hand: here my Couſins, if ever you prove falſe one to another, ſince I have taken ſuch pains to bring you together, let all pittiful goers between be call'd to the worlds end after my name: call them all Panders; let all conſtant men be Troiluſſes, all falſe women Creſſids, and all brokers between, Panders: ſay, Amen.

Troi. Amen.

Creſ. Amen.

Pan. Amen.

Whereupon I will ſhew you a Chamber, which bed, becauſe it ſhall not ſpeak of your pretty encounters, preſs it to death: away.

And Cupid grant all toung-tide Maidens here,
Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to provide this geer. Exeunt.

Enter Vlyſſes, Diomedes, Neſtor, Agamemnon, Menelaus and Calcas.

Cal. Now Princes for the ſervice I have done you,
Th' advantage of the time prompts me aloud,
To call for recompence: appear it to your mind,
That through the ſight I bear in things to love,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my poſſeſſion,
Incurr'd a Traytors name, expos'd my ſelf,
From certain and poſſeſt conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes, ſequeſtring from me all
That time, acquaintance, cuſtom and condition,
Made tame, and moſt familiar to my nature:
And here to do you ſervice am become,
As new into the world, ſtrange, unacquainted.
I do beſeech you, as in way of taſt,
To give me now a little benefit:
Out of thoſe many regiſtred in promiſe,
Which you ſay live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What would'ſt thou of us Troian? make demand?

Cal. You have a Troian priſoner, call'd Anthenor,
Yeſterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you (often have you, thanks therefore)
Deſir'd my Creſſid in right great exchange.
Whom Troy hath ſtill deni'd: but this Anthenor,
I know is ſuch a wreſt in their affairs,
That their negotiations all muſt ſlack,
Wanting his mannage: and they will almoſt,
Give us a Prince of blood, a Son of Priam,
In change of him. Let him be ſent great Princes,
And he ſhall buy my Daughter: and her preſence,
Shall quite ſtrike off all ſervice I have done,
In moſt accepted pain.

Aga. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Creſſid hither: Calcas ſhall have
What he requeſts of us: good Diomed
Furniſh you fairly for this enterchange;
Withall bring word, if Hector will to morrow
Be anſwer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Dio. This ſhall I undertake, and 'tis a burthen
Which I am proud to bear. Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tent.

Vlyſ. Achilles ſtands i'th' entrance of this Tent;
Pleaſe it our General to paſs ſtrangely by him,
As if he were forgot: and Princes all,
Lay negligent and looſe regard upon him;
I will come laſt, 'tis like he'l queſtion me,
Why ſuch unplauſive eyes are bent? why turn'd on him?
If ſo, I have deciſion medicinable,
To uſe between your ſtrangeneſs and his pride,
Which his own will ſhall have deſire to drink;
It may do good, pride hath no other glaſs
To ſhow it ſelf, but pride: for ſupple knees,
Feed arrogance, and are the proud mans fees.

Agam. We'l execute your purpoſe, and put on
A form of ſtrangeneſs as we paſs along,
So do each Lord, and either greet him not,
Or elſe diſdainfully, which ſhall ſhake him more,
Than if not lookt on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What comes the General to ſpeak with me?
You know my mind, Ile fight no more 'gainſt Troy.

Aga. What ſayes Achilles, would he ought with us?

Neſ. Would you my Lord ought with the General?

Achil. No.

Neſ. Nothing my Lord.

Aga. The better.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you?

Achi. What does the Cuckold ſcorn me?

Ajax. How now Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow Ajax?

Ajax. Ha.

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. I, and good next day too, Exeunt.

Achil. What mean theſe fellows? know they not Achilles?

Patr. They paſs ſtrangely: they were us'd to bend,
To ſend their ſmiles before them to Achilles:
To come as humbly as they us'd to creep to holy Altars.

Achil. What am I poor of late?
'Tis certain, greatneſs once fall'n out with fortune,
Muſt fall out with men too: what the declin'd is,
He ſhall as ſoon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall: for men like butter-flies,
Shew not their mealie wings, but to the Summer;
And not a man for being ſimple man,
Hath any honor; but honor'd by thoſe honors
That are without him; as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident, as oft as merit:
Which when they fall (as being ſlippery ſtanders)
The love that lean'd on them as ſlippery too,
Doth one pluck down another, and together
Dye in the fall; But 'tis not ſo with me,
Fortune and I are friends, I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did poſſeſs,
Save theſe mens looks: who do me thinks find out
Something not worth in me ſuch rich beholding,
As they have often given. Here is Vlyſſes,
Ile interrupt his reading: how now Vlyſſes?

Vlyſ. Now great Thetis Son.

Achil. What are you reading?

Vlyſ. A ſtrange fellow here
Writes me, that man, how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without, or in,
Cannot make boaſt to have that which he hath;
Nor feels not what he ows, but by reflection:
As when his virtues ſhining upon others,
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the firſt giver.

Achil. This is not ſtrange Vlyſſes:
The beauty that is born here in the face,
The bearer knows not, but commends it ſelf,
Not going from it ſelf: but eye to eye oppos'd,

Salutes

Salutes each other, with each others form.
For speculation turns not to it self,
Till it hath travell'd and is married there
Where it may see it self; this is not strange at all.
Ulys. I do not strain it at the position,
It is familiar; but at the Authors drift,
Who in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the Lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there is much consisting,)
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for ought,
Till he behold them formed in th' applause,
Where they're extended: who like an arch reverb'rates
The voice again; or like a gate of steel,
Fronting the Sun, receives and renders back
His figure, and his heat. I was much rapt in this,
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax;
Heavens what a man is there? a very Horse,
That has he knows not what Nature, what things there
Most abject in regard, and dear in use;
What things again most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth: now shall we see to morrow,
And act that very chance doth throw upon him?
Ajax renown'd? O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortunes hall,
Whiles others play the Ideots in her eyes:
How one man eats into anothers pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonness
To see these Grecian Lords; why, even already,
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hectors brest,
And great Troy shrinking.
Achil. I do believe it:
For they past by me, as misers do by beggars,
Neither gave to me good word, nor good look:
What, are my deeds forgot?
Ulys. Time hath (my Lord) a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion:
A great siz'd monster of ingratitudes:
Those scraps are good deeds past,
Which are devour'd as fast as they are made,
Forgot as soon as done: perseverance, dear my Lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a rusty male,
In monumental mockrie: take the instant way,
For honor travels in a straight so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast, keep then the path,
For emulation hath a thousand Sons,
That one by one pursue; if you give way
Or hedge aside from the direct forth right,
Like to an entred Tyde, they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost;
Or like a gallant Horse fain in first rank,
Lye there for pavement to the abject, near
Ore-run and trampled on: then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must ore-top yours:
For time is like a fashionable Host,
That slightly shakes his parting Guest by th' hand;
And with his arms out-stretcht, as he would flye,
Graps in the commer: the welcome ever smiles,
And farewells goes out sighing: O let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was: for beauty, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time:
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin;
That all with one consent praise new born gauds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And go to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud in gilt oredusted.
The present eye praises the present object.
Then marvail not thou great and compleat man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion 'gin to catch the eye,
Than what not stirs: the cry went out on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou would'st not entomb thy self alive,
And case thy reputation in thy Tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to faction.
Achil. Of this my privacy,
I have strong reasons.
Ulys. But 'gainst your privacy,
The reasons are more potent and heroical:
'Tis known Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priams daughters.
Achil. Ha? known?
Ulys. Is that a wonder?
The providence that's in a watchful State,
Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold;
Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive deeps,
Keeps place with thought; and almost like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles:
There is a mysterie (with whom relation
Durst never meddle) in the soul of state;
Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath or pen can give expressure too:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my Lord.
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw down Hector than Polixena,
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in her Iland sound her trump;
And all the Greekish Girles shall tripping sing,
Great Hectors sister did Achilles win;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.
Farewell my Lord: I as your Lover speak;
The fool slides ore the Ice that you should break.
Patr. To this effect Achilles have I mov'd you;
A woman impudent and mannish grown,
Is not more loth'd, than an effeminate man,
In time of action: I stand condemn'd for this;
They think my little stomack to the warr,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse your self: and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And like a dew-drop from the Lions mane,
Be shook to airie air.
Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector.
Patr. I, and perhaps receive much honour by him.
Achil. I see my reputation is at stake,
My fame is shrewdly gored.
Patr. O then beware:
Those wounds heal ill, that men do give themselves:
Omission to do what is necessary,
Seals a commission to a blank of danger,
And danger like an ague subtly taints
Even then when we sit idely in the sun.
Achil. Go call Thersites hither sweet Patroclus,

Ile ſend the fool to Ajax, and deſire him
T'invite the Troian Lords after the Combat
To ſee us here unarm'd: I have a womans longing,
An appetite that I am ſick withall,
To ſee great Hector in the weeds of peace; Enter Ther.
To talk with him, and to behold his viſage,
Even to my full of view. A labour ſav'd.

Ther. A wonder.

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himſelf.

Achil. How ſo?

Ther. He muſt fight ſingly to morrow with Hector, and is ſo prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling, that he raves in ſaying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why he ſtalks up and down like a Peacock, a ſtride and a ſtand: ruminates like an hoſteſs, that hath no Arithmetique but her brain to ſet down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politique regard, as who ſhould ſay, there were wit in his head and 'twoo'd out; and ſo there is; but it lyes as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not ſhew without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck in i'th' Combat, hee'l break't himſelf in vain-glory. He knows not me: I ſaid, good morrow Ajax; And he replies, thanks Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the General? Hee's grown a very land-fiſh, languageleſs, a monſter: a plague of opinion, a man may wear it on both ſides like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou muſt be my Ambaſſador to him Therſites.

Ther. Who I? why hee'l anſwer nobody: he profeſſes not anſwering; ſpeaking is for beggers: he wears his tongue in's arms: I will put on his preſence; let Patroclus make his demands to me, you ſhall ſee the Pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him Patroclus, te'l him, I humbly deſire the valiant Ajax, to invite the moſt valorous Hector, to come unarm'd to my Tent, and to procure ſafe conduct for his perſon, of the magnanimious and moſt illuſtrious, ſix or ſeven times honour'd Captain, General of the Grecian Armie Agamemnon, &c. do this.

Patro. Jove bleſs great Ajax.

Ther. Hum.

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles.

Ther. Ha?

Patr. Who moſt humbly deſires you to invite Hector to his Tent.

Ther. Hum.

Patr. And to procure ſafe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. I my Lord.

Ther. Ha?

Patr. What ſay you too't.

Ther. God buy you with all my heart.

Patr. Your anſwer ſir.

Ther. If to morrow be a fair day, by eleven a clock it will go one way or other; howſoever, he ſhall pay for me e'r he has me.

Patr. Your anſwer ſir.

Ther. Fare you well with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out a tune thus: what muſick will be in when Hector has knockt out his brains, I know not: but I am ſure none, unleſs the Fidler Apollo get his ſinews to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou ſhalt bear a Letter to him ſtraight.

Ther. Let me carry another to his Horſe; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled like a Fountain ſtirr'd,
And I my ſelf ſee not the bottom of it.

Ther. Would the Fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an Aſs at it: I had rather be a Tick in a Sheep, than ſuch a valiant ignorance.

Enter at one door Æneas with a Torch, at another Paris, Deiphobus, Anthenor, Diomed the Grecian, with Torches.

Patr. See ho, who is that there?

Deiph. It is the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the Prince there in perſon?
Had I ſo good occaſion to lie long
As you Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly buſineſs,
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Diom. That's my mind too: good morrow Lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek Æneas, take his hand,
Witneſs the proceſs of your ſpeech within;
You told how Diomed, in a whole week by dayes
Did haunt you in a Field.

Æne. Health to you valiant ſir;
During all queſtion of the gentle truce:
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance,
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Diom. The one and other Diomed embraces,
Our bloods are now in calm; and ſo long health:
But when contention, and occaſion meet,
By Jove, Ile play the hunter for thy life,
With all my force, purſute and policy.

Æne. And thou ſhalt hunt a Lion that will flie
With his face backward, in humane gentleneſs:
Welcome to Troy; now by Anchiſes life,
Welcome indeed: by Venus hand I ſwear,
No man alive can love in ſuch a ſort,
The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Diom. We ſympathize. Jove let Æneas live
(If to my ſword his fate be not the glory)
A thouſand compleat courſes of the Sun:
But in mine emulous honor let him die,
With every joynt a wound, and that to morrow.

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do, and long to know each other worſe.

Par. This is the moſt deſpightfull'ſt gentle greeting;
The nobleſt hateful love, that e'r I heard of.
What buſineſs Lord ſo early?

Æne. I was ſent for to the King; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpoſe meets you; it was to bring this Greek to Calcha's houſe: and there to render him,
For the enfreed Anthenor, the fair Creſſid:
Lets have your company; or if you pleaſe,
Haſte there before us, I conſtantly do think
(Or rather call my thought a certain knowledge)
My brother Troilus lodges there to night.
Rouſe him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality, whereof I fear
We ſhall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I aſſure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were born to Greece,
Than Creſſid born from Troy.

Par. There

Par. There is no help:
The bitter disposition of the time will have it so.
On Lord, weel follow you.
Æne. Good morrow all. Exit Æneas
Par. And tell me noble Diomed; faith tell me true,
Even in the soul of sound good fellowship,
Who in your thoughts merits fair Helen most?
My self, or Menelaus?
Diom. Both alike.
He merits well to have her, that doth seek her,
Not making any scruple of her soylure,
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge.
And you as well to keep her, that defend her,
Not pallating the taste of her dishonour,
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends;
He like a puling Cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed peece;
You like a letcher, out of whorish loyns,
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors:
Both merits poyz'd, each weighs no less nor more,
But he as he, which heavier for a whore.
Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman.
Dio. She's bitter to her country: hear me Paris,
For every false drop in her baudy veins,
A Grecians life hath sunk: for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Troian hath been slain. Since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Troians suffred death.
Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapman do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this virtue well;
We'l not commend, what we intend to sell.
Here lyes our way. Exeunt.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Troi. Dear, trouble not your self: the morn is cold.
Cres. Then sweet my Lord, Ile call my Unkle down;
He shall unbolt the Gates.
Troi. Trouble him not:
To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy sences,
As Infants empty of all thought.
Cres. Good morrow then.
Troi. I prithee now to bed.
Cres. Are you a weary of me?
Troi. O Cressida! but that the busie day
Wak'd by the Lark, hath rouz'd the ribald Crows,
And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer:
I would not from thee.
Cres. Night hath been too brief. (stayes,
Troi. Beshrew the witch! with venemous wights she
As hideously as hell; but flies the grasps of love,
With wings more momentary, swifter than thought:
You will catch cold and curse me.
Cres. Prithee tarry, you men will never tarry;
O foolish Cressid, I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Heark there's one up.
Pand. within. What's all the doors open here?
Troi. It is your Unkle. Enter Pandarus.
Cres. A pestilence on him: now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life.
Pan. How now, how now? how go maiden-heads?
Hear you Maid: where's my cozin Cressid?
Cres. Go hang your self, you naughty mocking Unkle:
You bring me to do—and then you flout me too.
Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what:
What have I brought you to do?
Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart: you'l ne'r be good, nor suffer others.
Pan. Ha, ha: alas poor wretch: a poor Chipochia, hast not slept to night? would he not (a naughty man) let it sleep: a bug-bear take him. One knocks.
Cres. Did not I tell you? would he were knock'd ith' head. Who's that at door? good Unkle go and see.
My Lord, come you again into my Chamber:
You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.
Troi. Ha, ha.
Cre. Come you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing.
How earnestly they knock: pray you come in. Knock.
I would not for half Troy have you seen here. Exeunt.
Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now, what's the matter?
Æne. Good morrow Lord, good morrow.
Pan. Who's there, my Lord Æneas? by my troth I knew you not: what news with you so early?
Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here?
Pan. Here? what should he do here?
Æne. Come he is here, my Lord, do not deny him:
It doth import him much to speak with me.
Pan. Is he here say you? 'tis more than I know, Ile be sworn: For my own part I came in late; what should he do here?
Æne. Who, nay then: Come, come, you'l do him wrong, ere y'are ware: you'l be so true to him, to be false to him: Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither, go.

Enter Troilus.

Troi. How now, what's the matter?
Æne. My Lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash: there is at hand,
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Anthenor
Deliver'd to us, and for him forth-with,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes hand
The Lady Cressida.
Troi. Is it concluded so?
Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy,
They are at hand, and ready to effect it,
Troi. How may atchievments mock me?
I will go meet them: and my Lord Æneas,
We met by chance: you did not find me here.
Æne. Good, good, my Lord, the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressid.

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost: the devil take Anthenor; the young Prince will go mad: a plague upon Anthenor; I would they had broke's neck.
Cres. How now? what's the matter? who was here?
Pan. Ah, ah!
Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? wher's my Lord? gone? tell me sweet Unkle what's the matter?
Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above.
Cres. O the gods! what's the matter?
Pan. Prethee get thee in: would thou hadst ne'r been born; I knew thou would'st be his death. O poor Gentleman: a plague upon Anthenor.

Cres.

Creſ. Good Uncle, I beſeech you, on my knees, I beſeech you what's the matter?

Pan. Thou muſt be gone wench, thou muſt be gone; thou art chang'd for Anthenor: thou muſt to thy Father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death: 'twill be his bane, he cannot bear it.

Creſ. O you immortal Gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou muſt.

Creſ. I will not Uncle: I have forgot my Father:
I know no touch of conſanguinity:
No kin, no love, no blood, no ſoul, ſo neer me,
As the ſweet Troilus: O you gods divine!
Make Creſſids name the very crown of falſhood!
If ever ſhe leave Troylus: time, and death,
Do to this body what extremity you can;
But the ſtrong baſe and building of my love,
Is as the very Centre of the earth,
Drawing all things to it. I will go in and weep.

Pan. Do, do.

Creſ. Tear my bright hair, and ſcratch my praiſed cheeks,
Crack my cleer voice with ſobs, and break my heart
With ſounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. Ex.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Deiphobus, Anthenor, and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefixt
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek
Comes faſt upon: good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the Lady what ſhe is to do,
And haſte her to the purpoſe.

Troi. Walk into her houſe:
Ile bring her to the Grecian preſently;
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an Altar, and thy brother Troilus
A Prieſt, there offering to it his heart.

Par. I know what 'tis to love,
And would, as I ſhall pitty, I could help.
Pleaſe you walk in, my Lords. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Creſſid.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Creſ. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full perfect that I taſte,
And no leſs in a ſenſe as ſtrong, as that
Which cauſeth it. How can I mod'rate it?
If I could temporiſe with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palat,
The like alaiment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying croſs: Enter Troilus.
No more my grief, in ſuch a precious loſs.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes, a ſweet duck.

Creſ. O Troilus, Troilus.

Pan. What a pair of ſpectacles is here? let me embrace too: oh heart, as the goodly ſaying is; O heart, heavy heart, why ſitteſt thou without breaking? where he anſwers again; becauſe thou canſt not eaſe thy ſmart by friendſhip, nor by ſpeaking: there was never a truer rime; let us caſt away nothing, for we may live to have need of ſuch a Verſe; we ſee it, we ſee it: how now Lambs?

Troi. Creſſid, I love thee in ſo ſtrange a purity;
That the bleſt gods, as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal, than the devotion which
Cold lips blow to their Deities, take thee from me.

Creſ. Have the Gods envy?

Pan. I, I, I, I, 'tis too plain a caſe.

Creſ. And is it true, that I muſt go from Troy?

Troi. A hatefull truth.

Creſ. What, and from Troilus too?

Troi. From Troy, and Troilus.

Creſ. Iſt poſſible?

Troi. And ſuddenly, where injury of chance
Puts back leave-taking, juſtles roughly by
All time of pauſe: rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoyndure: forcibly prevents
Our lockt embraſures; ſtrangles our dear vows,
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.
We two that with ſo many thouſand ſighs
Did buy each other, muſt poorly ſell our ſelves,
With the rude brevity and diſcharge of one;
Injurious time, now with a robbers haſte
Crams his rich Theevery up, he knows not how.
As many farewels as be ſtars in heaven,
With diſtinct breath, and conſign'd kiſſes to them,
He fumbles up in a looſe adiew:
And ſcants us with a ſingle famiſht kiſs,
Diſtaſting with the ſalt of broken tears, Enter Æneas.

Æneas within. My Lord, is the Lady ready?

Troi. Hark, you are call'd: ſome ſay the genius ſo
Cries, come, to him that inſtantly muſt die.
Bid them have patience; ſhe ſhall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the toot.

Creſ. I muſt then to the Grecians?

Troi. No remedy.

Creſ. A wofull Creſſid 'mongſt the merry Greeks.

Troi. When ſhall we ſee again?
Hear me my love: be thou but true of heart.

Creſ. I true? how now? what wicked deem is this?

Troi. Nay, we muſt uſe expoſtulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I ſpeak not, be thou true, as fearing thee:
For I will throw my Glove to death himſelf,
That there's no maculation in thy heart;
But be thou true, ſay I, to faſhion in
My ſequent proteſtation: be thou true,
And I will ſee thee.

Creſ. O you ſhall be expoſ'd my Lord to dangers
As infinite, as imminent: but Ile be true.

Troi. And Ile grow friend with danger;
Wear this Sleeve.

Creſ. And you this Glove.
When ſhall I ſee you?

Troi. I will corrupt the Grecian Centinels,
To give thee nightly viſitation.
But yet be true.

Creſ. O heavens: be true again?

Troi. Hear why I ſpeak it, Love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality,
Their loving well compos'd, with gift of nature,
Flowing and ſwelling ore with Arts and exerciſe:
How novelties may move, and parts with perſon,
Alas, a kind of godly jealouſie,
Which I beſeech you call a vertuos ſin,
Makes me affraid.

Creſ. O heavens, you love me not!

Troi. Dye I a villain then:
In this I do not call your faith in queſtion
So mainly as my merit: I cannot ſing,
Nor heel the high Lavolt; not ſweeten talk;
Nor play at ſubtile games; fair virtues all:

To which the Grecians are moſt prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell that in each grace of theſe,
There lurks a ſtill and dumb-diſcourſive devil,
That tempts moſt cunningly: but be not tempted.
Creſ. Do not think I will.
Troi. No, but ſomthing may be done that we will not:
And ſometimes we are devils to our ſelves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Preſuming on their changeful potencie.
Æneas within. Nay, good my Lord.
Troi. Come kiſs, and let us part.
Paris within. Brother Troilus.
Troi. Good brother come you hither,
And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you.
Creſ. My Lord will you be true?
Troi. Who I? alas it is my vice, my fault:
Whiles other fiſh with craft for great opinion,
I, with great truth, catch meer ſimplicity;
Whil'ſt ſome with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainneſs I do wear mine bare.

Enter the Greeks.

Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit
Is plain and true, ther's all the reach of it.
Welcome ſir Diomed, here is the Lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you.
At the port (Lord) Ile give her to thy hand,
And by the way poſſeſs thee what ſhe is.
Entreat her fair; and by my ſoul, fair Greek,
If ere thou ſtand at mercy of my ſword,
Name Creſſid, and thy life ſhall be as ſafe
As Priam is in Ilion.
Diom. Fair Lady Creſſid,
So pleaſe you, ſave the thanks this Prince expects:
The luſtre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair uſage, and to Diomed
You ſhall be miſtreſs, and command him wholly.
Troi. Grecian, thou doſt not uſe me courteouſly,
To ſhame the ſeal of my petition towards,
I praiſing her. I tell thee Lord of Greece,
She is as farr high ſoaring o're thy praiſes,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her ſervant:
I charge thee uſe her well, even for my charge:
For by the dreadful Pluto, if thou do'ſt not,
(Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard)
Ile cut thy throat.
Diom. Oh be not mov'd Prince Troilus;
Let me be privileg'd by my place and meſſage,
To be a ſpeaker free; when I am hence,
Ile anſwer to my luſt: and know my Lord,
Ile nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She ſhall be priz'd: but that you ſay be't ſo;
Ile ſpeak in my ſpirit and honor, no.
Troi. Come to the Port. Ile tell thee Diomed,
This brave, ſhall oft make thee to hide thy head:
Lady, give me your hand, and as we walk,
To our own ſelves bend we our needful talk.

Sound Trumpet.

Par. Hark, Hectors Trumpet.
Æne. How have we ſpent this morning?
The Prince muſt think me tardy and remiſs,
That ſwore to ride before him in the field.
Par. 'Tis Troilus fault: come, come, to field with him.

Exeunt.

Dio. Let us make ready ſtraight.
Æne. Yea, with a bridegrooms freſh alacritie
Let us addreſs to tend on Hectors heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lye
On his fair worth, and ſingle Chivalry.

Enter Ajax armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemnon, Menelaus, Vlyſſes, Neſtor, Calcas, &c.

Aga. Here art thou in appointment freſh and fair
Anticipating time. With ſtarting courage,
Give with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy
Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appauled ayr
May pierce the head of the great Combatant,
And hale him hither.
Ajax. Thou, Trumpet, there's my purſe;
Now crack thy lungs and ſplit thy braſen pipe:
Blow villain, till thy ſphered Bias cheek
Out-ſwell the cholick of puft Aquilon:
Come, ſtretch thy cheſt, and let thy eyes ſpout blood:
Thou bloweſt for Hector.
Vlyſ. No Trumpet anſwers.
Achil. 'Tis but early dayes. Enter Dio. Creſ.
Aga. Is't not young Diomed with Calcas daughter?
Vlyſ. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate,
He riſes on the toe: that ſpirit of his
In aſpiration lifts him from the earth.
Aga. Is this the Lady Creſſid?
Dio. Even ſhe.
Aga. Moſt dearly welcome to the Greeks, ſweet Lady.
Neſt. Our General doth ſalute you with a kiſs.
Vlyſ. Yet is your kindneſs but particular; 'twere better ſhe were kiſt in general.
Neſt. And very courtly counſel: Ile begin. So much for Neſtor.
Achil. Ile take that winter from your lips: fair Lady Achilles bids you welcome.
Mene. I had good argument for kiſſing once.
Patro. But that's no argument for kiſſing now;
For thus pop't Paris in his hardiment.
Vlyſ. Oh deadly gall, and theam of all our ſcorns,
For which we loſe our heads, to gild his horns.
Patro. The firſt was Menelaus kiſs, this mine:
Patroclus kiſſes you.
Men. Oh this is trim.
Patr. Paris and I kiſs evermore for him.
Men. Ile have my kiſs ſir: Lady by your leave.
Creſ. In kiſſing do you render, or receive?
Patr. Both take and give.
Creſ. Ile make my match to give,
The kiſs you take is better than you give: therefore no kiſs.
Men. Ile give you boot, Ile give you three for one.
Creſ. You are an odd man, give even, or give none.
Men. An odd man Lady? every man is odd.
Creſ. No, Paris is not; for you know 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you.
Men. You fillip me a'th' head.
Creſ. No, Ile be ſworn.
Vlyſ. It were no match, your nail againſt his horn:
May I ſweet Lady beg a kiſs of you?
Creſ. You may.
Vlyſ. I do deſire it.
Creſ. Why beg then.
Vlyſ. Why then for Venus ſake, give me a kiſs:
When Hellen is a maid again, and his——
Creſ. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Vlyſ. Never's

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.
Diom. Lady a word, Ile bring you to your Father.
Nest. A woman of quick sence.
Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her:
There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip;
Nay, her foot speaks, her wanton spirits look out
At every joynt, and motive of her body:
Oh these encounters so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome ere it comes;
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts,
To every tickling reader: set them down,
For sluttish spoils of opportunitie;
And daughters of the game. Exeunt.

Enter all of Troy, Hector, Paris, Æneas, Helenus, and Attendants.

All. The Troians Trumpet.
Aga. Yonder comes the Troop.
Æne. Hail all you state of Greece: what shall be done
To him that victorie commands? or do you purpose,
A victor shall be known: will you the Knights
Shall to the edge of all extremitie
Pursue each other; or shall be divided
By any voice, or order of the field: Hector bad ask?
Aga. Which way would Hector have it?
Æne. He cares not, he'l obey conditions.
Aga. 'Tis done like Hector, but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deal disprising
The Knight oppos'd.
Æne. If not Achilles sir, what is your name?
Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.
Æne. Therefore Achilles: but what ere, know this,
In the extremity of great and little:
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all;
The other blank as nothing: weigh him well:
And that which looks like pride, is courtesie:
This Ajax is half made of Hectors blood,
In love whereof, half Hector stayes at home:
Half heart, half hand, half Hector, comes to seek
This blended Knight, half Troian and half Greek.
Achil. A maiden battel then? O I perceive you.
Aga. Here is sir Diomed: go gentle Knight,
Stand by our Ajax: as you and Lord Æneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breach: the Combatants being kin,
Half stints their strife, before their strokes begin.
Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.
Aga. What Troian is that same that looks so heavy?
Ulyss. The youngest Son of Priam,
And a true Knight; they call him Troilus;
Not yet mature, yet matchless, firm of word,
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provok't, nor being provok't, soon calm'd;
His heart and hand both open, and both free:
For what he has, he gives; what thinks, he shews;
Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath:
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes
To tender objects; but he, in heat of action
Is more vindicative than jealous love.
They call him Troilus; and on him erect,
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thus sayes Æneas, one that knows the youth,
Even to his inches: and with private soul,
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me. Alarum.
Aga. They are in action.
Nest. Now Ajax hold thine own.
Troi. Hector, thou sleep'st, awake thee.
Aga. His blows are well dispos'd there Ajax. trumpets cease.
Diom. You must no more.
Æne. Princes enough, so please you.
Aja. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.
Diom. As Hector pleases.
Hect. Why then will I no more:
Thou art great Lord, my Fathers Sisters Son;
A cousin german to great Priams seed:
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gorie emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were thy commixion, Greek and Troian so,
That thou could'st say, this hand is Grecian all,
And this is Troian: the sinews of this Leg,
All Greek, and this all Troy: my Mothers blood
Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
Bounds in my fathers: by Jove multipotent,
Thou should'st not bear from me a Greekish member
Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud: but the just Gods gainsay,
That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
My sacred Aunt, should by my mortal Sword
Be drain'd. Let me embrace thee Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus,
Cousin, all honor to thee.
Aja. I thank thee Hector:
Thou art too gentle, and too free a man:
I came to kill thee Cousin, and bear hence
A great addition, earned in thy death.
Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest, fame with her lowd'st (O yes)
Cries, This is he; could promise to himself,
A thought of added honor, torn from Hector.
Æne. There is expectance here from both the sides:
What further you will do.
Hect. We'l answer it:
The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewel,
Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,
As seld I have the chance; I would desire
My famous Cousin to our Grecian Tents.
Diom. 'Tis Agamemnons wish, and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.
Hec. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me:
And signifie this loving enterview
To the expectors of our Troian part:
Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my Cousin:
I will go eat with thee, and see your Knights.

Enter Agamemnon and the rest.

Aja. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.
Hec. The worthiest of them, tell me name by name:
But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.
Aga. Worthy of Arms: as welcome as to one,
That would be rid of such an enemy.
But that's no welcome: understand more clear
What's past and what's to come, is strew'd with husks
And formless ruine of oblivion:
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias drawing:
Bids thee with most divine integritie,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.
Hect. I thank thee most imperious Agamemnon.

Aga. My

Aga. My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no less to you.
Men. Let me confirm my Princely brothers greeting,
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
Hect. Whom must we answer?
Æne. The noble Menelaus.
Hect. O, you my Lord, by Mars his gauntlet thanks,
Mock not, that I affect th' untraded Oath,
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus Glove;
She's well, but bad me not commend her to you.
Men. Name her not now sir, she's a deadly Theam.
Hect. O pardon, I offend.
Nest. I have (thou gallant Troian) seen thee oft
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee
As hot as Perseus, spurr thy Phrygian Steed,
And seen thee scorning forfeits and subduments,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i'th' air.
Not letting it decline on the declined:
That I have said unto my standers by,
Loe Jupiter is yonder, dealing life.
And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks, have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrastling. This have I seen,
But this thy countenance (still lockt in steel)
I never saw till now. I knew thy Grandsire,
And once fought with him; he was a Souldier good,
But by great Mars (the Captain of us all,)
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee,
And (worthy Warrior) welcome to our Tents.
Æne. 'Tis the old Nestor.
Hect. Let me embrace thee good old Chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with Time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to claspe the.
Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courtesie.
Hect. I would they could.
Nest. Ha? by this white beard I'ld fight with thee to morrow. Well, welcom, welcom: I have seen the time—
Ulyss. I wonder now, how yonder City stands,
When we have here her Base and Pillar by us.
Hect. I know your favour Lord Ulysses well.
Ah sir, there's many a Greek and Troian dead;
Since first I saw your self, and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish Embassie.
Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue,
My prophecie is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls that partly front your Town,
Yond Towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.
Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet: and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all,
And that old common Arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.
Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome;
After the General, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at thy Tent.
Achil. I shall forestall thee Lord Ulysses, thou:
Now Hector I have fed mine eyes on thee,
I have with exact view perus'd thee Hector,
And quoted joynt by joynt.
Hec. Is this Achilles?
Achil. I am Achilles.
Hect. Stand fair I prithee, let me look on thee.
Achil. Behold thy fill.
Hect. Nay, I have done already.
Achil. Thou art too brief, I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee, limb by limb.
Hect. O like a book of sport thou'lt read me ore:
But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why doest thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achil. Tell me you Heavens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? Whether there, or there, or there,
That I may give the local wound a name;
And make distinct the very breach, where-out
Hectors great spirit flew. Answer me heavens.
Hect. It would discredit the blest gods, proud man,
To answer such a question: Stand again;
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Achil. I tell thee yea.
Hect. Wert thou the Oracle to tell me so,
I'ld not believe thee: henceforth guard thee well,
For Ile not kill thee there, nor there, nor there,
But by the forge that stythied Mars his helm,
Ile kill thee every where, yea, ore and ore.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,
His insolence draws folly from my lips,
But Ile endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never——
Ajax. Do not chafe thee Cosin:
And you Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident, or purpose bring you too't.
You may have every day enough of Hector
If you have stomach. The general state I fear,
Can scarce intreat you to be odd with him.
Hect. I pray you let us see you in the field,
We have had pelting Warrs since you refus'd
The Grecians cause.
Achil. Do'st thou intreat me Hector?
To morrow do I meet thee fell as death,
To night, all Friends.
Hect. Thy hands upon that match.
Aga. First, all you Peers of Greece go to my Tent,
There in the full convive you: Afterwards,
As Hectors leisure, and your bounties shall
Concurr together, severally intreat him.
Beat loud the Taborines, let the Trumpets blow.
That this great Souldier may his welcom know. Exeunt.
Troi. My Lord Vlysses, tell me I beseech you,
In what place of the Field doth Calcas keep?
Vlyss. At Menelaus Tent, most Princely Troilus,
There Diomed doth feast with him to night,
Who neither looks on heaven, nor on earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.
Troi. Shall I (sweet Lord) be bound to thee so much,
After we part from Agamemnons Tent,
To bring me thither?
Vlyss. You shall command me sir:
As gentle tell me, of what Honour was
This Cressida in Troy, had she no Lover there
That wails her absence?
Troi. O sir, to such as boasting shew their scars,
A mock is due: will you walk on my Lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth.
But still sweet Love is food for Fortunes tooth. Exeunt.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Ile heat his blood with Greekish wine to night,
Which

Which with my Semitar Ile cool to morrow :
Patroclus, let us Feaſt him to the hight.
Pat. Here comes Therſites. Enter Therſites.
Achil. How now, thou core of Envy ?
Thou cruſty batch of Nature, what's the news ?
Ther. Why thou picture of what thou ſeem'ſt, & Idoll of Ideot-worſhippers, here's a Letter for thee.
Achil. From whence, Fragment ?
Ther. Why thou full diſh of Fool, from Troy.
Pat. Who keeps the Tent now ?
Ther. The Surgeons box, or the patients wound.
Patr. Wel ſaid adverſity, and what need theſe tricks?
Ther. Prethee be ſilent boy, I profit not by thy talk, thou art thought to be Achilles male Varlot.
Patr. Male Varlot you Rogue ? What's that ?
Ther. Why his maſculine Whore. Now the rotten diſeaſes of the South, guts-griping Ruptures, Catarres, Loads a gravell i'th' backs, Lethargies, cold Palſies, and the like, take and take again, ſuch prepoſterous diſcoveries.
Pat. Why thou damnable box of envy thou, what mean'ſt thou to curſe thus ?
Ther. Do I curſe thee ?
Patr. Why no, you ruinous Butt, you whorſon indiſtinguiſhable Curr.
Ther. No ? why art thou then exaſperate, thou idle immaterial skein of Sleyd ſilk ; thou green Sarcenet flap for a ſore eye, thou toſſell of a Prodigals purſe thou ? Ah how the poor world is peſtred with ſuch water-flies, diminutives of Nature.
Pat. Out gall.
Ther. Finch Egg.
Ach. My ſweet Patroclus, I am th'warted quite
From my great purpoſe in to morrows battel:
Here is a Letter from Queen Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my fair Love,
Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep
An Oath that I have ſworn. I will not break it,
Fall Greek, fail Fame, Honor or go, or ſtay,
My major vow lyes here ; this Ile obey :
Come, come Therſites, help to trim my Tent,
This night in banquetting muſt all be ſpent.
Away Patroclus. Exit.
Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, theſe two may run mad: but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, Ile be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honeſt fellow enough, and one that loves Quails, but he has not ſo much Brain as ear-wax ; & the good transformation of Jupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primative Statue, and oblique memorial of Cuckolds, a thrifty ſhooing-horn in a chain, hanging at his Brothers legg, to what form but that he is, ſhould wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to ? to an Aſs were nothing, he is both Aſs and Ox ; to an Ox were nothing, he is both Ox and Aſs : to be a Dogg, a Mule, a Cat, a Fitchew, a Toad, a Lizard, an Owl, a Puttock, or a Herring without a Roe, I would not care : but to be Menelaus, I would conſpire againſt Deſtiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Therſites : for I care not to be the Lowſe of a Lazar, ſo I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day ſpirits and fires.

Enter Hector, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulyſſes, Neſtor, Diomed, with Lights.

Aga. We go wrong, we go wrong.
Aja. No yonder 'tis, there where we ſee the light.
Hect. I trouble you.
Ajax. No, not a whit.

Enter Achilles.

Ulyſ. Here comes himſelf to guide you.
Achil. Welcome brave Hector, welcome Princes all.
Agam. So now fair Prince of Troy, I bid goodnight, Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.
Hect. Thanks, and good night to the Greeks general,
Men. Good night my Lord.
Hect. Good night ſweet Lord Menelaus.
Ther. Sweet draught : ſweet quoth a ? ſweet ſink, ſweet ſure.
Achil. Good night and welcom, both at once, to thoſe that go, or tarry.
Aga. Good night.
Achil. Old Neſtor tarries, and you too Diomed,
Keep Hector company an hour or two.
Dio. I cannot Lord, I have important buſineſs,
The tide whereof is now, goodnight great Hector.
Hect. Give me your hand.
Ulyſ. Follow his Torch, he goes to Chalcas Tent,
Ile keep you company.
Troi. Sweet ſir, you honour me.
Hect. And ſo good night.
Achil. Come, come, enter my Tent. Exeunt.
Ther. That ſame Diomed's a falſe-hearted Rogue, a moſt unjuſt Knave ; I will no more truſt him when he leers, than I will a Serpent when he hiſſes: he will ſpend his mouth & promiſe, like Brabler the Hound; but when he performs, Aſtronomers foretell it, that it is prodigious, there will come ſome change : the Sun borrows of the Moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to ſee Hector, than not to dog him : they ſay, he keeps a Trojan Drab, and uſes the Traitor Chalcas his Tent. Ile after — Nothing but Letchery ? All incontinent Varlets. Exeunt.

Enter Diomed.

Dio. What are you up here ho ? ſpeak.
Chal. Who calls?
Dio. Diomed, Chalcas I think, where's your Daughter?
Chal. She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulyſſes.

Ulyſ. Stand where the Torch may not diſcover us.

Enter Creſſid.

Troi. Creſſid come forth to him.
Dio. How now my charge ?
Creſ. Now my ſweet guardian: heark, a word with you.
Troi. Yea, ſo familiar ?
Ulyſ. She will ſing any man at firſt ſight.
Ther. And any man may find her, if he can take her life : ſhe's noted.
Dio. Will you remember?
Creſ. Remember ? yes.
Dio. Nay, but do then ; and let your mind be coupled with your words.
Troi. What ſhould ſhe remember?
Ulyſ. Liſt.
Creſ. Sweet hony Greek, tempt me no more to folly.
Ther. Roguery.
Dio. Nay then.
Creſ. Ile tell you what.
Dio. Fo, fo, come tell a pin, you are a forſworn —
Creſ. In faith I cannot : what would you have me do?
Ther. A jugling trick, to be ſecretly open.
Dio. What did you ſwear you would beſtow on me ?
Creſ. I prethee do not hold me to mine oath.
Bid me do any thing but that ſweet Greek.

Dio. Good

Dio. Good night.
Troi. Hold patience.
Vlyſ. How now Troian?
Creſ. Diomed.
Dio. No, no, good night: Ile be your fool no more.
Troi. Thy better muſt.
Creſ. Heark one word in your ear.
Troi. O plague and madneſs!
Vlyſ. You are moved Prince, let us depart I pray you,
Leſt your diſpleaſure ſhould enlarge it ſelf
To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly: I beſeech you go.
Troi. Behold, I pray you.
Vlyſ. Nay, good my Lord go off:
You flow to great diſtraction: come my Lord.
Troi. I pray thee ſtay?
Vlyſ. You have not patience, come.
Troi. I pray you ſtay; by hell and all hells torments,
I will not ſpeak a word.
Dio. And ſo good night.
Creſ. Nay, but you part in anger.
Troi. Doth that grieve thee? O withered truth!
Vlyſ. VVhy, how now Lord?
Troi. By Jove I will be patient.
Creſ. Guardian? why Greek?
Dio. Fo, fo, adieu, you palter.
Cre. In faith I do not: come hither once again.
Vlyſ. You ſhake my Lord at ſomething; will you go?
You will break out.
Troi. She Strokes his cheek.
Vlyſ. Come, come.
Troi. Nay ſtay, by Jove I will not ſpeak a word.
There is between my will, and all offences,
A guard of patience, ſtay a little while.
Ther. How the devil Luxury with his fat rump and
Potato finger, tickles theſe together: fry lechery, fry.
Dio. But will you then?
Creſ. In faith I will go; never truſt me elſe.
Dio. Give me ſome token for the ſurety of it.
Creſ. Ile fetch you one.
Vlyſ. You have ſworn patience.
Troi. Fear me not ſweet Lord.
I will not be my ſelf, nor have cognition
Of what I feel: I am all patience. Enter Creſſid.
Ther. Now the pledge, now, now, now.
Creſ. Here Diomed, keep this Sleeve.
Troi. O beauty! where is thy Faith?
Vlyſ. My Lord.
Troi. I will be patient, outwardly I will.
Creſ. You look upon that Sleeve; behold it well:
He lov'd me: O falſe wench: give't me again.
Dio. Whoſe was't?
Creſ. It is no matter now I have't again.
I will not meet with you to morrow night:
I prithee Diomed viſit me no more.
Ther. Now ſhe ſharpens: well ſaid Whetſtone.
Dio. I ſhall have it.
Creſ. What, this?
Dio. I that.
Creſ. O all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge;
Thy Maſter now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me, and ſighs, and takes my Glove,
And gives memorial dainty kiſſes to it;
As I kiſs thee.
Dio. Nay, do not ſnatch it from me.
Creſ. He that takes that, takes my heart withall.
Dio. I had you heart before, this follows it.
Troi. I did ſwear patience.
Creſ. You ſhall not have it Diomed: faith you ſhall not
Ile give you ſomething elſe.
Dio. I will have this: whoſe was it?
Creſ. It is no matter.
Dio. Come tell me whoſe it was?
Creſ. 'Twas one that lov'd me better than you will.
But now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whoſe was it?
Creſ. By all Diana's waiting women yonder,
And by her ſelf, I will not tell you whoſe.
Dio. To morrow will I wear it on my Helm,
And grieve his ſpirit that dares not challenge it.
Troi. Wert thou the devil, and wor'ſt it on thy horn,
It ſhould be challeng'd.
Creſ. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis paſt; and yet it is not:
I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then farewel,
Thou never ſhalt mock Diomed again.
Creſ. You ſhall not go: one cannot ſpeak a word,
But it ſtrait ſtarts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I by Pluto: but that that likes not me, pleaſes me beſt.
Dio. What ſhall I come? the hour.
Creſ. I, come: O Jove! do, come: I ſhall be plagu'd.
Dio. Farewel till then. Exit.
Creſ. Good night: I prithee come:
Troilus farewel; one eye yet looks on thee,
But with my heart, the other eye, doth ſee—
Ah poor our ſex; this fault in us I find:
The errour of our eye, directs our mind.
What errour leads muſt err: O then conclude,
Minds ſway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude. Exit.
Ther. A proof of ſtrength ſhe could not publiſh more;
Unleſs ſhe ſay my mind is now turn'd whore.
Ulyſ. All's done my Lord.
Troi. It is.
Ulyſ. Why ſtay we then?
Troi. To make a recordation to my ſoul
Of every ſyllable that here was ſpoke:
But if I tell how theſe two did coact;
Shall I not lie in publiſhing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An eſperance ſo obſtinately ſtrong,
That doth invert that reſt of eyes and ears;
As if thoſe organs had deceptious functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Was Creſſid here?
Ulyſ. I cannot conjure Troian.
Troi. She was not ſure.
Ulyſ. Moſt ſure ſhe was.
Troi. Why my negation hath no taſt of madneſs.
Ulyſ. Nor mine my Lord: Creſſid was here but now.
Troi. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood:
Think we had mothers; do not give advantage
To ſtubborn Criticks, apt without a Theme
For depravation, to ſquare the general ſex
By Creſſids rule. Rather think this not Creſſid.
Ulyſ. What hath ſhe done Prince, that can ſoyl our mothers?
Troi. Nothing at all, unleſs that this were ſhe.
Ther. Will he ſwagger himſelf out on's own eyes?
Troi. This ſhe? no, this is Diomeds Creſſida:
If beauty have a ſoul, this is not ſhe:

If ſouls guide vows, if vows are ſanctimony ;
If ſanctimony be the gods delight :
If there be rule in unity it ſelf,
This is not ſhe: O madneſs of diſcourſe!
That cauſe ſets up, with, and againſt thy ſelf,
By foul authority : where reaſon can revolt
Without perdition, and loſs, aſſume all reaſon,
Without revolt. This is, and is not Creſſid :
Within my ſoul, there doth conduce a fight
Of this ſtrange nature, that a thing inſeparate,
Divides more wider than the skie and earth:
And yet the ſpacious breadth of this diviſion,
Admits no Orifice for a point as ſubtle,
As Ariachnes broken woof to enter ;
Inſtance, O inſtance! ſtrong as Plutoes gates :
Creſſid is mine, tyed with the bonds of heaven ;
Inſtance, O inſtance! ſtrong as heaven it ſelf :
The bonds of heaven are ſlipt, diſſolv'd, and loos'd :
And with another knot five finger tyed,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love :
The fragments, ſcraps, the bits, and greaſy reliques,
Of her ore-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Vlyſ. May worthy Troilus be half attached
With that which here his paſſion doth expreſs ?

Troi. I Greek, and that ſhall be divulged well
In Characters, as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus; never did young man fancy
With ſo eternal, and ſo fixt a ſoul.
Heark Greek: as much as I do Creſſida love ;
So much by weight, hate I her Diomed:
That ſleeve is mine, that he'l bear in his Helm :
Were it a Cask compos'd by Vulcans skill,
My Sword ſhould bite it : Not the dreadful ſpout,
Which Shipmen do the Hurricano call,
Conſtring'd in maſs by the Almighty Fenn,
Shall dizzie with more clamour Neptunes ear
In his deſcent, than ſhall my prompted Sword
Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'l tickle it for his Concupy.

Troi. O Creſſid! O falſe Creſſid! falſe, falſe, falſe :
Let all untruths ſtand by thy ſtained name,
And they'l ſeem glorious.

Vlyſ. O contain your ſelf :
Your paſſion draws ears hither.

Enter Æneas.

Æn. I have been ſeeking you this hour my Lord :
Hector by this is arming him in Troy.
Ajax your Guard, ſtayes to conduct you home.

Troi. Have with you Prince: my courteous Lord adieu:
Farewel revolted fair : and Diomed,
Stand faſt, and wear a Caſtle on thy head.

Vlyſ. Ile bring you to the Gates.

Troi. Accept diſtracted thanks.

Exeunt Troilus, Æneas, and Vlyſſes.

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed, I would croke like a Raven: I would bode, I would bode : Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the Parrot will not do more for an Almond, than he for a commodious drab : Lechery, lechery, ſtill warrs and lechery, nothing elſe holds faſhion. A burning devil take them. Exit.

Enter Hector, and Andromache.

And. When was my Lord ſo much ungently temper'd,
To ſtop his ears againſt admoniſhment ?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to day.

Hect. You train me to offend you : get you gone.
By the everlaſting gods, Ile goe.

And. My dreams will ſure prove ominous to the day.

Hect. No more I ſay. Enter Caſſandra.

Caſ. Where is my brother Hector ?

And. Here ſiſter, arm'd, and bloudy in intent :
Conſort with me in loud and dear petition :
Purſue we him on knees : for I have dreampt
Of bloody turbulence; and this whole night
Hath nothing been but ſhapes, and forms of ſlaughter.

Caſ. O, 'tis true.

Hect. Ho ? bid my Trumpet ſound.

Caſ. No notes of ſally, for the heavens, ſweet brother.

Hect. Begon I ſay : the gods have heard me ſwear.

Caſ. The gods are deaf to hot, and peeviſh vows ;
They are polluted offrings, more abhorr'd
Than ſpotted Livers in the Sacrifice.

And. O, be perſwaded, do not count it holy,
To hurt by being juſt; it is as lawful:
For we would count give much to as violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.

Caſ. It is the purpoſe that makes ſtrong the vow ;
But vows to every purpoſe muſt not hold :
Unarm ſweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you ſtill I ſay ;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate :
Life every man holds dear, but the dear man
Holds honor farr more precious-dear, than life.

Enter Troilus.

How now young man? mean'ſt thou to fight to day ?

And. Caſſandra, call my father to perſwade.

Exit Caſſandra.

Hect. No faith young Troilus; doff thy harneſs youth:
I am to day i'th' vein of Chivalry :
Let grow thy Sinews till their knots be ſtrong ;
And tempt not yet the bruſhes of the warr.
Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not brave boy,
Ile ſtand to day, for thee, and me, and Troy.

Troi. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you;
Which better fits a Lion, than a man.

Hect. What vice is that? good Troilus chide me for it.

Troi. When many times the captive Grecian falls,
Even in the fann and wind of your fair Sword :
You bid them riſe, and live.

Hect. O 'tis fair play.

Troi. Fools play, by heaven Hector.

Hect. How now? how now ?

Troi. For th' love of all the gods
Let's leave the Hermit Pitty with our Mothers ;
And when we have our Armors buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our ſwords,
Spur them to rueful work, reign them from ruth.

Hect. Fie ſavage, fie.

Troi. Hector, then 'tis warrs.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to day.

Troi. Who ſhould with-hold me ?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars,
Beckning with fiery truncheon my retire ;
Not Priamus, and Hecuba on knees ;
Their eyes ore-galled with recourſe of tears ;
Nor you my brother, with your true ſword drawn
Oppos'd to hinder me, ſhould ſtop my way :
But by my ruine.

Enter Priam and Caſſandra.

Caſ. Lay hold upon him Priam, hold him faſt :
He is thy crutch; now if thou loſe thy ſtay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,

Fall

Fall all together.

Priam. Come Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dreampt, thy mother hath had visions,
Cassandra doth foresee; and I my self,
Am like a Prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore come back.

Hect. Æneas is a-field,
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Priam. I, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith:
You know me dutiful, therefore dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, Royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

And. Do not dear Father.

Hect. Andromache I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

Exit Andromache.

Troi. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl,
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewel, dear Hector:
Look how thou diest; look how thy eye turns pale;
Look how thy wounds do bleed at many vents;
Hark how Troy roars; how Hecuba cries out;
How poor Andromache shrils her dolour forth;
Behold distraction, frency, and amazement,
Like witless Anticks one another meet,
And all cry Hector, Hectors dead: O Hector!

Troi. Away.

Cas. Farewel: yet, soft: Hector I take my leave;
Thou do'st thy self, and all our Troy deceive. Exit.

Hect. You are amaz'd, my Liege, at her exclaim:
Go in and cheer the Town, we'l forth and fight:
Do deeds of praise, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewel: the gods with safety stand about thee.

Alarum.

Troi. They are at it, hark: proud Diomed, believe
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter Pandar.

Pand. Do you hear my Lord? do you hear?

Troi. What now?

Pand. Here's a Letter come from yond poor girl.

Troi. Let me read.

Pand. A whorson tisick, a whorson rascally tisick, so troubles me: and the foolish fortune of this girl, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o'th'dayes; and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ach in my bones, that unless a man were curst, I cannot tell what to think on't. What sayes she there?

Troi. Words, words, meer words, no matter from the heart:
Th'effect doth operate another way.
Go wind to wind, there turn and change together:
My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

Pand. Why, but hear you?

Troi. Hence brother lacky; ignomy and shame
Persue thy life, and live aye with thy name.

Alarum.

Exeunt.

Enter Thersites in excursion.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another, Ile go look on: that dissembling abhominable varlet Diomede, has got that same scurvy, doting, foolish young knaves Sleeve of Troy, there in his Helm: I would fain see them meet; that, that same young Troian ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-masterly villain, with the Sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errant. O'th'tother side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals; that stale old Mouse-eaten dry-cheese, Nestor: and that same dog-fox Ulysses is not prov'd worth a Black-berry. They set me up in policy, that mungril curr Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles. And now is the curr Ajax prouder than the curr Achilles, and will not arm to day. Whereupon, the Grecians began to proclame barbarism; and policy grows into an ill opinion.

Enter Diomed and Troilus.

Soft, here comes Sleeve, and th' other.

Troi. Fly not: for should'st thou take the River Styx, I would swim after.

Diom. Thou do'st miscall retire:
I do not flye; but advantagious care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee.

Ther. Hold thy whore Grecian: now for thy whore Troian: Now the Sleeve, now the Sleeve.

Enter Hector.

Hect. What art thou Greek? art thou for Hectors match?
Art thou of blood, and honour?

Ther. No, no: I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee, live.

Ther. God a mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck—for frighting me: what's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle—yet in a sort, lechery eats it self: Ile seek them.

Exit.

Enter Diomed and Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus Horse;
Present the fair Steed to my Lady Cressid:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty:
Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Troian,
And am her Knight by proof.

Ser. I go my Lord. Exeunt Agamemnon.

Aga. Renew, renew, the fierce Polidamus
Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus Prisoner,
And stands Colossus-wise waving his beam,
Upon the pashed courses of the Kings,
Epistropus and Cedius, Prolixines is slain;
Amphimacus, and Thous deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'n or slain, and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised; the dreadful Sagittary
Appalls our numbers, haste we Diomed
To re-inforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go bear Patroclus body to Achilles,
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame,
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galathe his Horse;
And there lacks work: anon he's there a-foot,
And there they flye or dye, like scaled sculs,

Before the belching Whale; then is he yonder,
And there the straying Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mowers swath;
Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes;
Dexterity so obeying appetite,
That what he will he does, and does so much,
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Oh, courage, courage Princes: great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance;
Patroclus wounds have rouz'd his drowsie blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hackt and chipt, come to him;
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it:
Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to day,
Mad and fantastick execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
Asif that luck in very spight of cunning, bad him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Aja. Troilus, thou coward Troilus. Exit.
Dio. I, there, there. Exit.
Nest. So, so, we draw together. Exit.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-quiller, shew thy face:
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector, wher's Hector? I will none but Hector. Exit.

Enter Ajax.

Aja. Troilus, thou coward Troilus shew thy head.

Enter Diomed.

Diom. Troilus, I say, wher's Troilus?
Aja. What would'st thou?
Dio. I would correct him.
Aja. Were I the General,
Thou should'st have my office,
Ere that correction: Troilus I say, what Troilus?

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Oh traitour Diomed!
Turn thy false face thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse.
Dio. Ha, art thou there?
Aja. Ile fight with him alone, stand Diomed.
Dio. He is my prize, I will not look upon.
Troi. Come both you cogging Greeks, have at you both. Exit Troilus.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea Troilus? O well fought my youngest Brother.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now do I see thee; have at thee Hector.
Hect. Pause if thou wilt.
Achil. I do disdain thy courtesie, proud Troian;
Be happy that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriend thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again:
Till when, go seek thy fortune.
Hect. Fare thee well:
I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee: how now my Brother?

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Ajax hath ta'n Æneas; shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him: Ile be ta'n too,
Or bring him off: Fate hear me what I say;
I wreak not, though thou end my life to day. Exit.

Enter one in Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand thou Grek,
Thou art a goodly mark:
No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well,
Ile frush it, and unlock the rivets all,
But Ile be master of it: wilt thou not beast abide?
Why then flie on, Ile hunt thee for thy hide. Exit.

Enter Achilles with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come hear about me you my Myrmidons:
Mark what I say; attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroak, but keep your selves in breath;
And when I have the bloudy Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about:
In fellest manner execute your arms.
Follow me sirs, and my proceeding eye;
It is decreed, Hector the great must die. Exit.

Enter Therstites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Ther. The Cuckold and the Cuckold-maker are at it: now bull, now dog, low; Paris low; now my double hen'd sparrow; low Paris, low; the bull has the game: ware horns ho.

Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Turn slave and fight.
Ther. What art thou?
Bast. A Bastard Son of Priams.
Ther. I am a Bastard too, I love Bastards, I am a Bastard begot, Bastard instructed, Bastard in mind, Bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate: one Bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one Bastard? take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the Son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment: farewel Bastard.
Bast. The devil take the coward. Exeunt.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrified core so fair without:
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my days work done; Ile take good breath:
Rest Sword, thou hast thy fill of blood and death.

Enter Achilles and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Look Hector how the Sun begins to set:
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels,
Even with the veil and darking of the Sun.
To close the day up, Hectors life is done.
Hect. I am unarm'd, forgo this vantage Greek.
Achil. Strike fellows strike, this is the man I seek.
So Ilion fall thou: now Troy sink down:
Here lyes thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.
On Myrmidons, cry you all a main,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain. Retreat.
Hark, a retreat upon our Grecian part.
Gree. The Troian Trumpets sounds the like my Lord.
Achi. The dragon wing of night ore-spreads the earth,
And stickler-like the Armies separates;
My half supt Sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.
Come, tye his body to my horses tail:
Along the field: I will the Troian trail. Exeunt.

Sound Retreat. Shout.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomed, and the rest marching.

Aga. Heark, heark, what shout is that?
Nest. Peace Drums.

Sol. Achil.

Sold. Achilles, Achilles, Hector's slain Achilles.

Dio. The bruit is Hector slain, and by Achilles.

Aga. If it be so, yet bragless let it be:
Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along; let one be sent
To pray Achilles see us at our Tent.
If in his death the gods have us befriended,
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

Exeunt.

Enter Æneas, Paris, Anthenor and Deiphobus.

Æne. Stand hoe, yet are we masters of the field,
Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Hector is slain.

All. Hector? the gods forbid.

Troi. He's dead: and at the murtherers Horses tail,
In beastly sort, drag'd through the shameful Field,
Frown on you heavens, effect your rage with speed:
Sit gods upon your throans, and smile at Troy.
I say at once, let your brief plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on.

Æne. My Lord, you do discomfort all the Host.

Troi. You understand me not, that tell me so:
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death,
But dare all imminence that gods and men,
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone:
Who shall tell Priam so? or Hecuba?
Let him that will a screechowl aye be call'd.
Go in to Troy, and say there, Hector's dead;
There is a word will Priam turn to stone;
Make wells, and Niobes of the maids and wives;
Cool statues of the youth: and in a word,
Scare Troy out of it self. But march away,
Hector is dead: there is no more to say.
Stay yet: you vile abhominable Tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains:
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'le through, and through you; & thou great siz'd coward,
No spatce of Earth shall sunder our two hates,
Ile haunt thee, like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frensies thoughts.
Strike a free march to Troy, with comfort go:
Hope of revenge, shall hide our inward woe.

Enter Pandarus

Pand. But hear you? hear you?

Troi. Hence brothel, lacky, ignominy, and shame
Persue thy life, and live aye with thy name. Exeunt.

Pan. A goodly medcine for mine akingbones: oh world, world, world! thus is the poor agent despis'd: Oh traitors and bawds; how earnestly are you set a work, and how ill requited? why should our endeavour be so desir'd, and the performance so loath'd? What Verse for it? what instance for it? let me see,
Full merrily the humble Bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his hony, and his sting;
And being once subdu'd in armed tail,
Sweet hony, and sweet notes together fail.
Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloaths,
As many as be here of Pandars hall,
Your eyes half out weep out at Pandar's fall:
Or if you cannot weep, yet give some grones;
Though not for me, yet for your akingbones:
Brethren and sisters of the hold-dore trade,
Some two months hence, my will shall here be made:
It should be now, but that my fear is this,
Some galled Goose of Winchester would hiss:
Till then, Ile swear, and seek about for eases;
And at that time bequeath you my diseases. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of Coriolanus

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter a Company of Mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other weapons.

1 Citizen.

BEfore we proceed any further, hear me ſpeak.

All. Speak, Speak.

1 Cit. You are all reſolv'd rather to die than to famiſh?

All. Reſolv'd, reſolv'd.

1 Cit. Firſt you know, Caius Martius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'l have Corn at our own price. Is't a Verdict?

All. No more talking on't, Let it be done, away, away.

2 Cit. One word, good Citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor Citizens, the Patricians good: what Authority ſurfets on, would relieve us; If they would yield us but the ſuperfluity while it were wholeſome, we might gueſs they relieved us humanely: But they think we are too dear; the leanneſs that afflicts us, the object of our miſery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance, our ſufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our Pikes, ere we become racks. For the Gods know, I ſpeak this in hunger for Bread, not in thirſt for Revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed eſpecially againſt Caius Martius?

All. Againſt him firſt: He's a very dog to the Commonalty.

2 Cit. Conſider you what Services he ha's done for his Country?

1 Cit. Very well, and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himſelf with being proud.

All. Nay, but ſpeak not maliciouſly.

1 Cit. I ſay unto you, what he hath done Famouſly, he did it to that end: though ſoft conſcienc'd men can be content to ſay it was for his Country, he did it to pleaſe his Mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his Nature, you account a Vice in him: You muſt in no way ſay he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I muſt not, I need not be barren of Accuſations, he hath faults (with ſurplus) to tire in repetition.

Shouts within.

What ſhouts are thoſe? The other ſide a'th' City is riſen: why ſtay we prating here? To th'Capitol.

All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft, who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath alwayes lov'd the people.

1 Cit. He's one honeſt enough, would all the reſt were ſo.

Men. VVhat works my Countrymen in hand?
VVhere go you with your Bats and Clubs? The matter,
Speak I pray you.

2 Cit. Our buſineſs is not unknown to th'Senat, they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'l ſhew'm in deeds: they ſay poor Suters have ſtrong breaths, they ſhall know we have ſtrong arms too.

Men. VVhy Maſters, my good Friends, mine honeſt
Neighbours, will you undo your ſelves?

2 Cit. VVe cannot Sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you Friends, moſt charitable care
Have the Patricians of you for your wants,
Your ſuffering in this dearth, you may as well
Strike at the Heaven with your ſtaves, as lift them
Againſt the Roman State, whoſe courſe will on
The way it takes: cracking ten thouſand Curbs
Of more ſtrong link'd aſunder, than can ever
Appear in your impediment. For the Dearth,
The Gods, not the Patricians make it, and
Your knees to them (not arms) muſt help. Alack,
You are tranſported by Calamity
Thither where more attends you, and you ſlander
The Helms o'th' State; who care for you like Fathers,
VVhen you curſe them, as Enemies.

2 Cit. Care for us? True indeed, they ne'r cared for us yet. Suffer us to famiſh, and their Store-houſes cramm'd with Grain: Make Edicts for Uſury, to ſupport Uſurers; repeal daily any wholeſome Act eſtabliſhed againſt the rich, and provide more peircing Statutes daily, to chain up and reſtrain the poor. If the VVars eat us not up, they will, and ther's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you muſt
Confeſs your ſelves wondrous Malicious,
Or be accus'd of Folly. I ſhall tell you
A pretty tale, it may be you have heard it,
But ſince it ſerves my purpoſe, I will venture
To ſcale't a little more.

2 Cit. Well,
Ile hear it ſir: yet you muſt not think
To fobb off our diſgrace with a tale:
But and't pleaſe you deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the bodies members
Rebell'd againſt the belly; thus accuſed it:
That only like a Gulf it did remain

I'th'

I'th' midd'ſt a'th'body, idle and unactive,
Still cubbording the Viand, never bearing
Like labour with the reſt, where th'other Inſtruments
Did ſee, and hear, deviſe, inſtruct, walk, feel,
And mutually participate, did miniſter
Unto the appetite; and affection common
Of the whole body; the Belly anſwers.

2 Cit. Well ſir, what anſwer made the Belly.

Men. Sir, I ſhall tell you with a kind of Smile,
Which ne'r came from the Lungs, but even thus:
For look you I may make the belly ſmile,
As well as ſpeak; it tantingly replyed
To'th' diſcontented Members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receit: even ſo moſt fitly,
As you malign our Senators, for that
They are not ſuch as you.

2 Cit. Your Bellies anſwer: What
The Kingly crown'd head, the vigilant eye,
The Counſellor Heart, the Arm our Souldier,
Our Steed the Leg, the Tongue our Trumpeter;
With other Muniments and petty helps
In this our Fabrick, if that they———

Men. What then? Foreme, this fellow ſpeaks.
What then? What then?

2 Cit. Should by the Cormorant belly be reſtrain'd,
Who is the ſink a'th' body.

Men. Well, what then?

2 Cit. The former Agents, if they did complain,
What could the Belly anſwer?

Men. I will tell you,
If you'l beſtow a ſmall (of what you have little)
Patience a while; you'ſt hear the Bellies anſwer.

2 Cit. Y'are long about it.

Men. Note me this good friend;
Your moſt grave Belly was deliberate,
Not raſh like his Accuſers, and thus anſwered;
True is it my Incorporate Friends (quoth he)
That I receive the general food at firſt
Which you do live upon: and fit it is,
Becauſe I am the Store-houſe, and the Shop
Of the whole Body. But, if you do remember,
I ſend it through the Rivers of your blood
Even to the Court, the Heart, to th'ſeat o'th'Brain,
And through the Cranks and Offices of man,
The ſtrongeſt Nerves, and ſmall inferiour Veins
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live. And though that all at once
(You my good Friends, this ſayes the Belly) mark me.

2 Cit. I ſir, well, well.

Men. Though all at once, cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my Awdit up, that all
From me do back receive the flowr of all,
And leave me but the Bran. What ſay you to't?

2 Cit. It was an anſwer, how apply you this?

Men. The Senators of Rome, are this good Belly,
And you the mutinous Members: For examine
Their Counſels, and their Care; diſgeſt things rightly,
Touching the Weal a'th' Common, you ſhall find
No publique benefit which you receive
But it proceeds, or comes from them to you,
And no way from your ſelves. What do you think?
You, the great Toe of this Aſſembly?

2 Cit. I the great Toe? Why the great Toe?

Men. For that being one o'th' loweſt, baſeſt, pooreſt
Of this moſt wiſe Rebellion, thou goeſt formoſt:
Thou Raſcal, that art worſt in blood to run,
Lead'ſt firſt to win ſome vantage.
But make you ready your ſtiff bats and clubs,
Rome, and her Rats, are at the point of battel,
The one ſide muſt have bail.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hayl, Noble Martius.

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter you diſſentious rogues?
That rubbing the poor Itch of your Opinion,
Make your ſelves ſcabs.

2 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you Curs,
That like not Peace, nor Warr? The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that truſts to you,
Where he ſhould find you Lions, finds you Hares:
Where Foxes, Geeſe you are: No ſurer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the Ice,
Or Hailſtone in the Sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy, whoſe offence ſubdues him,
And curſe that Juſtice did it. Who deſerves Greatneſs,
Deſerves your Hate: and your Affections are
A ſickmans Appetite; who deſires moſt that
Which would encreaſe his evil. He that depends
Upon your favours, ſwims with finns of Lead,
And hews down Oaks, with ruſhes. Hang ye: truſt ye?
With every Minute you do change a Mind,
And call him Noble, that was now your Hate:
Him vilde, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in theſe ſeveral places of the City,
You cry againſt the Noble Senate, who
(Under the Gods) keep you in awe, which elſe
VVould feed on one another? VVhat's their ſeeking?

Men. For Corn at their own rates, whereof they ſay
The City is well ſtor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em: They ſay,
They'l ſit by th'fire, and preſume to know
What's done i'th' Capitol: Who's like to riſe,
Who thrives, and who declines: Side factions, & give out
Conjectural Marriages, making parties ſtrong,
And feebling ſuch as ſtand not in their liking,
Below their cobled Shooes. They ſay ther's grain enough.
VVould the Nobility lay aſide their ruth,
And let me uſe my Sword, I'de make a Quarry
VVith thouſands of theſe quarter'd ſlaves, as high
A I could pick my Lance.

Men. Nay theſe are almoſt thoroughly perſwaded:
For though abundantly they lack diſcretion
Yet are they paſſing Cowardly. But I beſeech you,
VVhat ſays the other Troop?

Mar. They are diſſolv'd: Hang 'em;
They ſaid they were an hungry, ſigh'd forth Proverbs
That Hunger broke ſtone walls: that dogs muſt eat
That meat was made for mouths. That the gods ſent not
Corn for the Rich men only: VVith theſe ſhreds
They vented their Complainings, which being anſwer'd
And a petition granted them, a ſtrange one,
To break the heart of generoſity,
And make bold power look pale, they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns a'th' Moon,
Shooting their Emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five Tribunes to defend their vulgar wiſdoms
Of their own choice. One's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not. Sdeath,

The

The rabble ſhould have firſt unroo'ſt the City
Ere ſo prevail'd with me; it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater Themes
For Inſurrections arguing.
Menen. This is ſtrange.
Mar. Go get you home you Fragments.
Enter a Meſſenger haſtily.
Meſ. Where's Caius Martius?
Mar. Here: whats the matter?
Meſ. The news is ſir, the Volcies are in Arms.
Mar. I am glad on't, then we ſhall ha means to vent
Our muſty ſuperfluity. See our beſt Elders.

Enter Sicinius Velutus, Annius Brutus Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Senatours.

1 Sen. Martius tis true, that you have lately told us,
The Volcies are in Arms.
Mar. They have a Leader,
Tullus Auffidius that will put you too't:
I ſin in envying his Nobility:
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wiſh me only he.
Com. You haye fought together?
Mar. Were half to half the world by th'ears, and he Upon my party, Ide revolt to make
Onely my warres with him. He is a Lion
That I am proud to hunt.
1. Sen. Then worthy Martius,
Attend upon Cominius to theſe Wars.
Com. It is your former promiſe.
Mar. Sir it is,
And I am conſtant: Titus Lucius, thou
Shalt ſee me once more ſtrike at Tullus face.
What art thou ſtiff? Stand'ſt out?
Tit. No Caius Martius,
Ile lean upon one Crutch, and fight with tother;
Ere ſtay behind this Buſineſs.
Men. Oh true-bred.
Sen. Your company to'th'Capitol, where I know
Our greateſt Friends attend us.
Tit. Lead you on: Follow Cominius, we muſt follow you, right worthy you Priority.
Com. Noble Martius.
Sen. Hence to your homes, be gone.
Mar. Nay let them follow,
The Volcies have much Corn: take theſe Rats thither,
To gnaw their Garners. Worſhipfull Mutiners,
Your valour puts well forth: Pray follow. Exeunt.
Citizens ſteal away. Manent Sicin, and Brutus.
Sicin. Was ever man ſo proud as is this Martius?
Bru. He has no equal.
Sic. When we were choſen Tribunes for the people--
Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes.
Sic. Nay, but his taunts.
Bru. Being mov'd, he will not ſpare to gird the Gods.
Sic. Bemock the modeſt Moon.
Bru. The preſent Warrs devour him, he is grown
Too proud to be ſo valiant.
Sicin. Such a Nature, tickled with good ſucceſs, diſdains the ſhadow which he treads on at noon, but I do wonder, his inſolence can brook to be commanded under Cominius?
Bru. Fame, at the which he ayms,
In whom already he is well grac'd, cannot
Better he held, nor more attain'd than by
A place below the firſt: for what miſcarries
Shall be the Generals fault, though he perform
To th'utmoſt of a man, and giddy cenſure
Will then cry out of Martius: Oh, if he
Had born the buſineſs.
Sic. Beſides, if things go well,
Opinion that ſo ſticks on Martius, ſhall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.
Bru. Come: half all Cominus Honors are to Martius
Though Martius earn'd them not: and all his faults
To Martius ſhall be Honors, though indeed
In ought he merit not.
Sic. Let's hence and hear
How the diſpatch is made, and in what faſhion
More than his ſingularity, he goes
Upon this preſent Action.
Bru. Let's along. Exeunt.

Enter Tullus Auffidius with Senators of Coriolus.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is Auffidius,
That they of Rome are entred in our Counſails,
And know how we proceed.
Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever hath been thought on in this State
That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome
Had circumvention? 'tis not four dayes gone
Since I heard thence, theſe are the words, I think
I have the Letter here: yes here it is;
They have preſt a power, but it is not known
Whether for Eaſt or Weſt: the Dearth is great,
The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd
Cominius, Martius your old Enemy
(Who is of Rome worſe hated than of you)
And Titus Lartius, a moſt valiant Roman,
Theſe three lead on this Preparation
Whither 'tis bent: moſt likely, 'tis for you:
Conſider of it.
1 Sen. Our Armie's in the Field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To anſwer us.
Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when
They needs muſt ſhew themſelves, which in the hatching
It ſeem'd appear'd to Rome. By the diſcovery,
We ſhall be ſhorten'd in our aym, which was
To take in many Towns, ere (almoſt) Rome
Should know we are a-foot.
2 Sen. Noble Auffidius,
Take your commiſſion, hie you to your Bands,
Let us alone to guard Coriolus
If they ſet down before's: for the remove
Bring up your Army: but (I think) you'l find
Th'have not prepar'd for us.
Auf. O doubt not that,
I ſpeak from certainties. Nay more,
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your Honors.
If we, and Caius Martius chance to meet,
'Tis ſworn between us, we ſhall ever ſtrike
Till one can do no more.
All. The Gods aſſiſt you.
Auf. And keep your Honors ſafe.
1 Sen. Farewel.
2 Sen. Farewel.
All. Farewel. Exeunt omnes.

Enter

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Martius: They set them down on two low stools and sow.

Volu. I pray you daughter sing, or express your self in a more comfortable sort: If my Son were my Husband, I should freelier rejoyce in that absence wherein he wonn Honor, than in the embracements of his Bed, where he should show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only Son of my womb; when youth with comlinesse pluck'd all gaze his way; when for a day of Kings entreaties, a Mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I considering how Honour would become such a person, that it was no better than Picture-like to hang by th'wall, if renown made it not stirr, was pleas'd to let him seek danger, where he was like to find fame: To a cruel Warr I sent him, from whence he returu'd, his brows bound with Oak. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a Man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Virg. But had he died in the Businesse Madam, how then?

Volum. Then his good report should have been my Son, I therein would have found issue. Here me professe sincerily, had I a dozen sons each in my love alike, and none lesse dear than thine, and my good Martius, I had rather had eleven dye Nobly for their Countrey, than one voluptuously surfet out of Action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Virg. Beseech you give me leave to retire my self.

Volum. Indeed you shall not:
Me thinks, I hear hither your Husbands Drum:
See him pluck Auffidius down by th'hair:
(As children from a Bear) the Volcies shunning him:
Me think, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,
Come on ye Cowards, you were got in fear
Though you were born in Rome; his bloody brow
With his mail'd hand, then wiping, forth he goes
Like to a Harvest man, what's task'd to mote
Or all, or lose his hire.

Virg. His bloudy Brow? Oh Jupiter, no blood.

Volum. Away you Fool; it more becomes a man
Than gilt his Trophy. The brests of Hecuba
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hectors forehead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords Contending: tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens bless my Lord from fell Auffidius.

Vol. He'l beat Auffidius head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Enter Valeria with an Usher, and a Gentlewoman.

Val. My Ladies both good day to you.

Vol. Sweet Madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your Ladyship.

Val. How de you both? You are manifest house-keepers. What are you sowing here? A fine spot in good faith. How does your little Son?

Vir. I thank your Lady-ship: Well good Madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a Drum, than look upon his Schoolmaster.

Val. A my word the Fathers Son: Ile swear 'tis a very pretty boy. A my troth, I look'd upon him a Wednesday half an hour together: ha's such a confirm'd countenance. I saw him run after a gilded Butterfly, and when he caught it, he let it go again, and after it again, and over and over he comes, and up again: catcht it again: or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it. Oh, I warrant how he mammockt it.

Vol. One on's Fathers moods.

Val. Indeed la, 'tis a noble child.

Virg. A Crack Madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery, I must have you play the idle Huswife with me this after noon.

Virg. No (good Madam)
I will not out of dores.

Val. Not out of dores?

Volum. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed no, by your patience; Ile not over the threshold, till my Lord return from the Wars.

Val. Fie, you confine your self most unreasonably: Come, you must go visit the good Lady that lies in.

Virg. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers: but I cannot go thither.

Volum. Why I pray you?

Virg. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses absence, did but fill Ithaca full of Mothes. Come, I would your Cambrick were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pitty. Come you shall go with us.

Virg. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not forth.

Val. In truth la go with me, and Ile tell you excellent news of your Husband.

Vir. Oh good Madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily I do not jest with you: there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed Madam?

Val. In earnest it's true; I heard a Senatour speak it. Thus it is: the Volcies have an Army forth, against whom Cominius the General is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your Lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their City Coriolus, they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief Wars. This is true on mine Honor, and so I pray go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse good Madam, I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone Lady, as she is now:
She will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth I think she would:
Fare you well then. Come good sweet Lady.
Prithee Virgilia turn thy solemnesse out a dore,
And go along with us.

Virg. No
At a word Madam; indeed I must not,
I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then Farewel. Exeunt Ladies.

Enter Martius, Titus Lartius, with Drum and Colours, with Captains and Souldiers, as before the City Coriolus: to them a Messenger.

Mart. Yonder comes News:
A Wager they have met.

Lar. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lar. Agreed.

Mar.

Mar. Say, ha's our General met the Enemy?
Meſſ. They lye in view, but have not ſpoke as yet.
Lart. So, the good horſe is mine.
Mart. Ile buy him of you.
Lar. No, Ile not ſell, nor give him; Lend him you I wil
For half a hundred years; Summon the Town.
Mar. How farr off lies theſe Armies?
Meſſ. Within this mile and half.
Mar. Then ſhall we hear their Larum, and they Ours.
Now Mars, I prithee make us quick in work,
That we with ſmoaking ſwords may march from hence
To help our fielded Friends. Come, blow thy blaſt.

They Sound a Parley: Enter two Senators with others on the Walls of Coriolus.

Tullus Auffidius, is he within your Walls?
1 Senat. No, nor a man that fears you leſs than he,
That's leſſer than a little: Drum a far off.
Heark, our Drums
Are bringing forth our youth: We'l break our Walls
Rather than they ſhall pound us up, our Gates,
Which yet ſeem ſhut, we have but pin'd with Ruſhes,
They'l open of themſelves. Hark you farr off
Alarum farr off.
There is Auffidius. Liſt what work he makes
Amongſt your cloven Army.
Mar. Oh they are at it.
Lar. Their noiſe be our inſtruction. Ladders hoa.

Enter the Army of the Volcies.

Mar. They fear us not, but iſſue forth their City.
Now put your Shields before your hearts, and fight
With hearts more proof than Shields.
Advance brave Titus,
They do diſdain us much beyond our Thoughts,
Which makes me ſweat with wrath. Com on my fellows
He that retires, Ile take him for a Volcie,
And he ſhall feel mine edge.
Alarum, the Romans are beat back to their Trenches.
Enter Martius Curſing.
Mar. All the contagion of the South, light on you,
You ſhames of Rome: you Herd of Biles and Plagues
Plaiſter you o're, that you may be abhorr'd
Farther than ſeen, and one infect another
Againſt the Wind a mile: you ſouls of Geeſe,
That bear the ſhapes of men, how have you run
From Slaves, that Apes would beat? Pluto and Hell,
All hurt behind, backs red, and faces pale
With flight and agued fear! mend and charge home,
Or by the fires of heaven, Ile leave the Foe,
And make my Warrs on you: Look to't: Come on,
If you'l ſtand faſt, we'l beat them to their Wives,
As they us to our Trenches followed.
Another Alarum, and Martius follows them to the gates, and is ſhut in.
So, now the gates are ope: now prove good Seconds,
'Tis for the followers, Fortune widens them,
Not for the flyers: Mark me, and do the like.
Enter the Gates.
1 Sol. Fool-hardineſs, not I.
2 Sol. Nor I.
1 Sol. See they have ſhut him in. Alarum continues.
All. To th'pot I warrant him. Enter Titus Lartius.
Tit. What is become of Martius?
All. Slain (Sir) doubtleſs.
1 Sol. Following the Flyers at the very heels,
With them he enters; who upon the ſodain
Clapt to their Gates: he is himſelf alone,
To anſwer all the City.
Lar. Oh Noble Fellow!
Who ſenſibly out-dares his ſenceleſs Sword,
And when it bows, ſtand'ſt, up: Thou art left Martius,
A Carbuncle intire, as big as thou art,
Were not ſo rich a Jewel. Thou was't a Souldier
Even to Calves wiſh, not fierce and terrible
Only in ſtrokes, but with thy grim looks, and
The Thunder-like percuſſion of thy ſounds
Thou mad'ſt thine enemies ſhake, as if the World
Were feavorous, and did tremble.

Enter Martius bleeding, aſſaulted by the Enemy.
1 Sol. Look Sir.
Lar. O 'tis Martius.
Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike,
They fight, and all enter the City.
Enter certain Romans with ſpoils.
1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2 Rom. And I this.
3 Rom. A Murrain on't, I took this for Silver. Exeunt.
Alarum continues ſtill a farr off.
Enter Martius, and Titus with a Trumpet.
Mar. See here theſe movers, that do prize their hours
At a crack'd Drachme: Cuſhions, Leaden Spoons,
Irons of a Doit, Dublets that Hangmen would
Bury with thoſe that wore them, Theſe baſe ſlaves,
Ere yet the fight be done, pack up, down with them.
And hark, what noiſe the General makes: To him,
There is the man of my ſouls hate, Auffidius,
Peircing our Romans: Then Valiant Titus take
Convenient Numbers to make good the City,
Whil'ſt I with thoſe that have the ſpirit, will haſte
To help Cominius.
Lar. Worthy Sir, thou bleed'ſt,
Thy exerciſe hath been too violent,
For a ſecond courſe of Fight.
Mar. Sir, praiſe me not:
My work hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well:
The blood I drop, is rather Phyſical
Than dangerous to me. To Auffidius thus, I will appear
Lar. Now the fair Goddeſs Fortune, (and fight.
Fall deep in love with thee, and her great charms
Miſguide thy Oppoſers ſwords, Bold Gentleman:
Proſperity be thy Page.
Mar. Thy Friend no leſs,
Than thoſe ſhe placeth higheſt: So farewel.
Lar. Thou worthieſt Martius,
Go ſound thy Trumpet in the Market place,
Call thither all the Officers a'th' Town,
Where they ſhall know our mind. Away. Exeunt.
Enter Cominius as it were in retire, with ſouldiers.
Com. Breath you my friends, well fought, we are come off
Like Romans, neither fooliſh in our ſtands,
Nor Cowardly in retire: Believe me Sirs,
We ſhall be charg'd again. Whiles we have ſtrook
By interims and conveying guſts, we have heard
The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods,
Lead their ſucceſſes, as we wiſh our own,
That both our powers, with ſmiling Fronts encountring,
May give you thankful Sacrifice. Thy News?
Enter a Meſſenger.
Meſ. The Citizens of Coriolus have iſſued,
And given to Lartius and to Martius Battel.

I ſaw

I saw our party to their Trenches driven,
And then I came away.
Com. Though thou speakest truth,
Me thinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?
Mes. Above an hour, my Lord.
Com. 'Tis not a mile: briefly we heard their drums.
How could'st thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy News so late?
Mes. Spies of the Volcies
Held me in chace, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about, else had I sir
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Martius.

Com. Whose yonder,
That does appear as he were Flead? O Gods,
He has the stamp of Martius, and I have
Before time seen him thus.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The Shepherd knows not Thunder from a Taber,
More than I know the sound of Martius Tongue
From every meaner man.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. I, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.
Mar. Oh! let me clip ye
In Arms as sound, as when I woo'd in heart;
As merry, as when our Nuptial day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.
Com. Flower of Warriors, how is't with Titus Lartius?
Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile,
Ransoming him, or pittying, threatning th' other;
Holding Coriolus in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning Grey-hound in the Leash,
To let him slip at will.
Com. Where is that Slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your Trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.
Mar. Let him alone,
He did inform the truth: but for our Gentlemen,
The common file, (a plague Tribunes for them)
The Mouse ne'r shunn'd the Cat, as they did budge
From Rascals worse than they.
Com. But how prevail'd you?
Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think:
Where is the enemy? Are you Lords a'th' Field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?
Com. Martius we have at disadvantage fought,
And did retire to win our purpose.
Mar. How lies their battel? Know you on what side
They have plac'd their men of trust?
Com. As I guess Martius,
Their Bands I'th' Vaward are the Ancients
Of their best trust: O're them Auffidius,
Their very heart of Hope.
Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the Battels wherein we have fought,
By th'Blood we have shed together,
By th'Vows we have made
To endure Friends, that you directly set me
Against Auffidius, and his Antiats,
And that you not delay the present (but Filling the air with Swords advanc'd) and Darts,
We prove this very hour.
Com. Though I could wish,
You were conducted to a gentle Bath,
And Balms applyed to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking, take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.
Mar. Those are they
That most are willing; if any such be here;
(As it were sin to doubt) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd, if any fear
Lesser his person, than an ill report:
If any think, brave death out-weighs bad life,
And that his Countries dearer than himself,
Let him alone: or so many so minded,
Wave thus to express his disposition,
And follow Martius.
They all shout, and wave their swords, take him up in their Arms, and cast up their Caps.
Oh me alone, make you a sword of me:
If these shews be not outward, which of you
But is four Volcies? None of you, but is Able to bear against the great Auffidius
A Shield, as hard as his. A certain number
(Though thanks to all) must I select from all:
The rest shall bear the business in some other fight
(As cause will be obey'd:) please you to march,
And four shall quickly draw out my Command,
Which men are best inclin'd.
Com. March on my Fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall
Divide in all, with us. Exeunt.

Titus Lartius, having set a guard upon Coriolus, going with Drum and Trumpet toward Cominius, and Caius Martius, Enters with a Lieutenant, other Souldiers, and a Scout.

Lar. So, let the Ports be guarded; keep your Duties
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch
Those Centuries to our aid, the rest will serve
For a short holding; if we lose the Field,
We cannot keep the Town.
Lieu. Fear not our care Sir.
Lar. Hence; and shut your gates upon's:
Our Guider come, to th'Roman Camp conduct us. Exit.
Alarum as in Battel.

Enter Martius and Auffidius at several doors.
Mar. Ile fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worse than a Promise-breaker.
Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afrik owns a Serpent I abhorr
More than thy Fame and Envy: Fix thy foot.
Mar. Let the first Budger die the others Slave,
And the Gods doom him after.
Auf. If I flie Martius, hollow me like a Hare.
Mar. Within these three hours Tullus
Alone I fought in your Coriolus walls,
And made what work I pleas'd: 'Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me maskt, for thy Revenge
Wrench up thy power to th'highest.
Auf. Wer't thou the Hector,
That was the whip of your bragg'd Progeny,
Thou should'st not scape me here.
Here they fight, and certain Volcies come in the aid of Auffid. Martius fights till they be driven in breathless.
Officious and not valiant, you have sham'd me
In your condemned Seconds.
Flourish

Flouriſh. Alarum. A Retreat is ſounded. Enter at one Dore Cominius, with the Romans: At another Dore Martius, with his Arm in a Scarf.

Com. If I ſhould tell thee o're this thy days work,
Thou't not believe thy deeds: but Ile report it,
Where Senators ſhall mingle tears with ſmiles,
Where great Patricians ſhall attend, and ſhrug,
I'th'end admire: where Ladies ſhall be frighted,
And gladly quak'd, hear more: where the dull Tribunes,
That with the fuſty Plebeans, hate thine Honors,
Shall ſay againſt their hearts, We thank the Gods
Our Rome hath ſuch a Souldier.
Yet cam'ſt thou to a Morſel of this Feaſt,
Having fully din'd before.

Enter Titus with his Power, from the Purſute.

Titus Lartius. Oh General:
Here is the Steed, we the Capariſon:
Hadſt thou beheld———
Mar. Pray now, no more:
My Mother, who ha's a Charter to extoll her blood,
When ſhe do's praiſe me, grieves me:
I have done as you have done, that's what I can;
Induc'd as you have been, that's for my Country:
He that has but effected his good will,
Hath overta'n mine Act.
Com. You ſhall not be the Grave of your deſerving,
Rome muſt know the value of her own:
'Twere a Concealment worſe than a Theft,
No leſs than a Traducement,
To hide your doings, and to ſilence that,
Which to the ſpire, and top of praiſes vouch'd,
Would ſeem but modeſt: therefore I beſeech you,
In ſign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, before our Army hear me.
Mar. I have ſome wounds upon me, and they ſmart
To hear themſelves remembred.
Com. Should they not:
Well might they feſter 'gainſt Ingratitude,
And tent themſelves with death: of all the Horſes,
Whereof we have ta'n good, and good ſtore of all,
The Treaſure in this field atchiev'd, and City,
We render you the Tenth, to be ta'n forth,
Before the common diſtribution,
At your only choice.
Mar. I thank you General:
But cannot make my heart conſent to take
A Bribe, to pay my Sword: I do refuſe it,
And ſtand upon my common part with thoſe,
That have beheld the doing.

A long flouriſh. They all cry, Martius, Martius, caſt up their Caps and Launces: Cominius and Lartius ſtand bare.

Ma. May theſe ſame Inſtruments, which you prophane,
Never ſound more: when Drums and Trumpets ſhall
I'th'field prove flatterers, let Courts and Cities be
Made of all falſe-fac'd ſoothing:
When Steel grows ſoft, as the Paraſites Silk,
Let him be made an Overture for th' wars:
No more I ſay, for that I have not waſh'd
My Noſe that bled, or foil'd ſome debile wretch,
Which without note, here's many elſe have done,
You ſhoot me forth in acclamations hyperbolical,
As if I lov'd my little ſhould be dieted
In praiſes, ſawc'ſt with Lies.
Com. Too modeſt are you:
More cruel to your good report, than grateful
To us, that give you truly: by your patience,
If againſt your ſelf you be incens'd, we'l put you
(Like one that means his proper harm) in Manacles,
Then reaſon ſafely with you: Therefore be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Martius
Wears this wars garland: in token of the which,
My noble Steed, known to the Camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging, and from this time,
For what he did before Coriolus, call him;
With all th'applauſe and clamor of the Hoaſt,
Martius Caius Coriolanus. Bear th'addition Nobly ever?

Flouriſh. Trumpets ſound, and Drums.

Omnes. Martius Caius Coriolanus.
Mar. I will go waſh:
And when my Face is fair, you ſhall perceive
Whether I bluſh, or no: howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to ſtride your Steed, and at all times
To under-creſt your good Addition,
To th'fairneſs of my power.
Com. So, to our Tent:
Where ere we do repoſe us, we will write
To Rome of our ſucceſs: you Titus Lartius
Muſt to Coriolus back, ſend us to Rome
The beſt, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good, and ours.
Lar. I ſhall, my Lord.
Mar. The Gods begin to mock me:
I that now refus'd moſt Princely gifts,
Am bound to beg of my Lord General.
Com. Tak't, 'tis yours: what is't?
Mar. I ſometime lay here in Coriolus,
At a poor mans houſe: he us'd me kindly.
He cry'd to me: I ſaw him Priſoner:
But then Auffidius was within my view,
And wrath o're-whelm'd my pitty: I requeſt you
To give my poor Hoſt freedom.
Com. Oh well begg'd:
VVere he the Butcher of my Son, he ſhould
Be free as is the wind: deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Martius, his Name.
Mar. By Jupiter forgot:
I am weary, yea my memory is tyr'd:
Have we no wine here?
Com. Go we to our Tent:
The blood upon your Viſage dries, 'tis time
It ſhould be lookt too: come. Exeunt.

A flouriſh. Cornets. Enter Tullus Auffidius bloody, with two or three Souldiers.

Auf. The Town is ta'n,
Soul. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good Condition.
Auf. Condition?
I would I were a Roman, for I cannot,
Being a Voleie, be, that I am. Condition?
What good Condition can a Treaty find
I'th'part that is at mercy? five times, Martius,
I have fought with thee; ſo often haſt thou beat me:
And would'ſt do ſo, I think, ſhould we encounter

As

And often as we eat. By the Elements,
If ere again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: Mine Emulation
Hath not that honor in't it had: For where
I thought to crush him in an equal Force,
True Sword to Sword: Ile potch at him some way,
Or wrath, or Craft may get him.

Sol. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle: my valor's poison'd,
With only suffering stain by him: for him
Shall flie out of it self, nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick; nor Phane, nor Capitol,
The Prayers of Priests, nor times of Sacrifice:
Embarquements all of Fury, shall lift up
Their rotten Privilege, and Custom 'gainst
My hate to Martius. Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brothers Guard, even there
Against the hospitable Canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to th'City,
Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must Be Hostages for Rome.

Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the Cyprus grove. I pray you
('Tis South the City Mill) bring me word thither
How the world goes: that to the pace of it
I may spurr on my journey.

Sol. I shall sir.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius and Brutus.

Men. The Augurer tells me, we shall have news to night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Martius.

Sicin. Nature teaches Beasts to know their Friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolf love?

Sicin. The Lamb.

Men. I, to devour him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martius.

Bru. He's a Lamb indeed, that baes like a Bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a Lamb. You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both. Well sir.

Men. In what enormity is Martius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stor'd with all.

Sicin. Especially in Pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boast.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know, how you are censured here in the City, I mean of us a'th'right hand File, do you?

Bru. Why? how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of Pride now, will you not be angry?

Both. Well, well sir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of Occasion, will rob you of a great deal of Patience: Give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures (at the least) if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so; you blame Martius for being proud.

Brut. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone, for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too Infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of Pride: Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your necks, and make but an interiour survey of your good selves. Oh that you could!

Both. What then sir?

Men. Why then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy Magistrates (alias Fools) as any in Rome.

Sicin. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous Patritian, and one that loves a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of alaying Tiber in't: Said, to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint, hasty and Tinder-like upon, to trivial motion: One, that converses more with the Buttock of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such Weals-men as you are (I cannot call your Licurgusses) if the drink you give me, touch my Palat adversly, I make a crooked face at it. I can say, your Worships have deliver'd the matter well, when I find the Ass in compound, with the Major part of your syllables. And though I must be content to bear with those, that say you are reverend grave, yet they lye deadly, that tell you have good faces; if you see this in the Map of my Microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your beesom Conspectuities glean out of this Character, if I be known well enough too?

Bru. Come sir come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, your selves, nor any thing: you are ambitious, for poor knaves caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome Fore-noon, in hearing a cause between an Orendge wife, and a Forset-seller, and then rejourn the Controversie of three-pence to a second day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinch'd with the Collick, you make faces like Mummers, set up the bloody Flagg against all Patience, and in roaring for a Chamber-pot, dismiss the Controversie bleeding, the more intangled by your hearing: All the peace you make in their Cause, is calling both the parties Knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter gyber for the Table, than a necessary Bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very Priests must become Mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous Subjects as you are, when you speak best unto the purpose, It is not worth the wagging of your Beards, and your Beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a Botchers Cushion, or to be intomb'd in an Asses Pack-saddle; yet you must be saying, Martius is proud: who in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. God den to your Worships, more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the Heardsmen of the Beastly Plebeians. I will be bold to take my leave of you.

Brutus, and Sicinius. Aside,

Enter Volumnia and Valeria.

How now (my as Fair as Noble) Ladies, and the Moon were she Earthly, no Nobler; whither do you follow your Eyes so fast?

Volum. Honorable Menenius, my Boy Martius approches: for the love of Juno let's go.

Menen. Ha? Martius comming home?

Volum. I, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Menen. Take my Cap Jupiter, and I thank thee: hoo, Martius comming home?

2 Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Volum. Look, here's a Letter from him, the State hath another, his Wife another, and (I think) there's one at home for you.

Menen. I will make my very house reel to night: A Letter for me?

Virgil. Yes certain, there's a Letter for you, I saw't.

Menen. A Letter for me? it gives me an Estate of seven years health; in which time, I will make a Lip at the Physician: The most soveraign Prescription in Galen, is but Empericktique; and to this Preservative, of no better report than a Horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded?

Virgil. Oh no, no, no.

Volum. Oh, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Menen. So do I too, if it be not too much: brings a Victorie in his Pocket? the wounds become him.

Volum. On's Brows: Menenius, he comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Menen. Ha's he disciplin'd Auffidius soundly?

Volum. Titus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Auffidius got off.

Menen. And 'twas time for him too, Ile warrant him that: and he had stay'd by him, I would not have been so fiddious'd, for all the Chests in Corioles, and the Gold that's in them. Is the Senate possest of this?

Volum. Good Ladies let's go. Yes, yes, yes: The Senate ha's Letters from the General, wherein he gives my Son the whole Name of the Warr; he hath in this Action out-done his former deeds doubly.

Valer. In troth there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Menen. Wondrous? I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Virgil. The gods grant them true.

Volum. True? pow waw.

Mene. True? Ile be sworn they are true: where is he wounded, God save your good Worships? Martius is comming home: he ha's more cause to be proud: where is he wounded?

Volum. I'th'Sholder, and i'th'left Arm: there will be large Cicatrices to shew the People, when he shall stand for his place: he received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i'th'Body.

Men. One i'th'Neck, and two i'th' Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volum. He had, before this last Expedition, twenty five Wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty seven, every gash was an Enemies Grave. Hark, the Trumpets.

A shout, and Flourish.

Volum. These are the Ushers of Martius:
Before him, he carries Noise;
And behind him, he leaves Tears:
Death, that dark Spirit, in's nervy Arm doth lye,
Which being advanc'd, declines, and then men dye.

A Sonet. Trumpets sound.

Enter Cominius the General, and Titus Lartius: between them Coriolanus, crown'd with an Oaken Garland, with Captains and Souldiers, and a Herauld.

Hera. Know Rome, that all alone Martius did fight
Within Coriolus Gates: where he hath wonn,
With Fame, a Name to Martius Caius:
These in honor follows Martius Caius, Coriolanus.
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Sound. Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Corio. No more of this, it does offend my heart; pray now no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your Mother.

Corio. Oh! you have, I know, petition'd all the gods for my prosperity. Kneels.

Volum. Nay, my good Souldier, up:
My gentle Martius, worthy Caius,
And by deed-atchieving Honor newly nam'd,
What is it (Coriolanus) must I call thee?
But oh, thy Wife.

Corio. My gracious silence, hail:
Would'st thou have laugh'd, had I come Coffin'd home,
That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah my dear,
Such eyes the Widows in Coriolus wear,
And Mothers that lack Sons.

Men. Now the gods Crown thee.

Com. And live you yet? Oh my sweet Lady, pardon.

Volum. I know not where to turn.
Oh welcome home: and welcome General,
And y'are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand Welcomes:
I could weep, and I could laugh,
I am light, and heavy; welcome:
A Curse begin at very root on's heart,
That is not glad to see thee.
You are three, that Rome should dote on:
Yet by the faith of men, we have
Some old Crab-trees here at home,
That will not be grafted to your Relish.
Yet welcome Warriors:
We call a Nettle, but a Nettle;
And the faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Hera. Give way there, and go on:

Cor. Your Hand, and yours?
Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good Patricians must be visited,
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them, change of honors.

Volum. I have lived,
To see inherited my very Wishes,
And the Buildings of my Fancy:
Only there's one thing wanting,
Which (I doubt not) but our Rome
Will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good Mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way,
Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol. Flourish. Cornets

Exeunt in State, as before.

Enter

Enter Brutus and Sicinius.

Bru. All tongues ſpeak of him, and the bleared ſights
Are ſpectacled to ſee him. Your pratling Nurſe
Into a rapture lets her Baby cry,
While ſhe chats him: the Kitchin Malkin pinns
Her richeſt Lockram 'bout her reechy neck,
Clambring the Walls to eye him:
Stalls, Bulks, Windows, are ſmother'd up,
Leads fill'd, and Ridges hors'd
With variable Complexions; all agreeing
In earneſtneſs to ſee him: ſeld-ſhown Flamins
Do preſs 'mong the popular Throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar ſtation: our veil'd Dames
Commit the Warr of White and Damask
In their nicely gawded Cheeks, to th'wanton ſpoil
Of Phœbus burning Kiſſes: ſuch a poother,
As if that whatſoever God, who leads him,
Were ſlily crept into his humane powers,
And gave him graceful poſture.

Sicin. On the ſuddain, I warrant him Conſul.

Bru. Then our Office may, during his power, go ſleep.

Sici. He cannot temp'rately tranſport his honors,
From where he ſhould begin, and end, but will
Loſe thoſe he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sici. Doubt not,
The Commoners, for whom we ſtand, but they
Upon their antient malice, will forget
With the leaſt cauſe, theſe his new honors,
Which that he will give them, make I as little queſtion,
As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him ſwear
Were he to ſtand for Conſul, never would he Appear i'th' Market place, nor on him put
The Naples Veſture of humility,
Nor ſhewing (as the manner is) his Wounds
To th'people, beg their ſtinking Breaths.

Sici. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word:
Oh he would miſs it, rather than carry it,
But by the ſute of the Gentry to him,
And the deſire of the Nobles.

Sici. I wiſh no better, than have him hold that purpoſe, and to put it in execution.

Bru. 'Tis moſt like he will.

Sici. It ſhall be to him then, as our good wills, a ſure deſtruction.

Bru. So it muſt fall out
To him, or our Authorities, for an end.
We muſt ſuggeſt the People, in what hatred
He ſtill hath held them: that to's power he would
Have made them Mules, ſilenc'd their Pleaders,
And diſproportioned their Freedoms; holding them,
In humane Action, and Capacity,
Of no more Soul, nor fitneſs for the world,
Than Camels in their Warr, who have their Provand
Only for bearing Burthens, and ſore blows
For ſinking under them.

Sici. This (as you ſay) ſuggeſted,
At ſome time, when his ſoaring inſolence
Shall teach the People, which time ſhall not want,
If he be put upon't, and that's as eaſie,
As to ſet Doggs on Sheep, will be his fire
To kindle their dry Stubble: and their Blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Meſſ. You are ſent for to the Capitol:
'Tis thought, that Martius ſhall be Conſul:
I have ſeen the dumb men throng to ſee him,
And the blind to hear him ſpeak: Matrons flung Gloves,
Ladies and Maids their Scarffs, and Handkerchers,
Upon him as he paſs'd: the Nobles bended
As to Joves Statue, and the Commons made
A Shower, and Thunder, with their Caps, and Shouts:
I never ſaw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol,
And carry with us ears and eyes for th'time,
But hearts for the event.

Sici. Have with you. Exeunt.

Enter two Officers, to lay Cuſhions, as it were, in the Capitol.

1 Off. Come, come, they are almoſt here: how many ſtand for Conſulſhips?

2 Off. Three, they ſay: but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow, but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2 Off. 'Faith, there hath been many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne'r loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: ſo that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love, or hate him, manifeſts the true knowledge he ha's in their diſpoſition, and out of his Noble careleſneſs lets them plainly ſee't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he waved indifferently, 'twixt doing them neither good, nor harm: but he ſeeks their hate with greater devotion, than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone, that may fully diſcover him their oppoſite. Now to ſeem to affect the malice and diſpleaſure of the People, is as bad, as that which he diſlikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deſerved worthily of his Countrey,
And his aſcent is not by ſuch eaſie degrees as thoſe, who having been ſupple and courteous to the People, Bonnetted, without any further deed, to have them at all into their eſtimation, and report: but he hath ſo planted his honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their Tongues to be ſilent, and not confeſs ſo much, were a kind of ingrateful injury: to report otherwiſe, were a Malice, that giving it ſelf the Lye, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every Ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him, he's a worthy man: make way, they are comming.

A Sonnet. Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them; Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius the Conſul: Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themſelves: Coriolanus ſtands.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volcies,
And to ſend for Titus Lartius: it remains,
As the main Point of this our after-meeting,

To gratifie his Noble ſervice, that hath
Thus ſtood for his Country. Therefore pleaſe you,
Moſt reverend and grave Elders, to deſire
The preſent Conſul, and laſt General,
In our well-found Succeſſes, to report
A little of that worthy Work perform'd
By Martius Caius Coriolanus: whom
We met here, both to thank, and to remember
With honors like himſelf.

1 Sen. Speak good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,
Rather our ſtates defective for requital,
Than we to ſtretch it out. Maſters a'th'People,
We do requeſt your kindeſt ear, and after,
Your loving motion toward the common Body,
To yield what paſſes here.

Sicin. We are convented upon a pleaſing Treaty, and have hearts inclinable to honor and advance the Theam of our Aſſembly.

Bru. Which the rather we ſhall be bleſt to do, if he remember a kinder value of the People, than he hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been ſilent: Pleaſe you to hear Cominius ſpeak?

Bru. Moſt willingly: but yet my Caution was more pertinent than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people, but tye him not to be their Bedfellow: Worthy Cominius ſpeak.

Coriolanus riſes, and offers to go away.

Nay, keep your place.

Senat. Sir, Coriolanus, never ſhame to hear
What you have Nobly done.

Corio. Your honors pardon:
I had rather have my Wounds to heal again,
Than hear ſay how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope my words dis-bench'd you not?

Corio. No Sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me ſtay, I fled from words.
You ſooth'd not, therefore hurt not: but your people,
I love them as they weigh——

Men. Pray now ſit down.

Corio. I had rather have one ſcratch my Head i'th'Sun,
When the Alarum were ſtruck, than idly ſit
To hear my Nothings monſter'd. Exit Coriolanus.

Men. Maſters of the People,
Your multiplying Spawn, how can he flatter?
That's thouſand to one good one, when you now ſee
He had rather venture all his Limbs for honor,
Than one on's Ears to hear it. Proceed Cominius.

Com. I ſhall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly: it is held,
That Valour is the chiefeſt Virtue, and
Moſt dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I ſpeak of, cannot in the World
Be ſingly counter-poys'd. At ſixteen years,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all praiſe I point at, ſaw him fight,
When with his Amazonian Chin he drove
The brizled Lips before him: he beſtrid
An o're-preſt Roman, and i'th'Conſuls view
Slew three oppoſers: Tarquins ſelf he met,
And ſtruck him on his Knee: in that days feats,
When he might act the woman in the Scene,
He prov'd beſt man i'th'field, and for his meed
Was Brow-bound with the Oak. His Pupil-age
Man-entred thus, he waited like a Sea,
And in the brunt of ſeventeen Battels ſince,
He lurcht all Swords o'th'Garland: for this laſt,
Before, and in Corio'us, let me ſay.
I cannot ſpeak him home: he ſtopt the flyers,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Turn terror into ſport: as Waves before
A Veſſel under ſayl, ſo men obey'd,
And fell below his Stem: his Sword (Deaths ſtamp)
Where it did mark, it took from face to foot:
He was a thing of Blood, whoſe every motion
Was trimm'd with dying Cries: alone he entred
The mortal Gate o'th'City, which he painted
With ſhunleſs defamy: aidleſs came off,
And with a ſudden re-inforcement ſtruck
Coriolus like a Planet: now all's this,
When by and by the din of Warr 'gan peirce
His ready ſence, then ſtraight his doubled ſpirit
Requickned what in fleſh was fatigate,
And to the Battel came he, where he did
Run reeking o're the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual ſpoyl; and till we call'd
Both field and City ours, he never ſtood
To eaſe his breſt with painting.

Men. Worthy man.

Senat. He cannot but with meaſure fit the honors which we deviſe him.

Com. Our ſpoyls he kickt at,
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common Muck o'th'World: he covets leſs
Than Miſery it ſelf would give, rewards his deeds
With doing them, and is content
To ſpend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right Noble, let him be call'd for.

Senat. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Enter Coriolanus.

Men. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee Conſul.

Corio. I do owe them ſtill my life, and Services.

Men. It then remains, that you do ſpeak to the People.

Corio. I do beſeech you,
Let me o're-leap that cuſtom: for I cannot
Put on the Gown, ſtand naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds ſake, to give their ſufferage:
Pleaſe you that I may paſs this doing.

Sicin. Sir, the people muſt have their Voices,
Neither will they bate one jot of Ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Pray you go fit you to the Cuſtom,
And take to you, as your Predeceſſors have,
Your honor with your form.

Corio. It is a part that I ſhall bluſh in acting,
And might well be taken from the People.

Bru. Mark you that.

Corio. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus,
Shew them th'unaking Skarrs, which I ſhould hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only.

Men. Do not ſtand upon't:
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpoſe to them, and to our Noble Conſul
Wiſh we all Joy, and Honor.

Senat.

Senat. To Coriolanus come all joy and honor.

Flouriſh Cornets.

Then Exeunt. Manet Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You ſee how he intends to uſe the People.

Sicin. May they perceive's intent: he will require them
As if he did contemn what he requeſted,
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'l inform them
Of our proceedings here on th'Market place,
I know they do attend us.

Enter ſeven or eight Citizens.

1 Cit. Once if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may Sir if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in our ſelves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: For, if he ſhew us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into thoſe wounds, and ſpeak for them: So if he tell us his noble deeds, we muſt alſo tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monſtrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a Monſter of the multitude; of the which, we being members, ſhould bring our ſelves to be monſtrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of a little help will ſerve: for once we ſtood up about the Corn, he himſelf ſtuck not to call us the many-headed Multitude.

3 Cit. We have been call'd ſo of many, not that our heads are ſome brown, ſome black, ſome Abram, ſome bald; but that our wits are ſo diverſly Colour'd; and truly I think, if all our wits were to iſſue out of one Scull, they would flye Eaſt, Weſt, North, South, and their conſent of one direct way, ſhould be at once to all the points a'th'Compaſs.

2 Cit. Think you ſo? Which way do you judge my wit would flye?

3 Cit. Nay your wit will not ſo ſoon out as another mans will, 'tis ſtrongly wedg'd up in a blockhead: but if it were at liberty, 'twould ſure Southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To loſe it ſelf in a Fogg, where being three parts melted away with rotten Dews, the fourth would return for Conſcience ſake, to help to get thee a Wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks, you may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all reſolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it, I ſay. If he would incline to the People, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gown of Humility, with Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the Gown of humility, mark his behaviour: we are not to ſtay all together, but to come by him where he ſtands, by ones, by twoes, and by threes. He's to make his requeſts by particulars, wherein every one of us ha's a ſingle Honor, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues, therefore follow me, and Ile direct you how you ſhall go by him.

All. Content, content.

Men. Oh Sir, you are not right; have you not known
The worthieſt men have don't?

Corio. What muſt I ſay, I pray Sir?
Plague upon't, I cannot bring
My tongue to ſuch a pace. Look Sir, my wounds,
I got them in my Countries Service, when
Some certain of your Brethren roar'd, and ran
From the noiſe of our own drums,

Men. Oh me the gods, you muſt not ſpeak of that,
You muſt deſire them to think upon you.

Corio. Think upon me? Hang 'em,
I would they would forget me, like the Virtues
Which our Divines loſe by 'em.

Men. You'l marr all,
Ile leave you: Pray you ſpeak to 'em, I pray you
In wholeſome manner. Exit.

Enter three of the Citizens.

Corio. Bid them waſh their Faces,
And keep their teeth clean: So here comes a brace,
You know the cauſe (Sir) of my ſtanding here.

3 Cit. We do Sir, tell us what hath brought you to't.

Corio. Mine own deſert.

2 Cit. Your own deſert?

Corio. I, not mine own deſire.

3 Cit. How not your own deſire?

Corio. No Sir, 'twas never my deſire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

3 Cit. You muſt think if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you.

Corio. Well then I pray, your price a'th'Conſulſhip.

1 Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Corio. Kindly ſir, I pray let me ha't: I have wounds to ſhew you, which ſhall be yours in private: your good voice Sir, what ſay you?

2 Cit. You ſhall ha't worthy Sir.

Corio. A match Sir, there's in all two worthy voices begg'd: I have your Almes, Adieu.

3 Cit. But this is ſomething odd.

2 Cit. And 'twere to give again: but 'tis no matter.

Exeunt. Enter two other Citizens.

Corio. Pray you now, if it may ſtand with the tune of your voices, that I may be Conſul, I have here the Cuſtomary Gown.

1. You have deſerved Nobly of your Country, and you have not deſerved Nobly.

Corio. Your Ænigma?

1. You have been a ſcourge to her enemies, you have been a Rod to her Friends, you have not indeed loved the Common People.

Corio. You ſhould account me the more Virtuous, that I have not been common in my Love, I will ſir flatter my ſworn Brother the People to earn a dearer eſtimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle: & ſince the wiſdome of their choice, is rather to have my hat, than my heart, I will practice the inſinuating nod, and be off to them moſt counterfitly, that is ſir, I will counterfit the bewitchment of ſome popular man, and give it bountiful to the deſires: Therefore beſeech you, I may be Conſul.

2 We hope to find you our friend: and therefore give you our voices heartily.

1. You have received many wounds for your Countrey.

Corio. I will not Seal your knowledge with ſhewing them. I will make much of your voices, and ſo trouble you no farther.

Both, The gods give you joy Sir heartily.

Corio. Moſt ſweet Voices:
Better it is to dye, better to ſterve,
Than crave the hire, which firſt we do deſerve.
Why in this Woolviſh gown ſhould I ſtand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that does appear

Their needleſs Vouches: Cuſtom calls me to't:
What Cuſtom wills in all things, ſhould we do't?
The Duſt on antique Time would lie unſwept,
And mountainous Error be too highly heapt,
For Truth to o're-peer. Rather than fool it ſo,
Let the high Office and the Honor go,
To one that would do thus. I am half through,
The one part ſuffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three Citizens more.

Here come more Voices.
Your Voices? for your Voices I have fought,
Watcht for your Voices: for your Voices, bear
Of Wounds, two dozen odd: Battels thrice ſix
I have ſeen, and heard of: for your Voices,
Have done many things, ſome leſs, ſome more:
Your Voices? indeed I would be Conſul.

1 Cit. He has done Nobly, and cannot go without any honeſt mans Voice.

2 Cit. Therefore let him be Conſul: the Gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people.

All. Amen, Amen. God ſave thee, Noble Conſul.

Corio. Worthy Voices.

Enter Menenius, with Brutus, and Sicinius.

Men. You have ſtood your Limitation:
And the Tribunes endue you with the Peoples Voice,
Remains, that in th'Official Marks inveſted,
You anon do meet the Senate.

Corio. Is this done?

Sici. The Cuſtom of Requeſt you have diſcharg'd:
The People do admit you, and are ſummon'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Corio. Where? at the Senate-houſe?

Sici. There, Coriolanus.

Corio. May I change theſe Garments?

Sicin. You may Sir.

Cori. That Ile ſtraight do: and knowing my ſelf again
Repair to th'Senate-houſe.

Men. Ile keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We ſtay here for the People.

Sicin. Fare you well. Exeunt Coriol. and Men.
He ha's it now: and by his Looks, me thinks
'Tis warm at's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore his humb'e Weeds:
Will you diſmiſs the People?

Enter the Plebeians.

Sici. How now, my Maſters, have you choſe this man?

1 Cit. He ha's our Voices, Sir.

Bru. We pray the Gods, he may deſerve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, Sir: to my poor unworthy notice,
He mock'd us, when he begg'd our Voices.

3 Cit. Certainly he flowted us down-right.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of ſpeech, he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongſt us, ſave your ſelf, but ſayes
He us'd us ſcornfully: he ſhould have ſhew'd us
His Marks of Merit, Wounds receiv'd for's Countrey.

Sicin. Why ſo he did, I am ſure.

All. No, no; no man ſaw 'em.

3 Cit. He ſaid he had Wounds,
Which he could ſhew in private:
And with his Hat, thus waving it in ſcorn,
I would be Conſul, ſayes he: aged Cuſtom,
But by your Voices, will not ſo permit me.
Your Voices therefore: when we granted that,
Here was, I thank you for your Voices, thank you
Your moſt ſweet Voices: now you have left your Voices
I have no further with you. Was not this mockery?

Sicin. Why either were you ignorant to ſee't?
Or ſeeing it, of ſuch Childiſh friendlineſs,
To yield your Voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him,
As you were leſſon'd; When he had no Power,
But was a petty ſervant to the State,
He was your Enemy, ever ſpake againſt
Your Liberties, and the Charters that you bear
I'th'Body of the Weal: and now arriving
A place of Potency, and ſway o'th'State
If he ſhould ſtill malignantly remain
Faſt Foe to th'Plebeij, your Voices might
Be Curſes to your ſelves. You ſhould have ſaid,
That as his worthy deeds did claim no leſs
Than what he ſtood for: ſo his gracious nature
Would think upon you, for your Voices, and Tranſlate his Malice towards you, into Love,
Standing your friendly Lord.

Sicin. Thus to have ſaid,
As you were fore-advis'd, had toucht his Spirit,
And try'd his inclination: from him pluckt,
Either his gracious Promiſe, which you might
As cauſe had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or elſe it would have gall'd his ſurly nature;
Which eaſily endures not Article,
Tying him to ought, ſo putting him to Rage,
You ſhould have ta'n th'advantage of his Choler,
And paſs'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive,
He did ſollicit you in free Contempt,
When he did need your Loves: and do you think,
That his Contempt ſhall not be bruiſing to you,
When he hath power to cruſh? Why, had your Bodies
No heart among you? Or had you Tongues, to cry
Againſt the Rectorſhip of judgement?

Sicin. Have you, ere now, deny'd the asker:
And now again, of him that did not ask, but mock,
Beſtow your ſu'd-for Tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:
Ile have five hundred Voices of that ſound.

1 Cit. I twice five hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence inſtantly, and tell thoſe friends,
They have choſe a Conſul, that will from them take
Their Liberties, make them of no more Voice
Than Doggs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do ſo.

Sicin. Let them aſſemble: and on a ſafer judgement,
All revoke your ignorant election: Enforce his Pride,
And his old Hate unto you: beſides, forget not
With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed,
How in his Sute he ſcorn'd you: but your Loves,
Thinking upon his Services, took from you
Th'apprehenſion of his preſent portance,
Which moſt gibingly, ungravely, he did faſhion
After the inveterate Hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay a fault on us, your Tribunes,
That we labour'd (no impediment between)
But that you muſt caſt your Election on him.

Sici. Say you choſe him, more after our commandment,
Than as guided by your own true affections, and that
Your minds pre-occupi'd with what you rather muſt do
Than what you ſhould, made you againſt the grain
To Voice him Conſul. Lay the fault on us.

Brut.

Bru. I, ſpare us not: Say, we read Lectures to you,
How youngly he began to ſerve his Country,
How long continued, and what ſtock he ſprings of,
The Noble houſe o'th' Martians: from whence came
That Ancus Martius, Numaes Daughters Son:
VVho after great Hoſtilius here was King,
Of the ſame houſe Publius and Quintus were,
That our beſt Water, brought by Conduits hither,
And Nobly nam'd, ſo twice being Cenſor,
Was his great Anceſtor.
Sici. One thus deſcended,
That hath beſide well in his perſon wrought,
To be ſet high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Skaling his preſent bearing with his paſt,
That he's your fixed enemy; and revoke
Your ſuddain approbation.
Bru. Say you ne'r had don't,
(Harp on that ſtill) but by our putting on:
And preſently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to th'Capitol.
All. We will ſo: almoſt all repent in their election.
Exeunt Plebeians.

Bru. Let them go on:
This Mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than ſtay paſt doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refuſal, both obſerve, and anſwer
The vantage of his anger.
Sicin. To th'Capitol, come:
We will be there before the ſtream o'th'People:
And this ſhall ſeem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded on-ward. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other Senators.
Corio. Tullus Auffidius then had made new head.
Larti. He had my Lord, and that it was which caus'd
Our ſwifter Compoſition.
Corio. So then the Volcies ſtand but as at firſt,
Ready when time ſhall prompt them, to make road
Upon's again.
Com. They are worn (Lord Conſul) ſo,
That we ſhall hardly in our ages ſee
Their Banners wave again.
Corio. Saw you Auffidius?
Larti. On ſafegard he came to me, and did curſe
Againſt the Volcies, for they had ſo vildly
Yielded the Town: he is retired to Antium.
Corio. Spoke he of me?
Larti. He did my Lord.
Corio. How? what?
Larti. How often he had met you Sword to Sword:
That of all things upon the earth, he hated
Your perſon moſt: That he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeleſs reſtitution, ſo he might
Be call'd your Vanquiſher.
Corio. At Antium lives he?
Larti. At Antium.
Corio. I wiſh I had a cauſe to ſeek him there,
To oppoſe his hatred fully. Welcome home.
Enter Sicinius, and Brutus.
Behold, theſe are the Tribunes of the People,
The Tongues o'th'Common Mouth, I do deſpiſe them:
For they do prank them in Authority,
Againſt all Noble ſufferance.
Sicin. Paſs no further.
Corio. Hah? what is that?
Bru. It will be dangerous to go on—No Further.
Corio. What makes this change?
Men. The matter?
Com. Hath he not paſs'd the Noble, and the Commons?
Bru. Cominius, no.
Corio. Have I had Childrens Voices?
Senat. Tribunes give way, he ſhall to th'Market place.
Bru. The People are incens'd againſt him.
Sicin. Stop, or all will fall in broyl.
Corio. Are theſe your herd?
Muſt theſe have Voices, that can yield them now,
And ſtraight diſclaim their tongs? what are your Offices?
You being their Mouths, why rule you not their Teeth?
Have you not ſet them on?
Men. Be calm, be calm.
Corio. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by Plot,
To curb the will of the Nobility:
Suffer't, and live with ſuch as cannot rule,
Nor ever will be ruled.
Bru. Call't not a Plot:
The People cry you mockt them: and of late,
When Corn was given them gratis, you repin'd,
Scandall'd the Suppliants: for the People, call'd them
Time-pleaſers, flatterers, foes to Nobleneſs.
Corio. Why this was known before.
Bru. Not to them all.
Corio. Have you inform'd them ſithence?
Bru. How? I inform them?
Com. You are like to do ſuch buſineſs.
Bru. Not unlike each way to better yours.
Corio. Why then ſhould I be Conſul? by yond Clouds
Let me deſerve ſo ill as you, and make me
Your fellow Tribune.
Sicin. You ſhew too much of that,
For which the People ſtirr: if you will paſs
To where you are bound, you muſt enquire your way,
VVhich you are out of, with a gentler ſpirit,
Or never be ſo Noble as a Conſul,
Nor yoak with him for Tribune.
Men. Lets be calm.
Com. The People are abus'd: ſet on, this paltring
Becomes not Rome: nor has Coriolanus
Deſerv'd this ſo diſhonoured Rub, laid falſely
Ith'plain way of his Merit.
Corio. Tell me of Corn! this was my ſpeech,
And I will ſpeak't again.
Men. Not now, not now.
Senat. Not in this heat, Sir, now.
Corio. Now as I live, I will.
My Nobler friends, I crave their pardons:
For the mutable rank-ſented Meyny,
Let them regard me, as I do not flatter,
And therein behold themſelves: I ſay again,
In ſoothing them, we nouriſh 'gainſt our Senate
The Cockle of Rebellion, Inſolence, Sedition,
Which we our ſelves have Plowed for, ſow'd & ſcatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honor'd Number,
Who lack not Virtue, no, nor Power, but that
VVhich they have given to Beggars.
Men. VVell, no more.
Senat. No more words, we beſeech you.
Corio. How? no more?

As for my Country, I have ſhed my blood,
Not fearing outward force: So ſhall my Lungs
Coin words till their decay, againſt thoſe Meazels
Which we diſdain ſhould Tetter us, yet ſought
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You ſpeak a'th'People, as if you were a god,
To puniſh; Not a man of their infirmity.
Sicin. 'Twere well we let the People know't.
Men. What, what? his Choler?
Cor. Choler? Were I as patient as the midnight ſleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind.
Sicin. It is a mind that ſhall remain a poiſon
Where it is: not poiſon any further.
Corio. Shall remain?
Here you this Triton of the Minnoues? Mark you
His abſolute ſhall?
Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.
Corio. Shall? O God! but moſt unwiſe Patricians: why
You grave, but wreakleſs Senators, have you thus
Given Hidra here to chooſe an Officer,
That with his peremptory ſhall, being but
The horn, and noiſe o'th'Monſters, wants not ſpirit
To ſay, he'l turn your Current in a ditch,
And make your Chanel his? if he have power,
Then vale your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous Lenity: if you are Learn'd,
Be not as common Fools; if you are not,
Let them have Cuſhions by you. You are Plebeians,
If they be Senators: and they are no leſs,
When both your voices blended, the great'ſt taſt
Moſt pallats theirs. They chooſe their Magiſtrate,
And ſuch a one as he, who puts his Shall,
His popular Shall, againſt a graver Bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himſelf,
It makes the Conſuls baſe; and my ſoul akes
To know, when two Authorities are up,
Neither Supreme, how ſoon confuſion
May enter 'twixt the gap of Both, and take
The one by th'other.
Com. Well, on to th'Market place.
Corio. Who ever gave that Counſel, to give forth
The Corn a'th'Store-houſe gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece—
Men. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. Though there the People had more abſolute power
I ſay they nouriſht diſobedience: fed the ruine of the State.
Bru. Why ſhall the People give
One that ſpeaks thus, their voice?
Corio. Ile give my Reaſons,
More worthy than their Voices. They know the Corn
Was not our recompence, reſting well aſſur'd
They ne'r did ſervice for't; being preſt to th'VVarr,
Even when the Navel of the State was touch'd,
They would not thred the Gates: This kind of Service
Did not deſerve Corn gratis. Being i'th' VVarr,
Their Mutinies and Revolts, wherein they ſhew'd
Moſt Valour, ſpoke not for them. Th'Accuſation
VVhich they have often made againſt the Senate,
All cauſe unborn, could never be the Native
Of our ſo frank Donation. VVell, what then?
How ſhall this Boſome-multiplied, digeſt
The Senates courteſie? Let deeds expreſs
VVhat's like to be their words. VVe did requeſt it,
VVe are the greater pole, and in true fear
They gave us our demands. Thus we debaſe
The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble
Call our Cares, Fears; which will in time
Break ope the Locks a'th'Senate, and bring in
The Crows to peck the Eagles.
Men. Come enough.
Bru. Enough, with over meaſure.
Corio. No, take more.
What may be ſworn by, both Divine and Humane,
Seal what I end withall. This double worſhip,
Whereon part does diſdain with cauſe, the other
Inſult without all ſeaſon; where Gentry, Title, wiſdom,
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance, it muſt omit
Real Neceſſities, and give way the while
To unſtable Slightneſs: Purpoſe ſo barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpoſe. Therefore beſeech you,
You that will be leſs fearful, than diſcreet,
That love the Fundamental part of State
More than you doubt the change of't: that preferr
A Noble life, before a Long, and Wiſh,
To jump a Body with a dangerous Phyſick,
That's ſure of death without it: at once pluck out
The Multitudinous Tongue, let them not lick
The ſweet which is their poyſon. Your diſhonor
Mangles true judgement, and bereaves the State
Of that Integrity which ſhould become't:
Not having the power to do the good it would
For th'ill which doth controul't.
Bru. Ha's ſaid enough.
Sicin. Ha's ſpoken like a Traitor, and ſhall anſwer
As Traitors do.
Corio. Thou wretch, deſpight ore-whelm thee:
What ſhould the people do with theſe bald Tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion:
When what's not meet, but what muſt be, was Law,
Then were they choſen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet, be ſaid it muſt be meet,
And throw their power i'th' duſt.
Bru. Manifeſt treaſon.
Sicin. This a Conſul? No.

Enter an Ædile.

Bru. The Ædiles hoe; Let him be apprehended.
Sicin. Go call the People, in whoſe name my Self
Attach thee as a Traiterous Innovator:
A Foe to th'publike Weal. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine anſwer.
Corio. Hence old Goat.
All. We'l Surety him.
Com. Ag'd ſir, hands off.
Corio. Hence rotten thing, or I ſhall ſhake thy bones
Out of thy Garments.
Sicin. Help me Citizens.

Enter a rabble of Plebeians with the Ædiles.

Men. On both ſides more reſpect.
Sicin. Here's he, that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him Ædiles.
All. Down with him, down with him.
2 Sena. Weapons, weapons, weapons:

They all buſtle about Coriolanus.

Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens: what hoe:
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, Citizens.
All. Peace, peace, peace, ſtay, hold, peace.
Men. What is about to be? I am out of Breath,
Confuſion's near, I cannot ſpeak. You Tribunes
To th'People: Coriolanus, patience: ſpeak good Sicinius.

Sicin.

Sicin. Hear me, People peace.
All. Let's hear our Tribune: peace, speak, speak, speak.
Sici. You are at point to lose your Liberties: Martius would have all from you; Martius, Whom late you have nam'd for Consul.
Men. Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to quench.
Sena. To unbuild the City, and to lay all flat.
Sici. What is the City, but the People?
All. True, the People are the City.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were establisht the Peoples Magistrates.
All. You so remain.
Men. And so are like to do.
Com. That is the way to lay the City flat,
To bring the Roof to the Foundation,
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps, and piles of Ruine.
Sicin. This deserves death.
Bru. Or let us stand to our Authority,
Or let us lose it: we do here pronounce,
Upon the part o'th'People, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Martius is worthy
Of present Death.
Sicin. Therefore lay hold of him:
Bear him to th'Rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.
Bru. Ædiles seize him.
All Ple. Yield Martius, yield.
Men. Hear me one word, 'beseech you Tribunes, hear me but a word.
Ædiles. Peace, peace.
Men. Be that you seem, truly your Countries friend,
And temp'rately proceed to what you would
Thus violently redress.
Bru. Sir, those cold wayes,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poysonous,
Where the Disease is violent. Lay hands upon him,
And bear him to the Rock. Corio. draws his sword.
Corio. No, Ile dye here:
There's some among you have beheld me fighting,
Come try upon your selves, what you have seen me.
Men. Down with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while.
Bru. Lay hands upon him.
Men. Help Martius, help: you that be noble, help him young and old.
All. Down with him, down with him. Exeunt.
In this Mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People are beat in.
Men. Go, get you to our House: be gone, away,
All will be naught else.
2 Senat. Get you gone.
Com. Stand fast, we have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?
Sena. The Gods forbid:
I prithee noble friend, home to thy house,
Leave us to cure this Cause.
Men. For 'tis a Sore upon us.
You cannot Tent your self: begon, 'beseech you.
Com. Come Sir, along with us.
Men. I would they were Barbarians, as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd: not Romans, as they are not,
Though calved i'th'Porch o'th'Capitol:
Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue,
One time will owe another.
Com. On fair ground, I could beat forty of them.
Men. I could my self take up a Brace o'th'best of them, yea, the two Tribunes.
Com. But now 'tis odds beyond Arithmetick,
And Manhood is call'd Foolry, when it stands
Against a falling Fabrick. Will you hence,
Before the Tag return? whose Rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o're-bear
What they are us'd to bear.
Men. Pray you be gone:
Ile try whether my old Wit be in request
With those that have but little: this must be patcht
With Cloth of any Colour.
Com. Nay, come away. Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius.
Patri. This man has marr'd his fortune.
Men. His nature is too noble for the World:
He would not flatter Neptune for his Trident,
Or Jove, for's power to thunder: his heart's his Mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent,
And being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the Name of death. A Noise within.
Here's goodly work.
Patri. I would they were a bed.
Men. I would they were in Tyber.
What the vengeance, could he not speak 'em fair?
Enter Brutus, and Sicinius with the rabble again.
Sicin. Where is this Viper,
That would depopulate the city, & be every man himself?
Men. You worthy Tribunes.
Sicin. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian Rock
With rigorous hands: he hath resisted Law,
And therefore Law shall scorn him further Tryal
Than the severity of the publick Power,
Which he so sets at naught.
1 Cit. He shall well know the Noble Tribunes are
The peoples mouths, and we their hands.
All. He shall sure out.
Men. Sir, sir. Sicin. Peace.
Men. Do not cry havock, where you should but hunt
With modest warrant.
Sicin. Sir, how com'st that you have holp
To make this rescue?
Men. Hear me speak; As I do know
The Consuls worthiness, so can I name his Faults.
Sicin. Consul? what Consul?
Men. The Consul Coriolanus.
Bru. He Consul?
All. No, no, no, no, no.
Men. If by the Tribunes leave,
And yours good people,
I may be heard, I would crave a word or two,
The which shall turn you to no further harm,
Than so much loss of time.
Sicin. Speak briefly then,
For we are peremptory to dispatch
This Viporous Traitor: to eject him hence
Were but one danger, and to keep him here
Our certain death: therefore it is decreed,
He dyes to night.
Men. Now the good gods forbid,
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved Children, is enroll'd
In Joves own Book, like an unnatural Dam
Should now eat up her own.

Sicin.

Sicin. He's a Diſeaſe that muſt be cut away.
Men. Oh he's a Limb, that ha's but a Diſeaſe;
Mortal, to cut it off, to cure it, eaſie.
What ha's he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath loſt
(Which I dare vouch, is more than that he hath.
By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country:
And what is left, to loſe it by his Country,
Were to us all that do't, and ſuffer it
A brand to th'end a'th'World.
Sicin. This is clean kamm,
Bru. Meerly awry:
When he did love his Country, it honour'd him.
Men. The ſervice of the foot
Being once gangren'd, is not then reſpected
For what before it was.
Bru. We'l hear no more:
Purſue him to his houſe, and pluck him thence,
Leſt his infection being of catching nature,
Spread further.
Men. One word more, one word:
This Tiger-footed-rage, when it ſhall find
The harm of unskan'd ſwiftneſs, will (too late)
Tye Leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by Proceſs,
Leſt parties (as he is belov'd) break out,
And ſack great Rome with Romans.
Bru. If it were ſo——
Sici. What do ye talk?
Have we not had a taſt of his Obedience?
Our Ediles ſmot, our ſelves reſiſted, come.
Men. Conſider this: He ha's been bred i'th' Warrs
Since a could draw a Sword, and is ill-ſchool'd
In boulted Language: Meal and Bran together
He throws without diſtinction. Give me leave,
Ile go to him, and undertake to bring him in peace,
Where he ſhall anſwer by a lawful Form
(In peace) to his utmoſt peril.
1 Sen. Noble Tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other courſe
Will prove too bloody: and the end of it,
Unknown to the beginning.
Sic. Noble Menenius, be you then as the peoples officer:
Maſters, lay down your Weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sici. Meet on the Market place: we'l attend you there,
Where if you bring not Martius, we'l proceed
In our firſt way.
Men. Ile bring him to you.
Let me deſire you company: he muſt come,
Or what is worſt will follow.
Sena. Pray you let's to him. Exeunt omnes.

Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.

Corio. Let them pull all about mine ears, preſent me
Death on the Wheel, or at wild Horſes heels,
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian Rock,
That the precipitation might downe ſtretch
Below the beam of ſight, yet will I ſtill
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

Nob. You do the Nobler.
Corio. I muſe my Mother
Do's not approve me further, who was wont
To call them Woollen Vaſſails, things created
To buy and ſell with Groats, to ſhew bare heads
In Congregations, to yawn, be ſtill, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance ſtood up
To ſpeak of Peace, or Warr, I talk of you,
Why did you wiſh me milder? Would you have me
Falſe to my Nature? Rather ſay, I play
The man I am.
Volum. Oh ſir, ſir, ſir.
I would have had you put your power well on
Before you had worn it out.
Corio. Lets go.
Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,
With ſtriving leſs to be ſo. Leſſer had been
The things of your diſpoſitions, if
You had not ſhew'd them how ye were diſpos'd
Ere they lack'd power to croſs you.
Corio. Let them hang.
Volum. I, and burn too.

Enter Menenius with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, ſomething too rough: you muſt return, and mend it.
Sen. There's no remedy,
Unleſs by not ſo doing, our good City
Cleave in the midd'ſt, and periſh.
Volum. Pray be counſell'd;
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain, that leads my uſe of Anger
To better vantage.
Mene. Well ſaid, Noble woman:
Before he ſhould thus ſtoop to'th'heart, but that
The violent fit a'th'time craves it as Phyſick
For the whole ſtate; I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can ſcarcely bear.
Corio. What muſt I do?
Men. Return to th'Tribunes.
Corio. Well, what then? what then?
Men. Repent what you have ſpoke.
Corio. For them? I cannot do it to the Gods,
Muſt I then do't to them?
Volum. You are too abſolute,
Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremities ſpeak. I have heard you ſay,
Honor and Policy, like unſever'd friends,
I'th' Warr do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other loſe,
That they combine not there?
Corio. Tuſh, tuſh.
Men. A good demand.
Volum. If it be honor in your Warrs, to ſeem
The ſame you are not, which for your beſt ends
You adopt your policy: How is it leſs or worſe
That it ſhall hold Companionſhip in Peace
With honor, as in Warr; ſince that to both
It ſtands in like requeſt.
Corio. Why force you this?
Volum. Becauſe, that
Now it lies you on to ſpeak to th'people:
Not by your own inſtruction, nor by th'matter
Which your heart prompts you to, but with ſuch words
That are but roated in your Tongue:
Though but Baſtards, and Syllables
Of no allowance, to your boſoms truth.
Now, this no more diſhonors you at all,
Than to take in a Town with gentle words,
Which elſe would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.
I would diſſemble with my Nature, where
My Fortunes and my Friends at ſtake, requir'd
I ſhould do ſo in honor. I am in this

Your

Your Wife, your Son: these Senators, the Nobles,
And you, will rather shew our general Lowts,
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safegard
Of what that want might ruine.
Men. Noble Lady,
Come go with us, speak fair: you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.
Volum. I prithee now, my Son,
Go to them, with this Bonnet in thy hand,
And thus farr having stretcht it (here be with them)
Thy Knee bussing the stones: for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th'ignorant
More learned than the ears, waving thy head,
Which often thus correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest Mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: or say to them,
Thou art their Souldier, and being bred in broyls
Hast not the soft way, which thou do'st confess
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves, but thou wilt frame
Thy self (forsooth) hereafter theirs so farr,
As thou hast power and person.
Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why their hearts were yours:
For they have Pardons, being ask'd, as free,
As words to little purpose.
Volum. Prithee now,
Go, and be rul'd: although I know thou hadst rather
Follow thine Enemy in a fiery Gulf,
Than flatter him in a Bower. Enter Cominius.
Here is Cominius.
Com. I have been i'th'Market place; and Sir 'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend your self
By calmness, or by absence: all's in anger.
Men. Only fair speech.
Com. I think 'twill serve, if he can thereto frame his spirit.
Volum. He must and will:
Prithee now say you will, and go about it.
Corio. Must I go shew them my unbarb'd Sconce?
Must I with my base Tongue give to my Noble heart
A Lye, that it must bear well? I will do't:
Yet were there but this single plot, to lose
This Mould of Martius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the Wind. To th'Market place:
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to th'Life.
Com. Come, come, we'l prompt you.
Volum. I prithee now sweet Son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a Souldier: so
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.
Corio. Well, I must do't:
Away my disposition, and possess me
Some Harlots spirit: My throat of Warr be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my Drum into a Pipe,
Small as an Eunuch, or the Virgin voice
That Babies lull a-sleep: The smiles of Knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and School-boyes Tears take up
The Glasses of my sight: A Beggers Tongue
Make motion through my Lips, and my Arm'd knees
Who bow'd but in my Stirrop, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an Almes. I will not do't,
Lest I surcease to honor mine own truth,
And by my bodies action, teach my Mind
A most inherent Baseness,
Volum. At thy choice then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dis-honor,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruine, let
Thy Mother rather feel thy Pride, than fear
Thy dangerous Stoutness: for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list,
Thy Valiantness was mine, thou suck'st it from me:
But own thy Pride thy self.
Corio. Pray be content:
Mother, I am going to the Market place:
Chide me no more. Ile Mountebank their Loves,
Cogg their hearts from them, and come home belov'd
Of all the Trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my Wife, Ile return Consul,
Or never trust to what my Tongue can do
I'th' way of Flattery further.
Volum. Do your will. Exit Volumnia.
Com. Away, the Tribunes do attend you: arm your self
To answer mildly: for they are prepar'd
With Accusations, as I hear more strong
Than are upon you yet.
Corio. The word is, Mildly. Pray you let us go,
Let them accuse me by invention: I
Will answer in mine Honor.
Men. I, but mildly.
Corio. Well mildly be it then, Mildly. Exeunt.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Tyrannical power: if he evade us there,
Inforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the Spoil got on the Antiats
Was ne'r distributed. What, will he come?

Enter an Edile.

Edile. He's comming.
Bru. How accompanied?
Edil. With old Menenius, and those Senators
That always favour'd him.
Sicin. Have you a Catalogue
Of all the Voices that we have procur'd, set down by th' Poll?
Edil. I have: 'tis ready.
Sicin. Have you collected them by Tribes?
Edil. I have: 'tis ready.
Sicin. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, it shall be so,
I'th'right and strength a'th'Commons: be it either
For death, for fine, or Banishment; then let them
If I say Fine, cry Fine; if Death, cry Death,
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i'th'Truth a'th'Cause.
Edil. I shall inform them.
Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a dinn confus'd,
Inforce the present Execution
Of what we chance to Sentence.
Edil. Very well.
Sicin. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint
When we shall hap to giv't them.
Bru. Go about it,
Put him to Choler strait, he hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction. Being once chaft, he cannot
Be reign'd again to Temperance; then he speaks

What's

What's in his heart, and that is there which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with others.

Sicin. Well, here he comes.
Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Corio. I, as an Hostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the Knave by th'Volume:
Th'honor'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the Chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men, plant love amongst you,
Through our large Temples with the shews of peace
And not our streets with Warr.
1 Sen. Amen, Amen.
Men. A Noble wish.

Enter the Edile with the Plebeians.

Sicin. Draw near ye people.
Edile. List to your Tribunes. Audience;
Peace I say.
Corio. First hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say: Peace ho.
Corio. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?
Must all determine here?
Sici. I do demand,
If you submit you to the peoples voices,
Allow their Officers, and are content
To suffer lawful Censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you.
Corio. I am content,
Mene. Lo Citizens, he says he is Content:
The warlike Service he ha's done, consider; Think
Upon the wounds his body bears, which shew
Like Graves i'th' holy Church-yard.
Corio. Scratches with Briars, scarrs to move
Laughter only.
Men. Consider further:
That when he speaks not like a Citizen,
You find him like a Souldier: do not take
His rougher Actions for malicious sounds:
But as I say, such as become a Souldier,
Rather than envy you.
Com. Well, well, no more.
Corio. What is the matter,
That being past for Consul with full voice:
I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour
You take it off again?
Sici. Answer to us.
Corio. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sici. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take
From Rome all season'd Office, and to wind
Your self into a power tyrannical,
For which you are a Traitor to the people.
Corio. How? Traitor?
Mene. Nay temperately: your promise.
Corio. The fires i'th'lowest hell, Fould in the people:
Call me their Traitor, thou injurious Tribune.
Within thine eyes sate twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clucht as many Millions, in
Thy lying tongue, both numbers, I would say
Thou lyest unto thee, with a voice as free,
As I do pray the gods.
Sicin. Mark you this people?
All. To th'Rock with him.
Sicin. Peace:
We need not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,
Beating your Officers, cursing your selves,
Opposing Laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him,
Even this so criminal, and in such capital kind,
Deserves th'extreamest death.
Bru. But since he hath serv'd well for Rome—
Corio. What do you prate of Service?
Bru. I talk of that, that know it.
Corio. You?
Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother?
Com. Know, I pray you.
Corio. Ile know no farther:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, Fleaing, pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy, at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have't with saying, Good morrow.
Sicin For that he ha's
(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Envy'd against the people; seeking means
To pluck away their power: as now at last,
Given Hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the Ministers
That do distribute it. In the name a'th'people,
And in the power of us the Tribunes, we (Ev'n from this instant) banish him our City
In peril of precipitation
From off the Rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates. I'th'peoples name,
I say it shall be so.
All. It shall be so, it shall be so: let him away:
He's banish'd, and it shall be so.
Com. Hear me my Masters, and my common friends.
Sicin. He's sentenc'd: No more hearing.
Com. Let me speak:
I have been Consul, and can shew from Rome
Her Enemies marks upon me. I do love
My Countries good, with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
My dear Wives estimate, her wombs encrease,
And treasure of my Loyns: then if I would Speak that—
Sicin. We know your drift. Speak what?
Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd
As Enemy to the people, and his Country.
It shall be so.
All. It shall be so, it shall be so.
Corio. You common cry of Curs, whose breath I hate,
As reek a'th'rotten Fenns: whose Loves I prize,
As the dead Carkasses of unburied men,
That do corrupt my Air: I banish you,
And here remain with your uncertainty.
Let every feeble Rumor shake your hearts:
Your Enemies, with nodding of their Plumes
Fan you into despair: Have the power still
To banish your Defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which finds not till it feels,
Making but reservation of your selves,
Still your own Foes) deliver you
As most abated Captives, to some Nation
That won you without blows, despising
For you the City. Thus I turn my back;
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Cum aliis,
They all shout, and throw up their Caps.

Edile

Edile. The peoples Enemy is gone, is gone.
All. Our Enemy is banish'd, he is gone. Hoo hoo.
Sicin. Go see him out at Gates, and follow him
As he hath follow'd you, with all despight,
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the City.
All. Come, come, lets see him out at the gates, come.
The gods preserve our Noble Tribunes, come. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Corio. Come leave your tears: a brief farewel: the beast
With many heads butts me away. Nay Mother,
Where is your antient Courage? You were us'd
To say, Extremity was the trier of spirits,
That common chances, common men could bear,
That when the Sea was calm, all Boats alike
Shew'd Mastership in floating. Fortunes blows,
When most strook home, being gentle wounded, craves
A Noble cunning. You were us'd to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.
Virg. Oh heavens! O heavens!
Corio. Nay, I prithee woman.
Vol. Now the Red Pestilence strike all Trades in Rome,
And Occupations perish.
Corio. What, what, what:
I shall be lov'd, when I am lack'd. Nay Mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the Wife of Hercules,
Six of his Labours you'l'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,
Droop not, Adieu: Farewel my Wife, my Mother,
Ile do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are salter than a younger mans,
And venemous to thine eyes. My (sometime) General,
I have seen thee Stern, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardning spectacles. Tell these sad women,
'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My Mother, you wot well
My hazards still have been your solace, and
Believ't not lightly, though I go alone
Like to a lonely Dragon, that his Fen
Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more than seen: your Son
Will or exceed the Common, or be caught
With cautelous baits and practice.
Volum. My first Son,
Whether will you go? Take good Cominius
With thee a while; determine on some course
More than a wild exposture, to each chance
That starts i'th'way before thee.
Corio. O the gods!
Com. Ile follow thee a Month, devise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of us,
And we of thee. So if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy Repeal, we shall not send
O're the vast world, to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I'th'absence of the needer.
Corio. Fare ye well:
Thou hast years upon thee, and thou art too full
Of the warrs surfets, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruis'd: bring me but out at gate.
Come my sweet Wife, my dearest Mother, and
My Friends of Noble touch: when I am forth,
Bid me farewel, and smile. I pray you come.
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still, and never of me ought
But what is like me formerly.
Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep,
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods
I'l'd with thee every foot.
Corio. Give me thy hand, come. Exeunt.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus, with the Edile.

Sicin. Bid them all home, he's gone: and we'l no further,
The Nobility are vexed, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.
Bru. Now we have shewn our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done,
Than when it was a doing.
Sicin. Bid them home, say their great enemy is gone,
And they, stand in their antient strength
Bru. Dismiss them home. Here comes his Mother.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Sicin. Let's not meet her.
Brut. Why?
Sicin. They say she's mad.
Brut. They have ta'ne note of us: keep on your way.
Volum. Oh y'are well met:
Th'hoorded plague a'th'gods requite your love.
Menen. Peace, peace, be not so loud.
Volum. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,
Nay, and you shall hear some. Will you be gone?
Virg. You shall stay too: I would I had the power
To say so to my Husband.
Sicin. Are you mankind?
Volum. I fool, is that a shame? Note but this Fool,
Was not a man my Father? Had'st thou Foxship
To banish him that strook more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words.
Sicin. Oh blessed Heavens!
Vol. More Noble blows, than ever thou wise words.
And for Romes good Ile tell thee what; yet go:
Nay but thou shalt stay too: I would my Son
Were in Arabia, and thy Tribe before him,
His good Sword in his hand.
Sicin. What then?
Virg. What then? He'ld make an end of thy posterity.
Volum. Bastards, and all.
Good man, the wounds that he do's bear for Rome!
Menen. Come, come, peace.
Sicin. I would he had continued to his Country
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.
Bru. I would he had.
Vol. I would he had: 'Twas you incens'd the rabble.
Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those Mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.
Brut. Pray let's go.
Volum. Now pray sir get you gone.
You have done a brave deed: Ere you go, hear this:
As farr as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome; so farr my Son

This Ladies Husband here, this (do you see)
Whom you have baniſh'd, does exceed you all,
Bru. Well, well, we'l leave you.
Sicin. Why ſtay you to be baited
With one that wants her Wits? Exit Tribunes.
Volum. Take my Prayers with you.
I would the Gods had nothing elſe to do,
But to confirm my Curſes. Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.
Men. You have told them home,
And by my troth you have cauſe: you'l ſup with me?
Volum. Angers my Meat: I ſup upon my ſelf,
And ſo ſhall ſtarve with Feeding: Come, let's go,
Leave this faint-puling. and lament as I do,
In Anger, Juno-like: Come, come, come. Exeunt
Men. Fie, fie, fie. Exit.

Enter a Roman, and a Volcie.

Rom. I know you well ſir, and you know me: your name I think is Adrian.
Volcie. It is ſo ſir, truly I have forgot you.
Rom. I am a Roman, and my Services are as you are againſt 'em. Know you me yet?
Volcie. Nicanor? no.
Rom. The ſame ſir.
Volcie. You had more Beard when I laſt ſaw you, but your Favour is well appear'd by your Tongue. What's the News in Rome? I have a Note from the Volcean ſtate to find you out here. You have well ſaved me a days journey.
Rom. There hath been in Rome ſtrange Inſurrections: the people, againſt the Senators, Patricians, and Nobles.
Vol. Hath been; is it ended then? Our State thinks not ſo, they are in a moſt warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their diviſion.
Rom. The main blaze of it is paſt, but a ſmall thing would make it flame again. For the Nobles receive ſo to heart the Baniſhment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptneſs, to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their Tribunes for ever. This lyes glowing I can tell you, and is almoſt mature for the violent breaking out.
Vol. Coriolanus Baniſht?
Rom. Baniſh'd ſir.
Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence Nicanor.
Rom. The day ſerves well for them now. I have heard it ſaid, the fitteſt time to corrupt a mans Wife, is when ſhe's falln out with her Husband. Your Noble Tullus Auffidius will appear well in theſe VVars, his great Oppoſer Coriolanus being now in no requeſt of his countrey.
Vol. He cannot chooſe: I am moſt fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you. You have ended my Buſineſs, and I will merrily accompany you home.
Rom. I ſhall between this and Supper, tell you moſt ſtrange things from Rome: all tending to the good of their Adverſaries. Have you an Army ready ſay you?
Vol. A moſt Royal one. The Centurions, and their charges diſtinctly billetted already in th' entertainment, and to be on foot at an hours warning.
Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readineſs, and am the man I think, that ſhall ſet them in preſent Action. So ſir, heart'ly well met, and moſt glad of your Company.
Vol. You take my part from me ſir, I have the moſt cauſe to be glad of yours.
Rom. VVell let us go together. Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus in mean Apparel, Diſguis'd and muffled.

Corio. A goodly City is this Antium. City,
'Tis I that made thy Widdowes: Many an heyr
Of theſe fair Edifices for my VVarrs
Have I heard groan, and drop: Then know me not,
Leſt that thy VVives with Spits, and Boys with Stones
In puny Battel ſlay me. Save you ſir.

Enter a Citizen.

Cit. And you.
Corio. Direct me, if it be your will, where great Auffidius lies; Is he in Antium?
Cit. He is, and Feaſts the Nobles of the State, at his houſe this night.
Corio. VVhich is his houſe, beſeech you?
Cit. This here before you.
Corio. Thank you ſir, farewel. Exit Citizen.
Oh World, thy ſlippery turns! Friends now faſt ſworn,
Whoſe double boſomes ſeem wear on heart,
Whoſe Hours, whoſe Bed, whoſe Meal and Exerciſe
Are ſtill together: who Twine (as 'twere) in Love,
Unſeparable, ſhall within this hour,
On a diſſention of a Doit, break out
To bittereſt Enmity: So felleſt Foes,
Whoſe paſſions, and whoſe Plots have broke their ſleep
To take the one the other, by ſome chance,
Some trick not worth an Egg, ſhall grow dear friends
And inter-joyn their iſſues. So with me,
My Birth-lace have I, and my lover upon
This Enemie Town Ile enter, if he ſlay me
He does fair Juſtice: if he give me way,
Ile do his Country Service. Exit.

Muſick playes. Enter a Servingman.

1 Ser. Wine, Wine, Wine: What ſervice is here? I think our Fellows are a ſleep.

Enter another Servingman.

2 Ser. Where's Cotus? my M. calls for him: Cotus. Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.

Corio. A goodly houſe;
The Feaſt ſmels; but I appear not like a Gueſt.

Enter the firſt Servingman.

1 Ser. What would you have Friend? whence are you? Here's no place for you: Pray go to the dore. Exit.
Corio. I have deſerv'd no better entertainment, in being Coriolanus. Enter ſecond Servant.
2 Ser. Whence are you ſir? Has the Porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to ſuch Companions? Pray get you out.
Corio. Away.
2 Ser. Away? Get you away.
Corio. Now th'troubleſome.
2 Ser. Are you ſo brave: Ile have you talkt with anon.

Enter 3 Servingmen, the firſt meets him.

3. What Fellow's this?
1. A ſtrange one as ever I look'd on: I cannot get him out o'th'houſe: Prithee call my Maſter to him.
3. What have you to do here fellow? Pray you avoid the houſe.
Corio. Let me but ſtand, I will not hurt your Harth.
3. What are you?
Corio. A Gentleman.
3. A marv'llous poor one.
Corib. True, ſo I am.
3. Pray you poor Gentleman, take up ſome other ſtation,

tion here's no place for you, pray you avoid: Come.

Corio. Follow your Function, go, and batten on cold bits. Pushes him away from him.

3. What you will not? Prithee tell my Master, what a strange Guest he ha's here.

2. And I shall. Exit second Servingman.

3. Where dwell'st thou?

Corio. Under the Canopy.

3. Under the Canopy?

Corio. I.

3. Where's that?

Corio. I'th'City of Kites and Crows.

3. I'th'City of Kites and Crows. What an Ass it is, then thou dwell'st with Daws too?

Corio. No, I serve not thy Master.

3. How sir? Do you meddle with my Master?

Corio. I, 'tis an honester service, than to meddle with thy Mistris: Thou prat'st, and prat'st, serve with thy trencher: Hence. Beats him away.

Enter Auffidius with a Servingman.

Auf. Where is this Fellow?

2. Here sir, I'de have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the Lords within. name?

Auf. Whence com'st thou? What would'st thou? Thy Why speak'st not? Speak man: what's thy name?

Corio. If Tullus not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not think me for the man I am, necessity commands me name my self.

Auf. What is thy name?

Corio. A name unmusical to the Volceans ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?
Thou hast a Grim appearance, and thy Face
Bears a Command in't: Though thy Tackles torn,
Thou shew'st a noble Vessel: What's thy name?

Corio. Prepare thy brow to frown: know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not; thy Name?

Corio. My name is Caius Martius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volcies
Great hurt and Mischief: thereto witness may
My Surname Coriolanus. The painful Service,
The extreme Dangers, and the drops of Blood
Shed for thy thankless Country are requited:
But with that Surname, a good memory
And witness of the Malice and Displeasure
Which thou could'st bear me, only that name remains.
The Cruelty and Envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard Nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest:
And suffer'd me by th'voice of Slaves to be
Hoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity,
Hath brought me to thy Harth, not out of hope
(Mistake me not) to save my life: for if
I had fear'd death, of all the Men i'th' world
I would have voided thee. But in meer spight
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here: Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee, that wilt revenge
Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those maims
Of shame seen through thy Country, speed thee straight
And make my misery serve thy turn: So use it,
That my revengeful Services may prove
As benefits to thee. For I will fight
Against my Cankred Country, with the spleen
Of all the under Fiends. But if so be,
Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more Fortunes
Th'art tyr'd, then in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary: and present
My throat to thee, and to thy Antient Malice:
Which not to cut, would shew thee but a Fool,
Since I have ever followed thee with hate,
Drawn Tunns of Blood out of thy Countries breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. Oh Martius, Martius,
Each word thou hast spoke, hath weeded from my heart
A root of Antient Envy. If Jupiter
Should from yon Clowd speak divine things,
And say 'tis true; I'de not believe them more
Than thee all-Noble Martius. Let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against
My grained Ash an hundred times hath broke,
And scarr'd the Moon with splinters: here I cleep
The Anvile of my Sword, and do contest
As hotly and as nobly with thy Love,
As ever in Ambitious strength, I did
Contend against thy Valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the Maid I married: never man
Sigh'd truer breath. But that I see thee here
Thou Noble thing, more dances my rapt heart,
Than when I first my wedded Mistris saw
Bestrid my Threshold. Why, thou Mars I tell thee,
We have a Power on foot: and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy Target from thy Brawn,
Or lose mine Arm for't: Thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since
Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thy self and me:
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling Helms, fisting each others Throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Martius
Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that
Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy: And powring Warr
Into the bowels of ungratefull Rome,
Like a bold Flood o're-beat. Oh come, go in,
And take our Friendly Senators by'th' hands
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your Territories,
Though not for Rome it self.

Corio. You bless me Gods.

Auf. Therefore most absolute Sir, if thou wilt have
The leading of thine own revenges, take
Th'one half of my Commission, and set down
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st
Thy Countries strength and weakness, thine own waies
Whether to knock against the Gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in,
Let me comment thee first, to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes,
And more a friend, than ere an Enemie,
Yet Martius that was much. Your hand: most welcome.
Exeunt.

Enter two of the Servingmen.

1 Here's a strange alteration.

2 By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a Cudgel, and yet my mind gave me, his cloaths made a false report of him.

1 What an Arm he has, he turn'd me about with his finger, and his thumb, as one would set up a Top.

2 Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him. He had sir, a kind of face me thought. I cannot tell how to term it.

1 He had so, looking as it were, would I were hang'd but I thought there was more in him, than I could think.

2. So did I, Ile be sworn: He is simply the rarest man i'th' world.

1 I think he is: but a greater soldier than he, You wot one.

2 Who my Master?

1 Nay it's no matter for that,

2 Worth six on him.

1 Nay not so neither: but I take him to be the greater Souldiour.

2 Faith look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a Town, our General is excellent.

1 I, and for an assault too.

Enter the third Servingman.

3 Oh Slaves, I can tell you News, News you Rascals.

Both. What, what, what? Let's partake.

3 I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as Live be a condemn'd man.

Both. Wherefore? Wherefore?

3 Why here's he that was wont to thwack our General, Cains Martius.

1 Why do you say, thwack our General?

3 I do not say thwack our General, but he was alwayes good enough for him

2 Come we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him, I have heard him say so himself.

1 He was too hard for him directly, to say the Troth on't before Coriolus; he scotcht him, and notcht him like a Carbinado.

2 And hee had been Cannibally given, hee might have boyld and eaten him too.

1 But more of thy News.

3 Why he is so made on here within, as if he were Son and Heir to Mars, set at upper end o'th' Table: No question askt him by any of the Senators, but they stand bald before him. Our General himself makes a mistris of him, Sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o'th' eye to his discourse. But the bottome of the News is, our General is cut i'th'middle, & but one half of what he was yesterday. For the other ha's half, by the intreaty and grant of the whole Table. Hee'l go hee sayes, and sole the Porter of Rome Gates by th'eares. He will mow all down before him, and leave his passage poul'd.

2 And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.

3 Do't? he will do't: for look you sir, he has as many Friends as Enemies: which Friends sir, as it were, durst not (look you sir) shew themselves (as we term it) his Friends, whilest he's in Directitude.

1 Directitude? Whats that?

3 But when they shall see sir, his Crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their Burroughes (like Conies after Rain) and revell all with him.

1 But when goes this forward?

3 To morrow, to day, presently, you shall have the Drum stroke up this afternoon: 'Tis as it were a parcel of their Feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Why then we shall have a stirring World again: This peace is nothing, but to rust Iron, encrease Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.

1 Let me have Warr say I, it exceeds peace as farr as day do's night: It's sprightly walking, audible, and full of Vent. Peace, is a very Apoplexy, Lethargie, mull'd, deaf, sleepy, insensible, a getter of more bastard Children, than Warrs a destroyer of men.

2 'Tis so, and as Warrs in some sort may bee said to be a Ravisher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.

1 I, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Reason, because they then less need one another: The Warres for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volcians. They are rising, they are rising.

Both. In, in, in, in. Exeunt.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus.

Sicin. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him, His remedies are tame, the present peace, And quietness of the people, Which before Were in Wilde hurry. Here do We make his Friends Blush, that the world goes well: who rather had, Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Dissentious numbers pestring streets, than see Our Tradesmen singing in their shops, and going About their Functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. VVe stood too't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sicin. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O he is grown most kind of late: Hail Sir. Mene. Haile to you both.

Sicin. Your Coriolanus is not much misst, but with his Friends: the Common wealth doth stand, and so would do, were he more angry at it.

Mene. All's well, and might have been much better, if he could have temporiz'd.

Sicin. VVhere is he, hear you?

Mene. Nay I hear nothing: His Mother and his wife hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

All. The Gods preserve you both.

Sicin. Gooden Neighbours.

Bru. Gooden to you all, gooden to you all.

1 Our selves, our Wives and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both.

Sicin. Live, and thrive.

Bru. Farewell kinde Neighbours: We wisht Coriolanus had lov'd you as we did.

All. Now the Gods keep you.

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell. Exeunt Citizens.

Sicin. This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these Fellowes ran about the streets, Crying Confusion.

Brut. Caius Martius was A worthy Officer i'th'Warr, but Insolent, O'recome with pride, Ambitious, past all thinking Self-loving.

Sici. And affecting one sole Throne, without assistance.

Mene. I think not so.

Sicin. VVe should by this to all out Lamentation, If he had gone forth Consul, found it so.

Bru. The Gods have well prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still without him.

Enter Ædile.

Ædile. VVorthy Tribunes, There is a Slave whom we have put in prison, Reports the Volces with two several Powers Are entred in the Roman Territories, And with the deepest malice of the VVarr, Destroy what lies before'em.

Mene. 'Tis Auffidius, VVho hearing of our Martius Banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the VVorld VVhich were In-shell'd, VVhen Martius stood for Rome, And

And durſt not once peep out.
Sicin. Come, what talk you of Martius?
Bru. Go ſee this Rumorer whipt, it cannot be,
The Volcies dare break with us.
Men. Cannot be?
We have record, that very well it can,
And three examples of the like hath been
Within my Age. But reaſon with the fellow
Before you puniſh him, where he heard this,
Leſt you ſhall chance to whip your Information,
And beat the Meſſenger, who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.
Sicin. Tell not me: I know this cannot be.
Bru. Not poſſible.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. The Nobles in great earneſtneſs are going
All to the Senate-houſe: ſome news is comming
That turns their Countenances.
Sicin. 'Tis this Slave:
Go whip him 'fore the peoples eyes: His raiſing,
Nothing but his report.
Meſ. Yes worthy Sir,
The Slaves report is ſeconded, and more,
More fearful is deliver'd.
Sicin. What more fearful?
Meſ. It is ſpoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Martius
Joyn'd with Auffidius, leads a power 'gainſt Rome,
And vows Revenge as ſpacious, as between
The young'ſt and oldeſt thing.
Sicin. This is moſt likely.
Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker ſort may wiſh
Good Martius home again.
Sicin. The very trick on't.
Men. This is unlikely,
He, and Auffidius can no more attone
Than violent'ſt Contrariety.

Enter Meſſenger.

Meſ. You are ſent for to the Senate:
A fearful Army, led by Caius Martius,
Aſſociated with Auffidius's Rages
Upon our Territories, and have already
O're-born their way, conſum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. Oh you have made good work.
Men. What news? What news?
Com. You have holp to raviſh your own daughters, and
To melt the City Leads upon your pates,
To ſee your Wives diſhonour'd to your Noſes.
Men. What's the news? What's the news?
Com. Your Temples burned in their Ciment, and
Your Franchiſes, whereon you ſtood, confin'd
Into an Augors boar.
Men. Pray now the news?
You have made fair work I fear me: pray your news?
If Martius ſhould be joyn'd with Volceans.
Com. If? He is their God, he leads them like a thing
Made by ſome other Deity than Nature,
That ſhapes man Better: and they follow him
Againſt us Brats, with no leſs Confidence,
Than Boyes perſuing Summer Butter-flies,
Or Butchers killing flyes.
Men. You have made good work,
You and your Apron men: you, that ſtood ſo much
Upon the voice of occupation, and
The breath of Garlike-eaters.
Com. He'l ſhake your Rome about your ears.
Men. As Hercules did ſhake down Mellow Fruit:
You have made fair work.
Bru. But is this true ſir?
Com. I, and you'l look pale
Before you find it other. All the Regions
Do ſmilingly revolt, and who reſiſts
Are mock'd for valiant Ignorance,
And periſh conſtant fools: who is't can blame him?
Your Enemies and his, find ſomething in him.
Men. We are all undone, unleſs
The Noble man have mercy.
Com. Who ſhall ask it?
The Tribunes cannot do't for ſhame; the people
Deſerve ſuch pitty of him, as the Wolf
Do's of the Shepherds; For his beſt friends if they Should ſay be good to Rome, they charg'd him even
As thoſe ſhould do that had deſerv'd his hate,
And therein ſhew'd like Enemies.
Men. 'Tis true, if he were putting to my houſe, the brand
That ſhould conſume it, I have not the face
To ſay, beſeech you ceaſe. You have made fair hands,
You and your Crafts, you have crafted fair.
Com. You have brought
A Trembling upon Rome, ſuch as was never
S'incapable of help.
Tri. Say not, we brought it.
Men. How? Was't we? We lov'd him,
But like beaſts, and Cowardly Nobles,
Gave way unto your Cluſters, who did hoot
Him out o'th'City.
Com. But I fear
They'l roar him in again. Tullus Auffidius,
The ſecond name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his Officer: Deſperation,
Is all the policy, Strength, and Defence
That Rome can make againſt them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the Cluſters.
And is Auffidius with him? You are they
That made the Ayr unwholſome, when you caſt
Your ſtinking, greaſie Caps, in hooting
At Coriolanus Exile. How he's comming,
And not a hair upon a Souldiers head
Which will not prove a whip: As many Coxcombes
As you threw Caps up, will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. Tis no matter,
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deſerv'd it.
Omnes. Faith, we hear fearful News.
1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I ſaid baniſh him, I ſaid 'twas pitty.
2. And ſo did I.
3. And ſo did I; and to ſay the truth, ſo did very many of us, that we did, we did for the beſt: and though we willingly conſented to his Baniſhment, yet it was againſt our will.
Com. Y'are goodly things, you Voices.
Men. You have made you good work
You and your cry. Shall's to the Capitol?
Com. Oh I, what elſe? Exeunt both.
Sicin. Go Maſters get you home, be not diſmaid,
Theſe are a Side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they ſo ſeem to fear. Go home,
And ſhew no ſign of Fear.

1 Cit. The Gods be good to us: Come Masters let's home, I ever said we were i'th'wrong, when we banish'd him.

2 Cit. So did we all, but come, let's home. Exit Cit.

Bru. I do not like this News.

Sicin. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol: would half my wealth Would buy this for a lye.

Sicin. Pray let's go. Exeunt Tribunes.

Enter Auffidius with his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still flie to th'Roman?

Lieu. I do not know what Witchcraft's in him: but Your Souldiers use him as the grace fore meat, Their talk at Table, and their Thanks at end, And you are darkned in this action Sir, Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now, Unless by using means I lame the foot Of our design. He bears himself more proudly, Even to my person, than I thought he would When first I did embrace him. Yet his Nature In that's no Changeling, and I must excuse What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish Sir, (I mean for your particular) you had not Joyn'd in Commission with him: but either have born The action of your self, or else to him had left it soly.

Auf. I understand thee well, and be thou sure, When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him, although it seems And so he thinks, and is no less apparent To th'vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, And shews good Husbandry for the Volcean State, Fights Dragon-like, and does atchieve as soon As draw his Sword: yet he hath left undone That which shall break his neck, or hazard mine, When ere we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'l carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down, And the Nobility of Rome are his: The Senators and Patricians love him too: The Tribunes are no Souldiers: and their people Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty To expell him thence. I think he'l be to Rome As is the Aspray to the Fish, who takes it By Soveraignty of Nature. First, he was A Noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his Honors even: whether 'twas Pride Which out of dayly Fortune ever taints The happy man; whether defect of judgement, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was Lord of: or whether Nature, Not to be other than one thing, not moving From th'Cask to th'Cushion: but commanding peace Even with the same austerity and garb, As he controll'd the warr. But one of these (As he hath spices of them all) not all, For I dare so farr free him, made him fear'd, So, hated, and so banish'd: but he ha's a Merit To choak it in the utt'rance: So our Virtues, Lie in th'interpretation of the time, And power unto it self most commendable, Hath not a Tomb so evident as a Chair T'extol what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire; one Nail, one Nail; Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strengths do fail. Come let's away: when Caius Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, the two Tribunes, with others.

Menen. No, Ile not go: you hear what he hath said Which was sometime his General: who loved him In a most dear particular. He call'd me Father: But what o'that? Go you that banish'd him A mile before his Tent, fall down and kneel The way into his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd To hear Cominius speak, Ile keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Menen. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name: I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer to: Forbad all Names, He was a kind of Nothing, Titleless, Till he had forg'd himself a name a'th'fire Of burning Rome.

Menen. Why, so: you have made good work: A pair of Tribunes, that have wrack'd for Rome, To make Coals cheap: A Noble memory.

Com. I minded him, how Royal 'twas to pardon When it was less expected. He replyed, It was a bare petition of a State To one whom they had punish'd.

Menen. Very well, could he say less?

Com. I offered to awaken his regard For's private Friends. His answer to me was He could not stay to pick them, in a pile Of noysom musty Chaff. He said, 'twas folly For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt And still to nose th'offence.

Menen. For one poor grain or two? I am one of those: his Mother, Wife, his Child, And this brave Fellow too: we are the Grains, You are the Musty Chaff, and you are smelt Above the Moon. We must be burnt for you.

Sicin. Nay, pray be patient: If you refuse your aid In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But sure if you Would be your Countries Pleader, your good tongue More than the instant Army we can make Might stop our Countryman.

Menen. No: Ile not meddle.

Sicin. Pray you go to him.

Menen. What should I do?

Bru. Only make trial what your Love can do, For Rome, towards Martius.

Men. Well, and say that Martius return me, As Cominius is return'd, unheard: what then? But as a discontented Friend, grief-shot With his unkindness. Say't be so?

Sicin. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure As you intended well.

Men. Ile undertak't: I think he'l hear me. Yet to bite his lip, And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.

He

He was not taken well, he had not din'd,
The Veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We powt upon the Morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have ſtufft
Theſe Pipes, and theſe Conveyances of our blood
With Wine and feeding, we have ſuppler Souls
Than in our Prieſt-like Faſts: therefore Ile watch him
Till he be dieted to my requeſt,
And then Ile ſet upon him.

Bru. You know the very rode into his kindneſs,
And cannot loſe your way.

Men. Good faith Ile prove him,
Speed how it will. I ſhall ere long have knowledge
Of my ſucceſs. Exit.

Com. He'l never hear him.

Sicin. Not?

Com. I tell you, he do's ſit in Gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome: and his Injury
The Gaoler to his pitty. I kneel'd before him,
'Twas very faintly he ſaid Riſe: diſmiſt me
Thus with his ſpeechleſs hand. What he would do
He ſent in writing after me: what he would not,
Bound with an Oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain, unleſs his Noble Mother,
And his Wife (who as I hear) mean to ſolicite him
For mercy to his Country: therefore let's hence,
And with our fair intreaties haſt them on. Exeunt.

Enter Menenius to the Watch or Guard.

1 Wat. Stay: whence are you?

2 Wat. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men, 'tis well. But by your leave I am an Officer of State, & come to ſpeak with Coriolanus.

1. From whence? Men. From Rome.

1. You may not paſs, you muſt return: our General will no more hear from thence.

2. You'l ſee your Rome embrac'd with fire, before You'l ſpeak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my Friends,
If you have heard your General talk of Rome,
And of his Friends there, it is Lots to Blanks,
My name hath toucht your ears: it is Menenius.

1. Be it ſo, go back: the virtue of your name,
Is not here paſſable.

Men. I tell the Fellow,
Thy General is my Lover: I have been
The book of his good Acts, whence men have read
His Fame unparallel'd, happily amplified:
For I have ever verified my Friends,
(Of whom he's chief) with all the ſize that verity
Would without lapſing ſuffer: Nay, ſometimes,
Like to a Bowl upon a ſubtil ground
I have tumbled paſt the throw: and in his praiſe
Have (almoſt) ſtampt the Leaſing. Therefore Fellow,
I muſt have leave to paſs.

1. Faith Sir, if you had told as many lyes in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you ſhould not paſs here: no, though it were as virtuous to lye, as to live chaſtly. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithee fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your General.

2. Howſoever you have been his Lyar, as you ſay you have, I am one that telling true under him, muſt ſay you cannot paſs. Therefore go back.

Men. Ha's he din'd can'ſt thou tell? For I would not ſpeak with him, till after dinner.

1. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy General is.

1. Then you ſhould hate Rome, as he do's. Can you, when you have puſht out your gates, the very Defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your ſhield, think to front his revenges with the eaſie groans of old women, the Virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palſied interceſſion of ſuch a decay'd Dotant as you ſeem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire, your City is ready to flame in, with ſuch weak breath as this? No, you are deceiv'd, therefore back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemn'd, our General has ſworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirra, if the Captain knew I were here,
He would uſe me with eſtimation.

1. Come, my Captain knows you not.

Men. I mean thy General.

1. My General cares not for you. Back I ſay, go: leſt I let forth your half pint of blood. Back, that's the utmoſt of your having, back.

Men. Nay but Fellow, Fellow.

Enter Coriolanus with Auffidius.

Corio. What's the matter?

Men. Now you Companion, Ile ſay an arrant for you: you ſhall know now that I am in eſtimation: you ſhall perceive, that a Jack gardant cannot office me from my Son Coriolanus, gueſs but my entertainment with him: if thou ſtand'ſt not i'th' State of hanging, or of ſome death more long in Spectatorſhip, and crueller in ſuffering, behold now preſently, and ſwoond for what's to come upon thee. The glorious Gods ſit in hourly Synod about thy particular proſperity, and love thee no worſe than thy old Father Menenius do's. O my Son, my Son! thou art preparing fire for us: look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee: but being aſſured none but my ſelf could move thee, I have been blown out of your Gates with ſighs: and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary Countrymen. The good Gods aſſwage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it, upon this Varlet here: This, who like a block hath denyed my acceſs to thee.

Corio. Away.

Men. How? Away?

Corio. Wife, Mother, Child, I know not. My affairs
Are ſervanted to others: Though I owe
My revenge properly, my remiſſion lies
In Volcean breſts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulneſs ſhall poiſon rather
Than pitty: Note how much, therefore be gone.
Mine ears againſt your ſutes, are ſtronger than
Your gates againſt my force. Yet for I loved thee,
Take this along, I writ it for thy ſake,
And would have ſent it. Another word Menenius,
I will not hear thee ſpeak. This man Auffidius
Was my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'ſt—

Auf. You keep a conſtant temper. Exeunt.

Manent the Guard and Menenius.

1. Now ſir, is your name Menenius?

2 'Tis a ſpell you ſee of much power:
You know the way home again.

1. Do you hear how we are ſhent for keeping your greatneſs back?

2. What cauſe do you think I have to ſwoond?

Men. I neither care for th'world, nor your General: for ſuch things as you, I can ſcarce think ther's any, y'are ſo ſlight. He that hath a will to dye by himſelf, fears it not not from another: Let your General do his worſt. For you, be that you are, long; and your miſery encreaſe with your age. I ſay to you, as I was ſaid to, Away. Exit.

1. A Noble Fellow I warrant him.

2 The worthy Fellow is our General. He's the Rock, The Oak not to be winde-ſhaken. Exit Watch.

Enter Coriolanus and Auffidius.

Corio. We will before the walls of Rome to morrow Set down our Hoaſt. My partner in this Action You muſt report to th' Volcian Lords, how plainly I have born this Buſineſs.

Auf. Only their ends you have reſpected. Stopt your ears againſt the general ſute of Rome: Never admitted a privat whiſper, no not with ſuch friends That thought them ſure of you.

Corio. This laſt old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have ſent to Rome, Lov'd me, above the meaſure of a Father, Nay godded me indeed. Their lateſt refuge, Was to ſend him for whoſe old love I have (Though I ſhew'd ſowrly to him) once more offer'd The firſt Conditions which they did refuſe, And cannot now accept, to grace him onely, That thought he could do more: A very little I have yeelded to. Freſh Embaſſes, and Sutes, Nor from the State, nor private friends hereafter Will I lend ear to. Ha? what ſhout is this? Shout within Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the ſame time' tis made? I will not.

Enter Virgilia, Volumnia, Valeria, yong Martius; with Atteudants.

My wife comes formoſt, then the honour'd mould Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand The Grandchilde to her blood. But our affection, All bond and privilege of nature break; Let it be Virtuous to be Obſtinate. What is that Curt'ſie worth? Or thoſe Doves eyes, Which can make Gods forſworn? I melt, and am not Of ſtronger earth than others: my Mother bows, As if Olympus to a Mole-hill ſhould In ſupplication Nod: and my young Boy Hath an aſpect of interceſſion, which Great Nature cries, Deny not. Let the Volcies Plough Rome, and harrow Italy, Ile never Be ſuch a Goſling to obey inſtinct: but ſtand As if a man were Author of himſelf, & knew no other kin.

Virgil. My Lord and Husband.

Corio. Theſe eyes are not the ſame I wore in Rome.

Virg. The ſorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think ſo.

Corio. Like a dull Actor now, I have forgot my part, And I am out, even to a full Diſgrace. Beſt of my Fleſh, Forgive my Tyranny: but do not ſay, For that forgive our Romans. O a kiſs Long as my Exile, ſweet as my Revenge! Now by the jealous Queen of Heaven, that kiſs I carried from thee dear; and my true Lip Hath Virgin'd it ere ſince. You Gods, I pray, And the moſt Noble Mother of the world Leave unſaluted: Sink my knee ith'earth; Kneels. Of thy deep duty, more impreſſion ſhew Than that of common Sons.

Volum. Oh ſtand up bleſt! Whil'ſt with no ſofter Cuſhion than the Flint I kneel before thee, and unproperly Shew duty as miſtaken, all this while, Between the Child, and Parent.

Corio. What's this? your knees to me? To your Corrected Son? Then let the Pibbles on the hungry beach Fillop the Starrs: Then, let the mutinous winds Strike the proud Cedars 'againſt the fiery Sun: Murd'ring impoſſibility, to make What cannot be, ſlight work.

Volum. Thou art my Warriour, I hope to frame thee, Do you know this Lady?

Corio. The Noble Siſter of Publicola; The Moon of Rome: Chaſt as the Iſicle That's curdied by the Froſt, from pureſt Snow, And hangs on Dians Temple: Dear Valeria.

Volum. This is a poor Epitome of yours, Which by th'interpretation of full time, May ſhew like all your ſelf.

Corio. The God of Souldiers, With the conſent of ſupreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with Nobleneſs, that thou maiſt prove To ſhame unvulnerable, and ſtrike i'th' Warrs Like a great Sea-mark ſtanding every flaw, And ſaving thoſe that eye thee.

Volum. Your knee, Sirrah.

Corio. That's my brave boy.

Volum. Even he, your wife, this Lady, and my ſelf, Are Suters to you.

Corio. I beſeech you peace: Or if you'ld ask, remember this before; The thing I have forſworn to grant, may never Be held by your denials. Do not bid me Diſmiſs my Souldiers, or capitulate Again with Romes Mechanicks. Tell me not Wherein I ſeem unnatural: Deſire not t'allay My Rages and Revenges, with your colder reaſons.

Volum. Oh no more, no more: You have ſaid you will not grant us any thing: For we have nothing elſe to ask, but that Which you deny already: yet we will ask, That if you fail in our requeſt, the blame May hang upon your hardneſs, therefore hear us.

Corio. Auffidius, and you Volcies, mark, for we'l Hear nought from Rome in private. Your requeſt?

Volum. Should we be ſilent & not ſpeak, our Raiment And ſtate of Bodies would bewray what life We have led ſince thy Exile. Think with thy ſelf, How more unfortunate than living women Are we come hither; ſince that thy ſight, which ſhould Make our eys flow with joy: hearts dance with comforts, Conſtrains them weep, and ſhake with fear and ſorrow, Making the Mother, Wife, and Child to ſee, The Son, the Husband, and the Father tearing His Countries Bowels out: and to poor we Thine enmities moſt capital: Thou barr'ſt us Our prayers to the Gods, which is a comfort That all but we enjoy. For how can we? Alas! how can we, for our Country pray? Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory, Whereto we are bound: Alack, or we muſt loſe The Country our dear Nurſe, or elſe thy perſon Our comfort in the Country. We muſt find An evident Calamity, though we had Our wiſh, which ſide ſhould win. For either thou Muſt as a Forein Recreant be led With Manacles through our ſtreets, or elſe Triumphantly tread on thy Countries ruine,

And

And bear the Palm, for having bravely ſhed
Thy Wife and Childrens blood: For my ſelf, Sonn,
I purpoſe not to waite on Fortune, till
Theſe warrs determin: if I cannot perſwade thee
Rather to ſhew a Noble grace to both parts
Than ſeek the end of one; thou ſhalt no ſooner
March to aſſault thy Country, than to tread
(Truſt to't, thou ſhalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

Virg. I, and mine, brought you forth this boy,
To keep your name living to time.

Boy. A ſhall not tread on me: Ile run away
Till I am bigger, but then Ile fight.

Corio. Not of a womans tenderneſs to be
Requires nor Childe, nor womans face to ſee:
I have ſate too long.

Volum. Nay, go not from us thus:
If it were ſo, that our requeſt did tend
To ſave the Romans, thereby to deſtroy
The Volces whom you ſerve, you might condemn us
As poyſonous of your Honour. No, our ſute
Is that you reconcile them: While the Volces
May ſay, this mercy we have ſhew'd: the Romans,
This we receiv'd, and each in either ſide
Give the All-haile to thee, and cry be Bleſt
For making up this peace. Thou know'ſt (great Sonn)
The end of Warr's uncertain: but this certain,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou ſhalt thereby reap, is ſuch a name
Whoſe repetition will be dogg'd with Curſes:
Whoſe Chronicle thus writ, The man was Noble,
But with his laſt Attempt, he wip'd it out,
Deſtroy'd his Country, and his name remains
To th'inſuing Age, abhorr'd. Speak to me Son:
Thou haſt affected the five ſtrains of Honor,
To imitate the graces of the Gods.
To tear with Thunder the wide Cheeks a'th' Ayr,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boult.
That ſhould but rive an Oak. Why, do'ſt not ſpeak?
Think'ſt thou it honourable for a Noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, Speak you:
He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou Boy,
Perhaps thy childiſhneſs will move him more
Than can our Reaſons. There is no man in the world
More bound to's Mother, yet here he lets me prate
Like one i'th' Stocks. Thou haſt never in thy life,
Shewed thy deer Mother any curteſie,
When ſhe (poor Hen) fon'd of no ſecond brood
Ha's cluck'd thee to the Warrs, and ſafely home
Loden with Honour. Say my Requeſt's unjuſt,
And ſpurn me back: But if it be not ſo
Thou art not honeſt, and the Gods will plague thee
That thou reſtrain'ſt from me the Duty which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turns away:
Down Ladies: let us ſhame him with our knees
To his ſur-name Coriolanus longs more pride
Than pitty to our Prayers. Down: an end,
This is the laſt. So, we will home to Rome,
And dye among our Neighbours: Nay behold's,
This Boy that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels, and holds up hands for fellowſhip,
Doe's reaſon our Petition with more ſtrength,
Than thou haſt to deny't. Come, let us go:
This Fellow had a Volcean to his Mother:
His Wife is in Coriolus, and his Childe
Like him by chance: yet give us our diſpatch:
I am huſht until our City be afire, & then Ile ſpeak a little.

Holds her by the hand ſilent.

Corio. O Mother, Mother!
What have you done? Behold, the Heavens do ope,
The Gods look down, and this unnatural Scene
They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother: Oh!
You have wonn a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Son, beleeve it: Oh beleeve it,
Moſt dangerouſly you have with him prevail'd,
If not moſt mortal to him. But let it come:
Auffidius, though I cannot make true Warrs,
Ile frame convenient peace. Now good Auffidius,
Were you in my ſteed, would you have heard
A mother leſs? or granted leſs Anffidius?

Auf. I was mov'd withall.

Corio. I dare be ſworn you were
And ſir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to ſweat compaſſion. But (good ſir)
What peace you'l make, adviſe me: For my part,
Ile not to Rome, Ile back with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this cauſe. O Mother! Wife!

Auf. I am glad thou haſt ſet thy mercy, & thy Honor
A difference in thee: Out of that Ile work
My ſelf a former Fortune.

Corio. I by and by; But we will drink together:
And you ſhall bear
A better witneſs back than words, which we
On like conditions, will have counter-ſeal'd.
Come enter with us: Ladies you deſerve
To have a Temple built you: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confederate Arms
Could not have made this peace. Exeunt.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Mene. See you yon'd Coin a'th' Capitol, yon'd corner (ſtone?

Sicin. Why what of that?

Mene. If it be poſſible for you to diſplace it with your little finger, there is ſome hope the Ladies of Rome, eſpecially his Mother, may prevail with him. But I ſay, there is no hope in 't, our throats are ſentenc'd, and ſtay upon execution.

Sicin. Is't poſſible, that ſo ſhort a time can alter the condition of a man.

Mene. There is difference between a Grub & a Butterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub: this Martius, is grown from Man to Dragon: He has wings, hee's more than a creeping thing.

Sicin. He lov'd his Mother dearly.

Mene. So did he me: and he no more remembers his Mother now, than an eight years old horſe, The tartneſs of his face, ſours ripe Grapes. When he walks, he moves like an Engine, and the ground ſhrinks before his Treading. He is able to peirce a Corſlet with his eye: Talks like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He ſits in his State as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finiſht with his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Eternitie, and a Heaven to Throne in.

Sicin. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Mene. I paint him in the Character. Mark what mercy his Mother ſhall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male-Tyger, that ſhall our poor City find: and all this is long of you.

Sicin. The Gods be good unto us.

Mene. No, in ſuch a caſe the Gods will not bee good unto us. When we baniſh'd him, we reſpected not them: and he returning to break our necks, they reſpect not us.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ.

Mef. Sir, if you'ld ſave your life flye to your Houſe,
The Plebeians have got your Fellow Tribune,
And hale him up and down; all ſwearing, if
The Roman Ladies bring not comfort home,
They'l give him death by Inches.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Sicin. What's the News? (prevayl'd,

Meſ. Good News, good news, the Ladies have
The Volcians are diſlodg'd, and Martius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not th' expulſion of the Tarquins.

Sicin. Friend, art thou certain this is true?
Is't moſt certain?

Meſ. As certain as I know the Sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt of it?
Ne're through an Arch ſo hurried the blown Tide
As the recomforted through th' gates. Why heark you?

Trumpets, Hoboyes, Drums beat, altogether.

The Trumpets, Sack-buts, Pſalteries, and Fifes,
Tabors, and Cymboles, and the ſhowting Romans,
Make the Sun dance. Heark you. A ſhout within.

Mene. This is good News:
I will go meet the Ladies. This Volumnia,
Is worth of Conſuls, Senators, Patricians,
A City full: Of Tribunes ſuch as you,
A Sea and Land full: you have pray'd well to day:
This Morning, for ten thouſand of your throats,
I'de not have given a doit. Heark, how they joy.

Sound ſtill with the Shouts.

Sicin. Firſt, the Gods bleſs you for your tydings:
Next, accept my thankefulneſs.

Meſ. Sir, we have all great cauſe to give great thanks.

Sicin. They are neer the City?

Meſ. Almoſt at point to enter.

Sicin. Wee'l meet them and help the joy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, paſſing over the Stage, with other Lords.

Sena. Behold our Patronneſs, the life of Rome:
Call all your Tribes together, praiſe the Gods,
And make triumphant fires, ſtrow Flowers before them:
Vnſhoot the noiſe that baniſh'd Martius;
Repeal him, with the welcome of his Mother:
Cry welcome Ladies, welcome.

All. Welcome Ladies, welcome. Exeunt.

A Flouriſh with Drums & Trumpets.

Enter Tullus Auffidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the Lords a'th' City, I am here:
Deliver them this Paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to th' Market place, Where I
Even in theirs, and in the Commons ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuſe;
The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and
Intends t'appear before the People, hoping
To purge himſelf with words. Diſpatch.

Enter 3 or 4 Conſpirators of Auffidius Faction.

Moſt Welcome.

1. Con. How is it with our General?

Auf. Even ſo, as with a man by his own Alms impoyſon'd, and with his Charity ſlain.

2 Con. Moſt Noble Sir, If you do hold the ſame intent
Wherein you wiſht us parties: Wee'l deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir I cannot tell,
We muſt proceed as we do finde the People.

3. Con. The people will remain uncertain, whil'ſt
Twixt you there's difference: but the fall of either
Makes the Survivor heyr of all.

Auf. I know it:
And my pretext to ſtrike at him, admits
A good conſtruction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine Honor for his truth: who being ſo heighten'd,
He watered his new Plants with dews of Flatterie,
Seducing ſo my Friends: and to this end,
He bowd his Nature, never known before,
But to be rough, unſwayable, and free.

3. Conſp. Sir, his ſtoutneſs
When he did ſtand for Conſul, which he loſt
By lack of ſtooping.

Auf. That I would have ſpoke of:
Being baniſh'd for't, he came unto my Harth,
Preſented to my knife his Throat: I took him,
Made him joynt-ſervant with me: Gave him way
In all his owne deſires: Nay, let him chooſe
Out of my Files, his projects to accompliſh,
My beſt and freſheſt men, ſerv'd his deſignements
In mine own perſon: hope to reap the Fame
Which he did end all his; and took ſome pride
To do my ſelf this wrong; Till at the laſt
I ſeem'd his Follower, nor Partner; and
He wag'd me with his Countenance, as if
I had been Mercenary.

1. Con. So he did my Lord:
The Army marveyled at it, and in the laſt
When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no leſs Spoil, than Glory—

Auf. There was it:
For which my ſinewes ſhall be ſtretcht upon him,
At a few drops of Womens rhewm, which are
As cheap as Lies; he ſold the Blood and Labour
Of our great Action; therefore ſhall he dye,
And Ile renew me in his fall. But heark.

Drums and Trumpets ſound, with great ſhowts of the people.

1 Con. Your Native Town you enter'd like a Poſte,
And had no welcomes home, but he returns
Splitting the Ayr with noyſe.

2. Con. And patient Fools,
Whoſe children he hath ſlain, their baſe throats tear
With giving him glory.

3. Con. Therefore at your vantage,
Ere he expreſs himſelf, or move the people
With what he would ſay, let him feel your Sword:
Which he will ſecond, when he lies along
After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, ſhall bury
His Reaſons, with his Body.

Auf. Say no more. Here come the Lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are moſt welcome home.

Auf. I have not deſerv'd it.
But worthy Lords, have you with heed peruſed
What I have written to you?

All. We have.

1 Lord. And grieve to hear't:
What faults he made before the laſt, I thinke
Might have found eaſie Fines: But there to end
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our Levies, anſwering us
With our own charge: making a Treatie, where
There was a yeelding; this admits no excuſe.

Auf.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.
Enter Coriolanus marching with Drum, and Colours. The Commoners being with him.
Corio. Hail Lords, I am return'd, your Souldier:
No more infected with my Countries love
Than when I parted hence: but still subsisting
Under your great Command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage led your Warrs, even to
The gates of Rome: Our spoils we have brought home
Doth more than Counterpoize a full third part
The charges of the Action. We have made peace
With no less Honour to the Antiates
Than shame to th'Romans. And we here deliver
Subscrib'd by th'Consuls, and Patricians,
Together with the Seal a'th' Senat, what
We have compounded on.
Auf. Read it not Noble Lords,
But tell the Traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your Powers.
Corio. Traitor? How now?
Auf. I Traitor, Martius.
Corio. Martius?
Auf. I Martius, Caius Martius: Do'st thou think
Ile grace thee with that Robbery, thy stoln name
Coriolanus in Coriolus?
You Lords and Head a'th'State, perfidiously
He ha's betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of Salt, your City Rome,
I say your City, to his Wife and Mother,
Breaking his Oath and Resolution, like
A twist of rotten Silk, never admitting
Counsail a'th'Warr: But at his Nurses tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your Victorie,
That Pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wond'ring each at others.
Corio. Hear'st thou Mars?
Auf. Name not the God, thou boy of Tears.
Corio. Ha?
Auf. No more,
Corio. Measureless Lyar thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy? Oh Slave.
Pardon me Lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scould. Your judgements my grave Lords
Must give this Curr the Lye: and his own Notion,
Who wears my stripes impress upon him, that
Must bear my beating to his Grave, shall joyn
To thrust the Lye unto him.
1 Lord. Peace both, and hear me speak.
Corio. Cut me to pieces Volcies, Men and Lads,
Stain all your edges on me. Boy, false Hound:
If you have writ your Annales true, 'tis there,
That like an Eagle in a Dove-coat, I
Flutter'd your Volcians in Coriolus.
Alone I did it, Boy!
Auf. Why Noble Lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind Fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy Braggart?
'Fore your own eyes, and ears?
All Consp. Let him dye for't.
All. People. Tear him to pieces, do it presently:
He kill'd my Son, my Daughter, he kill'd my Cosin
Marcus, he kill'd my Father.
2 Lord. Peace hoe: no outrage, peace:
The man is Noble, and his Fame folds in
This Orb o'th'earth: His last offences to us
Shall have Judicious hearing. Stand Auffidius,
And trouble not the peace.
Corio. O that I had him, with six Auffidiusses, or more:
His Tribe to use my lawful Sword.
Auf. Insolent Villain.
All Consp. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.
Draw both the Conspirators, and kills Martius, who falls, Auffidius stands on him.
Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.
Auf. My Noble Masters, hear me speak.
1 Lord, O Tullus.
2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed, whereat
Valour will weep.
3 Lord. Tread not upon him Masters, all be quiet,
Put up your Swords.
Auf. My Lords.
When you shall know (as in this Rage
Provok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger
Which this mans life did owe you, you'l rejoyce
That he is thus cut off. Please it your Honours
To call me to your Senate, Ile deliver
My self your loyal Servant, or endure
Your heaviest Censure.
1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded
As the most Noble Coarse, that ever Herald
Did follow to his Urn.
2 Lord. His own impatience,
Takes from Auffidius a great part of blame:
Let's make the Best of it.
Auf. My Rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up:
Help three a'th'chiefest Souldiers; Ile be one.
Beat thou the Drum that it speak mournfully:
Trail your steel Pikes. Though in this City he Hath widdowed and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the Injury,
Yet he shall have a Noble memory. Assist.
Exeunt bearing the Body of Martius. A dead March Sounded.

FINIS.

The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft. And then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one dore, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other, with Drum & Colours.

Saturninus.

NOble Patricians, Patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my Cause with Arms.
And Country-men, my loving Followers,
Plead my Successive Title with your Swords.
I was the first-born Son, that was the last
That wore the Imperial Diadem of Rome:
Then let my Fathers Honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignitie.

Bassian. Romans, Friends, Followers,
Favourers of my Right:
If ever Bassianus, Cæsars Son,
Were gracious in the eyes of Royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not Dishonour to approach
Th'Imperial Seat to Virtue: consecrate
To Justice, Continence, and Nobility:
But let Desert in pure election shine;
And Romanes, fight for Freedom in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft with the Crown.

Princes, that strive by Factions, and my Friends,
Ambitiously for Rule and Emperie:
Know, that the people of Rome for whom we stand
A special Party, have by Common voice
In Election for the Romane Emperie,
Chosen Andronicus, Sur-nam'd Pius,
For many good and great deserts to Rome.
A Nobler man, a braver Warriour,
Lives not this day within the City Walls.
He by the Senate is accited home
From weary Warrs against the barbarous Gothes,
That with his Sons (a terror to our Foes)
Hath yoak'd a Nation strong, train'd up in Arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This Cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our Enemies pride. Five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant Sons
In Coffins from the Field.
And now at last, laden with Honors Spoyls,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in Arms.
Let us intreat, by Honour of his Name
Whom (worthily) you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and Senates right,
Whom you pretend to honor and adore,
That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength,
Dismiss your Followers, and as Suters should,
Plead your Deserts in Peace and Humbleness.

Saturnin. How fair the Tribune speaks,
To calm my thoughts.

Bassia. Marcus Andronius, so I do affie
In thy uprightness and Integrity:
And so I Love and honor thee, and thine,
Thy Noble Brother Titus, and his Sons,
And her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all)
Gracious Lavinia, Romes rich Ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving Friends:
And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Favour,
Commit my Cause in ballance to be weigh'd.

Ex. Souldiers.

Saturnin. Friends that have been
Thus forward in my Right,
I thank you all, and here dismiss you all,
And to the Love and Favour of my Countrey,
Commit my Self, my Person, and the Cause:
Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.
Open the Gates, and let me in.

Bassia. Tribunes, and me, a poor Competitor.

They go up into the Senate-house.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans make way: the good Andronicus,
Patron of Virtue, Romes best Champion,
Successful in the Battels that he fights,
With Honour and with Fortune is return'd,
From whence he circumscribed with his Sword,
And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome.

Sound Drums and Trumpets. And then Enter two of Titus Sons; After them, two men bearing a Coffin covered with black, then two other Sons. After them, Titus Andronicus, and then Tamora the Queen of Gothes, and her two Sons, Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moor, and others, as many as can be: They set down the Coffin, and Titus speaks.

Andronicus. Hail Rome:
Victorious in thy mourning Weeds:

Loe

Loe as the Bark that hath discharg'd his fraught,
Returns with precious lading to the Bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her Anchorage:
Commeth Andronicus bound with Lawrel bowes,
To resalute his Country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome,
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the Rites that we intend.
Romans, of five and twenty Valiant Sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poor remains alive and dead!
These that Survive, let Rome reward with Love:
These that I bring unto their lateſt home,
VVith burial amongst their Ancestors.
Here Gothes have given me leave to sheath my Sword:
Titus unkind, and careless of thine own,
VVhy suffer'st thou thy Sons unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
Make way to lay them by their Brethren.

They open the Tomb.

There greet in silence as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your Countries warrs:
O sacred receptacle of my joyes,
Sweet Cell of virtue and Nobility,
How many Sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Gothes,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum, sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones,
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the Noblest that survives,
The eldest Son of this distressed Queen.

Tam. Stay Roman brethren, gracious Conqueror,
Victorious Titus, true the tears I shed,
A Mothers tears in passion for her son:
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
Oh think my sons to be as dear to me.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautifie thy Triumphs, and return
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoak;
But must my sons be slaughtred in the streets,
For Valiant doings in their Countries cause?
O! If to fight for King and Common-weal,
VVere piety in thine, it is in these:
Andronicus, stain not thy Tomb with blood.
VVilt thou draw near the nature of the Gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful,
Sweet mercy is Nobilities true badge,
Thrice Noble Titus, spare my first born-son.

Tit. Patient your self Madam, and pardon me.
These are the Brethren, whom you Gothes behold
Alive and dead, and for their Brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice;
To this your son is markt, and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight.
And with our Swords upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

Exit Sons with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel irreligious piety.
Chi. VVas ever Scythia half so barbarous?
Dem. Oppose me Scythia to ambitious Rome,
Alarbus go to rest, and we survive,
To tremble under Titus threatning looks,
Then Madam stand resolv'd, but hope withall,
The self same Gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy
VVith opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May favour Tamora the Queen of Gothes,
(VVhen Gothes were Gothes, and Tamora was Queen)
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Enter the Sons of Andronicus again.

Luc. See Lord and Father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites, Alarbus limbs are lopt,
And intrals feed the sacrifizing fire,
VVhose smoke like incense doth perfume the skie.
Remaineth nought but to interr our Brethren,
And with loud Larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his lateſt farewel to their souls.

Then Sound Trumpets, and lay the Coffins in the Tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here my Sons,
Romes readiest Champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps:
Here lurks no Treason, here no envie swells,
Here grow no damned grudges, here no storms,
No noise, but silence and Eternal sleep:
In peace and Honour rest you here my sons.

Enter Lavina.

Lav. In peace and honour, live Lord Titus long.
My Noble Lord and Father, live in Fame:
Loe at this Tomb my tributary tears,
I render for my Brethrens Obsequies:
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.
O bless me here with thy victorious hand,
VVhose Fortune Romes best Citizens applau'd.

Tit. Kind Rome,
That hast thus lovingly reserv'd
The Cordial of mine age to glad my heart,
Lavinia live, out-live thy Fathers days:
And Fames eternal date for virtues praise.

Mar. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious Triumpher in the eyes of Rome.

Tit. Thanks gentle Tribune,
Noble brother Marcus.

Mar. And welcome. Nephews from successful warrs,
You that survive, and you that sleep in Fame:
Fair Lords your Fortunes are all alike in all,
That in your Countries service drew your Swords.
But safer Triumph is this Funeral Pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solons happiness,
And Triumphs over chance in honors bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me their Tribune, and their trust,
This Palliament of white and spotless Hue,
And name thee in Election for the Empire
With these our late deceased Emperors Sons:
Be Candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her Glorious body fits,
Then his that shakes for age and feebleness:

What should I d'on this Robe and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to day,
To morrow yeeld up rule, resigne my life,
And set abroach new business for you all.
Rome I have bene thy Souldier forty years,
And led my Countries strength successfully,
And buried one and twenty Valiant Sonns,
Knighted in Field, slain manfully in Arms,
In right and Service of their Noble Country:
Give me a staff of Honour for mine age,
But not a Scepter to controul the world,
Vpright he held it Lords, that held it last.
Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the Empiry.
Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune can'st thou tell?
Titus. Patience Prince Saturninus.
Sat. Romans do me right.
Patricians draw your Swords, and sheath them not
Till Saturninus be Romes Emperour:
Andronicus would thou weret shipt to hell,
Rather than rob me of the peoples hearts.
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That Noble-minded Titus means to thee.
Tit. Content thee Prince, I will restore to thee
The peoples hearts, and wean them from themselvs.
Bass. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But Honour thee, and will do: till I die:
My Faction if thou strengthen with thy Friends
I will most thankful be, and thanks to men
Of Noble mindes, is Honourable Meed.
Tit. People of Rome, and Noble Tribunes here,
I ask your voices and your Suffrages,
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?
Tribu. To gratifie the good Andronicus,
And Gratulate his safe return to Rome
The people will accept whom he admits.
Tit. Tribunes I thank you, and this sute I make,
That you Create your Emperours eldest sonne,
Lord Saturnine, whose Virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rays on earth,
And ripen Iustice in this Common-weal:
Then if you wil elect by my advise,
Crown him, and say, Long live our Emperour.
Mar. An. With Voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians and Plebeians, we Create
Lord Saturninus Romes Great Emperour.
And say, Long live our Emperour Saturnine.
A long Flourish till they come down.
Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy Favours done,
To us in our Election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy Deserts,
And will with Deeds requite thy gentleness:
And for an Onset Titus to advance
Thy Name, and Honourable Family,
Lavinia will I make my Empress,
Romes Royal Mistris, Mistris of my heart,
And in the Sacred Panthæon her espouse:
Tell me Andronicus doth this motion please thee?
Tit. It doth my worthy Lord, and in this match,
I hold me Highly Honoured of your Grace,
And here in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and Commander of our Common-weal,
The wide-worlds Emperour, do I Consecrate,
My Sword, my Chariot, and my Prisoners,
Presents well Worthy Romes Imperial Lord:
Receive them then, the Tribute that I owe,
Mine Honours Ensignes humbled at my feet.
Sat. Thanks Noble Titus, Father of my life,
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The least of thes unspeakable Deserts,
Romans forget your Fealty to me.
Tit. Now Madam, are you prisoner to an Emperour,
To him that for your Honour and your State,
Will use you Nobly and your Followers.
Sat. A goodly Lady, trust me of the Hue
That I would choose, were I to choose a new:
Cleer up Fair Queen that cloudy countenance,
Though chance of warr hath wrought this change of cheer,
Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: Madam he comforts you,
Can make you Greater than the Queen of Gothes?
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?
Lav. Not I my Lord, sith true Nobility,
Warrants these words in Princely curtesie.
Sat. Thanks sweet Lavinia, Romans let us goe:
Ransomless here we set our Prisoners free,
Proclaim our Honours Lords with Trumpet and Drum.
Bass. Lord Titus by your leave this Maid is mine.
Tit. How sir? Are you in earnest then my Lord?
Bass. I Noble Titus, and resolv'd withall,
To doe my self this reason, and this right.
Marc. Suum cuique, is our Romane Iustice:
This Prince in Iustice ceazeth but his own.
Luc. And that he will and shall if Lucius live.
Tit. Traytors avant, where is the Emperours Guard?
Treason my Lord, Lavinia is surpris'd.
Sat. Surpris'd, by whom?
Bass. By him that justly may
Bear his Betroth'd, from all the world away.
Mut. Brothers help to convey her hence away,
And with my Sword Ile keep this door safe.
Tit. Follow my Lord, and Ile soon bring her back.
Mut. My Lord you pass not here.
Tit. What villain Boy, barr'st me my way in Rome?
Mut. Help, Lucius help. He kils him.
Luc. My Lord you are unjust, and more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.
Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sonns of mine.
My sonns would never so dishonour me.
Traitor restore Lavinia to the Emperour.
Luc. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife,
That is anothers lawful promist Love.

Enter aloft the Emperour with Tamora and her two sonns and Aaron the Moor.

Emp. No Titus, no, the Emperour needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
Ile trust by Leisure him that mocks me once,
Thee never: nor thy Traiterous haughty sonns,
Confederates all, thus to dishonour me.
Was there none els in Rome to make a stale of
But Saturnine? Full well Andronicus
Agree these Deeds, with that proud bragg of thine,
That said'st, I beg'd the Empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous, what reproachfull words are these?
Sat. But goe thy ways, goe give that changing peece,
To him that flourisht for her with his Sword:
A Valiant sonn in-law thou shalt enjoy:
One, fit to bandy with thy lawless Sonns,

To

To ruffle in the Common-wealth of Rome.
Tit. These words are Razors to my wounded heart.
Sat. And therefore lovely Tamora Queen of Gothes,
That like the ſtately Phabe mong'ſt her Nimphs,
Doſt over-ſhine the Gallant'ſt Dames of Rome,
If thou be pleas'd with this my ſodain choice,
Behold I chooſe thee Tamora for my Bride,
And will Create thee Empereſs of Rome.
Speak Queen of Goths, doſt thou applaud my choice?
And here I ſwear by all the Roman Gods,
Sith Prieſt and Holy-water are ſo neer,
And Tapers burn ſo bright, and every thing
In readineſs for Hymeneus ſtand,
I will not reſalute the ſtreets of Rome,
Or climb my Palace, till from forth this place,
I lead eſpous'd my Bride along with me.
Tamo. And here in ſight of heaven to Rome I ſwear,
If Saturnine advance the Queen of Gothes,
She will a Hand-maid be to his deſires,
A loving Nurſe, a Mother to his youth.
Sat. Aſcend Fair Queen,
Panthean Lords, accompany
Your Noble Emperour and his lovely Bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,
Whoſe wiſdome hath her Fortune Conquered,
There ſhall we Conſummate our Spouſal rites.
Exeunt omnes.
Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this Bride.
Titus when wer't thou wont to walk alone,
Diſhonoured thus and Challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Titus Sons.

Mar. O Titus ſee! O ſee what thou haſt done!
In a bad quarrel, ſlain a Vertuous Son.
Tit. No fooliſh Tribune, no: No Son of mine,
Nor thou, nor theſe Confederates in the deed,
That hath diſhonoured all our Family,
Unworthy Brother, and unworthy Sons.
Luc. But let us give him burial as becomes.
Give Mutius burial with our Bretheren.
Tit. Traitors away, he reſts not in this Tombe:
This Monument five hundred years hath ſtood,
Which I have ſumptuouſly re-edified:
Here none but Souldiers, and Romes Servitors,
Repoſe in Fame: None baſely ſlain in brawls.
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.
Mar. My Lord this is impiety in you,
My Nephew Mutius deeds do plead for him,
He muſt be buried with his bretheren.
Titus two ſons ſpeak.
And ſhall, or him we will accompany.
Ti. And ſhall! What villain was it ſpake that word?
Titus-ſon ſpeaks.
He that would vouch'd it in any place but here.
Tit. What would you bury him in my deſpight?
Mar. No Noble Titus, but intreat of thee,
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.
Tit. Marcus, even thou haſt ſtruck upon my Creſt,
And with theſe Boys mine Honour thou haſt wounded,
My foes I doe repute you every one.
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.
1. Son. He is not himſelf, let us withdraw.
2. Son. Not I till Mutius bones be buried.
The Brother and the ſons kneel.
Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead.
2. Son. Father, and in that name doth nature ſpeak.
Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the reſt will ſpeed.
Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my ſoul.
Luc. Dear Father, ſoul and ſubſtance of us all.
Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to interr
His Noble Nephew here in virtues neſt,
That died in Honour and Lavinias cauſe.
Thou art a Romain, be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon adviſe did bury Ajax
That ſlew himſelf: And Laertes ſon
Did graciouſly plead for his Funerals:
Let not young Mutius then that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.
Tit. Riſe Marcus, riſe,
The diſmall'ſt day is this that ere I ſaw,
To be diſhonored by my Sons in Rome:
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.
They put him in the Tomb.
Luc. There lie thy bones ſweet Mutius with thy friends,
Till we with Trophees do adorn thy Tomb.
They all kneel and ſay.
No man ſhed tears for Noble Mutius.
He lives in Fame that di'd in virtues cauſe. Evit.
Mar. My Lord, to ſtep out of theſe ſudden dumps,
How comes it that the ſubtile Queen of Gothes,
Is of a ſodain thus advanc'd in Rome?
Ti. I know not Marcus: but I know it is,
(Whether by deviſe or no) the heavens can tell,
Is ſhe not then beholding to the man,
That brought her for this high good turn ſo farr?
Yes, and will Nobly him remunerate.

Flouriſh.
Enter the Emperor, Tamora, and her two ſons, with the Moor at one door. Enter at the other door Baſſianus and Lavinia with others.
Sat. So Baſſianus, you have plaid your prize,
God give you joy Sir of your Gallant Bride.
Baſ. And you of yours my Lord: I ſay no more,
Nor wiſh no leſs, and ſo I take my leave.
Sat. Traitor, If Rome have law, or we have power,
Thou and thy Faction ſhall repent this Rape.
Baſ. Rape call you it my Lord, to ſeize my own,
My true betrothed Love, and now my wife?
But let the lawes of Rome determine all,
Mean while I am poſſeſt of that is mine.
Sat. Tis good ſir: you are very ſhort with us,
But if we live, we'l be as ſharp with you.
Baſ. My Lord, what I have done, as I may,
Anſwer I muſt, and ſhall do with my life,
Onely thus much I give your grace to know,
By all the duties that I ow to Rome,
This Noble Gentleman Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd,
That in the reſcue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did ſlay his youngeſt Son,
In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath,
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him then to favour Saturnine,
That hath expreſt himſelf in all his deeds,
A Father and a friend to thee, and Rome.
Tit. Prince Baſtianus leave to plead my Deeds,
Tis thou, and thoſe, that have diſhonoured me,
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and Honour'd Saturnine.
Tam. My worthy Lord, if ever Tamora,

Were gratious in thoſe Princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me ſpeak indifferently for all:
And at my ſute (ſweet) pardon what is paſt.
Sat. What Madam, be diſhonoured openly,
And baſely put it up without revenge?
Tam. Not ſo my Lord,
The Gods of Rome fore-fend,
I ſhould be Author to diſhonour you,
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus innocence in all:
Whoſe fury not diſſembled ſpeaks his griefs:
Then at my ſute look graciouſly on him,
Loſe not ſo noble a friend on vain ſuppoſe,
Nor with ſowr looks afflict his gentle heart.
My Lord, be rul'd by me, be won at laſt,
Diſſemble all your griefs and diſcontents,
You are but newly planted in your Throne,
Leſt then the people, and Patricians too,
Upon a juſt ſurvey take Titus part,
And ſo ſupplant us for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heynous ſin.
Yield at intreats, and then let me alone:
Ile find a day to maſſacre them all,
And raze their faction, and their family.
The cruel Father, and his trayt'rous ſons,
To whom I ſued for my dear ſons life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a Queen
Kneel in the ſtreets, and beg for grace in vain.
Come, come, ſweet Emperour (come Andronicus)
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart,
That dies in tempeſt of thy angry frown.
Sat. Riſe Titus, riſe,
My Empreſs hath prevail'd.
Tit. I thank your Majeſty,
And her my Lord.
Theſe words, theſe looks,
Infuſe new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily:
And muſt adviſe the Emperour for his good,
This day all quarrels die Andronicus,
And let it be my honour good my Lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you Prince Baſſianus, I have paſt
My word and promiſe to the Emperour,
That you will be more mild and tractable.
And fear not Lords:
And you Lavinia,
By my adviſe all humbled on your knees,
You ſhall ask pardon of his Majeſty.
Son. We do,
And vow to heaven, and to his Highneſs,
That what we did, was mildly, as we might,
Tendring our ſiſters honour and our own.
Mar. That on mine honour here I do proteſt.
Sat. Away and talk not, trouble us no more.
Tam. Nay, nay,
Sweet Emperour, we muſt all be friends,
The Tribune and his Nephews kneel for grace,
I will not be denyed, ſweet heart look back.
Sat. Marcus,
For thy ſake and thy brothers here,
And at my lovely Tamora's intreats,
I do remit theſe young mens heynous faults.
Stand up Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and ſure as death I ſware,
I would not part a Batchelor from the Prieſt.
Come, if the Emperours Court can feaſt two Brides,
You are my gueſt Lavinia, and your friends:
This day ſhall be a Love-day Tamora.
Tit. To morrow and it pleaſe your Majeſty,
To hunt the Panther and the Hart with me,
With Horn and Hound,
Wee'l give your Grace Bon jour,
Sat. Be it ſo Titus, and Gramercy too. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Aron alone.

Aron. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus top,
Safe out of Fortunes ſhot, and ſits aloft,
Secure of Thunders crack or lightning flaſh,
Advanc'd above pale envies threatning reach:
As when the golden Sun ſalutes the morn,
And having gilt the Ocean with his beams,
Gallops the Zodiack in his gliſtering Coach,
And over-looks the higheſt piring hills:
So Tamora.
Upon her wit doth early honour wait,
And virtue ſtoops and trembles at her frown.
Then Aron arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy Emperial Miſtriſs,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Haſt priſoner held, fettred in amorous chains,
And faſter bound to Arons charming eyes,
Than is Prometheus ti'd to Caucaſus.
Away with ſlaviſh weeds, and idle thoughts,
I will be bright, and ſhine in Pearl and Gold,
To wait upon this new made Empereſs,
To wait ſaid I? To wanton with this Queen,
This Goddeſs, this Semiramis, this Queen,
This Syren, that will charm Romes Saturnine,
And ſee his ſhipwrack, and his Common weals.
Holla, what ſtorm is this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius braving.

Dem. Chiron thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners to intrude where I am grac'd,
And may for ought thou knowſt affected be.
Chi. Demetrius, thou do'ſt over-ween in all,
And ſo in this, to bear me down with braves,
'Tis not the difference of a year or two
Makes me leſs gracious, or thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit as thou,
To ſerve, and to deſerve my Miſtriſs grace,
And that my ſword upon thee ſhall approve,
And plead my paſſions for Lavinia's love.
Ar. Clubs, clubs, theſe lovers will not keep the peace.
Dem. Why Boy, although our mother (unadviſed)
Gave you a dancing Rapier by your ſide,
Are you ſo deſperate grown to threat your friends?
Go to: have your Lath glued within your ſheath,
Till you know better how to handle it.
Chi. Mean while Sir, with the little ſkill I have,
Full well ſhalt thou perceive how much I dare.
Dem. I Boy, grow ye ſo brave? They draw.
Ar. Why now Lords?
So near the Emperours Palace dare you draw?

And

And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot, the ground of all this grudg.
I would not for a million of Gold,
The cause were known to them it most concerns.
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonoured in the Court of Rome.
For shame put up.
Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withall
Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.
Chi. For that I am prepar'd, and full resolv'd,
Foul spoken Coward,
That thundrest with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.
Ar. Away I say.
Now by the Gods that warlike Goths adore,
This pretty brable will undo us all:
Why Lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to set upon a Princes right?
What is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broacht,
Without controulment, Justice or revenge?
Young Lords beware, and should the Empress know
This discord ground, the musick would not please.
Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world,
I love Lavinia more than all the world.
Dem. Youngling,
Learn thou to make some better choice,
Lavinia is thine elder brothers hope.
Ar. Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook Competitors in love?
I tell you Lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this devise.
Chi. Aron, a thousand deaths would I propose,
To atchieve her whom I do love.
Ar. To atchieve her, how?
Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd,
She is a woman, therefore may be won,
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What man, more water glideth by the Mill
Than wots the Miller of, and easie it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive we know:
Though Bassianus be the Emperours Brother,
Better than he have yet worn Vulcans badge.
Ar. I, and as good as Saturninus may.
Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it
With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What hast thou not full often struck a Doe,
And born her cleanly by the Keepers nose?
Ar. Why then it seems some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.
Chi. I so the turn were served.
Dem. Aron thou hast hit it.
Ar. Would you had hit it too,
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado:
Why hark yee, hark yee, and are you such fools,
To square for this? Would it offend you then?
Chi. Faith not me.
Dem. Nor me, so I were one.
Ar. For shame be friends, and joyn for that you jar:
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect, and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would atchieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may:
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chast
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus love,
A speedier course this lingring languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path:
My Lords, a solemn hunting is in hand,
There will the lovely Roman Ladies troop:
The Forest walks are wide and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind for rape and villany:
Single you thither then this dainty Doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our Empress with her sacred wit
To villany and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend,
And she shall file our engines with advise,
That will not suffer you to square your selves,
But to your wishes height advance you both.
The Emperours Court is like the house of Fame,
The Palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:
The Woods are ruthlesse, dreadful, deaf, and dull:
There speak, and strike brave Boyes, and take your turns.
There serve your lusts, shadow'd from heavens eye,
And revel in Lavinia's Treasury.
Chi. Thy counsel Lad smells of no cowardise.
Dem. Si fas aut nefas, till I find the streams
To cool this heat, a Charm to calm their fits,
Per Stygia per manes Vehor. Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus and his three sons, making a noise with hounds and horns, and Marcus.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gray,
The fields are fragrant, and the Woods are green,
Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the Emperour and his lovely Bride,
And rouze the Prince, and ring a hunters peal,
That all the Court may eccho with the noise.
Sons let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Wind Horns.

Here a cry of hounds, and wind horns in a peal, then Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your Majesty,
Madam to you as many and as good.
I promised your Grace a hunters peal.
Sat. And you have rung it lustily my Lords,
Somewhat too early for new married Ladies.
Bas. Lavinia, how say you?
Lav. I say no:
I have been awake two hours and more.
Sat. Come on then, horse and Chariots let us have,
And to our sport: Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.
Mar. I have dogs my Lord,
Will rouze the proudest Panther in the Chase,
And climb the highest Promontory top.
Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes away, and run like Swallows o're the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not we, with Horſe nor Hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty Doe to ground. Exeunt.

Enter Aron alone.

Ar. He that had wit, would think that I had none,
To bury ſo much Gold under a Tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me ſo abjectly,
Know that this Gold muſt coin a ſtratagem,
Which cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany:
And ſo repoſe ſweet Gold for their unreſt,
That have their Alms out of the Empreſs Cheſt.

Enter Tamora to the Moor.

Tam. My lovely Aron,
Wherefore look'ſt thou ſad,
When every thing doth make a Gleeful boaſt?
The Birds chaunt melody on every buſh,
The Snake lies rolled in the chearful Sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a checquer'd ſhadow on the ground:
Under their ſweet ſhade, Aron let us ſit,
And whil'ſt the babling Eccho mocks the Hounds,
Replying ſhrilly to the well-tun'd Horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us ſit down, and mark their yelping noiſe:
And after conflict, ſuch as was ſuppos'd
The wandring Prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy ſtorm they were ſurpriz'd,
And Curtain'd with a counſel-keeping Cave,
We may each wreathed in the others arms,
(Our paſtimes done) poſſeſs a Golden ſlumber,
Whiles Hounds and Horns, and ſweet Melodious Birds
Be unto us, as is a Nurſes Song
Of Lullaby, to bring her Babe aſleep.
Ar. Madam,
Though Venus govern your deſires,
Saturn is Dominator over mine:
What ſignifies my deadly ſtanding eye,
My ſilence, and my Cloudy Melancholy,
My fleece of Woolly hair, that now uncurles,
Even as an Adder when ſhe doth unrowl
To do ſome fatal execution?
No Madam, theſe are no Venerial ſigns,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are Hammering in my head,
Hark Tamora, the Empreſs of my Soul,
Which never hopes more heaven, than reſts in thee,
This is the day of Doom for Baſsianus;
His Philomel muſt loſe her tongue to day,
Thy Sons make Pillage of her Chaſtity,
And waſh their hands in Baſsianus blood.
Seeſt thou this Letter, take it up I pray thee,
And give the King this fatal plotted Scrowl;
Now queſtion me no more, we are eſpied,
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful Booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives deſtruction.

Enter Baſsianus and Lavinia.

Tam. Ah my ſweet Moor,
Sweeter to me than life.
Ar. No more great Empreſs, Baſsianus comes,
Be croſs with him, and I'le go fetch thy Sons
To back thy quarrels whatſoe're they be.
Baſ. Whom have we here?
Romes Royal Empreſs,
Unfurniſh't of our well-beſeeming troop?
Or is it Dian habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy Groves,
To ſee the general Hunting in this Foreſt?
Tam. Sawcy controller of our private ſteps:
Had I the power that ſome ſay Dian had,
Thy Temples ſhould be planted preſently
With Horns, as was Actæons, and the Hounds
Should drive upon his new transformed limbs,
Unmannerly Intruder as thou art.
Lav. Under your patience gentle Empreſs,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in Horning,
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are ſingled forth to try experiments:
Jove ſhield your Husband from his Hounds to day,
'Tis pity they ſhould take him for a Stag.
Baſ. Believe me Queen, your ſwarth Cymmerian
Doth make your Honour of his bodies Hue,
Spotted, deteſted, and abominable.
Why are you ſequeſtred from all your train?
Diſmounted from your Snow-white goodly Steed,
And wandred hither to an obſcure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
If foul deſire had not conducted you?
Lav. And being intercepted in your ſport,
Great reaſon that my Noble Lord be rated
For Saucineſs; I pray you let us hence,
And let her joy her Raven-coloured love,
This valley fits the purpoſe paſſing well.
Baſ. The King my brother ſhall have notice of this.
Lav. I, for theſe ſlips have made him noted long,
Good King, to be ſo mightily abuſed.
Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now dear Sovereign
And our gracious Mother,
Why doth your Higneſs look ſo pale and wan?
Tam. Have I not reaſon think you to look pale?
Theſe two have tic'd me hither to this place,
A barren, deteſted vale you ſee it is.
The Trees (though Summer) yet forlorn and lean,
Ore-come with Moſs, and baleful Miſſelto.
Here never ſhines the Sun, here nothing breeds,
Unleſs the nightly Owl, or fatal Raven.
And when they ſhew'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here at dead time of the night,
A thouſand Fiends, a thouſand hiſſing Snakes,
Ten thouſand ſwelling Toads, as many Urchins,
Would make ſuch fearful and confuſed cries,
As any mortal body hearing it,
Should ſtrait fall mad, or elſe die ſuddenly.
No ſooner had they told this helliſh tale,
But ſtrait they told me they would bind me here,
Unto the body of a diſmal yew,
And leave me to this miſerable death.
And then they call'd me foul Adultereſs,
Laſcivious Goth, and all the bittereſt terms
That ever ears did hear to ſuch effect.
And had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed:
Revenge it, as you love your Mothers life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my Children.
Dem. This is a witneſs that I am thy Son. Stab him.
Chi. And this for me,
Strook home to ſhew my ſtrength.
Lav. I come Semiramis, nay Barbarous Tamora,

For

For no name fits thy nature but thy own.
Tam. Give me thy poygnard: you shall know my boys
Your Mothers hand shall right your Mothers wrong.
Dem. Stay Madam, here is more belongs to her,
First thrash the Corn, then after burn the straw:
This Minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her Nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope she braves your Mightiness,
And shall she carry this unto her grave?
Chi. And if she do,
I would I were an Eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead Trunk-Pillow to our lust.
Tam. But when ye have the hony ye desire,
Let not this Whasp out-live us both to sting.
Chi. I warrant you Madam we will make that sure:
Come Mistris, now perforce we will enjoy,
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.
Lav. O Tamora thou bear'st a womans face.
Tam. I will not hear her speak, away with her.
Lav. Sweet Lords intreat her hear me but a word.
Dem. Listen fair Madam, let it be your glory
To see her tears, but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flints to drops of rain.
Lav. When did the Tygers young-ones teach the dam?
O do not learn her wrath, she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'st from her did turn to Marble,
Even at thy Teat thou had'st thy Tyranny,
Yet every Mother breeds not Sons alike,
Do thou intreat her shew a woman pitty.
Chi. What,
VVould'st thou have me prove my self a bastard?
Lav. 'Tis true,
The Raven doth not hatch a Lark,
Yet have I heard, O could I find it now,
The Lyon mov'd with pitty, did indure
To have his Princely paws par'd all away.
Some say, that Ravens foster forlorn children,
The whil'st their own birds famish in their nests:
Oh be to me though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind but something pittiful.
Tam. I know not what it means, away with her.
Lav. Oh let me teach thee for my Fathers sake.
That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee:
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.
Tam. Had'st thou in person nere offended me,
Even for his sake am I now pittiless:
Remember Boys I powr'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice,
But fierce Andronicus would not relent,
Therefore away with her, and use her as you will,
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.
Lav. Oh Tamora,
Be call'd a gentle Queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place,
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long,
Poor I was slain, when Bassianus dy'd.
Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go.
Lav. 'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
Oh keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
VVhere never mans eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.
Tam. So should I rob my sweet Sons of their fee,
No, let them satisfie their lust on thee.
Dem. Away.
For thou hast staid us here too long.
Lav. No grace?
No woman-hood? Ah beastly creature,
The blot and enemy to our general name,
Confusion all ———
Chi. Nay then Ile stop your mouth,
Bring thou her husband,
This is the Hole where Aron bid us hide him. Exeunt.
Tam. Farewel my Sons, see that you make her sure,
Nere let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away:
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful Sons this Trul deflour. Exit.

Enter Aron with two of Titus Sons.

Aron. Come on my Lords, the better foot before,
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit,
VVhere I espied the Panther fast asleep.
Quin. My sight is very dull what ere it bodes.
Mar. And mine I promise you, were it not for shame,
VVell could I leave our sport to sleep a while.
Quin. VVhat art thou fallen?
VVhat subtile Hole is this,
VVhose mouth is covered with Rude growing Briers,
Upon whose leavs are drops of new-shed-blood,
As fresh as mornings dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me:
Speak Brother hast thou hurt thee with the fall?
Mar. Oh Brother,
VVith the dismall'st object
That ever eye with sight made heart lament.
Ar. Now will I fetch the King to find them here,
That he thereby may have a likely guess,
How these were they that made away his brother.
Exit Aron.
Mar. VVhy dost not comfort me and help me out,
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained Hole?
Quin. I am surprized with an uncouch fear,
A chilling sweat ore-runs my trembling joynts,
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.
Mar. To prove thou hast a true divining heart,
Aron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.
Quin. Aron is gone,
And my compassionate heart
VVill not permit mine eyes, once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise:
Oh tell me how it is, for nere till now
VVas I a child, to fear I know not what.
Mar. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap like to the slaughtred Lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.
Quin. If it be dark, how do'st thou know 'tis he?
Mar. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious Ring, that lightens all the Hole:
VVhich like a Taper in some Monument,
Doth shine upon the dead mans earthly cheeks,
And shews the ragged intrails of the pit:
So pale did shine the Moon on Piramus,
VVhen he by night lay bath'd in Maiden blood;
O Brother help me with thy fainting hand,
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocitus mistie mouth.
Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out,

Or

Or wanting ſtrength to do thee ſo much good,
I may be pluckt into the ſwallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Baſſianus grave:
I have no ſtrength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mar. Nor I no ſtrength to climb without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more, I will not looſe again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou can'ſt not come to me, I come to thee. Both fall in.

Enter the Emperour, Aron the Moor.

Sat. Along with me, I'le ſee what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leapt into it.
Say, who art thou that lately did'ſt deſcend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Mar. The unhappy ſon of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a moſt unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Baſſianus dead.
Sat. My brother dead? I know thou do'ſt but jeſt,
He and his Lady both are at the Lodg,
Upon the North-ſide of this pleaſant Chaſe,
'Tis not an hour ſince I left him there.
Mar. We know not where you left him all alive,
But out alas, here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my Lord the King?
Sat. Here Tamora, though griev'd with killing grief.
Tam. Where is thy brother Baſsianus?
Sat. Now to the bottom do'ſt thou ſearch my wound,
Poor Baſsianus here lies murthered.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
The complot of this timeleſs Tragedy,
And wonder greatly that mans face can fold
In pleaſing ſmiles ſuch murderous Tyranny.
She giveth Saturnine a Letter.

Saturninus reads the Letter.

And if we miſs to meet him handſomly,
Sweet huntſman, Baſſianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou ſo much as dig the grave for him,
Thou know'ſt our meaning, look for thy reward
Among the Nettles at the Elder tree:
Which over-ſhades the mouth of that ſame pit,
Where we decreed to bury Baſſianus;
Do this, and purchaſe us thy laſting friends.

Sat. Oh Tamora, was ever heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the Elder tree,
Look ſirs, if you can find the huntſman out,
That ſhould have murthered Baſſianus here.
Ar. My gracious Lord, here is the bag of Gold.
Sat. Two of thy whelps, fell Curs of bloody kind
Have here bereft my brother of his life:
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the priſon,
There let them bide until we have devis'd
Some never heard-of torturing pain for them.
Tam. What are they in this pit?
Oh wondrous thing!
How eaſily murder is diſcovered?
Tit. High Emperour, upon my feeble knee,
I beg this boon, with tears, not lightly ſhed,
That this fell fault of my accurſed Sons,
Accurſed, if the faults be prov'd in them —
Sat. If it be prov'd? you ſee it is apparent,
Who found this Letter, Tamora was it you?
Tam. Andronicus himſelf did take it up.
Tit. I did my Lord,
Yet let me be their bail.
For by my Fathers reverent Tomb I vow
They ſhall be ready at your Higneſs will,
To anſwer their ſuſpition with their lives.
Sat. Thou ſhalt not bail them, ſee thou follow me:
Some bring the murthered body, ſome the murtherers,
Let them not ſpeak a word, the guilt is plain,
For by my ſoul, were there worſe end than death,
That end upon them ſhould be executed.
Tam. Andronicus I will intreat the King,
Fear not thy Sons, they ſhall do well enough.
Tit. Come Lucius, come,
Stay not to talk with them. Exeunt.

Enter the Empreſs Sons, with Lavinia, her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out, and raviſht.

Dem. So now go tel, and if thy tongue can ſpeak,
Who t'was that cut thy tongue and raviſht thee.
Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning ſo,
And if thy ſtumps will let thee play the Scribe.
Dem. See how with ſigns and tokens ſhe can ſcowl.
Chi. Go home,
Call for ſweet water, waſh thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to waſh.
And ſo let's leave her to her ſilent walks.
Chi. And t'were my cauſe, I ſhould go hang my ſelf.
Dem. If thou had'ſt hands to help thee knit the cord.
Exeunt.

Wind Horns.

Enter Marcus from hunting to Lavinia.

Who is this, my Neece, that flies away ſo faſt?
Coſen, a word, where is your husband?
If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me,
If I do wake, ſome Planet ſtrike me down,
That I may ſlumber in eternal ſleep.
Speak gentle Neece, what ſtern ungentle hands
Hath lop'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, thoſe ſweet Ornaments,
Whoſe circling ſhadows, Kings have ſought to ſleep in,
And might not gain ſo great a happineſs
As half thy love? Why do'ſt not ſpeak to me?
Alas, a Crimſon river of warm blood,
Like to a bubling fountain ſtir'd with wind,
Doth riſe and fall between thy Roſed lips,
Comming and going with thy hony breath.
But ſure ſome Tereus hath defloured thee,
And leſt thou ſhould'ſt detect them, cut thy tongue;
Ah, now thou turn'ſt away thy face for ſhame!
And notwithſtanding all this loſs of blood,
As from a Conduit with their iſſuing Spouts,
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titans face,
Bluſhing to be encountred with a Cloud,
Shall I ſpeak for thee? ſhall I ſay 'tis ſo?
Oh that I knew thy heart, and knew the beaſt,
That I might rail at him to eaſe my mind.
Sorrow concealed, like an Oven ſtopt,
Doth burn the heart to Cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela ſhe but loſt her tongue,
And in a tedious Sampler ſowed her mind.
But lovely Neece, that mean is cut from thee,
A craftier Tereus haſt thou met withall,
And he hath cut thoſe pretty fingers off

That

That could have better sewed than Philomel.
Oh had the monster seen those Lilly hands
Tremble like Aspen leaves upon a Lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not then have toucht them for his life.
Or had he heard the heavenly Harmony
Which that sweet tongue hath made;
He would have dropt his knife and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thracian Poets feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind;
For such a sight will blind a fathers eye.
One howers storm will drown the fragrant Meads,
What will whole months of tears thy Fathers eyes?
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee:
Oh could our mourning ease thy misery. Exeunt

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Judges and Senators, with Titus's two Sons bound, passing on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titus going before pleading.

Tit. Hear me grave Fathers, noble Tribunes stay,
For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept:
For all my blood in Romes great quarrel shed,
For all the frosty nights that I have watcht,
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks,
Be pitiful to my condemned Sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought:
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honours lofty bed.
Andronicus lyeth down, and the Judges pass by him.
For these, these Tribunes, in the dust I write
My hearts deep languor, and my souls sad tears:
Let my tears stench the earths dry appetite,
My sons sweet blood, will make it shame and blush:
O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain, Exeunt.
That shall distill from these two ancient ruines,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers
In Summers drought: I'le drop upon thee still,
In Winter with warm tears I'le melt the snow,
And keep eternal Spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons blood.

Enter Lucius with his weapon drawn.

Oh reverend Tribunes, oh gentle aged men,
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death,
And let me say (that never wept before)
My tears are now prevailing Orators.
Lu. Oh noble father, you lament in vain,
The Tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.
Tit. Ah Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead,
Grave Tribunes, once more I intreat of you --
Lu. My gracious Lord, no Tribune hears you speak.
Tit. Why 'tis no matter man, if they did hear,
They would not mark me: oh if they did hear,
They would not pity me.
Therefore I tell my sorrows bootless to the stones,
Who though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the Tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale;
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me,
And were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no Tribune like to these.
A stone is as soft wax,
Tribunes more hard than stones:
A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And Tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?
Lu. To rescue my two brothers from their death,
For which attempt the Judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.
Tit. O happy man, they have befriended thee:
Why foolish Lucius, do'st thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of Tigers?
Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then,
From these devourers to be banished?
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep,
Or if not so, thy noble heart to break:
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.
Tit. Will it consume me? Let me see it then.
Mar. This was thy daughter.
Tit. Why Marcus so she is.
Lu. Aye me, this object kills me.
Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her,
Speak my Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy Fathers sight?
What fool hath added water to the Sea?
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,
And now like Nylus it disdaineth bounds:
Give me a sword, I'le chop off my hands too,
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain:
And they have nur'st this woe,
In feeding life:
In bootless prayer have they been held up,
And they have serv'd me to effectless use.
Now all the service I require of them,
Is, that the one will help to cut the other:
'Tis well Lavinia, that thou hast no hands,
For hands to do Rome service, is but vain.
Lu. Speak gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
Mar. O that delightful engine of her thoughts,
That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where like a sweet melodious bird it sung,
Sweet various notes inchanting every ear.
Luc. Oh say thou for her,
Who hath done this deed?
Mar. Oh thus I found her straying in the Park,
Seeking to hide her self, as doth the Deer
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.
Tit. It was my Dear,
And he that wounded her,
Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a Rock,
Inviron'd with a wilderness of Sea,
Who makes the waxing tide
Grow wave by wave,

Expecting

Expecting ever when some envious surge,
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone:
Here stands my other son, a banisht man,
And here my brother weeping at my woes.
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have madded me. What shall I doe?
Now I behold thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee;
Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Look Marcus, ah son Lucius look on her:
When I did name her brothers, then fresh teares
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the hony dew,
Vpon a gath'red Lillie almost withered.

Mar. Perchance she weeps becauss they kil'd her husband,
Perchance becauss she knows him innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband then be joyfull,
Because the law hath tane revenge on them.
No, no, they would not doe so foul a deed,
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.
Gentle Lavinia let me kiss thy lips,
Or make some signes how I may do thee ease:
Shall thy good Vncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou and I sit round about some Fountain,
Looking all downwards to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd in meadows yet not dry
With miery slime left on them by a flood:
And in the Fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that cleerness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shews
Pass the remainder of our hatefull dayes?
What shall we doe? Let us that have our tongues
Plot some devise of further miseries
To make us wondred at in time to come.

Lu. Sweet Father cease your tears, for at your grief
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Ma. Patience dear Neece, good Titus drie thine eyes.

Tit. Ah Marcus, Marcus, Brother, well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou poor man hast drown'd it with thine own.

Lu. Ah my Lavinia I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark Marcus, mark, I understand her signs,
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee.
His Napkin with her true teares all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
Oh what a sympathy of woe is this!
As farr from help as Limbo is from bliss.

Enter Aron the Moor alone.

Moor. Titus Andronicus, my Lord the Emperor,
Sends thee this word, that if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thy self old Titus,
Or any one of you chop off your hand,
And send it to the King: he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive,
And that shall be the ransome for their fault.

Tit. Oh gracious Emperour, oh gentle Aaron.
Did ever Raven sing so like a Lark,
That gives sweet tydings of the Suns uprise?
With all my heart, Ile send the Emperour my hand,
Good Aaron wilt thou help to chop it off?

Lu. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn.
My youth can better spare my blood than you,
And therefore mine shall save my brothers lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody Battelax,
Writing destruction on the enemies Castle?
Oh none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle, let it serve
To ransome my two Nephewes from their death,
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Moo. Nay come agree, whose hand shall goe along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall goe.

Lu. By heaven it shall not goe.

Ti. Sirs strive no more, such withered herbs as these
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Lu. Sweet Father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And for our fathers sake, and mothers care,
Now let me shew a brothers love to thee.

Ti. Agree between you, I will spare my hand.

Lu. Then Ile goe fetch an Ax.

Mar. But I will use the Ax. Exeunt.

Ti. Come hither Aaron, Ile deceive them both,
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Moo. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never whil'st I live deceive men so:
But Ile deceive you in another sort,
And that you'l say ere half an hower pass.

He cuts off Titus hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.

Ti. Now stay your strife, what shall be, is dispatcht:
Good Aaron give his Majesty my hand,
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers: bid him bury it:
More hath it merited: That let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them,
As jewels purchast at an easie price,
And yet dear too, becauss I bought mine owne.

Aaron. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee:
Their heads I mean: Oh how this villany
Doth fat me with the very thought of it.
Let fools doe good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. Exit.

Tit. O hear I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruine to the earth,
If any power pitties wretched tears,
To that I call: what wilt thou kneel with me?
Doe then dear heart, for heaven shall hear our prayers,
Or with our sighs weel breath the welkin dimm,
And stain the Sun with fogg as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosomes

Mar. Oh brother speak with possibilities.
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Ti. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottome?

Then

Then be my passions bottomless with them.
Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.
Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes:
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth ore-flow?
If the winds rage, doth not the Sea wax mad,
Threatning the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the Sea. Hark how her sighs do blow:
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my Sea be moved with her sighs,
Then must my earth with her continual tears,
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd:
For why, my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them:
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave,
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger with two heads and a hand.

Mes. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid,
For that good hand thou sent'st the Emperour:
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons.
And here's thy hand in scorn to thee sent back:
Thy griefs, their sports: Thy resolution mockt,
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my fathers death. Exit.
Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be born.
To weep with them, that weep, doth ease some deal;
But sorrow flouted at, is double death.
Luc. Ah that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat:
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breath.
Mar. Alas poor heart that kiss is comfortless,
As frozen water to a starved snake.
Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?
Mar. Now farewel flattery, die Andronicus,
Thou dost not slumber, see thy two sons heads,
Thy warlike hands, thy mangled daughter here:
Thy other banisht sons with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless, and thy brother I,
Even like a stony Image, cold and numm.
Ah now no more will I controul my griefs,
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes:
Now is a time to storm, why art thou still?
Tit. Ha, ha, ha.
Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.
Tit. Why I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watry eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears,
Then which way shall I find Revenges Cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come let me see what task I have to do;
You heavy people circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made, come Brother take a head,
And in this hand the other will I bear.
Lavinia thou shalt be employ'd in these things:
Bear thou my hand sweet wench between thy teeth:
As for thee boy, go get thee from my sight,
Thou art an Exile, and thou must not stay,
Hie to the Gothes, and raise an army there,
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do. Exeunt.

Manet Lucius.

Luc. Farewell Andronicus my noble Father:
The woful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome:
Farewell proud Rome, till Lucius come again,
He loves his pledges dearer than his life:
Farewell Lavinia my noble sister,
O would thou wert as thou to fore hast been;
But now, nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs:
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs,
And make proud Saturninus and his Empress
Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his Queen.
Now will I to the Gothes and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. Exit Lucius.

A Banquet.
Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Lavinia, and the boy.

An. So, so, now sit, and look you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot:
Thy Neece and I (poor Creatures) want our hands
And cannot passionate our tenfold grief,
With foulded Arms. This poor right hand of mine,
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast
Who when my heart all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.
Thou Map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs,
When thy poor heart beats with outragious beating;
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still:
Wound it with sighing girl, kill it with groans:
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool, in Sea-salt tears.
Mar. Fie brother fie, teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.
An. How now! Has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why Marcus no man should be mad but I:
What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands,
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o're
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O handle not the theam, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.
Fie, fie, how Frantiquely I square my talk
As if we should forget we had no hands:
If Marcus did not name the word of hands?
Come, lets fall too, and gentle girl eat this,
Here is no drink: Heark Marcus what she says,
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs,
She saies, she drinks no other drink but tears
Brew'd with her sorrows, meash'd upon her cheeks.

Speech-

Speechleſs complaint, O I will learn thy thought.
In thy dumb action, will I be as perfect
As begging Hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou ſhalt not ſigh, nor hold thy ſtumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a ſign,
But I (of theſe) will wreſt an Alphabet,
And by ſtill practice, learn to know thy meaning.
Boy. Good Grandſire leave theſe bitter deep laments,
Make my Aunt merry, with ſome pleaſing tale.
Mar. Alas, the tender boy in paſſion mov'd,
Doth weep to ſee his Grandſires heavineſs.
An. Peace tender ſapling, thou art made of tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.
Marcus ſtrikes the diſh with a knife.
What do'ſt thou ſtrike at Marcus with thy knife?
Mar. At thatthat I have kill'd my Lord, a Fly
An. Out on thee murderour: thou kill'ſt my heart.
Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of Tyranny:
A deed of death done on the Innocent
Becomes not Titus brother; get thee gone,
I ſee thou art not for my company.
Mar. Alas (my Lord) I have but kill'd a Fly.
An. But? How if that flie had a father and Mother?
How would he hang his ſlender gilded wings,
And buz lamenting doings in the Ayr?
Poor harmleſs Fly,
That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry,
And thou haſt kill'd him.
Mar. Pardon me ſir,
It was a black ill-favour'd Fly,
Like to the Empreſs Moor, therefore I kill'd him.
An. O, o, o,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou haſt done a Charitable deed:
Give me thy knife, I will inſult on him,
Flattering my ſelf, as if it were the Moor,
Come hither purpoſely to poiſon me.
There's for thy ſelf, and that's for Tamora; Ah ſirra,
Yet I think we are not brought ſo low,
But that between us, we can kill a Fly,
That comes in likeneſs of a Cole-black Moor.
Mar. Alas poor man, grief ha's ſo wrought in him,
He takes falſe ſhadows, for true ſubſtances.
And, Come, take away; Lavinia, go with me,
Ile to thy cloſſet, and go read with thee
Sad ſtories, chanced in the times of old.
Come boy, and go with me, thy ſight is young,
And thou ſhalt read, when mine begin to dazel. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter young Lucius and Lavinia running after him, and the Boy flies from her with his books under his arm. Enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. Help Grandſire help, my Aunt Lavinia,
Follows me every where, I know not why.
Good Uncle Marcus ſee how ſwift ſhe comes,
Alaſs ſweet Aunt, I know not what you mean.
Mar. Stand by me Lucius, do not fear thy Aunt.
Tit. She loves thee boy too well to do thee harm.
Boy. I when my Father was in Rome ſhe did.
Ma. What means my Neece Lavinia by theſe ſigns?
Tit. Fear not Lucius, ſomewhat doth ſhe mean:
See Lucius ſee, how much ſhe makes of thee:
Some whither would ſhe have thee go with her.
Ah boy, Cornelia never with more care
Read to her ſons, than ſhe hath read to thee,
Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Oratour:
Canſt thou not gueſs wherefore ſhe plies thee thus?
Boy. My Lord I know not, nor can I gueſs,
Unleſs ſome fit or frenſy do poſſeſs her:
For I have heard my Grandſire ſay full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad.
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy,
Ran mad through ſorrow, that made me to fear,
Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt,
Loves me as dear as ere my Mother did,
And would not but in fury fright my youth,
Which made me down to throw my books, and fly
Cauſleſs perhaps, but pardon me ſweett Aunt,
And Madam, if my Uncle Marcus go,
I moſt willingly attend your Lady-ſhip.
Mar. Lucius I will.
Ti. How now Lavinia? Marcus what means this?
Som book there is that ſhe deſires to ſee,
Which is it girl of theſe? Open them boy,
But thou art deeper read and better skill'd,
Come and take choice of all my Library,
And ſo beguile thy ſorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed:
What book?
Why lifts ſhe up her arms in ſequence thus?
Mar. I think ſhe means that there was more than one
Confederate in the fact, I more there was:
Or elſe to heaven ſhe heaves them to revenge.
Tit. Lucius what book is that ſhe toſſeth ſo?
Boy. Grandſire tis Ovids Metamorphoſis,
My mother gave it me.
Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps ſhe cull'd it from among the reſt.
Tit. Soft, ſo buſily ſhe turns the leaves.
Help her, what would ſhe find? Lavinia ſhall I read?
This is the tragick tale of Philomel?
And treats of Tereus treaſon and his rape,
And rape I fear was root of thine annoy.
Mar. See brother ſee, note how ſhe quotes the leaves.
Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus ſurpriz'd ſweet girl,
Raviſh'd and wrong'd as Philomela was,
Forc'd in the ruthleſs, vaſt, and gloomy woods?
See, ſee, I ſuch a place there is where we did hunt,
(O had we never, never hunted there)
Patern'd by that the Poet here deſcribes,
By nature made for murthers and for rapes.
Mar. O Why ſhould nature build ſo foul a den,
Unleſs the Gods delight in tragedies?
Tit. Give ſigns ſweet girl, for here are none but friends,
What Roman Lord it was durſt do the deed?
Or ſlunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erſt,
That left the Camp to ſin in Lucrece bed?
Mar. Sit down ſweet Neece, brother ſit down by me,
Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inſpire me that I may this treaſon find.
My Lord look here, look here Lavinia.

He writes his Name with his Staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.

This ſandy plot is plain, guide if thou canſt

This

This after me, when I have writ my name,
Without the help of any hand at all.
Curst be that heart that forc'd us to this shift:
Write thou good Neece, and here display at last,
What God will have discover'd for revenge,
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the Traytors and the truth.

She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps and writes.

Tit. Oh do you read my Lord what she hath writ?
Stuprum, Chiron, Demetrius.
Mar. What, what, the lustful Sons of Tamora,
Performers of this hainous bloody deed?
Tit. Magni Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera! tam lentus vides!
Mar. Oh calm thee gentle Lord: Although I know
There is enough written upon this earth,
To stirr a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,
And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.
My Lord kneel down with me: Lavinia kneel,
And kneel sweet boy, the Roman Hectors hope,
And sweas with me, as with the woful Feer
And father of that chast dishonoured Dame,
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece rape,
That we will prosecute (by good advice)
Mortal revenge upon these trayterous Gothes,
And see their blood, or dye with this reproach.
Tit. 'Tis sure enough, and you knew how.
But if you hunt these Bear-whelps, then beware
The Dam will wake, and if she wind you once,
She's with the Lyon deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list.
You are a young huntsman Marcus, let it alone:
And come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a Gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry Northern wind
VVill blow these sands like Sybils leavs abroad,
And where's your lesson then? Boy what say you?
Boy. I say my Lord, that if I were a man,
Their mothers bed-chamber should not be safe,
For these bad bond-men to the yoak of Rome.
Mar. I that's my boy, thy father hath full oft,
For his ungrateful country done the like.
Boy. And Uncle so will I, and if I live.
Tit. Come go with me into mine Armory,
Lucius Ile fit thee, and withall, my boy
Shall carry from me to the Empress Sons,
Presents that I intend to send them both,
Come, come, thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?
Boy. I with my dagger in their bosome Grandsire.
Tit. No boy not so, Ile teach thee another course,
Lavinia come, Marcus look to my house,
Lucius and Ile go brave it at the Court,
I marry will we sir, and we'l be waited on. Exeunt.
Mar. O heavens! Can you hear a good man grone
And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus attend him in his extasie,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
Than foe-mens marks upon his battered shield,
But yet so just, that he will not revenge,
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus. Exit.

Enter Aron, Chiron and Demetrius at one dore: and at another dore young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius here's the Son of Lucius,
He hath some message to deliver us.
Aron. I some mad message from his mad Grandfather.
Boy. My Lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus,
And pray the Roman Gods confound you both.
Dem. Gramercy lovely Lucius, what's the news?
Boy. For villains mark'd with Rape. May it please you,
My Grandsire well advis'd hath sent by me,
The goodliest weapons of his Armory,
To gratifie your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for so he bad me say:
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your Lordships, when ever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well,
And so I leave you both: like bloody villains. Exit.
Dem. What's here, a scrole, and written round about?
Let's see.
Integer vitæ scelerisque purus, non eget Mauri jaculis nec arcu.
Chir. O 'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well.
I read it in the Grammar long ago.
Moor. I just, a verse in Horace: right, you have it,
Now what a thing it is to be an Ass?
Here's no sound jest, th'old man hath found their guilt,
And sends the weapons wrapt about with lines,
That wound (beyond their feeling) to the quick:
But were our witty Empress well a foot,
She would applaud Andronicus conceit:
But let her rest, in her unrest a while.
And now young Lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Romes strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the Palace gate
To brave the Tribune in his brothers hearing.
Dem. But me more good, to see so great a Lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.
Moor. Had he not reason Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?
Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman Dames
At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.
Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.
Moor. Here lacks but your Mother for to say, Amen.
Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.
Dem. Come, let us go, and pray to all the gods
For our beloved Mother in her pains.
Moor. Pray to the devils, the gods have given us over.

Flourish.

Dem. Why do the Emperors trumpets flourish thus?
Chi. Belike for joy the Emperour hath a son.
Dem. Soft, who comes here?

Enter Nurse with a black-a-Moor Child.

Nurse. Good morrow Lords:
O tell me, did you see Aron the Moor?
Aron. Well, more or less, or ne'r a whit at all,
Here Aron is, and what with Aron now?
Nurse. Oh gentle Aron, we are all undone.
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore.
Aron. Why, what a catterwalling dost thou keep?
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?
Nurse. O that which I would hide from heavens eye,
Our Empress shame, and stately Romes disgrace,
She is delivered Lords, she is delivered.
Aron. To whom?
Nurse. I mean she is brought to bed?
Aron. Well God give her good rest.

What hath he ſent her?
Nurſe. A devil.
Aaron. Why then ſhe is the devils Dam: a joyful iſſue.
Nur. A joyleſs, diſmal, black and ſorrowful iſſue,
Here is the babe, as loathſome as a toad,
Amongſt the faireſt breeders of our clime,
The Empreſs ſends it thee, thy ſtamp, thy ſeal,
And bids thee Chriſten it with thy daggers point.
Aaron. Out you whore, is black ſo baſe a hue?
Sweet blowſe, you are a beauteous bloſſome ſure.
Deme. Villain, what haſt thou done?
Aaron. That which thou can'ſt not undo.
Chir. Thou haſt undone our Mother.
Deme. And therein, helliſh dog, thou haſt undone---
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice,
Accur'ſt the off-ſpring of ſo foul a fiend.
Chir. It ſhall not live.
Aaron. It ſhall not dye.
Nurſe. Aaron it muſt, the mother wills it ſo.
Aaron. What, muſt it Nurſe? Then let no man but I
Do execution on my fleſh and blood.
Deme. I'le broach the Tadpole on my Rapiers point:
Nurſe give it me, my ſword ſhall ſoon diſpatch it.
Aaron. Sooner this ſword ſhall plough thy bowels up.
Stay murtherous villains, will you kill your brother?
Now by the burning Tapers of the ſky
That ſhone ſo brightly when this Boy was got,
He dies upon my Semitars ſharp point,
That touches this my firſt-born ſon and heir.
I tell you younglings, not Enceladus
With all his threatning band of Typhons brood,
Nor great Alcides, nor the god of War,
Shall ſeize this prey out of his fathers hands:
What, what, ye ſanguin ſhallow-hearted Boyes,
Ye white-lim'd walls, ye Ale-houſe painted ſignes,
Cole-black is better than another hue,
In that it ſcorns to bear another hue:
For all the water in the Ocean
Can never turn the Swans black legs to white,
Although ſhe lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the Empreſs from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuſe it how ſhe can.
Deme. Wilt thou betray thy noble Miſtris thus?
Aaron. My miſtris is my miſtris: this my ſelf,
The vigour, and the picture of my youth:
This, before all the world do I prefer,
This, maugre all the world, will I keep ſafe,
Or ſome of you ſhall ſmoke for it in Rome.
Dem. By this our mother is for ever ſham'd.
Chir. Rome will deſpiſe her for this foul eſcape.
Nur. The Emperour in his rage will doom her death.
Chir. I bluſh to think upon this ignominy.
Aaron. Why there's the privilege your beauty bears:
Fie treacherous hue, that will betray with bluſhing
The cloſe enacts and counſels of the heart:
Here's a young Lad fram'd of another leer,
Look how the black ſlave ſmiles upon the father;
As who ſhould ſay, old Lad I am thine own.
He is your brother, Lords, ſenſibly fed
Of that ſelf blood that firſt gave life to you,
And from that womb where you impriſoned were,
He is infranchiſed and come to light:
Nay he is your brother by the ſurer ſide,
Although my ſeal be ſtamped in his face.
Nurſe. Aaron, what ſhall I ſay unto the Empreſs?
Dem. Adviſe thee Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all ſubſcribe to thy adviſe:
Save thou the child, ſo we may all be ſafe.
Aaron. Then ſit we down, and let us all conſult.
My ſon and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there, now talk at pleaſure of your ſafety.
Dem. How many women ſaw this child of his?
Aaron. Why ſo brave Lords, When we all joyn in league
I am a Lamb: but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed Boar, the mountain Lioneſs,
The Ocean ſwells not ſo as Aaron ſtorms:
But ſay again, how many ſaw the child?
Nurſe. Cornelia the midwife, and my ſelf,
And none elſe but the delivered Empreſs.
Aaron. The Empreſs, the Midwife, and your ſelf,
Two may keep counſel, when the third's away:
Go to the Empreſs, tell her this I ſaid, He kils her.
Week, week, ſo cries a Pig prepar'd to th' ſpit.
Dem. What mean'ſt thou Aaron?
Wherefore did'ſt thou this?
Aaron. O Lord ſir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall ſhe live to betray this guilt of ours?
A long-tongu'd babling Goſſip? No Lords, no:
And now be it known to you my full intent.
Not far, one Muliteus my Country-man
His wife but yeſternight was brought to bed,
His child is like to her, fair as you are:
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumſtance of all,
And how by this their child ſhall be advanc'd,
And be received for the Emperours heir,
And ſubſtituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempeſt whirling in the Court,
And let the Emperour dandle him for his own.
Hark ye Lords, ye ſee I have given her Phyſick,
And you muſt needs beſtow her funeral,
The fields are neer, and you are gallant Grooms:
This done, ſee that you take no longer dayes
But ſend the Midwife preſently to me.
The Midwife and the Nurſe well made away,
Then let the Ladies tattle what they pleaſe.
Chir. Aaron, I ſee thou wilt not truſt the ayr with ſe-
Dem. For this care of Tamora, (crets.
Her ſelf, and hers are highly bound to thee. Exeunt.
Aaron. Now to the Goths, as ſwift as Swallow flies,
There to diſpoſe this treaſure in mine arms,
And ſecretly to greet the Empreſs friends;
Come on you thick-lipt-ſlave, I'le bear you hence,
For it is you that puts us to our ſhifts:
I'le make you feed on berries, and on roots,
And feed on curds and whay, and ſuck the Goat,
And cabin in a Cave, and bring you up
To be a warriour, and command a Camp. Exit.

Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius, and other gentlemen with bows, and Titus bears the arrows with Letters on the end of them.

Tit. Come Marcus, come, kinſmen this is the way.
Sir Boy, now let me ſee your Archery,
Look yee draw home enough, and 'tis there ſtraight:
Terras Aſtræa reliquit, be you remembred Marcus.
She's gone, ſhe's fled, ſirs take you to your tools,
You couſens ſhall go ſound the Ocean:
And caſt your nets, haply you may find her in the Sea,
Yet there's as little juſtice as at Land:
No Publius and Sempronius, you muſt do it,

'Tis

Tis you must dig with Mattock and with Spade,
And peirce the inmost Center of the earth:
Then when you come to Plutoes Region,
I pray you to deliver him this petition,
Tell him it is for Justice, and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable,
What time I threw the peoples suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize ore me.
Go get you gone, and pray be carefull all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearcht,
This wicked Emperour may have shipt her hence,
And kinsmen then we may goe pipe for Justice.

Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case
To see thy Noble Vncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore my Lord it highly us concerns,
By day and night t'attend him carefully:
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some carefull remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Joyn with the Goths, and with revengefull war,
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the Traytor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius how now? how now my masters?
What have you met with her?

Publ. No my good Lord, but Pluto sends you word,
If you will have revenge from hell you shall,
Marry for Justice she is so imploy'd,
He thinks with Jove in heaven, or some where else:
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays,
Ile dive into the burning Lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.
Marcus we are but shrubs, no Cedars we,
No big-bon'd-men, fram'd of the Cyclops size,
But metal Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrung with wrongs more than our back can bear.
And sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will sollicit heaven, and move the Gods
To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs:
Come to this gear, you are a good Archer Marcus.

He gives them the Arrows.

Ad Jovem, thats for you: here ad Apollonem,
Ad Martem thats for my self,
Here Boy to Pallas, here to Mercury,
To Saturnine, to Caius, not to Saturnine,
You were as good to shoot against the wind.
To it Boy, Marcus loose when I bid:
Of my word, I have written to effect,
Theres not a God left unsollicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the Court,
We will afflict the Emperour in his pride.

Tit. Now masters draw, Oh well said Lucius:
Good boy in Virgoes lap, give it Pallas.

Marc. My Lord, I aym a Mile beyond the Moon.
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus horns.

Mar. This was the sport my Lord, when Publius shot,
The Bull being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock,
That down fell both the Rams horns in the Court,
And who should find them but the Empress villain:
She laught, and told the Moor he should not choose
But give them to his Master for a present.

Tit. Why there it goes, God give your Lordship joy.

Enter the Clown with a basket and two Pigeons.

Tit. News, news, from heaven.
Marcus the Poast is come.
Sirrah, what tydings? have you any letters?
Shall I have Justice, what says Jupiter?

Clow. Ho the Jibbetmaker, he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. Tut what says Jupiter I ask thee?

Clow. Alas sir I know not Jupiter:
I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why villain art not thou the Carrier?

Clow. I of my Pigeons sir, nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clow. From heaven? Alas sir, I never came there,
God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunal Plebs, to take up a matter of brawl, betwixt my vncle, and one of the Emperials men.

Mar. Why sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your Oration, and let him deliver the Pigeons to the Emperour from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an Oration to the Emperour with a Grace?

Clow. Nay truly sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah come hither, make no more ado,
But give your Pigeons to the Emperour.
By me thou shalt have Justice at his hands.
Hold, hold, mean while her's money for thy charges.
Give me a pen and ink.
Sirrah, can you with a Grace deliver a Supplication?

Clow. I sir.

Tit. Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver up your Pigeons, and then look for your reward. Ile be at hand sir, see you do it bravely.

Clow. I warrant you sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah hast thou a knife? Come let me see it.
Here Marcus fold it in the Oration,
For thou hast made it like an humble Suppliant,
And when thou hast given it the Emperour,
Knock at my dore, and tell me what he sayes.

Clow. God be with you sir, I will.

Tit. Come Marcus let us go, Publius follow me.

Exeunt.

Enter Emperour and Empress, and her two sons, the Emperour brings the Arrows in his hand that Titus shot at him.

Satur. Why Lords,
What wrongs are these? was ever seen
An Emperour in Rome thus overborn,
Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent
Of equal Justice, us'd in such contempt?
My Lords, you know the might'full Gods
(How ever these disturbers of our peace
Buz in the peoples ears) there nought hath past,
But even with law against the wilfull Sons
Of old Andronicus. And what and if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreaks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress.
See, heres to Jove, and this to Mercury,

This to Apollo, this to the god of warr:
Sweet scrowls to flie about the streets of Rome:
What's this but Libelling against the Senate,
And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not my Lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But if I live, his feigned extasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that Justice lives
In Saturninus health, whom if he sleep,
He'l so awake, as he in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st Conspirator that lives.

Tamo. My gracious Lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, Commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus age,
Th'effects of sorrow for his valiant Sons,
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scarr'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight,
Then prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempts. Why thus it shall become High witted Tamora to glose with all:
But Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life blood on't: if Aron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the Anchor's in the Port.

Enter Clown.

How now good fellow, would'st thou speak with us?

Clow. Yea forsooth, and your Misterships be Emperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the Emperour.

Clow. 'Tis he: God and Saint Stephen give you good den, I have brough you a Letter, and a couple of Pigions here.

He reads the Letter.

Satu. Go take him away, and hang him presently.

Clow. How much mony must I have?

Tam. Come sirrah thou must be hang'd.

Clow. Hang'd? bir Lady, than I have brought up a neck to a fair end. Exit.

Satur. Despightful and intollerable wrongs,
Shall I endure this Monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same devise proceeds:
May this be born? As if his Traytrous Sons,
That dy'd by law for murther of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully?
Go drag the villain hither by the hair,
Nor Age, nor Honor, shall shape privilege:
For this proud mock, Ile be thy slaughter man:
Sly frantick wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thy self should govern Rome and me.

Enter Nuntius Emilius.

Satur. What news with thee Emilius?

Emil. Arm my Lords, Rome never had more cause,
The Gothes have gather'd head, and with a power
Of High resolved men, bent to the spoyl
They hither march amain, under the conduct
Of Lucius, Son to old Andronicus:
Who threats in course of this revenge to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Satur. Is warlike Lucius General of the Gothes?
These tydings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms.
I, now begin our sorrows to approach,
'Tis he the common people love so much,
My self hath often heard them say,
(When I have walked like a private man)
That Lucius banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their Emperour.

Tam. Why should you fear? Is not our City strong?

Satur. I, but the Citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me, to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious like thy name.
Is the Sun dim'd, that Gnats do flie in it?
The Eagle suffers little Birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleasure stint their melody.
Even so may'st thou, the giddy men of Rome;
Then cheer thy spirit, for know thou Emperour,
I will enchant the old Andronicus,
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous
Than baits to fish, or hony stalks to sheep,
When as the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious food.

King. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora intreat him, then he will,
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear,
With golden promises, that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
Go thou before to our Embassador,
Say, that the Emperour requests a parly
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting.

King. Emilius do this message Honourably,
And if he stand in Hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. Exit.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the Art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Gothes.
And now sweet Emperour be blith again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Satu. Then go successantly and plead for him. Exit

Actus Quintus.

Enter Lucius with an Army of Gothes, with Drum and Souldiers.

Luci. Approved warriours, and my faithful Friends,
I have received Letters from great Rome,
Which signifies what hate they bear their Emperour,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore great Lords, be as your Titles witness,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any scathe,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the Great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terrour, now our comfort,
Whose high exploits, and honourable Deeds,
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt:
Be bold in us, we'l follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging Bees in hotest Summers day,
Led by their Master to the flowred fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Omn. And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luci. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth leading Aron with his child in his arms.

Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troups I straid
To gaze upon a ruinous Monastery,

And

And as I earneſtly did fix mine eye
Vpon the waſted building, ſuddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall:
I made unto the noiſe, when ſoon I heard,
The crying babe controll'd with this diſcourſe:
Peace Tawny ſlave, half me, and half thy Dam,
Did not thy Hue bewray whoſe brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy Mothers look,
Villain thou mightſt have been an Emperour.
But where the Bull and Cow are both milk-white,
They never doe beget a cole-black Calf.
Peace, villain peace (even thus he rates the babe)
For I muſt bear thee to a truſty Goth,
Who when he knows thou art the Empreſs babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy Mothers ſake.
With this, my weapon drawn I ruſht upon him,
Surpriz'd him ſuddenly, and brought him hither,
To uſe, as you think needfull of the man.

Luci. Oh worthy Goth, this is the incarnat devill,
That rob'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the Pearl that pleaſ'd your Empreſs eye,
And here's the Baſe Fruit of his burning luſt.
Say wall-ey'd ſlave, whither wouldſt thou convey
This growing Image of thy fiend-like face?
Why doſt not ſpeak? what deaf? no! Not a word?
A halter Souldiers, hang him on this Tree,
And by his ſide his Fruit of Baſtardy.

Aaron. Touch not the Boy, he is of Royal blood.

Luci. Too like the Syre for ever being good.
Firſt hang the Child, that he may ſee it ſprall,
A ſight to vex the Fathers ſoul withall.

Aaron. Get me a Ladder Lucius, ſave the Child,
And bear it from me to the Empereſs:
If thou doe this, Ile ſhew thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
Ile ſpeak no more: but vengeance rot you all.

Luci. Say on, and if it pleaſe me which thou ſpeak'ſt,
Thy child ſhall live, and I will ſee it Nouriſht.

Aaron. And if it pleaſe thee? why aſſure thee Lucius,
Twill vex thy ſoul to hear what I ſhall ſpeak:
For I muſt talk of Murthers, Rapes, and Maſſacres,
Acts of Black-night, abhominable Deeds,
Complots of Miſchief, Treaſon, Villanies
Ruthfull to hear, yet pittiouſly perform'd,
And this ſhall all be buried by my death,
Vnleſs thou ſwear to me my Child ſhall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind,
I ſay thy Child ſhall live.

Aaron. Swear that he ſhall, and then I will begin.

Luci. Who ſhould I ſwear by?
Thou beleeveſt no God,
That granted, how can'ſt thou beleeve an oath?

Aaron. What if I do not, as indeed I do not,
Yet for I know thou art Religious,
And haſt a thing within thee called Conſcience,
With twenty Popiſh tricks and Ceremonies,
Which I have ſeen thee carefull to obſerve:
Therefore I urge thy oath, for that I know
An Ideot holds his Bauble for a God,
And keeps the oath, which by that God he ſwears,
To that Ile urge him: therefore thou ſhalt vow
By that ſame God, what God ſo ere it be
That thou adoreſt, and haſt in reverence,
To ſave my Boy, nouriſh and bring him up,
Ore elſe I will diſcover nought to thee.

Luci. Even by my God I ſwear to thee I will.

Aaron. Firſt know thou,
I begot him on thy Empereſs.

Luci. Oh moſt inſatiate luxurious Woman!

Aaron. Tut Lucius, this was but a deed of Charity,
To that which thou ſhalt hear of me anon,
Twas her two Sons that murdered Baſſianus,
They cut thy Siſters tongue, and Raviſht her,
And cut her hands off, and trimm'd her as thou ſawſt.

Luci. Oh dereſtable villain!
Call'ſt thou that Trimming?

Aaron. Why ſhe was waſht, and cut, and trimm'd,
And twas trim ſport for them that had the doing of it.

Luci. Oh barbarous beaſtly villains like thy ſelf!

Aaron. Indeed, I was their Tutor to inſtruct them,
That Codding ſpirit had they from their Mother,
As ſure a Card as ever won the Set:
That bloody mind I think they learn'd of me,
As true a Dog as ever fought at head.
Well, let my Deeds be witneſs of my worth.
I trayn'd thy Bretheren to that guilefull Hole,
Where the dead Corps of Baſſianus lay:
I wrote the Letter that thy Father found,
And hid the Gold within the Letter mention'd.
Confederate with the Queen, and her two Sons,
And what not done that thou haſt cauſe to rue,
Wherein I had no ſtroke of Miſchief in it.
I plaid the Cheater for thy Fathers hand,
And when I had it, drew my ſelf apart,
And almoſt broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pried me through the Crevice of a Wall,
When for his hand, he had his two Sons heads,
Beheld his tears, and laught ſo heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
And when I told the Empreſs of this ſport,
She ſwooned almoſt at my pleaſing tale,
And for my tydings, gave me twenty kiſſes.

Goth. What canſt thou ſay all this, and never bluſh?

Aaron. I, like a black Dog, as the ſaying is.

Luc. Art thou not ſorry for theſe hainous deeds?

Aaron. I, that I had not done a thouſand more.
Even now I curſe the day, and yet I think
Few come within the compaſs of my curſe,
Wherein I did not ſome Notorious ill,
As kill a man, or elſe deviſe his death,
Raviſh a Maid, or plot the way to doe it,
Accuſe ſome innocent, and forſwear my ſelf,
Set deadly Enmity between two Friends,
Make poor mens Cattell break their necks,
Set fire on Barns and Hayſtacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears:
Oft have I dig'd up dead men from their graves,
And ſet them upright at their dear Friends doors,
Even when their ſorrow almoſt was forgot,
And on their skins, as on the Bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman Letters,
Let not your ſorrow dye, though I am dead.
Tut, I have done a thouſand dreadfull things,
As willingly, as one would kill a fly,
And nothing grievs me heartily indeed,
But that I cannot do ten thouſand more.

Luci. Bring down the devil, for he muſt not dye
So ſweet a death as hanging preſently.

Aaron. If there be devils, would I were a devill,
To live and burn in everlaſting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,

But to torment you with my bitter tongue.
Luc. Sirs ſtop his mouth, and let him ſpeak no more.

Enter Emilius.

Goth. My Lord, there is a Meſſenger from Rome
Deſires to be admitted to your preſence.
Luc. Let him come near.
Welcome Emilius, whats the news from Rome?
Emi. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Goths,
The Roman Emperour greets you all by me,
And for he underſtands you are in Arms,
He craves a parly at your Fathers houſe,
Willing you to demand your Hoſtages,
And they ſhall be immediately delivered.
Goth. What ſayes our General?
Luc. Emilius, let the Emperour give his pledges
Vnto my Father, and my Vncle Marcus,
And we will come: march away. Exeunt.

Enter Tamora, and her two Sons diſguiſed.

Tam. Thus in this ſtrange, and ſad Habiliments,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And ſay, I am Revenge ſent from below,
To joyn with him and right his heynous wrongs:
Knock at his ſtudy where they ſay he keeps,
To ruminate ſtrange plots of dire Revenge,
Tell him Revenge is come to joyn with him,
And work confuſion on his Enemies.

They knock and Titus opens his ſtudy doore.

Tit. Who doth moleſt my Contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me ope the dore,
That ſo my ſad decrees may flye away,
And all my ſtudy be to no effect?
You are deceiv'd, for what I mean to do,
See here in bloody lines I have ſet down:
And what is written ſhall be executed.
Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.
Tit. No not a word: how can I grace my talk,
Wanting a hand to give it action?
Thou haſt the ods of me, therefore no more.
Tam. If thou did'ſt know me,
Thou wouldſt talk with me.
Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough,
Witneſs this wretched ſtump,
Witneſs theſe crimſon lines,
Witneſs theſe Trenches made by grief and care,
Witneſs the tyring day, and heavy night,
Witneſs all ſorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud Empreſs, Mighty Tamora:
Is not thy comming for my other hand?
Tam. Know thou ſad man, I am not Tamora,
She is thy Enemy, and I thy friend,
I am Revenge ſent from th' infernal Kindome,
To eaſe the gnawing Vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakfull vengeance on thy Foes:
Come down and welcome me to this worlds light,
Confert with me of Murder and of Death,
There's not a hollow Cave or lurking place,
No Vaſt obſcurity or Miſty vale,
Where bloody Murther or deteſted Rape,
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out,
And in their ears tel them my dreadfull name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offenders quake.
Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou ſent to me,
To be a torment to mine Enemies?
Tam. I am, therefore come down and welcome me.
Tit. Doe me ſome ſervice ere I come to thee:
Loe by thy ſide where Rape and Murder ſtands,
Now give ſome ſurance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them or tear them on thy Chariot wheels,
And then Ile come and be thy Waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the Globes,
Provide thee two proper Palfries, black as Iet,
To hale thy vengefull Waggon ſwift away,
And find out Murder in their guilty Caves.
And when thy Car is loaden with their heads,
I will diſmount, and by the Waggon wheel
Trot like a Servile footman all day long,
Even from Hiperions riſing in the Eaſt,
Vntill h s very downfall in the Sea.
And day by day Ile do this heavy task,
So thou deſtroy Rapine and Murder there.
Tam. Theſe are my Miniſters, and come with me.
Tit. Are they thy Miniſters, what are they call'd?
Tam. Rapine and Murder, therefore called ſo,
Cauſe they take vengeance of ſuch kinde of men.
Tit. Good Lord how like the Empreſs Sons they are,
And you the Empreſs: But we worldly men,
Have miſerable mad miſtaking eyes:
Oh ſweet Revenge, now doe I come to thee,
And if one arms imbracement will content thee,
I will imbrace thee in it by and by.
Tam. This cloſing with him, fits his Lunacy,
What ere I forge to feed his brain-ſick fits,
Doe you uphold, and maintain in your ſpeeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge,
And being credulous in this mad thought,
Ile make him ſend for Lucius his Son,
And whilſt I at a Banquet hold him ſure,
Ile find ſome cunning practice out of hand
To ſcatter and diſperſe the giddy Goths,
Or at the leaſt make them his Enemies:
See here he comes, and I muſt play my theam.
Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee,
Welcome dread Fury to my woefull houſe,
Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too,
How like the Empreſs and her Sons you are.
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor,
Could not all hell afford you ſuch a devil?
For well I wote the Empreſs never wags;
But in her company there is a Moor,
And would you repreſent our Queen aright
It were convenient you had ſuch a devill:
But welcome as you are, what ſhall we doe?
Tam. What wouldſt thou have us doe Andronicus?
Dem. Shew me a Murtherer, Ile deal with him.
Chir. Shew me a Villain that hath done a Rape,
And I am ſent to be reveng'd on him.
Tam. Shew me a thouſand that have done thee wrong
And I will be revenged on them all.
Tit. Look round about the wicked ſtreets of Rome,
And when thou find'ſt a man that's like thy ſelf,
Good Murder ſtab him, he's a Murtherer.
Goe thou with him, and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine ſtab him, he is a Raviſher.
Goe thou with them, and in the Emperours Court,
There is a Queen attended by a Moor,
Well maiſt thou know her by thy own proportion,
For up and down ſhe doth reſemble thee,
I pray thee do on them ſome violent death,
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tamora.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us, this shall we do.
But would it please the good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius thy thrice Valiant Son,
Who leads towards Rome a Band of Warlike Gothes,
And bid him come and Banquet at thy house.
When he is here, even at thy solemn Feast,
I will bring in the Empress and her Sons,
The Emperour himself, and all thy Foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop, and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart:
What says Andronicus to this devise?

Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcus my brother, 'tis sad Titus calls,
Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius,
Thou shalt enquire him out among the Gothes,
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest Princes of the Gothes,
Bid him encamp his Souldiers where they are,
Tell him the Emperour, and the Empress too,
Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them;
This do thou for my love, and so let him,
As he regards his aged Fathers life.
Mar. This will I do, and soon return again. Exit.
Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my Ministers along with me.
Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or else Ile call my Brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.
Tam. What say you Boys, will you bide with him,
Whiles I go tell my Lord the Emperour,
How I have govern'd our determined jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him till I turn again.
Tit. I know them all though they suppose me mad,
And will ore-reach them in their own devises,
A pair of curst hell-hounds and their Dam.
Dem. Madam depart at pleasure, leave us here.
Tam. Farewel Andronicus, Revenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy Foes.
Tit. I know thou do'st, and sweet Revenge farewel.
Chi. Tell us old man, how shall we be employ'd?
Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do,
Publius come hither, Caius, and Valentine.
Pub. What is your will?
Tit. Know you these two?
Pub. The Empress Sons
I take them, Chiron, Demetrius.
Tit. Fie Publius fie, thou art too much deceiv'd,
The one is Murder, Rape is the others name,
And therefore bind them gentle Publius,
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them,
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it, therefore bind them sure.
Chi. Villains forbear, we are the Empress Sons.
Pub. And therefore do we, what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.
Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast. Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lavinia with a Bason.

Tit. Come, come Lavinia, look, thy Foes are bound,
Sirs stop their mouths, let them not speak to me,
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.
Oh Villains, Chiron, and Demetrius,
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,
This goodly Summer with your Winter mixt,
You kill'd her husband, and for that vil'd fault,
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest,
Both her sweet hands, her Tongue, and that more dear
Than hands or tongue, her spotless Chastity,
Inhumane Traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark Wretches how I mean to martyr you,
This one Hand yet is left, to cut your throats,
Whil'st that Lavinia tween her stumps doth hold,
The Bason that receives your guilty blood.
You know your Mother means to feast with me,
And calls her self Revenge, and thinks me mad.
Hark Villains, I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, Ile make a Past,
And of the Past a Coffin will I rear,
And make two Pasties of your shameful heads,
And bid that strumpet your unhallowed Dam,
Like to the earth swallow her own increase.
This is the Feast that I have bid her to,
And this the Banquet she shall surfet on,
For worse than Philomel you us'd my Daughter,
And worse than Progne, I will be reveng'd,
And now prepare your throats: Lavinia come,
Receive the blood, and when that they are dead
Let me go grind their Bones to powder small,
And with this hateful Liquor temper it,
And in that Past let their wild Heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be ever one officious,
To make this Banquet, which I wish might prove,
More stern and bloody than the Centaures Feast.
He cuts their throats.
So now bring them in, for Ile play the Cook,
And see them ready, 'gainst the Mother comes. Exeunt.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Gothes.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my Fathers mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
Goth. And ours with thine befall, what fortune will.
Luc. Good Unkle take you in this barbarous Moor
This Ravenous Tiger, this accursed devil,
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the Emperors face,
For testimony of his foul proceedings.
And see the Ambush of our Friends be strong,
If ere the Emperour means no good to us.
Aron. Some devil whisper curses in my ear,
And prompt me that my tongue may utter forth,
The Venemous Malice of my swelling heart.
Luc. Away inhumane Dogg, Unhallowed Slave,
Sirs help our Unckle, to convey him in, Flourish
The Trumpets shew the Emperour is at hand.

Sound Trumpets. Enter Emperour, and Empress, with Tribunes and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more Suns than one?
Luc. What boots it thee to call thy self a Sun?
Mar. Romes Emperour and Nephew break the parly
These quarrels must be quietly debated,
The Feast is ready which the careful Titus,

Hath

Hath ordained to an honourable end,
For Peace, for Love, for League, and good to Rome:
Pleaſe you therefore draw nigh and take your places.
Satur. Marcus we will. Hoboys.

A Table brought in.

Enter Titus like a Cook, placing the meat on the Table, and Lavinia with a veil over her face.

Titus. Welcome my gracious Lord,
Welcome Dread Queen,
Welcome ye Warlike Gothes, welcome Lucius,
And welcome all: although the cheer be poor,
'Twill fill your ſtomacks, pleaſe you eat of it.
Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd Andronicus?
Tit. Becauſe I would be ſure to have all well,
To entertain your Highneſs, and your Empreſs.
Tam. We are beholding to you good Andronicus.
Tit. And if your Highneſs knew my heart, you were:
My Lord the Emperour reſolve me this,
Was it well done of raſh Virginius,
To ſlay his daughter with his own right hand,
Becauſe ſhe was enforc'd, ſtain'd, and deflowr'd?
Satur. It was Andronicus.
Tit. Your reaſon, Mighty Lord?
Sat. Becauſe the Girl ſhould not ſurvive her ſhame,
And by her preſence ſtill renew his ſorrows.
Tit. A reaſon mighty, ſtrong, and effectual,
A pattern, preſident, and lively warrant,
For me (moſt wretched) to perform the like:
Dye, dye, Lavinia, and thy ſhame with thee,
And with thy ſhame, thy Fathers ſorrow dye.
He kils her.
Sat. What haſt thou done, unnatural and unkind?
Tit. Kill'd her for whom my tears have made me blind.
I am as wofull as Virginius was,
And have a thouſand times more cauſe than he.
Sat. What was ſhe raviſht? tell who did the deed.
Tit. Wilt pleaſe you eat,
Wilt pleaſe your Highneſs feed?
Tam. Why haſt thou ſlain thine onely Daughter thus?
Tit. Not I, twas Chiron, and Demetrius.
They raviſht her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
Satur. Goe fetch them hither to us preſently.
Tit. Why there they are both, baked in that pye,
Whereof their Mother dantily hath fed,
Eating the fleſh that ſhe herſelf hath bred.
'Tis true, tis true, witneſs my knives ſharp point.
He ſtabs the Empreſs.
Satu. Dye frantick wretch, for this accurſed deed.
Luc. Can the Sons eyes, behold his Father bleed?
There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed.
Mar. You ſad-fac'd men, people, and Sons of Rome,
By uprore ſever'd like a flight of Fowle,
Scattred by winds and high tempeſtuous guſts,
Oh let me teach you how, to knit again
This ſcattred Corn into one mutual ſheaf,
Theſe broken limbs again into one body.
Goth. Let Rome herſelf be bane unto herſelf,
And ſhe whom mighty kingdomes curtſie to,
Like a forlorn and deſperate caſtaway,
Do ſhamefull execution on herſelf.
But if my froſty ſignes and chaps of age,
Grave witneſſes of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
Speak Romes dear frend, as'erſt our Anceſter,
When with his ſolemn tongue he did diſcourſe
To love-ſick Didoes ſad attending ear,
The ſtory of that balefull burning night,
When ſubtile Greeks ſurpriz'd King Priams Troy:
Tell us what Sinon hath bewitcht our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,
That gives our Troy, our Rome the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor ſteel,
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
But floods of tears will drown my Oratory,
And break my very uttrance, even in the time
When it ſhould move you to attend me moſt,
Lending your kind hand Commiſeration.
Here is a Captain, let him tell the tale.
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him ſpeak.
Luc. This Noble Auditory, be it known to you,
That curſed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdred our Emperours Brother,
And they it were that raviſhed our Siſter,
For their fell faults our Brothers were beheaded,
Our fathers tears deſpiſ'd, and baſely couzen'd
Of that true hand that fought Romes quarrell out,
And ſent her enemies unto the grave.
Laſtly, my ſelf unkindly baniſhed,
The gates ſhut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Romes Enemies,
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to imbrace me as a Friend:
And I am turned forth, be it known to you,
That have preſerv'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her boſome took the Enemies point,
Sheathing the ſteel in my adventrous body.
Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I,
My ſcars can witneſs, dumb although they are;
That my report is juſt and full of truth:
But ſoft, methinks I do digreſs too much,
Citing my worthleſs praiſe: Oh pardon me,
For when no friends are by, men praiſe themſelves.
Marc. Now is my turn to ſpeak: Behold this Child,
Of this was Tamora delivered,
The iſſue of an Irreligious Moor,
Chief Architect and plotter of theſe woes,
The Villain is alive in Titus houſe,
And as he is, to witneſs this is true.
Now judge what courſe had Titus to revenge
Theſe wrongs, unſpeakable paſt patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what ſay you Romans?
Have we done ought amiſs? ſhew us wherein,
And from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronicus,
Will hand in hand all headlong caſt us down,
And on the ragged ſtones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual cloſure of our houſe:
Speak Romans ſpeak, and if you ſay we ſhall,
Lo hand in hand Lucius and I will fall.
Emili. Come come, thou reverent man of Rome,
And bring our Emperour gently in thy hand,
Lucius our Emperour: for well I know,
The common voice do cry it ſhall be ſo.
Mar. Lucius, all hail Romes Royal Emperour,
Go, go into old Titus ſorrowfull houſe,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd ſome direfull ſlaughtering death,
As puniſhment for his moſt wicked life.
Lucius all hail to Romes gracious Governour.

Lucius

Luc. Thanks gentle Romans, may I govern so,
To heal Romes harms, and wipe away her wo.
But gentle people, give me aym a-while,
For Nature puts me to a heavy task:
Stand all aloof, but Vnckle draw you neer
To shed obsequious tears upon this Trunk:
Oh take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
The last true Duties of thy Noble Son.

Mar. A tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy Lips:
O were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless, and infinit, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither Boy, come, come, and learn of us
To melt in showrs: thy Grandsire lov'd thee well,
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee:
Sung thee asleep, his Loving Brest, thy Pillow:
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet, and agreeing with thine Infancy:
In that respect then, like a loving Child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender Spring,
Because kind Nature doth require it so:
Friends should associat Friends, in Grief and Woe;
Bid him farwel, commit him to the Grave,
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O Grandsire, Grandsire: even with all my heart
Would I were Dead, so you did Live again.
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping,
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Romans. You sad Andronici, have done with woes,
Give sentence on this execrable Wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him brest deep in earth, and samish him:
There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves, or pitties him,
For the offence, he dyes. This is our doom:
Some stay, to see him fastned in the earth.

Aaron. O why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no Baby I, that with base Prayers
I should repent the Evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did,
Would I perform if I might have my will:
If one good Deed in all my life I did,
I doe repent it from my very Soul.

Luci. Some loving Friends convey the Emperor hence,
And give him buriall in his fathers grave.
My Father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our Houshold's Monument:
As for that heynous Tyger Tamora,
No funeral Rite, nor man in mournful Weeds,
No mournful Bell shall ring her Burial:
But throw her forth to Beast and Birds of prey:
Her life was Beast-like, and devoid of pitty,
And being so, shall have like want of pitty.
See justice done on Aaron that damn'd Moor,
From whom, our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then afterwards, to Order well the State,
That like Events may ne'r it ruinate. Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF ROMEO and IULIET.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Sampſon and Gregory, with Swords and Bucklers, of the Houſe of Capulet.

Sampſon.

Gregory: A my word we'l not carry coals.

Greg. No, for then we ſhould be Colliars.

Samp. I mean, if we be in choler, we'l draw.

Greg. I while you live, draw your neck out o'th'Collar.

Samp. I ſtrike quickly, being mov'd.

Greg. But thou art not quickly mov'd to ſtrike.

Samp. A dog of the houſe of Mountague, moves me.

Greg. To move, is to ſtir: and to be valiant, is to ſtand: Therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou runſt away.

Samp. A dog of that houſe ſhall move me to ſtand: I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Mountagues.

Greg. That ſhews thee weak ſlave, for the weakeſt goes to the wall.

Samp. True, and therefore women being the weakeſt Veſſells, are ever thruſt to the wall: therefore I will puſh Mountagues men from the wall, and thruſt his Maids to the wall. (their men.

Greg. The Quarrell is between our Maſters, and us

Samp. Tis all one, I will ſhew my ſelf a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be civil with the Maids, and cut off their heads.

Greg. The heads of the Maids?

Samp. I, the heads of the Maids, or their maiden-heads, Take it in what ſenſe thou wilt.

Greg. They muſt take it in ſenſe that feel it.

Samp. Me they ſhall feel while I am able to ſtand: And tis known I am a prety piece of fleſh.

Greg. Tis well thou art not Fiſh: if thou had'ſt, thou had'ſt been poor Iohn. Draw thy Tool, here comes of the Houſe of the Mountageus.

Enter two other Servingmen.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I wil back thee.

Gre. How? Turn thy back and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Greg. No marry: I fear thee.

Samp. Let us take the Law of our ſides: let them begin.

Gr. I wil frown as I paſs by, & let thē take it as they liſt.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my Thumb at them, which is a diſgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abra. Doe you bite your Thumb at us ſir?

Sam. I do bite my Thumb, ſir.

Abra. Do you bite your Thumb at us ſir?

Sam. Is the Law of our ſide, if I ſay I? Gre. No.

Samp. No ſir, I do not bite my Thumb at you ſir: but I bite my Thumb ſir.

Greg. Do you quarrel ſir?

Abra. Quarrel ſir? no ſir. (as you.

Sam. If you do ſir, I am for you, I ſerve as good a man

Abra. No bette? Sam. Well ſir.

Enter Benvolio.

Gre. Say better: here comes one of my maſters kinſmen.

Sam. Yes better.

Abra. You Lye.

Samp. Draw if you be men. Gregori, remember thy waſhing blow. They fight.

Ben. Part Fools, put up your Swords, you know not what you do.

Enter Tibalt.

Tyba. What art thou drawn, among theſe heartleſs Hinds? Turn thee Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace, put up thy Sword, Or manage it to part theſe men with me.

Tyb. What draw, and talk of peace? I hate the word As I hate hell, all Mountagues, and thee: Have at thee Coward. Fight.

Enter three or four Citizens with Clubs.

Offic. Clubs, Bils, and Partiſons, ſtrike, beat them down, Down with the Capulets, down with the Mountagues.

Enter old Capulet in his Gown, and his Wife.

Cap. What noiſe is this? Give me my long Sword ho?

Wife. A crutch, a crutch: why call you for a Sword?

Cap. My Sword I ſay: Old Mountague is come, And flouriſhes his Blade in ſpight of me.

Enter old Mauntague, and his wife.

Moun. Thou villain Capulet. Hold me not, let me go.

2. Wife. Thou ſhall not ſtir a foot to ſeek a Foe.

Enter Prince Eskales with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious Subjects, Enemies to peace, Prophaners of this Neighbor-ſtained Steel, Will they not hear? What ho, you Men, you Beaſts, That quench the fire of your pernitious Rage, With purple Fountains iſſuing from your Veins: On pain of Torture, from theſe bloody hands Throw your miſtemper'd weapons to the ground, And heir the Sentence of your moved Prince. Three civil Broyls, bred of an Ayery word, By thee old Capulet and Mountague Have thrice diſturb'd the quiet of our ſtreets, And made Verona's ancient Citizens Caſt by their Grave beſeeming Ornament, To wield old Partizans, in hands as old,

Cankred

Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate,
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time all the rest depart away:
You Capulet shall go along with me,
And Mountague come you this afternoon,
To know our Fathers pleasure in this case:
To old Free town, our common judgement place:
Once more on pain of death, all men depart. Exeunt.

Moun. Who set this antient quarrell new abroach?
Speak Nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach,
I drew to part them, in the instant came
The fiery Tibalt, with his sword prepar'd,
Which as he breath'd defiance to my ears,
He swong about his head, and cut the winds,
Who nothing hurt withall, hist him in scorn,
While we were enterchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the Prince came, who parted either part.

Wife. O where is Romeo, saw you him to day?
Right glad am I, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipt Sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the East,
A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad,
Where underneath the grove of Sycamour,
That West-ward rooteth from this City side,
So early walking did I see your Son;
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood;
I measuring his affections by my own,
Which then most sought, where most might not be found,
Being one too many by my weary self,
Persued my honour, not persuing his,
And gladly shun'd, who gladly fled from me.

Mount. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning dew,
Adding to clouds, more clouds with his deep sighs,
But all so soon as the all-cheering Sun,
Should in the farthest East begin to draw
The shady Curtains from Auroras bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy Son,
And private in his Chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair day-light out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble Uncle do you know the cause?

Moun. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Moun. Both by my self, and many other Friends,
But he his own affections Counseller,
Is to himself (I will not say how true)
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the ayr,
Or dedicate his beauty to the same.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. See where he comes, so please you step aside,
I'le know his grievance, or be much deny'd.

Moun. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift. Come Madam let's away. Exeunt.

Ben. Good morrow Cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay me, sad hours seem long:
Was that my Father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was: what sadness lengthens Romeos hours?

Ro. Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben. In love.

Rom. Out.

Ben. Of love.

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas that love so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof.

Rom. Alas that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should without eyes, see path-ways to his will:
Where shall we dine? O me: what fray was here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all:
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:
Why then, O brawling love, O loving hate,
O any thing of nothing first create:
O heavy lightness, serious vanity,
Mishapen Chaos of well-seeming forms,
Feather of lead, bright smoak, cold fire, sick health,
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is:
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No Couze, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good hearts oppression.

Rom. Why such is loves transgression.
Griefs of mine own lye heavy in my breast;
Which thou wilt propagate to have it prest
With more of thine, this love that thou hast shown,
Doth ad more grief, to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoak made with the fume of sighs,
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in Lovers eyes,
Being vext, a Sea nourisht with loving tears,
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choaking gall, and a preserving sweet:
Farewell my Couze.

Ben. Soft, I will go along,
And if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. But I have lost my self, I am not here,
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love?

Rom. What shall I grone and tell thee?

Ben. Grone? why no: but sadly tell me who.

Rom. A sick man in good sadness makes his will:
O, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill:
In sadness Couzin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man, and she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair Couze, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well in that hit you miss, she'l not be hit
With Cupids arrow, she hath Dians wit:
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd:
From loves weak childish Bow, she lives unharm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms
Nor bide th'incounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to Saint-seducing Gold:
O she is rich in beauty, only poor,
That when she dyes, with beauty dyes her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chast?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge wast?
For beauty starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

Shee is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Doe I live dead, that live to tell it now.
Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O teach me how I should forget to think.
Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties. (more,
Rom. 'Tis the way to call hers (exquisite) in question
Those happy masks that kiss fair Ladies brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair:
He that is strucken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eye-sight lost:
Shew me a Mistress that is passing fair:
What doth her beauty serve but as a note,
Where I may read who past that passing fair.
Farewel, thou can'st not teach me to forget.
Ben. Ile pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. Exeunt.

Enter Capulet, County Paris, and the Clown.

Capu. Mountague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike, and 'tis not hard I think,
For men so old as we, to keep the peace.
Par. Of honourable reckning are you both,
And pitty 'tis you liv'd at ods so long:
But now my Lord, what say you to my sute?
Capu. But saying ore what I have said before,
My Child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years,
Let two more Summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a Bride.
Par. Younger than she, are happy mothers made.
Capu. And too soon marr'd are those so early made:
Earth up hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful Lady of my earth:
But woo her gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent, is but a part,
And she agree, within her scope of choice,
Lies my consent, and fair according voice:
This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a Guest,
Such as I love, and you among the store,
One more, most welcome makes my number more:
At my poor house, look to behold this night,
Earth-treading starrs, that make dark heaven light,
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel,
When well apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping Winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh Female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house: hear all, all see:
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:
Which one more view, of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reck'ning none.
Come, go with me: go sirrah trudge about,
Through fair Verona, find those persons out,
Whose names are written there, and to them say,
My house and welcome, on their pleasure stay. Exit.

Ser. Find them out whose names are written. Here it is written, that the Shoo-maker should meddle with his Yard, and the Tayler with his Last, the Fisher with his Pensil, and the Painter with his Nets. But I am sent to find those persons whose names are writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ (I must to the learned) in good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut man, one fire burns out anothers burning,
One pain is less'ned by anothers anguish:
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning:
One desperate grief, cures with anothers languish:
Take thou some new infection to the eye,
And the rank poyson of the old will die.
Rom. Your Plantan leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why Romeo art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a mad man is:
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipt and tormented: and Godden good fellow.
Ser. Godgigoden, I pray sir can you read?
Rom. I mine own fortune in my misery.
Ser. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book:
But I pray can you read any thing you see?
Rom. I, if I know the letters and the Language.
Ser. Ye say honestly, rest you merry.
Rom. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reads the Letter.

Seigneur Martino, and his wife and daughter: County Anselm and his beautious sisters: the Lady widdow of Vitruvio, Seigneur Placentio, and his lovely Neeces: Mercutio and his brother Valentine, mine Uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters: my fair Neece Rosaline, Livia, Seigneur Valentio, and his Cosen Tybalt: Lucio, and the lively Helena.
A fair assembly, whether should they come?
Ser. Up.
Rom. Whither? to supper?
Ser. To our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Ser. My Masters.
Rom. Indeed I should have askt you that before.
Ser. Now Ile tell you without asking. My Master is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of Mountagues, I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry. Exit.
Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulets,
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so loves't;
With all the admired Beauties of Verona,
Go thither, and with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy Swan a Crow.
Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye
Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fire:
And these who often drown'd could never die,
Transparent Heretiques be burnt for liers.
One fairer than my love! the all-seeing Sun
Ne're saw her match, since first the world begun.
Ben. Tut, tut, you saw her fair, none else being by,
Her self poys'd with her self in either eye:
But in that Crystal scales, let there be wai'd,
Your Ladies love against some other Maid,
That I will shew you, shining at this Feast,
And she'l shew scant well, that now shews best.
Rom. Ile go along, no such sight to be shewn,
But to rejoyce in splendor of mine own.

Enter Capulets Wife and Nurse.

Wife. Nurse where's my daughter? call her forth to me.
Nurse. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelve year old
I bad her come, what Lamb, what Lady-bird, God forbid,
Where's this Girl? what Juliet?

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. How now, who calls?
Nur. Your Mother.
Juliet. Madam I am here, what is your will?
Wife. This is the matter: Nurse give leave a while, we must must talk in secret. Nurse come back again, I have remembred me, thou'se hear our counsel. Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith I can tell her age unto an hour.

Wife. Shees not fourteen.

Nurse. Ile lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet to my teeth be it spoken,
I have but four, she's not fourteen,
How long is it now to Lammas tide?

Wife. A fortnight and odd dayes.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all daies in the year come Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen. Susan, and she, God rest all Christian soules, were of an age. Well Susan is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen, that shall she marrie, I remember it well. 'Tis since the Earthquake now eleven years, and she was wean'd, I never shall forget it, of all the daies in the year, upon that day: for I had then laid Worm-wood to my Dug sitting in the Sun under the Dove-house wall, my Lord and you were then at Mantua, nay I do bear a brain. But as I said, when it did tast the Worm-wood on the Nipple of my Dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool, to see it teachy, and fall out with the Dug, Shake quoth the Dove-house, 'twas no need I trow to bid me trudge: and since that time it is eleven yeares, for then she could stand alone, nay by'th' Rood she could have run, and wadled all about: for even the day before she broke her brow, and then my Husband God be with his soul, a was a merry man, took up the Child, yea quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face? thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit, wilt thou not Jule? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch left crying, and said I: to see now how a Jest shall come about. I warrant, and I should live a thousand yeares, I never should forget it: wilt thou not Jule quoth he? and pretty fool it stinted, and said I.

Old La. Enough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nur. Yes Madam, yet I cannot chuse but laugh, to think it should leave crying, and say I: and yet I warrant it had upon its brow a bump as big as a young Cockrels stone: A perillous knock, and it cryed bitterly. Yea quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face, thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age: wilt thou not Jule? It stinted, and said I.

Juli. And stint thee too I pray thee Nurse, say I.

Nur. Peace I have done: God mark thee to his grace, thou wast the prettiest Babe that ere I nurst, and I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

Old La. Marry that marry is the very theam
I came to talk of, tell me daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be Married?

Juli. 'Tis an hour that I dream not of.

Nur. An hour, were not I thine only Nurse, I would say that thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

Old La. Well think of marriage now, younger then you
Here in Verona, Ladies of esteem,
Are made already Mothers. By my count,
I was your Mother, much upon these yeares.
That you are now a maid, thus then in brief:
The valiant Paris seeks you for his Love.

Nurse. A man young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world. Why hee's a man of waxe.

Old La. Verona's Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay he's a flower, in faith a very flower.

Old La. What say you, can you love the Gentleman?
This night you shall behold him at our Feast,
Read o're the volume of young Paris face,
And find delight, writ there with Beauties pen:
Examine every severall lineament,
And see how one another lends content:
And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies,
Find written in the Margent of his eyes,
This precious Book of Love, this unbound Lover,
To beautifie him, only lacks a Cover.
The fish lives in the Sea, and 'tis much pride
For fair without, the fair within to hide:
That Book in manies eyes doth share the glory,
That in Gold claspes, Lockes in the Golden story:
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making your self no less.

Nurse. No less, nay bigger; women grow by men.

Old La. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris love?

Juli. Ile look to like, if looking liking move.
But no more deep will I endart mine eye,
Then your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servingman.

Ser. Madam, the Guests are come, supper serv'd up, you cal'd, my young Lady ask't for, the Nurse curst in the Pantery, and every thing in extremity: I must hence to wait, I beseech you follow straight. Exit.

Mo. We follow thee, Juliet, the County staies.

Nurse. Go Girle, seek happy nights to happy daies.

Exeunt.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benuolio, with five or six other Maskers, Torch-bearers.

Rom. What shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we on without Apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity,
Weel have no Cupid hood-winkt with a Scarf,
Bearing a Tartars painted Bow of lath,
Skaring the Ladies like a Crow-keeper.
But let them measure us by what they will.
Weele measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a Torch, I am not for this ambling.
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I believe me, you have dancing shooes
With nimble soles, I have a sole of Lead,
So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a Lover, borrow Cupids wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore impearced with his shaft,
To soar with his light feathers, and to bond:
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe,
Under loves heavy burden do I sink.

Hora. And to sink in it should you burden love,
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boysterous, it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love,
Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down,
Give me a Case to put my visage in,
A Visor for a Visor, what care I
What curious eye doth quote deformities?
Here are the Beetle-browes shall blush for me.

Ben. Come knock and enter, and no sooner in,
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A Torch for me, let wantons light of heart
Tickle the senceles rushes with their heeles:
For I am proverb'd with a Grandsier Phrase,
Ile be a Candle-holder and look on,
The Game was nere so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the Mouse, the Constables own word,
If thou art dun, weele draw thee from the mire.
Or save your reverence love, wherein thou stickest
Up to the eares, come we burn day-light ho.
Rom. Nay that's not so.
Mer. I mean sir I, delay.
We waste our lights in vain, lights, lights, by day;
Take our good meaning, for our Judgement sits
Five times in that, ere once in our fine wits.
Rom. And we mean well in going to this Mask,
But 'tis no wit to go.
Mer. Why may one ask?
Rom. I dreampt a dream to night.
Mer. And so did I.
Rom. Well what was yours?
Mer. That Dreamers often lie.
Rom. In bed asleep while they do dream things true.
Mer. O then I see Queen Mab hath been with you: She is the Fayries Midwife, and she comes in shape no bigger then an Agat-stone, on the fore-finger of an Alderman, drawn with a teem of little Atomies, over mens noses as they lie asleep: her Waggon Spoke's made of long Spinners legs: the Cover of the wings of Grashoppers, her Trace of the smallest Spiders web, her Collars of the Moon-shines watry beames, her Whip of Crickets bone, the Lash of filme, her Waggoner, a small gray-coated Gnat, not half so big as a round little worm, prickt from the Lazy-finger of a woman. Her Chariot is an empty Hasel-nut, made by the Joyner Squirrel or old Grub, time out of mind, the Fayries Coach-makers: and in this state she gallops night by night, through Lovers braines: and then they dream of Love. On Countries knees, that dream on Curtsies strait: ore Lawyers fingers, who strait dream on Fees, ore Ladies lips, who strait on kisses dream, which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, because their breath with Sweet meats tainted are. Sometime she gallops ore a Courtiers nose, and then dreames he of smelling out a suit: and sometime comes she with a Tith-pigs tale, tickling a Parsons nose as he lies asleep, then he dreams of another Benefice. Sometime she driveth ore a Souldiers neck, and then dreams he of cutting Forraign throats, of Breaches, Ambuscadoes, Spanish Blades: Of Healths five Fadom deep, and then anon drums in his eares, at which he starts and wakes, and being thus frighted, sweares a prayer or two, and sleeps again: this is that very Mab that plats the Manes of Horses in the night: and bakes the Elf-locks in foul sluttish haires, which once entangled, much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when Maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learnes them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage:
This is she——
Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace.
Thou talk'st of nothing.
Mer. True I talk of dreames:
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing, but vain phantasie,
Which is as thin of substance as the Air,
And more unconstant then the wind, who wooes
Even now the frozen bosom of the North:
And being anger'd, puffes away from thence,
Turning his side to the dew dropping South.
Ben. This wind you talk of blowes us from our selves, Supper is done, and we shall come too late.
Rom. I fear too early, for my mind misgives,
Some consequence yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this nights revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my brest:
By some vile forfeit of untimely death,
But he that hath the stirrage of my course,
Direct my sute: On lusty Gentlemen.
Ben. Strike Drum.
They march about the Stage, and Servingmen come forth with their napkins.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a Trencher? He scrape a Trencher.
1. When good Manners, shall lie in one or two mens hands, and they unwasht too, 'tis a foul thing.
Ser. Away with the Joyn-stooles, remove the Court-cubbord, look to the Plate: good thou, save me a piece of Marchpane, and as thou lovest me, let the Porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell, Anthony and Potpan.
2. I Boy ready.
Ser. You are lookt for, cal'd for, aske for, and sought for, in the great Chamber.
1. We cannot be here and there too, cheerly Boyes, Be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all.

Exeunt.

Enter all the Guests and Gentlewomen to the Maskers.

1 Capu. Welcome Gentlemen,
Ladies that have their toes
Unplagu'd with Cornes, will walk about with you:
Ah me Mistresses, which of you all
Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,
She I'le swear hath Cornes: am I come neer ye now?
Welcome Gentlemen, I have seen the day
That I have worn a Visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair Ladies eare:
Such as would please: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone,
You are welcom Gentlemen, come Musitians play:

Musick plaies: and they dance.

A Hall, hall, give room, and foot it Girles,
More light ye Knaves, and turn the Tables up:
And quench the fire, the Room is grown too hot:
Ah sirrah, this unlookt for sport comes well:
Nay sit, nay sit, good Cozin Capulet,
For you and I, are past our dancing daies:
How long 'ist now since last your self and I
Were in a Mask?
2. Capu. Berlady thirty yeares.
1 Capu. What man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much,
'Tis since the Nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Penticost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years, and then we Maskt.
2. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his Son is elder sir:
His Son is thirty.
3. Cap. Will you tell me that?
His Son was but a Ward two years ago.
Rom. What Lady is that which doth enrich the hand of yonder Knight?
Ser. I know not sir.
Rom. O she doth teach the Torches to burn bright:
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night,
Like a rich Jewel in an Æthiops ear:
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear:
So shews a Snowy Dove trooping with Crowes,
As yonder Lady ore her fellowes showes:
The measure done, I'le watch her place of stand,
And touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.

Did

Did my heart love till now, forſwear it ſight,
For I never ſaw true beauty till this night.
Tib. This by his voice ſhould be a Mountague.
Fetch me my Rapier, Boy, what dares the ſlave
Come hither cover'd with an antique face,
To fleer and ſcorn at our Solemnity?
Now by the ſtock and honour of my kin.
To ſtrike him dead I hold it not a ſin.
Cap. Why how now kinſman,
Wherefore ſtorm you ſo?
Tib. Uncle this is a Mountague, our foe:
A Villain that is hither come in ſpight,
To ſcorn at our Solemnity this night.
Cap. Young Romeo is it?
Tib. 'Tis he, that Villain Romeo.
Cap. Content thee gentle Coz, let him alone,
A bears him like a portly Gentleman:
And to ſay truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a vertuous and well govern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all the town,
Here in my houſe do him diſparagement:
Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, the which if thou reſpect,
Shew a fair preſence, and put off theſe frowns,
An ill beſeeming ſemblance for a Feaſt.
Tib. It fits when ſuch a Villain is a gueſt,
*I*le not endure him.
Cap. He ſhall be endur'd.
What goodman-boy. I ſay he ſhall, go to,
Am I the Maſter here or you? go to,
Youle not endure him, God ſhall mend my ſoul,
Youle make a mutiny among the Gueſts:
You will ſet cock a hoop, youle be the man?
Tib. Why Uncle 'tis a ſhame.
Cap. Go to, go to.
You are a ſaucy Boy, 'tis ſo indeed?
This trick may chance to ſcath you, I know what,
You muſt contrary me, marry 'tis time.
Well ſaid my hearts, you are a princox, goe,
Be quiet or more light, for ſhame,
*I*le make you quiet. What, cheerly my hearts.
Tib. Patience perforce, with wilful choller meeting,
Makes my fleſh tremble in their different greeting:
I will withdraw, but this intruſion ſhall
Now ſeeming ſweet, convert to bitter gall.
Rom. If I prophane with my unworthieſt hand,
This holy ſhrine, the gentle ſin is this,
My lips two blushing pilgrims ready ſtand,
To ſmooth that rough touch, with a tender kiſſe.
Juli. Good Pilgrim,
You do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion ſhews in this,
For Saints have hands, the Pilgrims hand, do touch,
And palme to palme, is holy Palmers kiſſe.
Rom. Have not Saints Lipps, and holy Palmers too?
Juli. I Pilgrim, lips that they muſt uſe in prayer.
Rom. O then dear Saint let lips do what hands do,
They pray (grant thou) leaſt faith turn to deſpair.
Juli. Saints do not move,
Though grant for prayers ſake.
Rom. Then move not while my prayers effect do take:
Thus from my lips, by thine my ſin is purg'd.
Juli. Then have my lips the ſin that they have took,
Rom. Sin from my lips? O treſpaſſe ſweetly urg'd:
Give me my ſin again.
Juli. You kiſſe by th'book.
Nur. Madam your Mother craves a word with you.
Rom. What is her Mother?
Nur. Marry Bachler,
Her Mother is the Lady of the houſe,
And a good Lady, and a wiſe, and vertuous,
I Nur'ſt her Daughter that you talk withall:
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her,
Shall have the chincks.
Rom. Is ſhe a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foes debt.
Ben. Away, be gone, the ſport is at the beſt.
Rom. I, ſo I fear, the more is my unreſt.
Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We have a trifling fooliſh Banquet towards:
Is it e'ne ſo? why then I thank you all.
I thank you honeſt Gentlemen, good night:
More Torches here come on, then let's to bed.
Ah ſirrah, by my faie it waxes late.
*I*le to my reſt. Exeunt.
Juli. Come hither Nurſe,
What is yond Gentleman?
Nur. The Sonne and Heir of old Tyberio.
Juli. What's he that now is going out of door?
Nur. Marry that I think to be young Petruchio.
Juli. What's he that follows here, that would not dance?
Nur. I know not.
Juli. Go aske his name; if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.
Nur. His name is Romeo, and a Mountague,
The only Son of our great Enemy.
Juli. My onely Love ſprung from my onely hate,
Too early ſeen, unknown, and known, too late,
Prodigious birth of Love it is to me,
That I muſt love a loathed Enemy.
Nur. What's this? what's this?
Juli. A rime I learn'd even now
Of one I danc'd withall.
One calls within, Juliet.
Nur. Anon, anon:
Come let's away, the ſtrangers all are gone.
Exeunt.

Chorus.

Now old deſire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his Heir,
That fair, for which Love groan'd for and would die,
With tender Juliet matcht, is now not fair
Now Romeo is beloved, and Loves again,
A like bewitched by the charm of looks:
But to his foe ſuppos'd he muſt complain,
And ſhe ſteal Loves ſweet bait from fearful hooks.
Being held a foe, he may not have acceſſe
To breath ſuch vows, as Lovers uſe to ſwear;
And ſhe as much in Love, her means much leſſe,
To meet her new Beloved any where:
But paſſion lends them Power, time, means to meet,
Tempting extremities with extream ſweet.

Enter Romeo alone.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?
Turn back Dull earth, and find my Center out.

Enter Benuolio with Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo, my Cozen Romeo, Romeo.
Mer. He is wiſe,
And on my life hath ſtoln him home to bed.
Ben. He ran this way, and leapt this Orchard wall.
Call good Mercutio:
Nay, *I*le conjure too.

Mer. Romeo Humours, Madam, Paſſion, Lover,
Appear thou in the likeneſſe of a ſigh,
Speak but one time, and I am ſatisfied:
Cry me but ayme, Couply but Love and day,
Speak to my Goſhip Venus one fair word,
One Nickname for her purblind Son and her,
Young Abraham Cupid he that ſhot ſo true,
When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid,
He heareth not, he ſtirreth not, he moveth not,
The Ape is dead, and I muſt conjure him,
I conjure thee by Roſalines bright eies,
By her high forehead, and her Scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, ſtraight leg, and Quivering thigh,
And the Demeans that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeneſſe thou appear to us.

Ben. And if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him, 'twould anger him,
To raiſe a ſpirit in his Miſtreſſe circle,
Of ſome ſtrange nature, letting it there ſtand
Till ſhe had laid it, and conjur'd it down,
That were ſome ſpight.
My invocation is fair and honeſt, and in his Miſtreſs name
I conjure only but to raiſe up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himſelf among theſe Trees
To be conſorted with the Humerous night:
Blind is his Love, and beſt befits the dark.

Mer. If Love be blind, Love cannot hit the mark,
Now will he ſit under a Medler tree,
And wiſh his Miſtreſs were that kind of Fruit,
As Maids call Medlers when they laugh alone,
O Romeo that ſhe were, O that ſhe were
An open, or thou a Poprin Pear,
Romeo goodnight, ile to my Truckle-bed,
This Field-bed is too cold for me to ſleep
Come ſhall we go?

Ben. Go then, for 'tis in vain to ſeek him here——
That means not to be found. Exeunt.

Rom. He jeſts at ſcarres that never felt a wound,
But ſoft, what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the Eaſt, and Juliet is the Sun,
Ariſe fair Sun, and kill the envious Moon,
Who is already ſick and pale with grief,
That thou her Maid, art farre more fair then ſhe:
Be not her Maid ſince ſhe is envious,
Her veſtall Livery is but ſick and green,
And none but fools do wear it, caſt it off:
It is my Lady, O it is my Love, O that ſhe knew ſhe were,
She ſpeaks, yet ſhe ſaies nothing; what of that?
Her eye diſcourſes, I will anſwer it:
I am too bold, 'tis not to me ſhe ſpeaks:
Two of the faireſt Starrs in all the heaven,
Having ſome buſineſſe do entreat her eies,
To twinkle in their Spheres till they return.
What if her eies were there, they in her head,
The brightneſſe of her cheeke would ſhame thoſe ſtarres,
As day-light doth a Lamp, her eye in heaven,
Would through the airy Region ſtream ſo bright,
That Birds would ſing and think it were not night:
See how ſhe leans her cheek upon her hand.
O that I were a Glove upon that hand.
That I might touch that cheek.

Juli. Ay me.

Rom. She ſpeaks.
Oh ſpeak again bright Angell, for thou art
As glorious to this night being ore my head,
As is a winged meſſenger of heaven
Unto the white upturned wondring eies
Of mortalls that fall back to gaze on him,
When he beſtrids the lazy puffing Clouds,
And ſails upon the boſom of the air.

Juli. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy Father, and refuſe thy name:
Or if thou wilt not, be but ſworn my Love,
And ile no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or ſhall I ſpeak at this?

Juli. 'Tis but thy name that is my Enemy:
Thou art thy ſelf, though not a Mountague,
What's Mountague? it is nor hand nor foot,
Nor arme, nor face, O be ſome other name
Belonging to a man.
What's in a name? that which we call a Roſe,
By any other word would ſmell as ſweet,
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title Romeo, doffe thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,
Take all my ſelf.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but Love, and ile be new baptiz'd,
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Juli. What man art thou, that thus beſcreen'd in night
So ſtumbleſt on my councell?

Rom. By a name,
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name dear Saint, is hateful to my ſelf,
Becauſe it is an enemy to thee,
Had I it written, I would rear the word.

Juli. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongues uttering, yet I know the ſound.
Art thou not Romeo, and a Mountague?

Rom. Neither fair Maid, if either thee diſlike.

Juli. How cam'ſt thou hither,
Tell me, and wherefore?
The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climb,
And the place death, conſidering who thou art,
If any of my kinſmen find thee here.

Rom. With Loves light wings
Did I ore-perch theſe Walls,
For ſtony Limits cannot hold Love out,
And what Love can do, that dares Love attempt:
Therefore thy kinſmen are no ſtop to me.

Juli. If they do ſee thee, they will murther thee.

Rom. Alack there lies more peril in thine eie,
Then twenty of their ſwords, look thou but ſweet,
And I am proof againſt their enmity.

Juli. I would not for the world they ſaw thee here.

Rom. I have nights cloak to hide me from their eies
And but thou love me, let them find me here,
My life were better ended by their hate,
Then death proroged wanting of thy Love.

Juli. By whoſe direction found'ſt thou out this place?

Rom. By Love that firſt did prompt me to enquire,
He lent me counſel, and I lent him eies,
I am no Pilot, yet were thou as far
As that vaſt-ſhore: waſh'd with the fartheſt Sea,
I ſhould adventure for ſuch Merchandiſe.

Juli. Thou knoweſt the maske of night is one my face,
Elſe would a Maiden bluſh bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou haſt heard me ſpeak to night,
Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain, deny
What I have ſpoke, but farewell Complements
Doſt thou Love? O I know thou wilt ſay I,

And I will take thy word, yet if thou swear'st,
Thou mayest prove false, at Lovers perjuries
They say Jove laughes, oh gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou thinkest I am too quickly won,
Ile frown and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt wooe: But else not for the world.
In truth fair Mountague I am too fond:
And therefore thou maist think my haviour light,
But trust me Gentleman, Ile prove more true,
Then those that have more coyning to be strange,
I should have been more strange I must confess,
But that thou overheard'st ere I was ware
My true Loves passion, therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light Love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder Moon I vow:
That tips with silver all these Fruit-tree tops.

Juli. O swear not by the Moon, th'unconstant Moon,
That monethly changes in her circled Orbe,
Lest that thy Love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Juli. Do not swear at all:
Or if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And Ile believe thee.

Rom. If my hearts dear love——

Juli. Well do not swear although I joy in thee,
I have no joy of this contract to night,
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden,
Too like the lightning which doth cease to be
Ere one can say, it lightens, Sweet good night:
This bud of Love by Summers ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous Flower when next we meet:
Goodnight: goodnight, as sweet repose and rest,
Come to thy heart, as that within my brest.

Rom. O wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Juli. What satisfaction can'st thou have to night?

Rom. Th'exchange of thy Loves faithful vow of mine.

Juli. I gave thee mine before thou did'st request it:
And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Would'st thou withdraw it?
For what purpose Love?

Juli. But to be frank and give it thee again,
And yet I wish but for the thing I have,
My bounty is as boundless as the Sea,
My Love as deep, the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.
I hear some noyse within, dear Love adieu.

Cals within.

Anon good Nurse, sweet Mountague be true:
Stay but a little, I will come again.

Rom. O blessed blessed night, I am afear'd
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering sweet to be substantial.

Juli. Three words dear Romeo, Enter.
And goodnight indeed,
If that thy bent of love be Honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to morrow,
By one that Ile procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time thou will perform the Rite,
And all my Fortunes at thy foot Ile lay,
And follow thee my Lord, throughout the world.

Within: Madam.

I come, anon: but if thou meanest not well,
I do beseech thee.

Within: Madam
(By and by I come.)
To cease thy strife, and leave me to my grief,
To morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul.

Juli. A thousand times good night. Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse to want thy light,
Love goes toward Love as schoole-boys from their books
But Love from Love, towards schoole with heavy looks,

Enter Juliet again.

Juli. Hist Romeo hist: O for a Falkners voice,
To lure this Tassel gentle back again,
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud,
Else would I tear the Cave where Eccho lies,
And make her ayry tongue more hoarse, then with
The repetition of my Romeo.

Rom. It is my soul that cals upon my name.
How silver sweet, sound Lovers tongues by night,
Like softest Musick to attending eares.

Juli. Romeo.

Rom. My sweet.

Juli. What a clock to morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of Nine.

Juli. I will not fail, 'tis twenty years till then,
I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.

Juli. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembring how I love thy company.

Rom. And Ile still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other name but this.

Juli. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone.
And yet no further then a wantons Bird,
That lets it hop a little from his hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted Gyves,
And with a silken thred plucks it again,
So loving jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Juli. Sweet so would I,
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing:
Goodnight, goodnight.

Rom. Parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say goodnight till it be morrow.

Juli. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy brest. Exit.

Rom. Would I were sleep and peace so sweet to rest,
The gray-ey'd morne smiles on the frowning night,
Check'ring the Eastern Clouds with streaks of light,
And darkness fleckel'd like a drunkard reeles,
From forth dayes pathway, made by Titans wheeles.
Hence will I to my Ghostly Friers close Cell,
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. Exit.

Enter Frier alone with a basket.

Fri. Now ere the Sun advance his burning eye,
The day to chear, and nights dank dew to dry,
I must up-fil this Osier Cage of ours,
With baleful weeds, and precious juyced flowers,
The earth that's Natures mother, is her Tomb,
What is her burying grave that is her womb:
And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find:
Many for many vertues excellent:
None but for some, and yet all different.
O mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In Plants, Herbs, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile, that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give.
Nor ought so good, but strain'd from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.
Vertue it self turnes vice being misapplied.
And vice sometime by action dignified.

Enter Romeo.

Within the infant rind of this weak flower,
Poyson hath residence, and medicine power:
For this being smelt, with that part cheares each part,
Being tasted slayes all sences with the heart.
Two such oppos'd Kings encamp them still,
In man as well as herbs grace and rude will:
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the Canker death eats up that Plant.

Rom. Good morrow Father.

Fri. Benedicite.
What early tongue so sweet salute them?
Young Son, it argues a distempered head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed;
Care keeps his watch in every old mans eye,
And where Care lodgeth, sleep will never lie:
But where unbruised youth with unstuft brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth raign;
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-rouz'd with some distemperature;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right.
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to night,

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin: wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my Ghostly Father? No,
I have forgot that name, and that Names woe.

Fri. That's my good Son, but where hast thou been then?

Rom. Ile tell thee ere thou ask it me agen:
I have been feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded: both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physick lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man: for lo
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain good Son, rest homely in thy drift,
Ridling confession, finds but ridling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my hearts dear Love is set,
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when, and where, and how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow:
Ile tell thee as we pass, but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to day.

Fri. Holy S. Francis, what a change is here?
Is Rosaline that thou didst love so dear
So soon forsaken? young mens Love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine
Hath washt thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline?
How much salt water thrown away in wast,
To season Love, that of it doth not tast.
The Sun not yet thy sighes, from heaven clears,
Thy old groans yet ring in my ancient eares;
Lo here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit,
Of an old tear that is not washt off yet.
If ere thou wast thy self, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence then
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury Love.

Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee chide me nor, her I Love now
Doth grace for grace, and Love for Love allow:
The other did not so.

Fri. Oh she knew well,
Thy Love did read by rote, that could not spell:
But come young waverer, come go with me,
In one respect, Ile thy assistant be:
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your houshold rancord to pure Love.

Rom. O let us hence, I stand on sudden hast.

Fri. Wisely and slow, they stumble that run fast.

Exeunt.

Enter Benuolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be? came he not home to night?

Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tibalt, the kinsman to old Capulet, hath sent a Letter to his Fathers house.

Mer. A challenge on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write, may answer a Letter.

Ben. Nay he will answer the Letters Master how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas poor Romeo, he is already dead, stab'd with a white wenches black eye, run through the ear with a Love-song, the very pin of his heart, cleft with the blind Bow-boyes-but-shaft, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why what is Tybalt?

Mer. More then Prince of Cats. Oh he's the Courageous Captain of Complements: he fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion, he rests his minum, one, two, and the third in your Bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a Dualist, a Dualist: a Gentleman of the very first house of the first and second cause: ah the immortal passado, the punto rever so, the Hay.

Ben. The what?

Mer. The Pox of such antique lisping affecting phantasies, these new tuners of accent: Jesu a very good blade, a very tall man, a very good whore. Why is not this a lamentable thing Grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies: these fashion-mongers, these pardon-me's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his Roe, like a dried Herring. O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura to his Lady was a Kitchen wench, marry she had a better Love to berime her: Dido a dowdy, Cleopatra a Gipsie, Hellen and Hero, hildings and harlots: Thisby a gray eye or so, but not to the purpose Signior Romeo, Bonjour, there's a French salutation to your French

French slop: you gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Romeo. Good morrow to you both, what counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip sir, the slip, can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon Mercutio, my business was great, and in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtsie.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning to courtesie.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pinck of courtesie.

Rom. Pinke for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why then is my Pump well flowr'd.

Mer. Sure wit, follow me this jeast, now till thou hast worn out thy Pump, that when the single sole of it is worn, the jeast may remain after the wearing, sole-singular.

Rom. O single sol'd jest,
Soly singular, for the singleness.

Mer. Come between us good Benuolio, my wit faints.

Rom. Swits and Spurres,
Swits and Spurs, or ile cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-Goose chase, I am done: For thou hast more of the Wild-Goose in one of thy wits, then I am sure I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the Goose?

Rom. Thou was never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the Goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good Goose bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter-sweeting,
It is a most sharp sawce.

Rom. And is it not well serv'd into a sweet Goose?

Mer. Oh here's a wit of Cheverell, that stretches from an ynch narrow, to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word, broad, which added to the Goose, proves the farre and wide, abroad Goose.

Mer. Why is not this better now, then groaning for Love, now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo: now art thou what thou art, by Art as well as by Nature, for this driveling Love is like a great Natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bable in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there. (hair

Mer. Thou desir'st me to stop in my Tale against the

Ben. Thou would'st else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O thou art deceiv'd, I would have made it short, or I was come to the whole depth of my Tale, and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer.

Enter Nurse and her man.

Rom. Here's goodly geare.
A sayle, a sayle.

Mer. Two, two: a Shirt and a Smock.

Nur. Peter?

Peter. Anon.

Nur. My Fan Peter?

Mer. Good Peter to hide her face:
For her Fan's the fairer face?

Nur. God ye good morrow Gentlemen.

Mer. God ye gooden fair Gentlewomen,

Nur. Is it gooden?

Mer. 'Tis no lesse I tell you: for the bawdy hand of the Dyall is now upon the prick of Noon.

Nur. Out upon you: what a man are you?

Rom. One Gentlewoman,
That God hath made, himself to, mar.

Nur. By my troth it is said, for himself to, mar quoth a Gentleman, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Romeo. I can tell you: but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, then he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nur. You say well.

Mer. Yea is the worst well.
Very well took: Ifaith, wisely, wisely.

Nur. If you be he sir,
I desire some confidence with you?

Ben. She will invite him to some Supper.

Mer. A baud, a baud, a baud. So ho.

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No Hare sir, unlesse a Hare sir in a Lenten pie, that is something stale and hoare ere it be spent.
An old Hare hoar, and an old Hare hoar is very good meat in Lent.
But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score, when it hoars ere it be spent,
Romeo will you come to your Fathers? Wee'l to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell auncient Lady:
Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

Exit. Mercutio, Benuolio.

Nur. I pray you sir, what sawcy Merchant was this that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A Gentleman Nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute, then he will stand to in a Moneth.

Nur. And a speak any thing against me, ile take him down, and a were lustier then he is, and twenty such Jacks: and if I cannot, ile find those that shall: scurvy knave, I am none of his flurt-gils, I am none of his skains mates and thou must stand by too and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure.

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure: if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you, I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrell, and the Law on my side.

Nur. Now afore God, I am so vext, that every part about me quivers, skurvy knave: pray you sir a word: and as I told you, my young Lady bid me enquire you out, what she bid me say I will keep to my self: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fools paradise, as they say, it were a very grosse kind of behaviour, as they say: for the Gentlewoman is young, and therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any Gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse commend me to thy Lady and Mistris, I, protest unto thee——

Nur. Good heart, and Ifaith I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her Nurse? thou dost not mark me?

Nur. I will tell her sir, that you do protest, which as I take it, is a Gentleman-like offer. (afternoon,

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift this
And there she shall at Frier Lawrence Cell
Be shriev'd and married: here is for thy pains.

Nur. No truly sir not a penny.

Rom. Go to I say you shall.

Nurse

Nur. This afternoon Sir? well she shall be there.
Rom. And stay thou good Nurse behind the Abby-wall,
Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring the Cords made like a tackled stair,
Which to the high top gallant of my joy,
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell, be trusty, and ile quite thy pains:
Farewell, commend me to thy Mistress.
Nur. Now God in heaven blesse thee: hark you sir,
Rom. What saist thou my dear Nurse?
Nur. Is your man secret, did you nere hear say two may keep counsel putting one away.
Rom. I warrant thee my man as true as steel.
Nur. Well sir, my Mistress is the sweetest Lady, Lord, Lord, when 'twas a little prating thing. O there is a Noble man in Town one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard: but she good soul, had as leeve see a Toad, a very Toad as see him: I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man, but ile warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world, doth not Rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Rom. I Nurse, what of that? both with an R.
Nur. A mocker that's the dogs name. R. is for the no, I know it begins with some other letter, and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and Rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.
Rom. Commend me to thy Lady.
Nur. I a thousand times. Peter?
Pet. Anon.
Nur. Before and apace. Exit Nurse and Peter.

Enter Juliet.

Juli. The clock strook nine, when I did send the Nurse,
In half an hour she promised to return,
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so:
Oh she is Lame, Loves Herauld should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glides then the Sunnes beams,
Driving back shadows over lowring hils.
Therefore do nimble Pinnion'd Doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings:
Now is the Sun upon the highmost hill
Of this dayes journey, and from nine till twelve,
I three long hours, yet she is not come:
Had she affections and warm youthful blood,
She'ld be as swift in motion as a ball,
My words would bandy her to my sweet Love,
And his to me, but old folks,
Many fain as they were dead,
Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse.

O God she comes, O honey Nurse what news?
Hast thou met with him? send thy man away.
Nur. Peter stay at the gate.
Juli. Now good sweet Nurse:
O Lord why looks thou sad?
Though news, be sad, yet tell them merrily.
If good thou sham'st the musick of sweet news,
By playing it to me, with so sower a face.
Nur. I am a weary, give me leave a while,
Fie how my bones ake, what a jaunt have I had?
Juli. I would thou hadst my bones and I thy news:
Nay come I pray thee speak, good Nurse speak.
Nur. Jesu what haste? can you not stay a while?
Do you not see how I am out of breath?
Juli. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me, that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay,
Is longer then the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good or bad? answer to that,
Say either, and ile stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, itt good or bad?
Nur. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to chuse a man: Romeo, no not he though his face be better then any mans, yet his legs excells all mens, and for a hand and a foot, and a bawdy, though they be not to be talkt on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of courtesie, but I warrant him as gentle a Lamb: go thy waies wench, serve God, what have you din'd at home.
Juli. No, no: but all this did I know before
What saies he of our marriage? what of that?
Nur. Lord how my head akes, what a head have I:
It beats as it would fall in twenty peeces.
My back a tother side: O my back, my back:
Beshrew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with jaunting up and down.
Juli. I faith I am sorry that thou art so ill,
Sweet, sweet, sweet Nurse, tell me what saies my Love?
Nur. Your Love saies like an honest Gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsom
And I warrant a vertuous: where is your Mother?
Juli. Where is my Mother?
Why she is within where should she be?
How odly thou reply'st:
Your Love saies like an honest Gentleman:
Where is my Mother?
Nur. O Gods Lady dear,
Are you so hot? marry come up I trow,
Is this the Poultis for my aking bones?
Hence forward do your messages your selfe.
Juli. Here's such a coil, come what saies Romeo?
Nur. Have you got leave to go to shrift to day?
Juli. I have.
Nur. Then high you hence to Frier Lawrence Cell,
There staies a Husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'l be in Scarlet straight at any news:
Hie you to Church, I must another way,
To fetch a Ladder by the which your Love:
Must climb a birds nest soon when it is dark:
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight:
But you shall bear the burthen soon at night,
Go ile to dinner, hie you to the Cell
Juli. Hie to high Fortune, honest Nurse, farewell.
Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Romeo.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after hours, with sorrow chide us not.
Rom. Amen, amen, but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then Love devouring death do what he dare,
It is enough. I may but call her mine.
Fri. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die like fire and powder;
Which as they kisse consume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousnesse,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.
Therefore Love moderately, long Love doth so,
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter Juliet.

Here comes the Lady. Oh so light a foot
Will nere wear out the everlasting flint;

A Lover may bestride the Gossamours,
That idles in the wanton Summer ayr,
And yet not fall, so light is vanity.
Juli. Good even to my ghostly Confessor.
Fri. Romeo shall thank thee Daughter, for us both.
Juli. As much to him, else in his thanks too much.
Rom. Ah Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heapt like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blason it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour ayr, and let rich Musickes tongue,
Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either, by this dear encounter.
Juli. Conceit more rich in matter then in words,
Brags of his substance, not of Ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their worth,
But my true Love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up some of half my wealth.
Fri. Come, come with me, & we will make short work,
For by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy Church incorporate two in one. Exeunt.

Enter Mercutio, Benuolio, and men.

Ben. I pray thee good Mercutio lets retire,
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad:
And if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl, for now these hot dayes is the mad bloud stirring.
Mer. Thou art like one of these fellows, that when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and saies, God send me no need of thee: and by the operation of the second Cup, drawes him on the Drawer, when indeed there is no need.
Ben. Am I like such a fellow?
Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood, as any in Italy; and assoon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be mov'd.
Ben. And what too?
Mer. Nay, and there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other: thou, why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less in his beard, then thou hast: thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking Nuts, having no other reason, but because thou hast hasel eyes; what eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egge is full of meat, and yet thy head hath bin beaten as addle as an egge for quarrelling: thou hast quarrell'd with a man for coffing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the Sun. Did'st thou not fall out with a Tailor for wearing his new Doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shooes with old Ribband, and yet thou wilt Tutor me from quarrelling?
Ben. And I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the Fee-simple of my life, for an hour and a quarter.
Mer. The Fee-simple? O simple!

Enter Tybalt, Petruchio, and others.

Ben. By my head here come the Capulets.
Mer. By my heel I care not.
Tib. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.
Gentlemen, Good den, a word with one of you.
Mer. And but one word with one of us? couple it with something, make it a word and a blow.
Tib. You shall find me apt enough to that sir, and you will give me occasion.
Mercu. Could you not take some occasion without giving?
Tib. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.
Mer. Consort? what dost thou make us Minstrels? and thou make Minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but Discords: here's my Fiddlestick, here's that shall make you dance. Come consort.
Ben. We talk here in the publick haunt of men:
Either withdraw unto some private place,
Or reason coldly of your grievances:
Or else depart, here all eyes gaze on us.
Mer. Mens eyes were made to look, and let them gaze,
I will not budge for no mans pleasure I.

Enter Romeo.

Tib. Well peace be with you sir, here comes my man.
Mer. But I'le be hang'd sir if he wear your Livery:
Marry go before to field, hee'l be your follower,
Your worship in that sense may call him man.
Tib. Romeo, the love I bear thee, can afford
No better term then this. Thou art a Villain.
Rom. Tibalt, the reason that I have to love thee,
Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting:
Therefore farewel, I see thou know'st me not.
Tib. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me, therefore turn and draw.
Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee,
But lov'd thee better than thou can'st devise:
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love,
And so good Capulet, which name I tender
As dearly as my own, be satisfied.
Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission
Alla stoccatho carries it away.
Tibalt, You Rat-catcher: will you walk?
Tib. What wouldst thou have with me?
Mer. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and as you shall use me hereafter dry beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his Pilcher by the eares? Make hast, lest mine be about your eares ere it be out.
Tib. I am for you.
Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy Rapier up.
Mer. Come sir, your Passado.
Rom. Draw Benuolio, beat down their weapons:
Gentlemen, for shame forbear this outrage,
Tibalt, Mercutio, the Prince expresly hath
Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.
Hold Tybalt, good Mercutio.

Exit Tybalt.

Mer. I am hurt.
A plague of both the houses, I am sped:
Is he gone and hath nothing?
Ben. What art thou hurt?
Mer. I, I, a scratch, a scratch, marry 'tis enough,
Where is my Page? go Villain fetch a Surgeon.
Rom. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.
Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a Church-door, but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am pepper'd I warrant for this world: a plague of both your houses. What, a Dog, a Rat, a Mouse, a Cat to scratch a man to death! a Braggart, a Rogue, a Villain: that fights by the book of Arithmetick, why the dev'l came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.
Rom. I thought all for the best.
Mer. Help me into some house Benuolio,
Or I shall faint: a plague a both your houses.
They have made wormes meat of me,

I have it, and soundly too, your Houses. Exit.

Rom. This Gentleman the Princes near Allie,
My very friend hath got his mortal hurt
In my behalf, my reputation stain'd
With Tybalts slander, Tybalt that an hour
Hath been my Cozen: O Sweet Juliet,
Thy Beauty hath made me Effeminate,
And in my temper softned Valours steel.

Enter Benuolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead,
That Gallant spirit hath aspir'd the Cloudes,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This daies black Fate, on mo daies do depend,
This but begins, the woe others must end.

Enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. He gone in triumph, and Mercutio slain?
Away to Heaven respective Lenity,
And fire, and Fury be my conduct now.
Now Tybalt take the Villain back again
That late thou gav'st me, for Mercutio's soul,
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company:
Either thou or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou wretched Boy that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

They fight. Tybalt fals.

Ben. Romeo, away be gone:
The Citizens are up, and Tybalt slain,
Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will doom thee death
If thou art taken: hence, be gone, away.

Rom. O! I am Fortunes fool.

Ben. Why dost thou stay?

Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens.

Citi. Which way ran he that kild Mercutio?
Tybalt that Murtherer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

Citi. Up sir, go with me:
I charge thee in the Princes name obey.

Enter Prince, old Mountague, Capulet, their Wives and all.

Prin. Where are the vild beginners of this Fray?

Ben. O Noble Prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brall:
There lies the man slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman brave Mercutio.

Cap. Wi. Tybalt my Cozin? O my Brothers Child,
O Prince, O Cozin, Husband, O the bloud is spill'd,
Of my dear Kinsman, Prince as thou art true,
For bloud of ours, shed bloud of Mountague.
O Cozin, Cozin.

Prin. Benuolio, Who began this Fray?

Ben. Tybalt here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay,
Romeo that spoke him fair, bid him bethink
How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure: all this uttered,
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he Tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's brest,
Who all as hot, turnes deadly point to point,
And with a Martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold Friends, Friends part, and swifter then his tongue,
His able arm, beats down their fatal points,
And twixt them rushes, underneath whose arm,
An envious thrust from Tybalt, hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled.
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertained revenge,
An to't they go like lightning, for ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain:
And as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly:
This is the truth, or let Benuolio die.

Cap. Wi. He is a Kinsman to the Mountague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true.
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for Justice, which thou Prince must give:
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio,
Who now the price of his dear bloud doth owe.

Cap. Not Romeo Prince, he was Mercutio's Friend,
His fault concludes but what the Law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediatly we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hearts proceeding.
My bloud for your rude brawles doth lie a bleeding.
But I'le amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses,
Nor tears, nor prayers shall purchase our abuses.
Therefore use none, let Romeo hence in hast,
Else when he is found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but Murders, pardoning those that kill.

Exeunt.

Enter Juliet alone.

Juli. Gallop apace, you fiery footed steeds,
Toward Phœbus lodging, such a Wagoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately,
Spred thy close Curtain Love-performing night,
That run-awaies eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leapt to these armes, untalkt of and unseen,
Lovers can see to do their Amorous rights,
By their own Beauties: or if Love be blind,
It best agrees with night: come civil night,
Thou sober suted Matron all in black,
And learn me how to loose a winning match,
Playd for a pair of stainless Maydenheads,
Hood my unmann'd bloud baying in my Cheekes,
With thy black mantle, till strange Love grow bold,
Think true Love acted simple modesty:
Come night, come Romeo, come thou day in night,
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,
Whiter then new Snow on a Ravens back:
Come gentle night, come loving black-brow'd night.
Give me my Romeo, and when I shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the Garish Sun.
O I have bought the Mansion of a Love,
But not possest it, and though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd, so tedious is this day,
As is the night before some Festival,

To

To an impatient child that hath new robes
And may not wear them, O here comes my Nurse:
Enter Nurse with cords.
And she brings news and every tongue that speaks
But Romeos, name, speaks heavenly eloquence:
Now Nurse, what news? what hast thou there?
The Cords that Romeo bid thee fetch?
Nur. I, I, the Cords.
Juli. Ay me, what news?
Why dost thou wring thy hands.
Nur. A weladay he's dead, he's dead,
We are undone Lady, we are undone.
Alack the day, he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead.
Juli. Can heaven be so envious?
Nur. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot. O Romeo, Romeo,
Who ever would have thought it Romeo.
Juli. What divel art thou,
That dost torment me thus?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell,
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I:
And that bare vowel I shall poyson more
Then the death-darting eye of Cockatrice,
I am not I, if there be such an I.
Or those eies shot that makes the answer I,
If he be slain say I, or if not, no.
Brief, sounds, determine of my weal or woe.
Nur. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eies
God save the mark here on his manly breast,
A pitteous Coarse, a bloody pitteous Coarse:
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedawb'd in blood
All in gore blood I sounded at the sight.
Juli. O break my heart,
Poor Bankrout break at once,
To prison eies nere look on liberty.
Vile earth to earth resigne, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo presse one heavy beer.
Nur. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had:
O courteous Tybalt honest Gentleman,
That ever I should live to see thee dead.
Juli. What storm is this that bowes so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughtred? and is Tybalt dead?
My dearest Cozen, and my dearer Lord:
Then dreadful Trumpet sound the generall doome,
For who is living, if those two are gone?
Nur. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished,
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.
Juli. O God!
Nur. Did Romeos hand shed Tybalts blood
It did, it did, alas the day, it did.
Juli. O Serpent heart, hid with a flowring face,
Did ever Dragon keep so fair a Cave?
Beautiful Tyrant, fiend Angellicall:
Ravenous Dove, feather'd Raven,
Wolvish-ravening Lamb,
Dispised substance of Divinest show:
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned Saint, an Honourable Villain;
O Nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous Pallace.
Nur. There's no trust, no faith, no honesty in men,
All perjur'd, all forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers,
Ah where's my man? give me some Aqua-vitæ?
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old!
Shame come to Romeo.
Juli. Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish, he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throan where honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the universal earth:
O what a beast was I to chide him so?
Nur. Will you speak well of him
That kill'd your Cozen?
Juli. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah poor my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I thy three hours wife have mangled it.
But wherefore villain didst thou kill my Cozen?
That villain Cozen would have kill'd my husband:
Back foolish tears, back to your native spring,
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which your mistaking offer up to joy:
My husband lives that Tybalt would have slain,
And Tybalt dead that would have kill'd my husband:
All this is comfort, wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was worser then Tybalts death
That murdered me, I would forget it fain,
But oh it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners minds,
Tybalt is dead and Romeo banished:
That banished, that one word banished,
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts: Tybalts death
Was woe enough if it had ended there:
Or if sower woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why followed not when she said Tybalts dead,
Thy Father or thy Mother, nay or both.
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd:
But with a rere-ward following Tybalts death,
Romeo is banished to speak that word,
Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead: Romeo is banished,
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that words death, no words can that woe sound.
Where is my Father and my Mother Nurse?
Nur. Weeping and wailing over Tybalts Coarse.
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.
Juli. Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shal be spent
When theirs are dry for Romeos banishment.
Take up those Cords, poor ropes you are beguil'd,
Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd:
He made you for a high way to my bed,
But I a Maid, dye Maiden widdowed.
Come Cord, come Nurse, ile to my wedding-bed,
And death not Romeo, take my Maiden-head.
Nur. Hye to your Chamber, ile find Romeo
To comfort you, I wot well where he is:
Hark ye your Romeo will be here at night,
Ile to him, he is hid at Lawrence Cell.
Juli. O find him, give this Ring to my true Knight,
And bid him come, to take his last farewell.

Exit.

Enter Frier, and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo come forth,
Come forth thou fearful man,
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts:
And thou art wedded to calamity.
Romeo. Father what newes?

What

What is the Princes Doom?
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?
Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear Son with such sower company:
I bring thee tydings of the Princes doom.
Rom. What lesse then Doo ns-day,
Is the Princes Doome?
Fri. A gentler judgement vanisht from his lips,
Not bodies death, but bodies banishment.
Rom. Ha, banishment? be merciful, say death:
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more then death, do not say banishment.
Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.
Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But Purgatory, Torture, hell it self:
Hence banished, is banisht from the world,
And worlds exile is death. Then banished,
Is death, misteerm'd, calling death banished,
Thou cutst my head off with a Golden Axe,
And smilst, upon the stroak that murders me.
Fri. O deadly sin, O rude unthankfulnesse!
Thy fault our Law calls death, but the kind Prince
Taking thy part hath rusht aside the Law,
And turn'd that black word death, to banishment.
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.
Rom. 'Tis torture and not mercy, heaven is here
Where Juliet lives, and every Cat and Dog,
And little Mouse, every unworthy thing
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not. More Validity,
More Honourable state, more Courtship lives
In carrion Flies, then Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliets hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who even in pure and vestal modesty
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin.
This may Flies do, when I from this must flye,
And saist thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not, he is banished.
Had'st thou no poison mixt, no sharp ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though nere so mean,
But banished to kill me? Banished?
O Frier, the damned use that word in hell:
Howlings attend it, how hast thou the heart
Being a Divine, a Ghostly Confessor,
A Sin-Absolver, and my friend profest:
To mangle me with that word banished?
Fri. Fond Mad man, hear me speak.
Rom. O thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Fri. Ile give thee Armour to keep off that word,
Adversities sweet Milk, Philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.
Rom. Yet banished? hang up Philosophy:
Unless Philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a Town, reverse a Princes Doome,
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more:
Fri. O then I see that mad-men have no ears.
Rom. How should they,
When wise-men have no eies?
Fri. Let me despair with thee of thy estate.
Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel,
Wert thou as young, as Juliet my Love:
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speak,
Then might'st thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
Enter Nurse and knocks.
Fri. Arise one knocks,
Good Romeo hide thy self.
Rom. Not I,
Unlesse the breath of Heartsick groans
Mist-like infold me from the search of eies.
Knock.
Fri. Hark how they knock
(Who's there) Romeo arise,
Thou wilt be taken stay a while stand up:
Knock.
Run to my study: by and by, Gods will?
What simplenesse is this: I come, I come.
Knock.
Who knocks so hard?
Whence come you? what's your will?
Enter Nurse.
Nur. Let me come in.
And you shall know my errand:
I come from Lady Juliet.
Fri. Welcome then.
Nur. O holy Frier, O tell me holy Frier,
Where's my Ladies Lord? wheres Romeo?
Fri. There on the ground,
With his own tears made drunk.
Nur. O he is even in my Mistresse cause,
Just in her case, O woful simpathy:
Piteous predicament, even so lies she,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbring,
Stand up, stand up, stand and you be a man,
For Juliets sake, for her sake rise and stand:
Why should you fall into so deep an O.
Rom. Nurse.
Nur. Ah sir, ah sir, deaths the end of all.
Rom. Speak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Doth not she think me an old murtherer,
Now I have stain'd the Childhood of our joy,
With blood removed, but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what saies
My conceal'd Lady to our conceal'd Love?
Nur. Oh she saies nothing sir, but weeps and weeps,
And now falls on her bed, and then starts up.
And Tybalt calls, and then Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.
Ro. As if that name shot from the deadly level of a Gun,
Did murder her, as that names cursed hand
Murdered her kinsman. Oh tell me Frier, tell me,
In what vile part of this Anatomy
Doth my name lodge? Tell me, that I may sack
The hateful Mansion.
Fri Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish, thy wild acts do note
The unreasonable fury of a beast.
Unseemly woman, in a seeming man,
And ill beseeming beast in seeming both,
Thou hast amaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thy self?
And slay thy Lady, that in thy life lies,
By doing damned hate upon thy self?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth? the heaven and earth?

Since

Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do meet
In thee at once, which thou at once would'ſt loſe
Fie, fie, thou ſham'ſt thy ſhape, thy love, thy wit,
Which like a Uſurer abound'ſt in all:
And uſeſt none in that true uſe indeed,
Which ſhould bedeck thy ſhape, thy love, thy wit:
Thy Noble ſhape, is but a form of waxe,
Digreſſing from the valour of a man,
Thy dear Love ſworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that Love which thou haſt vow'd to cheriſh,
Thy wit, that Ornament, to ſhape and Love,
Miſ-ſhapen in the conduct of them both:
Like powder in a skilleſſe Souldiers fliske,
Is ſet a fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou diſmembred with thine own defence.
What, rowſe thee man, thy Juliet is alive,
For whoſe dear ſake thou waſt but lately dead.
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou ſlew'ſt Tybalt, there art thou happy too
The Law that threatned death became thy friend,
And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.
A pack of bleſſings light upon thy back,
Happineſſe Courts thee in her beſt array,
But like a miſ ſhaped and a ſullen wench,
Thou putteſt up thy Fortune and thy Love:
Take heed, take heed, for ſuch die miſerable.
Go get thee to thy Love as was decreed,
Aſcend her Chamber, hence and comfort her:
But look thou ſtay not till the Watch be ſet,
For then thou canſt not paſſe to Mantua,
Where thou ſhalt live till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee back,
With twenty hundred thouſand times more joy
Then thou went'ſt forth in Lamentation.
Go before Nurſe, commend me to thy Lady,
And bid her haſten all the houſe to bed,
Which heavy ſorrow makes them apt unto.
Romeo is coming.

Nur. O Lord, I could have ſtaid here all night,
To hear good counſell: oh what learning is!
My Lord ile tell my Lady you will come.

Rom. Do ſo, and bid my Sweet prepare to chide.

Nur. Here ſir, a Ring ſhe bid me give you ſir:
Hie you, make haſte, for it grows very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this.

Fri. Go hence.
Goodnight, and here ſtands all your ſtate:
Either be gone before the Watch be ſet,
Or by the break of day diſguis'd from hence,
Sojourn in Mantua, ile find out your man,
And he ſhall ſignifie from time to time,
Every good hap, to you that chances here:
Give me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell Goodnight.

Rom. But that a joy, paſt joy, calls out on me,
It were a grief, ſo brief to part with thee:
Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter old Capulet, his wife, and Paris

Cap. Things have faln out ſir ſo unluckily,
That we have no time to move our daughter:
Look you, ſhe lov'd her kinſman Tybalt dearly,
And ſo did I. Well, we were born to die.
Tis very late, ſhe'l not come down to night:
I promiſe you, but for your company,
I would have bin a bed an hour agoe.

Par. Theſe times of woe, afford no times to wooe:
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.

Lad. I will, and know her mind early to morrow.
To night, ſhe is mewed up to her heavineſſe.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a deſperate tender
Of my Childs love: I think ſhe will be rul'd
In all reſpects by me, nay more, I doubt it not,
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here of my Son Paris Love,
And bid her, mark you me, on Wedneſday next,
But ſoft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha, ha, well Wedneſday is too ſoon,
A Thurſday let it be: a Thurſday tell her,
She ſhall be married to this Noble Earle:
Will you be ready? do you like this haſte?
Wee'l keep no great a do, a friend or two,
For hark you, Tybalt being ſlain ſo late,
It may be thought we held him careleſly,
Being our kinſman, if we revel much:
Therefore wee'l have ſome half a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what ſay you to Thurſday?

Par. My Lord,
I would that Thurſday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thurſday be it then:
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her wife, againſt this wedding day.
Farewell my Lord, light to my chamber hoa,
Afore me, it is ſo late, that we may call it early by and by,
Goodnight. Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Juliet aloft.

Juli. Wilt thou be gone?
It was the Nightingale, and not the Lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear,
Nightly ſhe ſings on yond Pomgranet tree,
Beleeve me Love, it was the Nightingale,

Rom. It was the Lark, the Herauld of Morn:
No Nightingale: look Love what envious ſtreaks
Do lace the ſevering Clouds in yonder Eaſt:
Nights Candles are burnt out, and jocond day
Stands tipto on the miſty Mountain tops,
I muſt be gone and live, or ſtay and die.

Juli. Yond light is not day light, I know it I:
It is ſome Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore ſtay yet, thou need'ſt not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, ſo thou wilt have it ſo.
Ile ſay yon gray is not the mornings eye,
Tis but the pale reflex of Cinthias brow.
Nor that is not the Lark whoſe notes do beat
The vaulty heavens ſo high above our heads,
I have more care to ſtay, then will to go:
Come death and welcome, Juliet wills it ſo.
How ift my ſoul, let's talk, it is not day

Juli. It is, it is, hie hence be gone away:
It is the Lark that ſings ſo out of tune,
Straining harſh Diſcords, and unpleaſing Sharps.
Some ſay the Lark makes ſweet Diviſion;
This doth not ſo: for ſhe divideth us.
Some ſay, the Lark, and loathed Toad change eies,
O now I would they had chang'd voices too:

Since arme from arme that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence, with Hunt-up to the day,
O now be gone, more light, and it light growes.
Ro. More light and light, more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.
Juli. Nurse.
Nur. Your Lady Mother is coming to your chamber,
The day is broke, be wary, look about,
Juli. Then window let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kisse and ile descend.
Juli. Art thou gone so? Love, Lord, ah Husband, friend,
I must hear from thee every day in the hour,
For in a minute there are many daies,
O by this Count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.
Rom. Farewell:
I will omit no opportunity,
That may convey my greetings Love, to thee.
Juli. O thinkest thou we shall ever meet again?
Rom. I doubt it not, and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come.
Juli. O God! I have an ill Divining soul,
Me thinks I see thee now, thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a Tomb,
Either my eye-sight fails: or thou look'st pale.
Rom. And trust me Love, in my eye so do you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adue, adue. Exit.
Juli. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him,
That is renown'd for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

Enter Mother.

La. Ho Daughter, are you up?
Juli. Who is't that calls? is it my Lady Mother?
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?
La. Why how now Juliet?
Juli. Madam I am not well.
La. Evermore weeping for your Cozins death?
What wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?
And if thou could'st, thou could'st not make him live:
Therefore have done, some grief shews much of Love,
But much of grief, shews still some want of wit.
Juli. Yet let me weep, for such a feeling losse.
La. So shall you feel the losse, but not the Friend
Which you weep for.
Juli. Feeling so the losse,
I cannot chuse but ever weep the Friend.
La. Well Girle, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Juli. What villain, Madam?
La. That same villain Romeo.
Juli. Villain and he, be many miles assunder:
God pardon him, I do with all my heart,
And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.
La. That is because the Traitor lives.
Juli. I Madam from the reach of these my hands:
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.
La. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not.
Then weep no more. Ile send to one in Mantua,
Where that same banisht Run-agate doth live,
Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram,
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.
Juli. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, Till I behold him. Dead
Is my poor heart, so for a kinsman vext:
Madam if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it;
That Romeo should upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet. Oh how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
To wreak the Love I bore my Cozin, Tybalt,
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him.
Mo. Find thou the means, and ile find such a man,
But now ile tell thee joyful tidings Girle.
Juli. And joy comes well, in such a needy time,
What are they, I beseech your Ladyship?
Mo. Well, well, thou hast a careful Father Child?
One who to put thee from thy heavinesse,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
That thou expects not, nor I lookt not for.
Juli. Madam in happy time, what day is this?
Mo. Marry my Child, early next Thursday morn,
The gallant, young, and Noble Gentleman,
The County Paris at Saint Peters Church,
Shall happily make thee a joyful Bride.
Juli. Now by Saint Peters Church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyful Bride.
I wonder at this haste, that I must wed
Ere he that should be Husband comes to woe.
I pray you tell my Lord and Father Madam
I will not marry yet, and when I do, I swear
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate
Rather then Paris. These are news indeed.
Mo. Here comes your Father, tell him so your self,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sun sets, the earth doth drizzle dew;
But for the Sunset of my Brothers Son,
It rains down-right.
How now? a Conduit Girle, what still in tears?
Evermore showring in one little body?
Thy counterfeits a Bark, a Sea, a Wind:
For still thy eies, which I may call the Sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears, the Bark thy body
Sailing in this salt floud, the winds thy sighs,
Who raging with the tears and they with them,
Without a sudden calm will over-set
Thy tempest-tossed body. How now wife?
Have you delivered to her our decree?
La. I sir;
But she will none, she gives you thanks,
I would the fool were married to her grave.
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you wife,
How, will she none? doth she not give us thanks?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a Gentleman, to be her Bridegroom?
Juli. Not proud you have,
But thankful that you have.
Proud can I never be of what I have,
But thankful even for hate, that is meant Love.
Cap. How now?
How now? Chopt Logick? what is this?
Proud, and I thank you: and I thank you not.
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,

To

To go with Paris to Saint Peters Church:
Or I will drag thee, on a Hurdle thither.
Out you green ſickneſs carrion, out you baggage;
You tallow face.
Lad. Fie, fie, what are you mad?
Jul. Good Father, I beſeech you on my knees
Hear me with patience, but to ſpeak a word.
Fa. Hang thee young baggage, diſobedient wretch;
I tell thee what, get thee to Church a Thurſday,
Or never after look me in the face.
Speak not, reply not, do not anſwer me.
My fingers itch, wife: we ſcarce thought us bleſt,
That God had lent us but this only Child;
But now I ſee this one is one too much,
And that we have a Curſe in having her:
Out on her Hilding.
Nur. God in heaven bleſs her,
You are to blame my Lord to rate her ſo.
Fa. And why my Lady wiſdom? hold your tongue,
Good Prudence, ſmatter with your goſſip, go.
Nur. I ſpeak no treaſon,
O Godigoden,
May not one ſpeak?
Fa. Peace you mumbling fool,
Utter your gravity ore a Goſſips bowl,
For here we need it not.
La. You are too hot.
Fa. Gods bread, it makes me mad:
Day, night, hour tide, time, work, play,
Alone, in company, ſtill my care hath been
To have her matcht, and having now provided
A Gentleman of Noble Parentage,
Of fair Demeanes, Youthful, and Nobly Allied,
Stuft as they ſay with Honourable parts,
Proportion'd as ones thought would wiſh a man.
And then to have a wretched puling fool,
A whining mammet, in her Fortunes tender,
To anſwer, Ile not wed, I cannot Love,
I am too young, I pray you pardon me.
But, and you will not wed, Ile pardon you.
Graze where you will, you ſhall not houſe with me:
Look too't, think on't, I do not uſe to jeſt.
Thurſday is near, lay hand on heart, adviſe,
And you be mine, Ile give you to my Friend:
And you be not, hang, beg, ſtarve, die in the ſtreets,
For by my ſoul, Ile nere acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine, ſhall never do thee good:
Truſt to't, bethink you, Ile not be forſworn. Exit.
Jul. Is there no pity ſitting in the Clouds,
That ſees into the bottom of my grief?
O ſweet my Mother caſt me not away,
Delay this marriage, for a moneth, a week,
Or if you do not, make the Bridal bed
In that dim Monument where Tybalt lies.
Mo. Talk not to me, for Ile not ſpeak a word,
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. Exit.
Jul. O God!
O Nurſe, how ſhall this be prevented?
My Husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How ſhall that faith return again to earth,
Unleſs that Husband ſend it me from heaven,
By leaving earth? Comfort me, counſel me:
Alack, alack, that heaven ſhould practiſe ſtratagems
Upon ſo ſoft a ſubject as my ſelf.
What ſaiſt thou? haſt thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort Nurſe.
Nur. Faith here it is;
Romeo is baniſhed, and all the world to nothing
That he dares nere come back to challenge you:
Or if he do, it needs muſt be by ſtealth.
Then ſince the caſe ſo ſtands as now it doth,
I think it beſt you married with the Count,
Oh he's a lovely Gentleman:
Romeo's a diſh-clout to him: an Eagle Madam
Hath not ſo green, ſo quick, ſo fair an eye
As Paris hath, beſhrow my very heart,
I think you are happy in this ſecond match,
For it excels your firſt: or if it did not,
Your firſt is dead, or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no uſe of him.
Jul. Speakeſt thou from thy heart?
Nur. And from my ſoul too
Or elſe beſhrew them both.
Jul. Amen.
Nur. What?
Jul. Well, thou haſt comforted me marv'lous much,
Go in, and tell my Lady I am gone,
Having diſpleas'd my Father, to Lawrence Cell,
To make confeſſion, and to be abſolv'd.
Nur. Marry I will, and this is wiſely done. Exit.
Jul. Ancient damnation, O moſt wicked fiend.
Is it more ſin to wiſh me thus forſworn,
Or to diſpraiſe my Lord with that ſame tongue
Which ſhe hath prais'd him with above compare,
So many thouſand times? Go Counſellor,
Thou and my boſom henceforth ſhall be twain:
Ile to the Frier to know his remedy.
If all elſe fail, my ſelf have power to die. Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Count Paris.

Fri. On Thurſday ſir? the time is very ſhort.
Par. My Father Capulet will have it ſo;
And I am nothing ſlow to ſlack his haſt.
Fri. You ſay you do not know the Ladies mind:
Uneven is the courſe, I like it not.
Pa. Immoderately ſhe weeps for Tybalts death,
And therefore have I little talk of Love,
For Venus ſmiles not in a houſe of teares,
Now ſir, her Father counts it dangerous
That ſhe ſhould give her ſorrow ſo much ſway:
And in his wiſdom, haſts our marriage,
To ſtop the inundation of her teares,
Which too much minded by her ſelf alone,
May be put from her by ſociety.
Now do you know the reaſon of this haſt?
Fri. I would I knew not why it ſhould be ſlow'd.
Look ſir, here comes the Lady towards my Cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my Lady and my wife.
Jul. That may be ſir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be, muſt be Love, on Thurſday next.
Jul. What muſt be ſhall be.
Fri. That's a certain text.
Par. Come you to make confeſſion to this Father?
Jul. To anſwer that, I ſhould confeſs to you.
Par. Do not deny to him, that you love me.
Jul. I will confeſs to you that I Love him.
Par. So will ye, I am ſure that you Love me.
Jul. If I do ſo, it will be of more price,
Being ſpoke behind your back, then to your face.
Par. Poor ſoul, thy face is much abus'd with teares.

Jul. The teares have got ſmall victory by that:
For it was bad enough before their ſpight.
Pa. Thou wrong'ſt it more then tears with that report
Jul. That is no ſlaunder ſir, which is truth,
And what I ſpake, I ſpake it to my face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou haſt ſlandred it.
Jul. It may be ſo, for it is not mine own.
Are you at leiſure, Holy Father now,
Or ſhall I come to you at evening Maſs?
Fri. My leiſure ſerves me penſive daughter now.
My Lord I muſt intreat the time alone.
Par. God ſhield: I ſhould diſturb Devotion:
Juliet, on Thurſday early will I rowſe ye,
Till then adue, and keep this holy kiſs. Exit Paris.
Jul. O ſhut the door, and when thou haſt done ſo,
Come weep with me, paſt hope, paſt care, paſt help.
Fri. O Juliet, I already know thy grief,
It ſtraines me paſt the compaſs of my wits:
I hear thou muſt, and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thurſday next be married to this Count.
Jul. Tell me not Frier that thou heareſt of this,
Unleſs thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If in thy wiſdom, thou canſt give no help,
Do thou but call my reſolution wiſe,
And with this knife, Ile help it preſently.
God joyn'd my heart, and Romeo's, thou our hands,
And ere this hand by thee to Romeo ſeal'd:
Shall be the Label to another Deed,
Or my true heart with trecherous revolt,
Turn to another, this ſhall ſlay them both:
Therefore out of thy long experien'ſt time,
Give me ſome preſent counſel, or behold
Twixt my extreames and me, this bloudy knife
Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that,
Which the commiſſion of my yeares and Art,
Could to no iſſue of true honour bring:
Be not ſo long to ſpeak, I long to die,
If what thou ſpeak'ſt, ſpeak not of remedy.
Fri. Hold Daughter, I do ſpie a kind of hope,
Which craves as deſperate an execution,
As that is deſperate which we would prevent.
If rather then to marry County Paris
Thou haſt the ſtrength of will to ſlay thy ſelf,
Then it is likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this ſhame,
That coap'ſt with death himſelf, to ſcape fro it:
And if thou dar'ſt, Ile give thee remedy.
Juli. O bid me leap, rather then marry Paris,
From off the Battlements of any Tower,
Or walk in thieviſh waies, or bid me lurk
Where Serpents are: chain me with roaring Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnel houſe,
Ore-covered quite with dead mens ratling bones,
With recky ſhankes, and yellow chapleſs skuls:
Or bid me go into a new made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his grave,
Things that to hear them told, have made me tremble,
And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unſtain'd wife to my ſweet Love.
Fri. Hold then: go home, be merry, give conſent,
To marry Paris: Wenſday is to morrow,
To morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy Nurſe lie with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Viol being then in bed,
And this diſtilling liquor drink thou off,
When preſently through all thy veines ſhall run,
A cold and drowſie humour: for no pulſe
Shall keep his native progreſs, but ſurceaſe:
No warmth, no breath ſhall teſtifie thou liveſt.
The Roſes in thy lips and cheekes ſhall fade
To mealy aſhes, the eyes windows fall
Like death when he ſhuts up the day of life:
Each part depriv'd of ſupple government,
Shall ſtiffe and ſtark, and cold appear like death,
And in this borrowed likeneſs of ſhrunk death,
Thou ſhalt continue two and forty houres,
And then awake as from a pleaſant ſleep.
Now when the Bridegroom in the morning comes,
To rowſe thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then as the manner of our Countrey is,
In thy beſt Robes uncover'd on the Beer,
Be born to burial in thy kindreds grave:
Thou ſhalt be born to that ſame ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie,
In the mean time, againſt thou ſhalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my Letters know our drift,
And hither ſhall he come, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this ſhall free thee from this preſent ſhame,
If no unconſtant toy nor womaniſh fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.
Juli. Give me, give me, O tell not me of fear.
Fri. Hold, get you gone, be ſtrong and proſperous
In this reſolve, Ile ſend a Frier with ſpeed
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord.
Jul. Love give me ſtrength,
And ſtrength ſhall help afford:
Farewel dear Father. Exit.

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurſe, and ſerving men, two or three.

Cap. So many gueſts invite as here are writ,
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning Cookes.
Ser. You ſhall have none ill ſir, for Ile try if they can lick their fingers.
Cap. How canſt thou try them ſo?
Ser. Marry ſir, 'tis an ill Cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.
Cap. Go be gone, we ſhall be much unfurniſht for this time: What is my Daughter gone to Frier Lawrence?
Nur. I forſooth.
Cap. Well he may chance to do ſome good on her,
A peeviſh ſelf-wild harlotry it is.
Enter Juliet.
Nur. See where ſhe comes from ſhrift
With merry look.
Cap. How now my headſtrong,
Where have you been gadding?
Juli. Where I have learnt me to repent the ſin
Of diſobedient oppoſition:
To you and your beheſts, and am enjoyn'd
By holy Lawrence, to fall proſtrate here,
To beg your pardon: pardon I beſeech you,
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.
Cap. Send for the Count, go tell him of this
Ile have this knot knit up to morrow morning.
Jul. I met the youthful Lord at Lawrence Cell,
And gave him what becomed Love I might,
Not ſtepping ore the bounds of modeſty.
Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, ſtand up,

This

This is as't should be, let me see the County:
I marry go I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afore God, this reverend holy Frier,
All our whole City is much bound to him.
Juli. Nurse will you go with me into my Closet,
To help me sort such needful ornaments,
As you think fit to furnish me to morrow?
Mo. No not till Thursday, there is time enough.
Fa. Go Nurse, go with her,
Wee'l to Church to morrow.
Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.
Mo. We shall be short in our provision,
'Tis now neer night.
Fa. Tush, I will stirre about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wife:
Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her,
Ile not to bed to night, let me alone:
Ile play the huswife for this once. What ho?
They are all forth, well I will walk my self
To County Paris, to prepare him up
Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous light,
Since this same way-ward Girle is so reclaim'd.
Exeunt Father and Mother.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Juli. I, those attires are best, but gentle Nurse
I pray thee leave me to my self to night:
For I have need of many Orisons,
To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which well thou knowst is crosse and full of sin.
Enter Mother.
Mo. What are you busie ho? need you my help?
Juli. No Madam, we have cull'd such necessaries
As are behooveful for our state to morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone;
And let the Nurse this night sit up with you,
For I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden businesse.
Mo. Goodnight.
Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need. Exeunt.
Juli. Farewell:
God knows when we shall meet again.
I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of fire:
Ile call them back again to comfort me.
Nurse, what should she do here?
My dismall Scean, I needs must act alone:
Come Viall, what if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to morrow morning?
No, no, this shall forbid it. Lie thou there,
What if it be a poison which the Frier
Subtilly hath ministred to have me dead.
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear it is, and yet me thinks it should not.
For he hath still been tryed a holy man.
How, if when I am laid into the Tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? There's a fearful point:
Shall I not then be stifled in the Vault?
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breaths in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes.
Or if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,
As in a Vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where for these many hundred years the bones
Of all my buried Auncestors are packt,
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies festring in his shrow'd, where as they say,
At some hours in the night, Spirits resort:
Alack, alack is it not like that I
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrikes like Mandrakes torn out of the earth,
That living mortals hearing them, run mad.
Or if I walk, shall I not be distraught,
Invironed with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my fore-fathers joynts?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shrow'd?
And in this rage, with some great kinsmans bone,
As (with a club) dash out my desperate brains.
O look, me thinks I see my Cozins Ghost,
Seeking out Romeo that did spit his body
Upon his Rapiers point: stay Tybalt, stay;
Romeo, Romeo, Romeo, here's drink: I drink to thee.

Enter Lady of the house and Nurse.

Lady. Hold,
Take these keies and fetch more spices Nurse
Nur. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pastry,
Enter old Capulet.
Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir,
The second Cock hath Crow'd,
The Curphew Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clock:
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica,
Spare not for cost.
Nur. Go you Cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed, faith youl be sick to morrow
For this nights watching.
Cap. No not a whit, what? I have watch'd ere now
All night for a lesse cause, and nere been sick.
La. I, you have been a Mouse-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from such watching now.
Exit Lady and Nurse.
Cap. A jealous hood, a jealous hood,
Now fellow, what's there?
Enter three or four with spits, and logs, and baskets.
Fel. Things for the Cook sir, but I know not what.
Cap. Make haste, make haste, sirrah, fetch drier Logs.
Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.
Fel. I have a head sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter.
Cap. Masse and well said, a merry horson, ha.
Thou shalt be logger-head, good Faith, 'tis day.
Play Musick.
The County will be here with Musick straight,
For so he said he would, I hear him near,
Nurse, wife, what ho? what Nurse I say?
Enter Nurse.
Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up,
Ile go and chat with Paris: hie, make haste,
Make haste, the Bridegroom, he is come already:
Make haste I say.
Nur. Mistris, what Mistris? Juliet? Fast I warrant her.
Why Lamb, why Lady? fie you sluggabed,
Why Love I say? Madam, sweet heart: why Bride?
What not a word? You take your penniworths now.
Sleep for a week, for the next night I warrant
The County Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little, God forgive me:
Marry and Amen: how sound is she asleep?

I must needs wake her: Madam, Madam, Madam,
I, let the County take you in your bed;
Hee'l fright you up yfaith. Will it not be?
What dreſt, and in your cloths, and down again?
I must needs wake you: Lady, Lady, Lady?
Alas, alas, help, help, my Lady's dead.
Oh weladay, that ever I was born,
Some Aqua-vitæ ho, my Lord, my Lady?

Mo. What noiſe is here? Enter Mother.

Nur. O lamentable day.

Mo. What is the matter?

Nur. Look, look, oh heavy day.

Mo. O me, O me, my Child, my only life:
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee:
Help, help, call help.

Enter Father.

Fa. For ſhame bring Juliet forth, her Lord is come.

Nur. She's dead: deceaſt, ſhe's dead: alack the day.

Mo. Alack the day, ſhe's dead, ſhe's dead, ſhe's dead,

Fa. Ha? Let me ſee her: out alas ſhe's cold,
Her blood is ſetled, and her joynts are ſtiffe:
Life and theſe lips have long been ſeparated:
Death lies on her like an untimely froſt
Upon the ſweeteſt flower of all the field.

Nur. O lamentable day!

Mo. O woful time.

Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me waile,
Ties up my tongue and will not let me ſpeak.

Enter Frier and the County.

Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church?

Fa. Ready to go, but never to return.
O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day,
Hath death lain with thy wife: ſee there ſhe lies,
Flower as ſhe was, deflowr'd now by him.
Death is my Son in law, death is my Heir,
My Daughter he hath wedded. I will die,
And leave him all life living, all is deaths.

Pa. Have I thought long to ſee this mornings face,
And doth it give me ſuch a ſight as this?

Mo. Accurſt, unhappy, wretched, hateful day,
Moſt miſerable hour, that ere time ſaw
In laſting labour of his Pilgrimage.
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoyce and ſolace in,
And cruel death hath catcht it from my ſight,

Nur. O wo, O woful, woful, woful day,
Moſt lamentable day, moſt woful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold.
O day, O day, O day, O hateful day,
Never was ſeen ſo black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day.

Pa. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, ſpighted, ſlain,
Moſt deteſtable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel, cruel thee quite overthrown:
O love, O life; not life, but love in death.

Fa. Deſpis'd, diſtreſſed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd,
Uncomfortable time, why cam'ſt thou now
To murther, murther our Solemnity?
O Child, O Child; my Soul and not my Child,
Dead art thou, alack my Child is dead,
And with my Child, my joyes are buried.

Fri. Peace ho for ſhame, confuſions: Care lives not
In theſe confuſions, heaven and your ſelf
Had part in this fair Maid, now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the Maid:
Your part in her, you could not keep from death,
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life:
The moſt you ſought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heaven that ſhe ſhould be advanc'd.
And weep ye now, ſeeing ſhe is advanc'd
Above the Clouds, as high as Heaven it ſelf?
O in this love, you love your Child ſo ill,
That you run mad, ſeeing that ſhe is well:
She's not well married, that lives married long,
But ſhe's beſt married, that dies married young.
Drie up your tears, and ſtick your Roſemary
On this fair Coarſe, and as the cuſtom is
And in her beſt array bear her to Church:
For though fond Nature bids all us lament,
Yet Natures tears are Reaſons merriment.

Fa. All things that we ordained Feſtival,
Turn from their office to black Funeral:
Our inſtruments to melancholly Bells
Our wedding cheare, to a ſad burial Feaſt:
Our ſolemn Hymnes, to ſullen Dyrges change;
Our Bridal Flowers ſerve for a buried Coarſe:
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir go you in, and Madam, go with him,
And go ſir Paris, every one prepare
To follow this fair Coarſe unto her grave:
The heavens do lowre upon you, for ſome ill:
Move them no more, by croſſing their high will. Exeunt.

Mu. Faith we may put up our Pipes and be gone.

Nur. Honeſt good fellows: Ah put up put up,
For well you know this is a pittiful caſe.

Mu. I by my troth, the caſe may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Muſitians, oh Muſitians,
Hearts eaſe, hearts eaſe,
O, and you will have me live, play hearts eaſe.

Mu. Why hearts eaſe;

Pet. O Muſitians,
Becauſe my heart it ſelf plaies, my heart is full.

Mu. Not a dump we, tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mu. No.

Pet. I will then give it you ſoundly.

Mu. What will you give us?

Pet. No money on my faith, but the gleek.
I will give you the Miniſtrell.

Mu. Then will I give you the Serving creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the ſerving creatures Dagger on your pate. I will carry no Crotchets, Ile Re you, Ile Fa you, do you note me?

Mu. And you Re us, and Fa us, you Note us.

2. Mu. Pray you put up your Dagger,
And put out your wit.
Then have at you with my wit.

Pet. I will drie-beat you with an iron wit,
And put up my iron Dagger.
Anſwer me like men:
When griping griefs the heart doth wound, then Muſick with her ſilver ſound.
Why ſilver ſound? why Muſick with her ſilver ſound?
What ſay you Simon Catling?

Mu. Marry ſir, becauſe ſilver hath a ſweet ſound.

Pet. Prateſt, What ſay you Hugh Rebick?

Pet. Prateſt too, what ſay you James Sound-Poſt? (ver

3. Mu. Faith I know not what to ſay.

Pet. O I cry you mercy, you are the Singer.
I will ſay for you, it is Muſick with her ſilver ſound,

Becauſe Muſitians have no gold for ſounding:
Then Muſick with her ſilver ſound, with ſpeedy help doth lend redreſs. Exit.

Mu. What a peſtilent knave is this ſame?

M. 2. Hang him Jack, come weele in here, tarry for the Mourners, and ſtay dinner. Exit.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may truſt the flattering truth of ſleep,
My dreames preſage ſome joyful newes at hand:
My boſomes Lord ſits lightly in his throne:
And all this winged unaccuſtom'd ſpirit,
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt my Lady came and found me dead,
(Strange dream that gives a dead man leave to think)
And breath'd ſuch life with kiſſes in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an Emperour.
Ah me, how ſweet is love it ſelf poſſeſt,
When but loves ſhadows are ſo rich in joy.

Enter Romeo's man.

News from Verona, how now Balthazar?
Doſt thou not bring me Letters from the Frier?
How doth my Lady? Is my Father well?
How doth my Lady Juliet? that I ask again,
For nothing can be ill, if ſhe be well.

Ma. Then ſhe is well, and nothing can be ill.
Her body ſleepes in Capels Monument,
And her immortal part with Angels lives
I ſaw her laid low in her Kindreds Vault.
And preſently took poſt to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing theſe ill newes,
Since you did leave it for my office Sir.

Rom. Is it even ſo?
Then I deny you Stars.
Thou knoweſt my Lodging, get me Ink and Paper,
And hire poſt-horſes, I will hence to night.

Ma. I do beſeech you ſir, have patience:
Your lookes are pale and wild, and do import
Some miſadventure.

Rom. Tuſh, thou art deceiv'd,
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Haſt thou no Letters to me from the Frier?

Ma. No, my good Lord.

Exit Man.

Rom. No matter: Get thee gone,
And hire thoſe horſes, Ile be with thee ſtraight.
Well Juliet, I will lie with thee to night:
Lets ſee for means: O miſchief thou art ſwift,
To enter in the thoughts of deſperate men:
I do remember an Apothecary,
And hereabouts he dwels, which late I noted
In tattred weeds, with overwhelming browes,
Culling of Simples, meager were his lookes,
Sharp miſery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy ſhop a Tortoys hung,
An Allegater ſtuft, and other skins
Of ill ſhap'd fiſhes, and about his ſhelves,
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, Bladders, and muſty ſeeds,
Remnants of packthred, and old cakes of Roſes
Were thinly ſcattered, to make up a ſhew.
Noting this penury, to my ſelf I ſaid,
And if a man did need a poyſon now,
Whoſe ſale is preſent death in Mantua,
Here lives a Caitiffe wretch would ſell it him.
O this ſame thought did but fore-run my need,
And this ſame needy man muſt ſell it me.
As I remember, this ſhould be the houſe,
Being holy day, the beggers ſhop is ſhut.
What ho? Apothecary?

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. VVho call's ſo lowd?

Rom. Come hither man, I ſee that thou art poor,
Hold, there is forty Dukets, let me have
A dram of poyſon, ſuch ſoon ſpeeding gear,
As will diſperſe it ſelf through all the veines,
That the life-weary-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunk may be diſcharg'd of breath,
As violently, as haſty powder fier'd
Doth hurry from the fatal Cannons womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have, but Mantuas Law
Is death to any he, that utters them.

Rom. Art thou ſo bare and full of wretchedneſs,
And fear'ſt to die? Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppreſſion ſtarveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggery hang on thy back!
The world is not thy friend, nor the worlds law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich.
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will conſents.

Rom. I pray thy poverty, and not thy will.

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off, and if you had the ſtrength
Of twenty men, it would diſpatch you ſtraight.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
VVorſe poyſon to mens ſoules,
Doing more murder in this loathſome world,
Then theſe poor compounds that thou maiſt not ſell.
I ſell thee poyſon, thou haſt ſold me none,
Farewel, buy food, and get thy ſelf in fleſh.
Come Cordial, and not poyſon, go with me
To Juliets grave, for there muſt I uſe thee.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier John to Frier Lawrence

John. Holy Franciſcan Frier, Brother, ho?

Enter Frier Lawrence.

Law. This ſame ſhould be the voyce of Frier John.
VVelcome from Mantua, what ſaies Romeo?
Or if mind be writ, give me his Letter.

Joh. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order to aſſociate me,
Here in this City viſiting the ſick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Town
Suſpecting that we both were in a houſe
VVhere the infectious Peſtilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doores, and would not let us forth,
So that my ſpeed to Mantua there was ſtaid.

Law. VVho bare my Letter then to Romeo?

Joh. I could not ſend it, here it is again,
Nor get a Meſſenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Law. Unhappy Fortune! by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of dear import, and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Frier John go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it ſtraight
Unto my Cell.

Joh. Brother, Ile go and bring it thee. Exit.

Law. Now muſt I to the Monument alone,
VVithin this three houres will fair Juliet wake,
She will beſhrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of theſe Accidents:
But I will write again to Mantua,

And keep her at my Cell till Romeo come,
Poor living Coarse, clos'd in a dead mans Tombe.
Exit.

Enter Paris and his Page.

Par. Give me thy Torch, Boy, hence and stand aloft,
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen:
Under yond young trees lay thee all alone,
Laying thy ear close to the hollow ground,
So shall no foot upon the Church-yard tread,
Being loose, unfirm with digging up of Graves,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hearest some thing approach,
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.
Pag. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will adventure. Exit.
Pa. Sweet Flower, with flowers thy Bridal bed I strew:
O woe, thy Canopy is dust and stones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or wanting that, with tears distill'd by mones;
The obsequies that I for thee will keep,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy grave, and weep.
Whistle Boy.
The Boy gives warning, something doth approach,
What curs'd foot wanders this way to night,
To cross my obsequies, and true loves right?
What with a Torch? Muffle me night a while.

Enter Romeo and Peter.

Rom. Give me that Mattock, and the wrenching Iron,
Hold take this Letter, early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my Lord and Father,
Give me the Light: upon thy life I charge thee,
What ere thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my Ladies face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Ring: a Ring that I must use,
In dear employment, therefore hence be gone:
But if thou jealous dost return to prie
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven I will tear thee joynt by joynt,
And strew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
The time, and my intents are savage wild:
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Then empty Tygers, or the roaring Sea.
Pet. I will be gone sir, and not trouble you.
Ro. So shalt thou shew me friendship: take thou that,
Live and be prosperous, and farewel good fellow.
Pet. For all this same, I le hide me here about,
His lookes I fear, and his intents I doubt. Exit.
Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth:
Thus I enforce thy rotten Jawes to open,
And in despight, I le cram thee with more food.
Par. This is that banisht haughty Mountague,
That murdred my Loves Cozin; with which grief,
It is supposed the fair Creature died,
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.
Stop thy unhallowed toyl, vile Mountague:
Can vengeance be pursued further then death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou must die,

Rom. I must indeed, and therefore came I hither.
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Flie hence and leave me, think upon those gone,
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee Youth,
Put not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury. O be gone,
By heaven I love thee better then my self,
For I come hither arm'd against my self:
Stay not, be gone, live, and hereafter say,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away.
Par. I do defie thy commiseration,
And apprehend thee for a Fellon here.
Ro. Wilt thou provoke me? Then have at thee Boy.
Pet. O Lord they fight, I will go call the Watch.
Pa. O I am slain, if thou be merciful,
Open the Tomb, lay me with Juliet.
Rom. In faith I will, let me peruse this face,
Mercutius Kinsman, Noble County Paris,
What said my man, when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think
He told me Paris should have married Juliet.
Said he not so? Or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so? O give me thy hand,
One, writ with me in sowr misfortunes book,
I le bury thee in a triumphant grave.
A Grave, O no a Lanthorn; slaughterd Youth:
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This Vault a feasting presence full of light.
Death be thou there, by a dead man interr'd.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Have they been merry? which their Keepers call
A lightning before death? Oh how may I
Call this a lightning? O my Love, my Wife,
Death that hath suckt the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy Beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd, Beauties ensign yet
Is Crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheekes,
And Deaths pale flag is not advanced there.
Tybalt, ly'st thou there in thy bloudy sheet?
O what more favour can I do to thee,
Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
To sunder his that was thy enemy?
Forgive me Cozen. Ah dear Juliet:
Why art thou yet so fair? I will believe,
Shall I believe, that unsubstantial death is amorous?
And that the lean abhorred Monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his Paramour?
For fear of that, I still will stay with thee,
And never from this Palace of dim night
Depart again: come lie thou in my Armes,
Here's to thy health, where ere thou tumblest in.
O true Apothecary!
Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die,
Depart again; here, here will I remain,
With Wormes that are thy Chamber-maides: O here
Will I set up my everlasting rest:
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this worlds wearied flesh: Eyes look your last:
Armes take your last embrace: And lips, O you
The doores of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death:
Come bitter conduct, come unsavoury guide,
Thou desperate Pilot, now at once run on
The dashing Rocks, thy Sea-sick weary Bark:
Here's to my Love. O true Apothecary:

Thy

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kisse I die.

Enter Frier with Lanthorn, Crow, and Spade,

Fri. St. Francis be my speed, how oft to night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves? Who's there?

Man. Here's one, a Friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Blisse be upon you, Tell me good my friend
What Torch is yond, that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyelesse Sculls? As discern,
It burneth in the Capels Monument.

Man. It doth so holy sir,
And there's my Master, one that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Man. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Man. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the Vault.

Man. I dare not Sir.
My Master knows not but I am gone hence,
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay, then ile goe alone, fears come upon me.
O much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Man. As I did sleep under this young tree here,
I dreamt my Master and another fought,
And that my Master slew him.

Frier. Romeo.
Alack, alack, what blood is this which stains
The stony entrance of this Sepulchre?
What mean these Masterlesse and goary Swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?
Romeo, oh pale: who else? what Paris too?
And steep'd in blood? Ah what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance?
The Lady stirs.

Juli. O comfortable Frier, where's my Lord?
I do remember well where I should be:
And there I am, where is my Romeo?

Fri. I hear some noise Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep,
A greater power then we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents, come, come away,
Thy Husband in thy bosom there lies dead:
And Paris too: come ile dispose of thee,
Among a Sisterhood of holy Nunnes:
Stay not to question, for the Watch is coming,
Come, go good Juliet, I dare no longer stay. Exit.

Juli. Go get thee hence, for I will not away,
What's here? a cup clos'd in my true loves hand?
Poison I see hath been his timelesse end
O churle, drink all? and left no friendly drop,
To help me after, I will kisse thy lips,
Happly some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.
Thy lips are warm.

Enter Boy and Watch.

Wach. Lead Boy, which way?

Juli. Yea noise?
Then ile be brief. O happy Dagger.
Tis in thy sheath, there rust and let me die. Kils her self.

Boy. This is the place,
There where the Torch doth burn.

Watch. The ground is bloody,
Search about the Churchyard.
Go some of you, who ere you find attach.
Pittyful sight, here lies the County slain,
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead
Who here hath lain these two daies buried.
Go tell the Prince, run to the Capulets,
Raise up the Mountagues, some others search,
We see the ground whereon these woes do lye.
But the true ground of all these pitteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter Romeo's man.

Wat. Here's Romeo's man,
We found him in the Churchyard.

Con. Hold him in safety, till the Prince comes hither.

Enter Frier and another Watchman.

3. Wat. Here is a Frier that trembles, sighs, and weeps:
We took this Mattock and this Spade from him,
As he was coming from this Church-yard side.

Con. A great suspition, stay the Frier too.

Enter the Prince.

Pri. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our mornings rest?

Enter Capulet and his wife.

Cap. What should it be that they so shrike abroad?

Wif. O the people in the street cry Romeo.
Some Juliet, and some Paris, and all run
With open out-cry toward our Monument.

Pri. What fear is this which startles in your ears?

Wat. Soveraigne, here lies the County Paris slain,
And Romeo dead, and Juliet dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Pri. Search,
Seek, and know how, this foul murther comes.

Wat. Here is a Frier, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,
With instruments upon them fit to open
These dead mens Tombs.

Cap. O heaven!
O wife look how our daughter bleeds!
This Dagger hath mistain, for loe his house
Is empty on the back of Mountague,
And is misheathed in my Daughters bosom.

Wif. O me, this sight of death, is as a Bell
That warns my old age to a Sepulcher.

Enter Mountague.

Pri. Come Mountague, for thou art early up
To see thy Son and Heir now early down.

Moun. Alas my Liege, my wife is dead to night,
Grief of my Sons exile hath stopt her breath:
What further woe conspires against my age?

Pri. Look: and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught, what manners is in this,
To presse before thy Father to a Grave?

Pri. Seal up the mouth of out-rage for a while,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent,
And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death, mean time forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience,
Bring forth the parties of suspition.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murther:
And here I stand both to impeach and purge
My self condemned, and my self excus'd.

Pri. Then say at once what thou dost know in this?

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo there dead, was husband to that Juliet,
And she there dead, that's Romeo's faithful wife:

I married them; and their ſtoln marriage day
Was Tybalts Doomeſday: whoſe untimely death
Baniſh'd the new-made Bridegroom from this City:
For whom (and not for Tybalt) Juliet pin'd.
You, to remove that ſiege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce
To County Paris. Then comes ſhe to me,
And (with wild looks) bid me deviſe ſome means
To rid her from this ſecond marriage,
Or in my Cell there would ſhe kill her ſelf.
Then gave I her (ſo tutor'd by my Art)
A ſleeping Potion, which ſo took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death. Mean time I writ to Romeo,
That he ſhould hither come, as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrowed grave,
Being the time the Potions force ſhould ceaſe.
But he which bore my Letter, Frier John,
Was ſtay'd by accident; and yeſternight
Return'd my Letter back, then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindreds vault,
Meaning to keep her cloſely at my Cell,
Til I conveniently could ſend to Romeo.
But when I came (ſome Minute ere the time
Of her awaking) here untimely lay
The Noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes, and I intreated her come forth,
And bear this work of Heaven, with patience:
But then, a noiſe did ſcare me from the Tomb,
And ſhe (too deſperate) would not go with me,
But (as it ſeems) did violence on her ſelf.
All this I know, and to the Marriage her Nurſe is privy:
And if ought in this miſcarried by my fault,
Let my old life be ſacrific'd ſome hour before the time,
Unto the rigor of ſevereſt Law.

Pri. We ſtill have known thee for a holy man.
Where's Romeo's man? What can he ſay to this?

Boy. I brought my Maſter news of Juliets death,
And then in poſte he came from Mantua
To this ſame place, to this ſame Monument.
This Letter he early bid me give his Father,
And threatned me with death, going in the Vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prin. Give me the Letter, I will look on it.
Where is the Counties Page that rais'd the Watch?
Sirrah, what made your Maſter in this place?

Pag. He came with Flowers to ſtrew his Ladies grave
And bid me ſtand aloof, and ſo I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the Tomb
And by and by my Maſter drew on him,
And then I ran away to call the Watch.

Prin. This Letter doth make good the Friers words,
Their courſe of Love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes, that he did buy a poyſon
Of a poor Pothecary, and there withall
Came to this Vault to die, and lie with Juliet,
Where be theſe enemies? Capulet Mountague,
See what a ſcourge is laid upon your hate,
That Heaven finds means to kill your joyes with Love;
And I, for winking at your diſcords too,
Have loſt a brace of kinſmen: All are puniſh'd.

Cap. O Brother Mountague, give me thy hand,
This is my Daughters joynture, for no more
Can I demand.

Moun. But I can give thee more:
For I will raiſe her Statue in pure Gold,
That whiles Verona by that name is known,
There ſhall no figure at that Rate be ſet,
As that of True and Faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich ſhall Romeo by his Lady lie,
Poor ſacrifices of our enmity.

Prin. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
The Sun for ſorrow will not ſhew his head;
Go hence, to have more talk of theſe ſad things,
Some ſhall be pardon'd, and ſome puniſhed.
For never was a Story of more woe
Than this of Juliet, and her Romeo. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

THE LIFE OF TYMON OF ATHENS.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at several doores

Poet.

GOod day Sir.

Pain. I am glad y'are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long, how goes the World?

Pain. It weares sir, as it growes.

Poet. I that's well known.
But what particular Rarity? What strange,
Which manifold record not matches: see
Magick of Bounty, all these spirits thy power
Hath conjur'd to attend.
I know the Merchant.

Pai. I know them both: th'others a Jeweller.

Mer. Oh 'tis a worthy Lord.

Jew. Nay that's most fixt.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd as it were,
To an untyrable and continuate goodnes:
He passes.

Jew. I have a Jewel here.

Mer. O pray let's see't. For the Lord Tymon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate, but for that——

Poe. When we for recompence have prais'd the vild,
It staines the glory in that happy Verse,
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good forme.

Jew. And rich: here is a Water look ye.

Pai. You are rapt sir, in some work, some Dedication to the great Lord.

Poe. A thing slipt idly from me.
Our Poesie is as a Gown, which uses
From whence 'tis nourisht: the fire i'th' Flint
Shewes not, till it be struck: our gentle flame
Provokes it self, and like the current flies
Each bound it chases. What have you there?

Pai. A Picture sir: when comes your Book forth?

Poe. Upon the heels of my presentment sir.
Let's see your piece.

Pai. 'Tis a good Piece.

Poe. So 'tis, this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poe. Admirable! How this grace
Speakes his own standing: what a mental power
This eye shoots forth? How big imagination
Moves in this Lip; to th'dumbnes of the gesture,
One might interpret.

Pai. It is a pretty mocking of the life:
Here is a touch: Is't good?

Poe. I will say of it,
It Tutors Nature, Artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier then life.

Enter certain Senators.

Pai. How this Lord is followed.

Poe. The Senators of Athens, happy men.

Pain. Look moe.

Po. You see this confluence, this great floud of visitors,
I have in this rough work shap'd out a man
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hugg
With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly; but moves it self
In a wide Sea of Wax, no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold,
But flies an Eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaving no Tract behind.

Pai. How shall I understand you?

Poe. I will unbolt to you.
You see how all Conditions, how all Minds,
As well of glib and slipp'ry Creatures, as
Of Grave and austere quality, tender down
Their services to Lord Timon: his large Fortune,
Upon his good and gracious Nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts; yea from the glass-fac'd Flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Then to abhor himself, even he drops down
The knee before him, and returnes in peace
Most rich in Timons nod.

Pai. I saw them speak together.

Poe. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Fain'd Fortune to be thron'd.
The Base o'th' Mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of Natures
That labour on the bosom of this Sphere,
To propagate their states; among'st them all,
Whose eyes are on this Sovereign Lady fixt,
One do I personate of Lord Timons frame,
Whom Fortune with her Ivory hand wafts to her,
Whose present grace, to present slaves and servants
Translates his Rivals.

Pai. 'Tis conceiv'd, to scope
This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinkes

With

With one man becken'd from the reſt below,
Bowing his head againſt the ſteepy Mount
To climbe his happineſs, would be well expreſt
In our Condition.
Poe. Nay Sir, but hear me on:
All thoſe which were his Fellowes but of late,
Some better then his value; on the moment
Follow his ſtrides, his Lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain Sacrificial whiſperings in his eare,
Make Sacred even his ſtyrrop, and through him
Drink the free Ayr.
Pai. I marry, what of theſe?
Poe. When fortune in her ſhift and change of mood
Spurnes down her late beloved; all his Dependants
Which labour'd after him to the Mountaines top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him ſit down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.
Pai. 'Tis common:
A thouſand moral Paintings I can ſhew,
That ſhall demonſtrate theſe quick blowes of Fortune,
More pregnantly then words. Yet you do well,
To ſhew Lord Timon, that mean eyes have ſeen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets ſound.
Enter Lord Timon, addreſſing himſelf curteouſly to every Suitor.

Tim. Impriſoned is he, ſay you?
Meſ. I my good Lord, five Talents is his debt,
His meanes moſt ſhort, his Creditors moſt ſtraite:
Your honourable Letter he deſires
To thoſe have ſhut him up, which failing to him,
Periods his comfort.
Tim. Noble Ventidius well:
I am not of that Feather, to ſhake off
My friend when he moſt needs me. I do know him
A Gentleman, that well deſerves a help,
Which he ſhall have. Ile pay the debt, and free him.
Meſ. Your Lordſhip ever binds him.
Tim. Commend me to him, I will ſend his ranſom,
And being enfranchized, bid him come to me;
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to ſupport him after. Fare you well.
Meſ. All happineſs to your Honour.
Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.
Oldm. Lord Timon, hear me ſpeak.
Tim. Freely good Father.
Old. Thou haſt a ſervant nam'd Lucilius.
Tim. I have ſo: What of him?
Old. Moſt Noble Timon, call the man before thee.
Tim. Attends he here, or no? Lucilius.
Luc. Here at your Lordſhips ſervice.
Old. This fellow here, L. Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my houſe. I am a man
That from my firſt have been enclin'd to thrift,
And my eſtate deſerves an heir more rais'd,
Then one which holds a Trencher.
Tim. Well: what further?
Old. One only Daughter have I, no Kin elſe,
On whom I may confer what I have got:
The Maid is fair, a'th'youngeſt for a Bride,
And I have bred her at my deareſt coſt
In Qualities of the beſt. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I prythee (Noble Lord)
Joyn with me to forbid him her reſort,
My ſelf have ſpoke in vain.
Tim. The man is honeſt.
Old. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honeſty rewards him in it ſelf,
It muſt not bear my Daughter.
Tim. Does ſhe love him?
Old. She is young and apt:
Our own precedent paſſions do inſtruct us
What levity's in youth.
Tim. Love you the Maid?
Luci. I my good Lord, and ſhe accepts of it.
Old. If in her Marriage my conſent be miſſing,
I call the Gods to witneſs, I will chuſe
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And diſpoſſeſs her all.
Tim. How ſhall ſhe be endowed,
If ſhe be mated with an equal Husband?
Old. Three Talents on the preſent, in future, all.
Tim. This Gentleman of mine
Hath ſerv'd me long:
To build his Fortune, I will ſtrain a little,
For 'tis a Bond in men. Give him thy Daughter,
What you beſtow, in him Ile counterpoize,
And make him weigh with her.
Old. Moſt Noble Lord,
Pawn me to this your Honour, ſhe is his.
Tim. My hand to thee,
Mine Honour on my promiſe.
Luc. Humbly I thank your Lordſhip, never may
That ſtate or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you. Exit.
Poe. Vouchſafe my Labour,
And long live your Lordſhip.
Tim. I thank you, you ſhall hear from me anon:
Go not away. What have you there, my Friend?
Pai. A piece of Painting, which I do beſeech
Your Lordſhip to accept.
Tim. Painting is welcome.
The Painting is almoſt the Natural man:
For ſince Diſhonour Traffickes with mans Nature,
He is but outſide: The Penſil'd Figures are
Even ſuch as they give out. I like your work,
And you ſhall find I like it; Wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.
Pai. The Gods preſerve ye.
Tim. Well fare you Gentleman: give me your hand.
We muſt needs dine together: Sir your Jewel
Hath ſuffered under praiſe.
Jew. What my Lord, diſpraiſe?
Tim. A meer ſaciety of Commendations,
If I ſhould pay you for't as 'tis extold,
It would unclew me quite.
Jew. My Lord, 'tis rated
As thoſe which ſell would give: but you well know,
Things of like value differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Maſters. Believ't dear Lord,
You mend the Jewel by the wearing it.
Tim. Well mock'd. Enter Apermantus.
Mer. No my good Lord, he ſpeaks the common tongue
Which all men ſpeak with him.
Tim. Look who comes here, will you be chid?
Jew. We'l bear with your Lordſhip.
Mer. He'l ſpare none.
Tim. Good morrow to thee,
Gentle Apermantus.

Aper.

Ape. Till I be gentle, ſtay thou for thy good morrow. When thou art Timons dog, and theſe Knaves honeſt.

Tim. Why doſt thou call them Knaves, thou know'ſt them not?

Ape. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Ape. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus?

Ape. Thou knowſt I do, I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud Apemantus.

Ape. Of nothing ſo much, as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whether art going?

Ape. To knock out an honeſt Athenians braines.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Ape. Right, if doing nothing be death by th' Law.

Tim. How lik'ſt thou this Picture Apemantus?

Ape. The beſt, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Ape. He wrought better that made the Painter, and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. Y'are a Dog.

Ape. Thy Mothers of my generation: what's ſhe, if I be a Dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me Apemantus?

Ape. No, I eat not Lords.

Tim. And thou ſhould'ſt, thoud'ſt anger Ladies.

Ape. O they eat Lords;
So they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a laſcivious apprehenſion.

Ape. So thou apprehendſt it.
Take it for thy labour.

Tim. How doſt thou like this Jewel, Apemantus?

Ape. Not ſo well as plain-dealing, which will not coſt a man a Doit.

Tim. What doſt thou think tis worth?

Ape. Not worth my thinking.
How now Poet?

Poet. How now Philoſopher?

Ape. Thou lyeſt.

Poet. Art not one?

Ape. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Ape. Art not a Poet?

Poet. Yes.

Ape. Then thou lieſt:
Look in thy laſt work, where thou haſt feign'd him a worthy Fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd, he is ſo.

Ape. Yes he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loves to be flattered, is worthy o'th flatterer. Heavens, that I were a Lord.

Tim. What wouldſt do then Apemantus?

Ape. E'ne as Apemantus does now, hate a Lord with my heart.

Tim. What thy ſelf?

Ape. I.

Tim. Wherefore?

Ape. That I had no angry wit to be a Lord.
Art not thou a Merchant?

Mer. I Apemantus.

Ape. Traffick confound thee, if the gods will not.

Mer. If Traffick do it, the gods do it.

Ape. Traffickes thy god, and thy god confound thee.

Trumpet ſounds. Enter a Meſſenger.

Tim. What Trumpet's that?

Meſ. 'Tis Alcibiades, and ſome twenty horſe
All of Companionſhip.

Tim. Pray entertain them, give them guide to us,
You muſt needs dine with me: go not you hence
Till I have thankt you: and when dinner's done
Shew me this piece, I am joyful of your ſights.

Enter Alcibiades with the reſt.

Moſt welcom Sir.

Ape. So, ſo; their Aches contract, and ſtarve your ſupple Joynts: that there ſhould be ſmall love amongſt theſe ſweet Knaves, and all this Curteſie. The ſtrain of man's bred out into Baboon and Monkey.

Alci. Sir, you have ſav'd my longing, and I feed
Moſt hungerly on your ſight.

Tim. Right welcom Sir.
Ere we depart, we'l ſhare a bounteous time
In different pleaſures.
Pray you let us in. Exeunt.

Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time a day is't Apemantus?

Ape. Time to be honeſt.

1 That time ſerves ſtill.

Ape. The moſt accurſed thou that ſtill omitſt it.

2 Thou art going to Lord Timons Feaſt.

Ape. I, to ſee meat fill Knaves, and Wine heat fooles.

2 Farthee well, farthee well.

Ape. Thou art a foole to bid me farewel twice.

2 Why Apemantus?

Ape. Shouldſt have kept one to thy ſelf, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Hang thy ſelf.

Ape. No I will do nothing at thy bidding:
Make thy requeſts to thy Friend.

2 Away unpeaceable Dog,
Or Ile ſpurn thee hence.

Ape. I will fly like a dog, the heeles a'th' Aſſe.

1 Hees oppoſite to humanity.
Come ſhall we in,
And taſt Lord Timons bounty: he outgoes
The very heart of kindneſs.

2 He powres it out: Plutus the god of gold
Is but his Steward; no meed but he repaies
Seven-fold above it ſelf: No gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return: exceeding
All uſe of quittance.

1 The Nobleſt mind he carries,
That ever govern'd man.

2 Long may he live in Fortunes: Shall we in?
Ile keep you company. Exeunt.

Hoboyes Playing, Lowd Muſick.

A great Banquet ſerv'd in: and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventigius which Timon redeemed from priſon. Then comes dropping after all, Apemantus diſcontentedly like himſelf.

– Ventig. Moſt honoured Timon,
It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my fathers age,
And call him to long peace:
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful Vertue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return thoſe Talents
Doubled with thankes and ſervice, from whoſe help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O by no meanes,
Honeſt Ventigius: you miſtake my Love,

I gave it freely ever, and there's none
Can truly say he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them. Faults that are rich are fair.

Vent. A Noble spirit.

Tim. Nay my Lords, Ceremony was but devis'd at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown:
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray sit, more welcome are ye to my Fortunes,
Then my Fortunes to me.

1 Lord. My Lord, we alwaies have confest it.

Ape. Ho, ho, confest it? hang'd it? have you not?

Tim. O Apemantus, you are welcome.

Ape. No: you shall not make me welcome.
I come to have thee thrust me out of doores.

Tim. Fye, th'art a Churle, ye have got a humour there
Does not become a man, tis much to blame:
They say my Lords, Ira furor brevis est,
But yond man is very angry.
Go, let him have a Table by himself:
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for't indeed.

Ape. Let me stay at thine apperil Timon,
I come to observe, I give thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; Th'art an Athenian, therefore welcom: I my self would have no power, prethee let my meat make thee silent.

Ape. I scorn thy meat, twould choak me: for I should nere flatter thee. Oh you gods! What a number of men eates Timon, and he sees em not? It grieves me to see so many dip their meat in one mans blood, and all the madness is, he cheeres them up too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.
Methinkes they should invite them without knives,
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There's much example for't, the fellow that sits next him now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught: is the readiest man to kill him. 'Tas been proved, if I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meales, lest they should spy my wind-pipes dangerous notes, great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My Lord in heart: and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way my good Lord.

Ape. Flow this way? A brave fellow. He keeps his tides well, those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.
Heres that which is too weak to be a sinner,
Honest water, which nere left man i'th'mire:
This and my food are equal, theres no ods,
Feasts are too proud to give thankes to the gods.

Apemantus Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf,
I pray for no man but my self,
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his Oath or Bond.
Or a Harlot for her weeping.
Or a Dog that seemes a sleeping.
Or a keeper with my freedom,
Or my friends if I should need em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus.

Tim. Captain, Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alci. My heart is ever at your service, my Lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of Enemies, then a dinner of Friends.

Alci. So they were bleeding new my Lord, there's no meat like em, I could wish my friend at such a Feast.

Ape. Would all those flatterers were thine Enemies then, that then thou mightst kill em: and bid me to em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness my Lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeales, we should think our selves for ever perfect.

Tim. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my Friends else? Why have you that charitable title from thousands? Did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to my self, then you can with modesty speak in your own behalf. And thus far I confirm you. Oh you gods (think I) what need we have any Friends; if we should nere have need of em? They were the most needless Creatures living; should we nere have use for em? And would most resemble sweet Instruments hung up in Cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why I have often wisht my self poorer, that I might come neerer to you: we are born to do benefits. And what better or propeper can we call our own, then the riches of our friends? Oh what a precious comfort tis to have so many like Brothers commanding one anothers Fortunes! Oh joyes, e'ne made away ere't can be born, mine eyes cannot hold out water me thinkes to forget their faults. I drink to you.

Ape. Thou weep'st to make them drink Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,
And at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Ape. Ho, ho: I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you my Lord you mov'd me much.

Ape. Much.

Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazons with Lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Tim. What meanes that Trumpe? How now?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certain Ladies
Most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord, which beares that office, to signifie their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Mask of Ladies.

Cup. Hail to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bounties taste: the five best Sences acknowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy plenteous Bosom.
There taste, touch all, pleas'd from thy Table rise:
They only now come but to Feast thine eyes.

Tim. Their welcom all, let em have kind admittance.
Musick make their welcom.

Luc. You see my Lord, how ample ye are belov'd.

Ape. Hoyday,
What a sweep of vanity comes this way.
They dance? They are mad women.

Like

Like Madneſſe is the glory of this life,
As this pomp ſhews to a little oyle and root.
We make our ſelves fools, to diſport our ſelves,
And ſpend our Flatteries, to drink thoſe men,
Upon whoſe age we void it up agen
With poiſonous Spight and Envy.
Who lives, that's not depraved, or depraves;
Who dies, that bears not one ſpurn to their graves
Of their friends gift:
I ſhould fear, thoſe that dance before me now,
Would one day ſtamp upon me: 'T'as been done,
Men ſhut their doors againſt a ſetting Sunne.

The Lords riſe from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to ſhew their loves, each ſingle out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women, a lofty ſtrain or two to the Hoboyes, and ceaſe.

Tim. You have done our pleaſures
Much grace (fair Ladies)
Sets a fair faſhion on our entertainment,
Which was not half ſo beautiful, and kind:
You have added worth unto't, and lively luſter,
And entertain'd me with mine own device.
I am to thank you for't.

1. Lord. My Lord you take us even at the beſt.

Ape. Faith for the worſt is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you.
Pleaſe you to diſpoſe your ſelves.

All La. Moſt thankfully, my Lord. Exeunt.

Tim. Flavius.

Fla. My Lord.

Tim. The little Casket, bring me hither.

Fla. Yes, my Lord. More Jewels yet?
There is no croſſing him in's humour,
Elſe I ſhould tell him well, ifaith I ſhould,
When all's ſpent, he'd be croſt then, and he could:
Tis pitty Bounty had not eies behind,
That man might nere be wretched for his mind.

1. Lord. Where be our men?

Ser. Here my Lord in readineſſe.

2. Lord. Our horſes.

Tim. O my Friends;
I have one word to ſay to you: Look you, my good Lord:
I muſt intreat you honour me ſo much,
As to advance this Jewel, accept, and wear it,
Kind my Lord.

1. Lord. I am ſo farre already in your gifts,

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, there are certain Nobles of the Senat newly alighted, and come to viſit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Enter Flavius.

Fla. I beſeech your Honour, vouchſafe me a word, it does concern you neer.

Tim. Neer? why then another time Ile hear thee.
I prethee let's be provided to ſhew them entertainment.

Fla. I ſcarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Ser. May it pleaſe your honour, Lord Lucius
(Out of his free Love) hath preſented to you
Four Milk-white Horſes, trapt in Silver.

Tim. I ſhall accept them fairly: let the Preſents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now? What news?

3. Ser. Pleaſe you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to morrow, to hunt with him, and ha's ſent your honor two brace of Grey-hounds.

Tim. Ile hunt with him.
And let them be received, not without fair Reward.

Fla. What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts, and all out of an empty Coffer:
Nor will he know his purſe, or yield me this,
To ſhew him what a Beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wiſhes good,
His promiſes flye ſo beyond his ſtate,
That what he ſpeaks is all in debt, owes for ev'ry word:
He is ſo kind, that he now paies intereſt for't;
His Lands put to their Books. Well, would I were
Gently put out of office, ere I were forc'd:
Happier is he that has no friend to feed,
Then ſuch that do e'ne Enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my Lord. Exit.

Tim. You do your ſelves much wrong,
You bate too much of your own merits.
Here my Lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more then common thanks
I will receive it.

3 Lord. O has the very ſoul of bounty.

Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gave good words the other day of a Bay Courſer I rode on. Tis yours becauſe you lik'd it.

1 L. Oh, I beſeech you, pardon me, my Lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can juſtly praiſe, but what he does affect. I weigh my friends affection with mine own? Ile tell you true, Ile call to you.

All Lor. O none ſo welcome.

Tim. I take all, and your ſeveral viſitations
So kind to heart, tis not enough to give:
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And nere be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a Souldier, therefore ſeldom rich,
It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living
Is 'mongſt the dead: and all the Lands thou haſt
Lye in a pitcht-field.

Alci. I defie Land, my Lord.

1 Lord. We are ſo vertuouſly bound.

Tim. And ſo am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endeer'd.

Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights, more Light.

1 Lord. The beſt of Happines, Honour, and Fortunes, Keep with you Lord Timon.

Tim. Ready for his friends. Exeunt Lords.

Aper. What a coils here, ſerving of becks, and jutting out of bummes, I doubt whether their leggs be worth the ſummes that are given for 'em.
Friendſhips full of dreggs,
Me thinks falſe hearts ſhould never have ſound leggs.
Thus honeſt fools lay out their wealth on Court'ſies.

Tim. Now Apermantus (if thou wert not ſullen)
I would be good to thee.

Aper. No, ile nothing; for if I ſhould be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldſt ſinne the faſter. Thou giv'ſt ſo long Timon (I fear me) thou wilt give away thy ſelf in paper ſhortly. What need theſe Feaſts, Pomps, and Vain-glories?

Tim. Nay, and you begin to rail on Society once, I am ſworn not to give regard to you. Farewell, and come with better Muſick. Exit.

Aper. So: thou wilt not hear me now, thou ſhalt not then. Ile lock thy heaven from thee:
Oh that mens ears ſhould be
To Counſell deaf, but not to flattery. Exit.

Enter a Senator.

Sen. And late five thouſand: to Varro and to Iſidore
He owes nine thouſand, beſides my former ſumme,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waſte? it cannot hold, it will not.
If I want Gold, ſteal but a Beggers Dog,
And give it Timon, why the Dogge coynes Gold.
If I would ſell my horſe, and buy twenty more
Better then he; why give my horſe to Timon.
Aske nothing, give it him, it Foals me ſtraight
An able Horſe: No Porter at his gate,
But rather one that ſmiles, and ſtill invites
All that paſſe by. It cannot hold, no reaſon
Can ſound his ſtate in ſafety. Caphis hoa.
Caphis I ſay.

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here ſir, what is your pleaſure?

Sen. Get on your cloak. and haſte you to Lord Timon
Importune him for my monies, be not ceaſt
With ſlight denial; nor then ſilenc'd, then
Commend me to your Maſter, and the Cap
Plaies in the right hand, thus: but tell him ſirrah
My uſes cry to me; I muſt ſerve my turn
Out of mine own, his daies and times are paſt,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have ſmit my credit. I love and honour him,
But muſt not break my back, to heal his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my relief
Muſt not be toſt and turn'd to me in words,
But find ſupply immediate. Get you gone,
Put on a moſt importunate aſpect,
A viſage of demand: for I do fear
When every feather ſticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flaſhes now a Phenix, get you gone.

Ca. I go ſir.

Sen. I goe ſir?
Take the Bonds along with you,
And have the dates in. Come.

Ca. I will Sir.

Sen. Goe. Exeunt.

Enter Steward, with many Bills in his hand.

Stew. No care, no ſtop, ſo ſenſeleſſe of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor ceaſe his flow of Riot. Takes no account
How things go from him, nor reſume no care
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be ſo unwiſe, to be ſo kind.
What ſhall be done, he will not hear, till feel:
I muſt be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Caphis, Iſidore, and Varro.

Ca. Good even Varro, what, you come for money?

Var. Is't not your buſineſſe too?

Cap. It is, and yours too, Iſidore?

Iſid. It is ſo.

Cap. Would we were all diſcharg'd.

Var. I fear it.

Cap. Here comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Train.

Tim. So ſoon as dinners done, wee'l forth again
My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?

Cap. My Lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? whence are you?

Cap. Of Athens here, my Lord.

Tim. Goe to my Steward.

Cap. Pleaſe it your Lordſhip, he hath put me off
To the ſucceſſion of new daies this moneth:
My Maſter is awak'd by great occaſion,
To call upon his own, and humbly prays you,
That with your other Noble parts, you'll ſuit,
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honeſt friend,
I prethee but repair to me next morning.

Cap. Nay good my Lord.

Tim. Contain thy ſelf good friend.

Var. One Varro's ſervant, my good Lord.

Iſid. From Iſidore, he humbly prays your ſpeedy payment.

Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Maſters wants.

Var. Twas due on forfeiture my Lord, ſix weeks, and paſt.

Iſid. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I
Am ſent expreſſely to your Lordſhip.

Tim. Give me breath:
I do beſeech you good my Lords keep on,
Ile wait upon you inſtantly. Come hither: pray you
How goes the world that I am thus encountred
With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,
And the detention, long ſince due debts
Againſt my Honour?

Stew. Pleaſe you Gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this buſineſſe:
Your importunacy ceaſe, till after dinner,
That I may make his Lordſhip underſtand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do ſo my friends, ſee them well entertain'd.

Stew. Pray draw neere. Exit.

Enter Apemantus and Fool.

Caph. Stay, ſtay, here comes the Fool with Apemantus, lets ha ſome ſport with em.

Var. Hang him, hee'l abuſe us.

Iſid. A plague upon him dog.

Var. How doſt Fool?

Ape. Doſt Dialogue with thy ſhadow?

Var. I ſpeak not to thee.

Ape. No tis to thy ſelf. Come away.

Iſid. There's the Fool hangs on your back already.

Ape. No thou ſtandſt ſingle, thou art not on him yet.

Cap. Where's the fool now?

Ape. He laſt ask'd the queſtion. Poor Rogues and Uſurers men, Bauds between Gold and want.

All. What are we Apemantus?

Ape. Aſſes.

All. Why?

Ape. That you aske me what you are, and do not know your ſelves. Speak to em fool.

Fool. How do you Gentlemen?

All. Gramercies good Fool:
How does your Miſtriſs?

Fool.

Fool. She's e'ne setting on water to scald such Chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth.

Ape. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my Masters Page.

Page. Why how now Captain? what do you in this wise company?
How dost thou Apermantus?

Ape. Would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Boy. Prethee Apermantus read me the superscription of these Letters, I know not which is which.

Ape. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Ape. There will little Learning die then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades. Go thou wast born a Bastard, and thou'dst die a Bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelpt a Dog, and thou shalt famish a Dogs death.
Answer not, I am gone. Exit.

Ape. E'ne so thou out-runst grace,
Fool I will go with you to Lord Timons.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Ape. If Timon stay at home.
You three serve three Usurers?

All. I would they serv'd us.

Aper. So would I:
As good a trick as ever Hangman serv'd thief.

Fool. Are you three Usurers men?

All. I Fool.

Fool. I think no Usurer, but has a fool to his Servant. My Mistris is one, and I am her fool: when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach sadly, and go away merrily: but they enter my Masters house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ape. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremaster, and a Knave, which notwithstanding thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. What is a Whoremaster fool?

Fool. A fool in good cloathes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit, sometime 't appeares like a Lord, sometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two stones more then's artificial one. He is very often like a Knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in, from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walkes in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a Wise man,
As much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lack'st.

Ape. That answer might have become Apermantus.

All. Aside, aside, here comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon, and Steward.

Ape. Come with me (fool) come.

Fool. I do not alwaies follow Lover, elder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher.

Stew. Pray you walk near,
Ile speak with you anon. Exeunt.

Tim. You make me marvel wherefore ere this time
Had you not fully laid my state before me,
That I might so have rated my expence
As I had leave of meanes.

Stew. You would not hear me:
At many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:
Perchance some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back,
And that unaptness made you minister
Thus to excuse your self.

Stew. O my good Lord,
At many times I brought in my accompts,
Laid them before you, you would throw them off,
And say you found them in mine honesty,
When for some trifling present you have bid me
Return so much, I have shook my head, and wept:
Yea against th'Authority of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebbe of your estate,
And your great flow of debts; my dear lov'd Lord,
Though you here now (too late) yet now's a time
The greatest of your having, lackes a half,
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my Land be sold.

Stew. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone,
And what remaines will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues; the future comes apace:
What shall defend the interim, and at length
How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stew. O my good Lord, the world is but a world,
Were it all yours, to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

Stew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Falshood,
Call me before the exactest Auditors,
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our Offices have been oppress
With riotous Feeders, when our Vaults have wept
With drunken spilth of Wine; when every Room
Hath blaz'd with Lights, and braid with Minstrelsie,
I have retir'd me to a wastful cocke,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prethee no more.

Stew. Heavens have I said, the bounty of this Lord!
How many prodigal bits have Slaves and Peazants
This night englutted: who is not Timons,
What heart, head, sword, force meanes, but is L. Timons:
Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royal Timons:
Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praise,
The breath is gone, whereof this praise is made:
Feast won, fast lost; one cloud of Winter showers,
These flies are coucht.

Tim. Come sermon me no further.
No villanous bounty yet hath past my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly have I given.
Why dost thou weep, canst thou the conscience lack,
To think I shall lack friends: secure thy heart,
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,
Men, and mens fortunes could I frankly use
As I can bid thee speak.

Stew. Assurance bless your thoughts.

Tim. And in some sort these wants of mine are crown'd
That I account them blessings. For by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive
How you mistake my fortunes:
I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there, Flavius, Servilius?

Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Tim. I will dispatch you severally.
You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted with his Honour to day; you to Sempronius; commend me to their loves, and I am proud say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty Talents.

Flam. As you have said, my Lord.

Stew. Lord Lucius and Lucullus? Humh.

Tim. Go you sir to the Senators;
Of whom, even to the States best health, I have
Deserv'd this hearing; bid'em send o'th' instant
A thousand Talents to me.

Stew. I have been bold
(For that I knew it the most general way)
To them, to use your Signet, and your Name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be?

Stew. They answer in a joynt and corporate voyce,
That now they are at fall, want Treasure, cannot
Do what they would, are sorry: you are Honourable,
But yet they could have wisht, they know not,
Something hath been amiss; a Noble Nature
May catch a wrench; would all were well; 'tis pity
And so intending other serious matters,
After distastful lookes; and these hard Fractions,
With certain half-caps, and cold moving nods,
They froze me into Silence.

Tim. You gods reward them:
Prythee man look cheerly. These old Fellowes
Have their ingratitude in them Hereditary:
Their bloud is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flowes,
'Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind;
And Nature, as it growes again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
Go to Ventidius (prythee be not sad,
Thou art true, and honest; ingeniously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee:) Ventidius lately
Buried his Father, by whose death he's stepp'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of Friends,
I cleer'd him with five Talents: Greet him from me,
Bid him suppose, some good necessity
Touches his Friend, which craves to be remembred
With those five Talents; that had, give't these Fellowes
To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'r speak, or think,
That Timons fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Stew. I would I could not think it:
That thought is Bounties Foe:
Being free it self, it thinkes all others so. Exeunt.

Flaminius waiting to speak with a Lord from his Master, enters a servant to him.

Ser. I have told my Lord of you, he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you Sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Heres my Lord.

Luc. One of Lord Timons men? A Gift I warrant. Why this hits right: I dreampt of a Silver Bason and Ewre to night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome sir. Fill me some Wine. And how does that honourable, Compleat, Free-hearted Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good Lord and Master.

Flam. His health is well sir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well sir: and what hast thou there under thy Cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply, who having great and instant occasion to use fifty Talents, hath sent to your Lordship to furnish him: nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Luc. La, la, la, la: Nothing doubting sayes he? Alas good Lord, a Noble Gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and come again to supper to him on purpose, to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming, every man has his fault, and honesty is his. I ha told him on't, but I could nere get him from't.

Enter Servant, with Wine.

Ser. Please your Lordship, here is the Wine.

Luc. Flaminius, I have noted thee alwaies wise.
Heres to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship speakes your pleasure.

Luci. I have observed thee alwaies for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knowes what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone sirrah. Draw nearer honest Flaminius. Thy Lord's a bountiful Gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough (although thou com'st to me) that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security. Heres three Solidares for thee, good Boy wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ
And we alive that liv'd? Fly damned baseness
To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha? Now I see thou art a Fool, and fit for thy Master. Exit Lucullus.

Fla. May these add to the number that may scald thee:
Let molten Coyn be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a Friend, and not himself:
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turnes in less then two nights? O you gods!
I feel my Masters passion. This Slave unto his honour,
Has my Lords meat in him:
VVhy should it thrive, and come to Nutriment,
VVhen he is turn'd to poyson?
O may diseases only work upon't:
And when he's sick to death, let not that part of Nature
Which my Lord paid for, be of any power,
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour. Exit.

Enter Lucius, with three strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend, and an honourable Gentleman.

1. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell yon one thing my Lord, and which I hear from common rumours, now Lord Timons happy houres are done and past, and his estate shrinkes from him.

Luc. Fye no, do not believe it: he cannot want for money.

2. But believe you this my Lord, that not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many Talents, nay urg'd extreamly for't, and shewed what what neceſſity belong'd to't, and yet was deny'd.

Luc. How?

2. I tell you, deny'd my Lord.

Luc. What a ſtrange caſe was that? Now before the gods I am aſham'd on't. Denyed that honourable man? There was very little honour ſhew'd in that. For my own part, I muſt needs confeſſe, I have received ſome ſmall kindneſſes from him, as Money, Plate, Jewels, and ſuch like Trifles; nothing comparing to his: yet had he miſtook him, and ſent to me, I ſhould nere have denyed his occaſion ſo many Talents.

Enter Servilius.

Servil. See, by good hap yonders my Lord, I have ſwet to ſee his honour. My honour'd Lord.

Luc. Servilius? You are kindly met ſir. Farthewell, commend me to thy honourable vertuous Lord, my very exquiſite friend.

Servil. May it pleaſe your Honor, my Lord hath ſent ——.

Luci. Ha? what has he ſent? I am ſo much endeered to that Lord; he's ever ſending: how ſhall I thank him think'ſt thou? And what has he ſent now?

Serv. Has only ſent his preſent occaſion now my Lord: requeſting your Lordſhip to ſupply his inſtant uſe with ſo many Talents.

Luci. I know his Lordſhip is but merry with me,
He cannot want fifty five hundred Talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants leſſe my Lord.
If his occaſion were not vertuous,
I ſhould not urge it halfe ſo faithfully.

Luc. Doſt thou ſpeak ſeriouſly Servilius.

Ser. Upon my ſoul 'tis true Sir.

Luc. What a wicked Beaſt was I to diſfurniſh my ſelf againſt ſuch a good time, when I might ha ſhewn my ſelf honourable? how unluckily it hapned, that I ſhould purchaſe the day before for a little part, and undoe a great deal of honor? Servilius, now before the gods I am not able to do (the more beaſt I ſay) I was ſending to uſe Lord Timon my ſelf, theſe gentlemen can witneſſe; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had don't now. Commend me bountifully to his good Lordſhip, and I hope his honour will conceive the faireſt of me, becauſe I have no power to be kind. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greateſt afflictions ſay, that I cannot pleaſure ſuch an honorable Gentleman. Good Servilius will you befriend me ſo far, as to uſe mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes ſir, I ſhall. Exit Servilius.

Luci. Ile look you out a good turn Servilius.
True as you ſaid, Timon is ſhrunk indeed,
And he that's once deny'd will hardly ſpeed. Exit.

1. Doe you obſerve this Hoſtilius?

2. I, too well.

1. Why this is the worlds ſoul,
And juſt of the ſame peece
Is every Flatterers ſport: who can call him his friend
That dips in the ſame diſh? For in my knowing
Timon has been this Lords Father,
And kept his credit with his purſe:
Supported his eſtate, nay Timons money
Has paid his men their wages. He nere drinks,
But Timons Silver treads upon his Lip,
And yet, oh ſee the monſtrouſneſſe of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful ſhape:
He does deny him (in reſpect of his)
What charitable men afford to Beggers.

3. Religion groans at it.

1. For mine own part, I never taſted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend. Yet I proteſt,
For his right Noble mind, illuſtrious vertue,
And honourable Carriage,
Had his neceſſity made uſe of me,
I would have put my wealth into Donation,
And the beſt half ſhould have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: But I perceive,
Men muſt learn now with pitty to diſpence.
For policy ſits above Conſcience. Exeunt.

Enter a third ſervant with Sempronius, another of Timons Friends.

Semp. Muſt he needs trouble me in't? Hum.
'Bove all others?
He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus,
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from priſon. All theſe
Owe their Eſtates unto him.

Ser. My Lord,
They have all been touch'd, and all are found baſe-Mettle,
For they have all denied him.

Semp. How? have they deni'd him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus deny'd him,
And does he ſend to me? Three? Humh?
It ſhews but little love or judgement in him.
Muſt I be his laſt Refuge? his Friend: (like Phyſitians)
That thriv'd, give him over. Muſt I take th'Cure upon me?
Has much diſgrac'd me in't, I'me angry at him,
That might have known my place, I ſee no ſenſe for't.
But his occaſions might have wooed me firſt:
For in my conſcience I was the firſt man
That ere received gift from him.
And does he think ſo backwardly of me now,
That ile requite it laſt? No:
So it may prove an argument of laughter
To th'reſt, and 'mongſt Lords I be thought a fool:
Ide rather then the worth of thrice the ſumme,
Had ſent to me firſt, but for my minds ſake:
Ide ſuch a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply, this anſwer joyne;
Who bates mine Honour, ſhall not know my Coyn. Exit.

Ser. Excellent: Your Lordſhips a goodly Villain, the divel knew not what he did, when he made man Politick; he croſſed himſelf by't: and I cannot think, but in the end, the villanies of man will ſet him clear. How fairly this Lord ſtrives to appear foul? Takes vertuous Copies to be wicked: like thoſe, that under hot ardent zeale, would ſet whole Realms on fire, of ſuch a nature is his politick love.
This was my Lords beſt hope, now all are fled,
Save onely the Gods. Now his friends are dead,
Doors that were nere acquainted with their Wards
Many a bounteous year muſt be imploy'd
Now to guard ſure their Maſter:
And this is all a liberal courſe allows,
Who cannot keep his wealth, muſt keep his houſe. Exit.

Enter Varro's man, meeting others. All Timons Creditors to wait for his coming out. Then enter Lucius and Hortenſius.

Var.man. Well met, good morrow Titus and Hortenſius.

Titus

Tit. The like to you kind Varro.
Hort. Lucius, what do we meet together?
Luc. I, and I think one buſineſſe do's command us all. For mine is money.
Tit. So is theirs, and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luci. And ſir Philotus too.
Phi. Good day at once.
Luci. Welcome good Brother.
What do you think the hour?
Phil. Labouring for Nine.
Luci. So much?
Phil. Is not my Lord ſeen yet?
Luci. Not yet.
Phil. I wonder on't, he was wont to ſhine at ſeven.
Luci. I, but the daies are waxt ſhorter with him:
You muſt conſider, that a prodigal courſe
Is like the Sunnes, but not like his recoverable, I fear:
Tis deepeſt Winter in Lord Timons purſe, that is: One may reach deep enough, and yet find little.
Phil. I am of your fear for that.
Tit. Ile ſhew you how t' obſerve a ſtrange event:
Your Lord ſends now for Money?
Hort. Moſt true, he does.
Tit. And he wears Jewels now of Timons gift,
For which I wait for money.
Hort. It is againſt my heart.
Luci Mark how ſtrange it ſhows,
Timon in this, ſhould pay more then he owes:
And e'ne as if your Lord ſhould wear rich Jewels,
And ſend for money for 'em.
Hort. I'me weary of this Charge,
The gods can witneſſe:
I know my Lord hath ſpent of Timons wealth,
And now ingratitude, makes it worſe then ſtealth.
Varro. Yes mine's three thouſand Crowns:
What's yours?
Luci. Five thouſand mine.
Var. Tis much deep, and it ſhould ſeem by th'ſum
Your Maſters confidence was above mine,
Elſe ſurely his had equall'd.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of Lord Timons men.
Luc. Flaminius? Sir, a word: pray is my Lord ready to come forth?
Flam. No, indeed he is not.
Tit. We attend his Lordſhip: pray ſignifie ſo much.
Flam. I need not tell him that, he knows you are too diligent.

Enter Steward in a Cloak, muffled.

Luci. Ha, is not that his Steward muffled ſo?
He goes away in a Cloud: Call him, call him.
Tit. Do you hear, ſir?
2. Varro. By your leave, ſir.
Stew. What do ye aske of me, my friend.
Tit. We wait for certain Money here, ſir.
Stew. I, if money were as certain as your waiting,
Twere ſure enough.
Why then preferr'd you not your ſummes and Bills
When your falſe Maſters eat of my Lords meat?
Then they would ſmile, and fawn upon his debts,
And take down th'intreſt into their glutt'nous Mawes.
You do your ſelves but wrong, to ſtirre me up,
Let me paſſe quietly:
Beleev't, my Lord and I have made an end,
I have no more to reckon, he to ſpend.
Luci. I, but this anſwer will not ſerve.
Stew. If it will not ſerve, 'tis not ſo baſe as you,
For you ſerve knaves.
1. Varro. How? what does his caſhierd worſhip mutter?
2. Varro. No matter what, he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can ſpeak broader, then he that has no houſe to put his head in? Such may raile againſt great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. Oh here's Servilius, now we ſhall know ſome anſwer.
Serv. If I might beſeech you Gentlemen, to repair ſome other hour, I ſhould derive much from't. For take of my ſoul, my Lord leans wondrouſly to diſcontent: his comfortable temper has forſooke him, he's much out of health, and keeps his Chamber.
Luci. Many do keep their Chambers, are not ſick:
And if it be ſo farre beyond his health,
Me thinks he ſhould the ſooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.
Servil. Good gods.
Tit. We cannot take this for anſwer, ſir.
Flaminius within. Servilius help, my Lord, my Lord.

Enter Timon in a rage.

Tim. What, are my doores oppos'd againſt my paſſage?
Have I bin ever free, and muſt my houſe
Be my retentive enemy? My Goal?
The place which I have Feaſted, does it now
(Like all Mankind) ſhew me an Iron heart?
Luci. Put in now Titus.
Tit. My Lord, here is my Bill.
Luci. Heres mine.
1. Varro. And mine, my Lord.
2. Var. And ours, my Lord.
Philo. All our Bills.
Tim. Knock me down with em, cleave me to the Girdle.
Luc. Alas my Lord.
Tim. Cut out my heart in ſummes:
Tit. Mine, fifty Talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Five thouſand Crowns, my Lord.
Tim: Five thouſand drops paies that,
What yours? and yours?
1. Var. My Lord.
2. Var. My Lord.
Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you.

Exit Timon.

Hort. Faith I perceive our Maſters may throw their caps at their money, theſe debts may well be call'd deſperate ones, for a madman owes em. Exeunt.

Enter Timon.

Tim. They have e'ne put my breath from me the ſlaves.
Creditors? Divels.
Stew. My deere Lord.
Tim. What if it ſhould be ſo?
Stew. My Lord.
Tim. Ile have it ſo. My Steward?
Stew. Here my Lord.
Tim. So fitly? Goe, bid all my friends again,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius: All,
Ile once more feaſt the Raſcals.
Stew. O my Lord, you only ſpeak from your diſtracted ſoul; there's not ſo much left to furniſh out a moderate Table.

Timon.

Tim. Be it not in thy care:
Go I charge thee, invite them all, let in the tide
Of Knaves once more: my Cook and Ile provide. Exeunt.

Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them, with Attendants.

1 Sen. My Lord, you have my voyce to't,
The fault's Bloudy;
'Tis necessary he should die:
Nothing emboldens sin so much, as Mercy.
2. Most true; the Law shall bruise em.
Alci. Honour, health and compassion to the Senate.
1. Now Captain.
Alci. I am an humble Sutor to your Vertues;
For pity is the vertue of the Law,
And none but Tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and Fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot bloud
Hath stept into the Law: which is past depth
To those that (without heed) do plunge into't.
He is a man (setting his Fate aside) of comely Vertues,
Nor did he soyl the fact with Cowardise.
(And honour in him, which buies out his fault)
But with a Noble Fury, and fair spirit
Seeing his Reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his Foe;
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behoove his anger ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an Argument.
1 Sen. You undergo too strict a Paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such paines, as they labour'd
To bring Man-slaughter into form, and set Quarrelling
Upon the head of Valour; which indeed
Is Valour mis-begot, and came into the world,
When Sects and Factions were newly born.
He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breath,
And make his wrongs, his Out-sides,
To wear them like his Rayment, carelessly,
And ne'r prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What Folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill.
Alci. My Lord.
1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear,
To revenge is no Valour, but to bear.
Alci. My Lords, then under favour, pardon me.
If I speak like a Captain.
Why do fond men expose themselves to Battel,
And not endure all threats? Sleep upon't,
And let the Foes quietly cut their throats
Without repugnancy? if there be
Such Valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? Why then, Women are more valiant
That stay at home, if bearing carry it:
And the Asse, more Captain then the Lion? the fellow
Loaden with Irons, wiser then the Judge?
If VVisdom be in suffering. Oh my Lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good,
VVho cannot condemn rashness in cold bloud?
To kill, I grant, is sins extreamest Gust,
But in defence, by Mercy, 'tis most just.
To be in Anger, is impiety:
But who is man, that is not Angry?
VVeigh but the Crime with this.
2 Sen. You breath in vain.
Alci. In vain?
His service done at Lacedemon, and Bizantium,
VVere a sufficient briber for his life.
1. VVhat's that?
Alci. VVhy I say my Lords ha's done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last Conflict, and made plenteous wounds?
2 He has made too much plenty with em
He's a sworn Riotor, he has a sin
That often drownes him, and takes his valour prisoner.
If there were no Foes, that were enough
To overcome him. In that beastly fury,
He has been known to commit outrages,
and cherish Factions. 'Tis inferr'd to us,
His daies are foul, and his drink dangerous.
1. He dies.
Alci. Hard fate: he might have died in war.
My Lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in debt to none: yet more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and joyn em both.
And for I know, your reverend Ages love Security,
Ile pawn my Victories, all my honours to you,
Upon his good returnes.
If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life,
VVhy let the war receiv't in valiant gore,
For Law is strict, and war is nothing more.
1 VVe are for Law, he dies, urge it no more
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or Brother,
He forfeits his own bloud, that spils another.
Alci. Must it be so? It must not be:
My Lords, I do beseech you know me.
2 How?
Alci. Call me to your remembrances.
3. VVhat.
Alci. I cannot think but your Age hath forgot me,
It could not else be, I should prove so base,
To sue and be deni'd such common Grace.
My wounds ake at you.
1 Do you dare our anger?
'Tis few words, but spacious in effect.
VVe banish thee for ever.
Alci. Banish me?
Banish your dotage, banish usury,
That makes the Senate ugly.
1 If after two dayes shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier Judgment.
And not to swell our Spirit,
He shall be executed presently. Exeunt.
Alci. Now the gods keep you old enough,
That you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you.
I'm worse then mad: I have kept back their Foes
While they have told their Money, and let out
Their Coyn upon large interest. I my self
Rich only in large hurts. All those, for this?
Is this the Balsom, that the usuring Senate
Powres into Captaines wounds? ha Banishment.
It comes not ill: I hate not to be banisht,
It is a Cause worthy my Spleen and Fury,
That I may strike at Athens. Ile chear up
My discontented Troupes, and lay for hearts:
'Tis honour with most Lands to be at ods,
Souldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. Exit.

Enter

Enter divers Friends at severall doores.

1 The good time of day to you, sir.

2 I also wish it to you: I think this honourable Lord did but try us this other day.

1. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountred. I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the tryal of his several Friends.

2 It should not be, by the perswasion of his new Feasting.

1 I should think so: He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off: but he hath conjur'd me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my Provision was out.

1 I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Every man heare so: what would he have borrowed of you?

1 A thousand Pieces.

2 A thousand Pieces?

1 What of you?

2 He sent to me sir——Here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart Gentlemen both; and how fare you?

1 Ever at the best, hearing well of your Lordship.

2 The Swallow followes not Summer more willing, Then we your Lordship.

Tim. Nor more willingly leaves winter, such Summer Birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompence this long stay: Feast your eares with the Musick a while: if they will fare so harshly o'th Trumpets sound: we shall to't presently.

1 I hope it remaines not unkindly with your Lordship, that I return'd you an empty Messenger.

Tim. O sir, let it not trouble you.

2. My Noble Lord.

Tim. Ah my good friend, what cheer?

The Banquet brought in.

2 My most honourable Lord, I am e'ne sick of shame, that when your Lordship the other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a Beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 If you had sent but two houres before.

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. Come bring in all together.

2 All cover'd Dishes.

1 Royal Chear, I warrant you.

3 Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

1 How do you? What's the newes?

3 Alcibiades is banish'd: hear you of it?

Both. Alcibiades banish'd?

3 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1. How? How?

2. I pray you upon what?

Tim. My worthy Friends, will you draw near?

3 Ile tell you more anon. Here's a Noble feast toward.

2 This is the old man still.

3 Wilt hold? Wilt hold?

2 It does, but time will, and so.

3. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his Mistris: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a City Feast of it, to let the meat cool, ere we can agree upon the first place. Sir, sir.

The gods require our Thankes.

You great Benefactors, sprinkle our Society with Thankfulnesse. For your own gifts, make your selves prais'd: But reserve still to give, lest your Deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another. For were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more then the man that gives it. Let no Assembly of Twenty, be without a score of Villaines. If there sit twelve Women at the Table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your Fees, O gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common legge of People, what is amiss in them, you Gods, make suteable for destruction, For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing blesse them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover Dogs, and lap.

Some speak. What does his Lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better Feast never behold
You knot of Mouth-friends: Smoak, and luke-warm water
Is your perfection. This is Timons last,
Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long
Most smiling, smooth, detested Parasites,
Curteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek Beares:
You fooles of Fortune, Trencher-friends, Time flies,
Cap and knee Slaves, Vapours, and Minute Jackes
Of Man and Beast, the infinite Malady
Crust you quite o're. What dost thou go?
Soft, take thy Physick first; thou too, and thou;
Stay I will lend thee money, borrow none.
What? All in motion? Henceforth be no Feast,
Whereat a Villain's not a welcome Guest.
Burn house, sink Athens, henceforth hated be
Of Timon, Man, and all humanity. Exit.

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

1 How now, my Lords?

2. Know you the quality of Lord Timons fury?

3. Push, did you see my Cap.

4. I have lost my Gown.

1 He's but a mad Lord, and nought but humour swaies him. He gave me a Jewel th'other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat.

Did you see my Jewel?

2 Did you see my Cap?

3 Here 'tis.

4 Here lies my Gown.

1. Lets make no stay.

2. Lord Timon's mad.

3. I feel't upon my bones.

4. One day he gives us Diamonds, next day stones.

Exeunt the Senators.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou Wall
That girdles in those Wolves, dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens. Matrons, turn incontinent.
Obedience fail in Children: Slaves and Fooles

Pluck

Pluck the grave wrinkled Senate from the Bench,
And minister in their steeds to general Filthes.
Convert o'th'instant green Virginity,
Do't in your Parents eies. Bankrupts, hold fast
Rather then render back; out with your knives,
And cut your Trusters throats. Bound Servants, steal,
Large-handed Robbers your grave Masters are,
And pill by Law. Maid to thy Masters bed,
Thy Mistress is o'th' Brothell. Sonne of sixteen,
Pluck the lyn'd Crutch from thy old limping Sire,
With it, beat out his Brains. Piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, Peace, Justice, Truth,
Domestick awe, Night-rest, and Neighbour-hood,
Instruction Manners, Mysteries, and Trades,
Degrees, Observances, Customs, and Laws.
Decline to your confounding contraries.
And yet confusion live: Plagues incident to men,
Your potent and infectious Feavors, heap
On Athens ripe for stroak. Thou cold Sciatica,
Cripple our Senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their Manners. Lust and liberty
Creep in the Minds and Marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of vertue they may strive,
And drown themselves in Riot. Itches, Blains,
Sowe all th'Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general Leprosie: Breath, infect breath,
That their Society (as their friendship) may
Be meerly poison. Nothing ile bear from thee
But nakednesse, thou detestable Town.
Take thou that too, with multiplying Bannes:
Timon will to the Woods, where he shall find
Th'unkindest Beast, more kinder than Mankind.
The gods confound (hear me you good gods all)
Th'Athenians both within and out that Wall:
And grant as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of Mankind, high and low.
Amen. Exit.

Enter Steward with two or three Servants.

1. Hear you Master Steward, where's our Master?
Are we undone, cast off, nothing remaining?
Stew. Alack my fellowes, what should I say to you?
Let me be Recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.
1. Such a house broke?
So Noble a Master faln, all gone, and not
One Friend to take his fortune by the arme,
And goe along with him.
2. As we do turn our backs
From our Companion, thrown into his grave,
So his Familiars to his buried Fortunes
Slink all away, leave their false vows with him
Like empty purses pickt. And his poor self
A dedicated Beggar to the Air,
With his disease, of all shunn'd poverty,
Walks like contempt alone. More of our Fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Stew. All broken *I*mplements of a ruin'd house.
3. Yet do our hearts wear Timons Livery,
That see I by our faces: we are Fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our Barke,
And we poor Mates stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the Surges threat: we must all part
*I*nto this Sea of Air.
Stew. Good fellows all.
The latest of my wealth ile share amongst you.
Where ever we shall meet, for Timons sake,
Let's yet be fellows. Let's shake our heads, and say
As twere a Knell unto our Masters Fortunes,
We have seen better daies. Let each take some:
Nay put out all your hands: Not one word more,
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

Embrace and part several waies.

Oh the fierce wretchednesse that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since Riches point to Misery and Contempt?
Who would be so mock'd with glory, or to live
But in a Dream of friendship,
To have his pomp, and all what state compounds,
But only painted like his varnisht friends:
Poor honest Lord, brought low by his own heart,
Undone by goodnesse: strange unusual blood,
When man's worst sinne is, he do's too much good.
Who then dares to be halfe so kind agen?
For Bounty that makes gods, do still marre men,
My dearest Lord, blest to be most accurst,
Rich only to be wretched; thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas (kind Lord)
He's flung in Rage from this ungrateful Seat
Of monstrous Friends:
Nor has he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it:
Ile follow and enquire him out.
Ile ever serve his mind, with my best will,
Whilst I have gold, ile be his Steward still. Exit.

Enter Timon in the Woods.

Tim. O blessed breeding Sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity: below thy Sisters Orbe
Infect the air. Twin'd Brothers of one womb,
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is dividant; touch them with several fortunes,
The greater scorns the lesser. Not Nature
(To whom all sores lay siege) can bear great Fortune
But by contempt of Nature.
Raise me this Begger, and deny't that Lord,
The Senators shall bear contempt Hereditary,
The Beggar Native honor.
*I*t is the Pastor Lords, the Brothers sides,
The want that makes him lean: who dares? who dares
In purity of Manhood, stand upright
And say, this man's a flatterer. *I*f one be,
So are they all, for every grize of fortune
*I*s smooth'd by that below. The Learned pate
Ducks to the Golden fool. Alls obliquy:
There's nothing level in our curst Natures
But direct villany. Therefore be abhorr'd,
All Feasts, Societies, and Throngs of men.
His semblable, yea himself Timon disdains,
Destruction phang mankind, Earth yield me Roots,
Who seeks for better of thee, sawce his pallate
With thy most operant poison. What is here?
Gold? Yellow, glittering, precious Gold?
No gods, I am no idle Votarist,
Roots you clear Heavens. Thus much of this will make
Black, white; fowl, fair; wrong, right;
Base, Noble; Old, young; Coward, valiant.
Ha you gods! why this? what this you gods? why this
Will lugge your Priests and Servants from your sides:
Pluck stout mens pillows from below the heads.

This

This yellow Slave,
Will knit and break Religions, bleſſe th'accurſt,
Make the hoar Leproſie ador'd, place Theeves.
And give them title, knee, and approbation
With Senators on the Bench? This is it
That makes the wapen'd Widdow wed again;
She, whom the Spittle-houſe, and ulcerous ſores,
Would caſt the gorge at. This Embalmes and Spices
To th'April day again. Come damn'd earth,
Thou common whore of Mankind, that puts oddes
Among the rout of Nations, I will make thee
Do thy right Nature. March afarre off.
Ha? a Drumm? Th'art quick,
But yet ile bury thee: Thou'lt go (ſtrong Thief)
When Gouty keepers of thee cannot ſtand:
Nay ſtay thou out for earneſt.

Enter Alcibiades with Drum and Fife in warlike manner and Phrynia, and Timandra.

Alci. What art thou there? ſpeak.
Tim. A beaſt as thou art. The Canker gnaw thy heart
For ſhewing me again the eies of man.
Alci. What is thy name? is man ſo hateful to thee,
That art thy ſelf a man?
Tim. I am Miſanthropos, and hate Mankind.
For thy part, I do wiſh thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee ſomething.
Alci. I know thee well:
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd, and ſtrange.
Tim. I know thee too, and more then that I know thee
I not deſire to know, Follow thy Drumme,
With mans blood paint the ground Gules, Gules:
Religious Cannons, civil Laws are cruel,
Then what ſhould warre be? This fell whore of thine,
Hath in her more deſtruction then thy Sword,
For all her Cherubin look.
Phrin. Thy lips rot off.
Tim. I will not kiſſe thee, then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.
Alci. How came the Noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the Moon do's, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I could not, like the Moon,
There were no Sunnes to borrow of.
Alci. Noble Timon, what friendſhip may I do thee?
Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion,
Alci. What is it Timon?
Tim. Promiſe me friendſhip, but perform none.
If thou wilt not promiſe, the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou doſt perform, confound thee, for thou art a man.
Alci. I have heard in ſome ſort of thy Miſeries.
Tim. Thou ſawſt them when I had proſperity.
Alci. I ſee them now, then was a bleſſed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Harlots.
Timan. Is this th'Athenian Minion, whom the world,
Voyc'd ſo regardfully?
Tim. Art thou Timandra? Timan. Yes.
Tim. Be a whore ſtill, they love thee not that uſe thee, give them diſeaſes, leaving with thee their Luſt. Make uſe of thy ſalt hours, ſeaſon the ſlaves for Tubbes and Bathes, bring down Roſe-checkt youth to the Fubfaſt, and the Diet.
Timan. Hang thee Monſter.
Alci. Pardon him ſweet Timandra, for his wits
Are drown'd and loſt in his Calamities.
I have but little Gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof, doth daily make revolt
In my penurious Band. I have heard and griev'd
How curſed Athens, mindleſſe of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour ſtates
But for thy Sword and Fortune trode upon them.
Tim. I prethee beat thy Drum, and get thee gone.
Alci. I am thy friend, and pity thee deat Timon.
Tim. How doſt thou pitty him, whom thou doſt trou-
I had rather be alone. (ble,
Alci. Why fare thee well:
Here is ſome Gold for thee.
Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it.
Alci. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap.
Tim. Warr'ſt thou 'gainſt Athens?
Alci. I Timon, and have cauſe.
Tim. The gods confound them all in thy Conqueſt,
And thee after, when thou haſt conquer'd.
Alci. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That by killing of Villains
Thou was't born to conquer my Countrey.
Put up thy Gold. Go on, here's Gold, go on;
Be as a Planetary plague, whom Jove
Will ore ſome high-vic'd City hang his poiſon
In the ſick air: let not thy ſword skip one.
Pitty not honour'd Age for his white Beard,
He is an Uſurer. Strike me the counterfeit Matron,
It is her habit only, that is honeſt,
Her ſelf's a Bawd. Let not the Virgins, cheek
Make ſoft thy trenchant ſword: for thoſe Milk-papps
That through the window Barn bore at mens eies,
Are not within the Leaf of pitty writ,
But ſet them down horrible Traitors. Spare not the Babe
Whoſe dimpled ſmiles from fools exhauſt their mercy;
Think it a Baſtard, whom the Oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounced, the throat ſhall cut,
And mince it ſans remorſe. Swear againſt Objects,
Put Armour on thine ears, and on thine eies,
Whoſe proof, nor yels of Mothers, Maids, nor Babes
Nor ſight of Prieſts in holy veſtments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's Gold to pay thy Souldiers.
Make large confuſion: and thy fury ſpent,
Confounded be thy ſelf. Speak not, be gone.
Alci. Haſt thou gold yet, ile take the gold thou giveſt me, not all thy Counſell.
Tim. Doſt thou, or doſt thou not, Heavens curſe upon thee.
Both. Give us ſome Gold good Timon, haſt thou more?
Tim. Enough to make a Whore forſwear her Trade,
And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold up you Sluts
Your aprons mountant, you are not Othable,
Although I know you'l ſwear, terribly ſwear
Into ſtrong ſhudders, and to heavenly Agues
Th'immortal gods that hear you. Spare your Oaths:
Ile truſt to your conditions, be whores ſtill.
And he whoſe pious breath ſeeks to convert you,
Be ſtrong in whore, allure him, burn him up,
Let your cloſe fire predominate his ſmoak,
And be no turn-coats: yet may your pains ſix months
Be quite contrary. And Thatch
Your poor thin Roofs, with burthens of the dead,
(Some that were hang'd) no matter:
VVear them, betray with them; Whore ſtill.
Paint till a horſe may mire upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles.
Both. Well, more Gold, what then?

Beleev't

Beleev't that wee'l do any thing for Gold.
Tim. Conſumptions ſow
In hollow bones of man, ſtrike their ſharp ſhinnes,
And marre mens ſpurring. Crack the Lawyers voice,
That he may never more falſe Title plead,
Nor ſound his Quillets ſhrilly, Hoar the Flamen,
That ſcold'it againſt the quality of fleſh,
And not beleeves himſelf, Down with Noſe,
Down with it flat, take the Bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foreſee (bald
Smels from the general weal. Make curl'd pate Ruffians
And let the unſcarr'd Braggarts of the Warre
Derive ſome pain from you. Plague all,
That you activity may defeat and quell
The ſourſe of all Erection. There's more Gold.
Do you damne others, and let this damne you,
And ditches grave you all.
Both. More counſel with more Money, bounteous Timon.
Tim. More whore, more miſchief firſt, I have given you earneſt.
Alci. Strike up the Drum towards Athens, farewell Timon: if I thrive well, ile viſit thee again.
Tim. If I hope well, ile never ſee thee more.
Alci. I never did thee harm.
Tim. Yes, thou ſpok'ſt well of me.
Alci. Call'ſt thou that harm?
Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away,
And take thy Beagles with thee.
Alci. We but offend him, ſtrike. Exeunt.
Tim. That Nature being ſick of mans unkindneſſe
Should yet be hungry: Common Mother, thou
Whoſe womb unmeaſurable, and infinite breaſt
Teems and feeds all: whoſe ſelfe ſame mettle
Whereof thy proud Child (arrogant man) is puft,
Engenders the black Toad, and Adder blew,
The gilded Newt, and eyeleſſe venom'd worm,
With all th'abhorred Births below Criſpe heaven,
Whereon Hyperions quickning fire doth ſhine:
Yield him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate,
From forth thy plentious boſom, one poor root
Enſear thy Fertile, and Conceptions womb,
Let it no more bring out ingratefull man.
Goe great with Tygers, Dragons, Wolves, and Bears,
Teem with new Monſters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the Marbled Manſion all above
Never preſented. O, a Root, dear thanks:
Dry up thy Marrowes, Vines, and Plough-torn Leas,
Whereof ingrateful man with Liquoriſh draughts
And Morſels Unctious, greaſes his pure mind,
That from it all conſideration ſlips——

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague, plague.
Ape. I was directed hither. Men report,
Thou doſt affect my Manners, and doſt uſe them.
Tim. 'Tis then, becauſe thou doſt not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate, conſumption catch thee.
Ape. This is in thee a Nature but infected,
A poor unmanly Melancholly ſprung
From change of future. Why this Spade? this place?
This Slave like Habit, and theſe looks of Care?
Thy Flatterers yet wear Silk, drink Wine, lye ſoft,
Hugge their diſeaſed Perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not theſe Woods,
By putting on the cunning of a Carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and ſeek to thrive
By that which has undone thee; hindge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt obſerve
Blow off thy Cap: praiſe his moſt vicious ſtrain,
And call it excellent: thou waſt told thus:
Thou gav'ſt thine ears (like Tapſters, that bid welcome)
To knaves, and all approachers: 'Tis moſt juſt
That thou turn Raſcal, hadſt thou wealth again,
Raſcalls ſhould hav't. Do not aſſume my likeneſſe.
Tim. Were I like thee, I'de throw away my ſelf.
Ape. Thou haſt caſt away thy ſelf, being like thy ſelf
A Madman ſo long, now a Fool: what think'ſt
That the bleak Air, thy boiſterous Chamberlain
Will put thy Shirt on warm? Will theſe moiſt Trees,
That have out-liv'd the Eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'ſt out? Will the cold Brook
Candied with Ice, Cawdle thy Morning taſte
To cure thy o're-nights ſurfet? Call the Creatures,
Whoſe naked Natures live in all the ſpight
Of wreekful Heaven, whoſe bare unhouſed Trunks,
To the conflicting Elements expos'd
Anſwer meer Nature: bid them flatter thee.
O thou ſhalt find.
Tim. A fool of thee: depart.
Ape. I love thee better now then ere I did.
Tim. I hate thee worſe.
Ape. Why?
Tim. Thou flatter'ſt miſery.
Ape. I flatter not, but ſay thou art a Caytiffe.
Tim. Why doſt thou ſeek me out?
Ape. To vex thee.
Tim. Alwaies a Villains Office, or a Fools.
Doſt pleaſe thy ſelf in't?
Ape. I.
Tim. What, a knave too?
Ape. If thou didſt put this ſowre cold habit on
To caſtigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Doſt it enforcedly: Thou'dſt Courtier be again
Wert thou not Beggar: willing miſery
Out-lives: in certain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling ſtill, never compleat:
The other, at high wiſh: beſt ſtate Contentleſſe,
Hath a diſtracted and moſt wretched being,
Worſe then the worſt, content.
Thou ſhouldſt deſire to die, being miſerable.
Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miſerable.
Thou art a Slave, whom Fortunes tender arme
With favour never claſpt: but bred a Dogge.
Hadſt thou like us from our firſt ſwath proceeded,
The ſweet degrees that this brief world affords,
To ſuch as may the paſſive druggs of it
Freely command'ſt: thou wouldſt have plung'd thy ſelf
In general Riot, melted down thy youth
In different beds of Luſt, and never learn'd
The Icie precepts of reſpect, but followed
The Sugred game before thee. But my ſelf
Who had the world as my Confectionary,
The mouths, the tongues, the eies, the hearts of men,
At duty more then I could frame employments:
That numberleſſe upon thee ſtuck, as leaves
Do on the Oak, have with one Winters bruſh
Fell from their boughs, and left me open bare,
For every ſtorm that blows. I to bear this,
That never knew but better, is ſome burthen
Thy Nature did commence in ſufferance, Time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why ſhouldſt thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee. What haſt thou given?

If thou wilt curſe: thy Father (that poor ragge)
Muſt be thy ſubject; who in ſpight put ſtuffe
To ſome ſhe-Begger, and compounded thee
Poor Rogue, hereditary. Hence be gone,
If thou hadſt not been born the worſt of men,
Thou hadſt been a knave and flatterer.

Ape. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. I, that I am not thee.

Ape. I, that I was no Prodigall.

Tim. I, that I am one now.
VVere all the wealth I have ſhut up in thee,
I'ld give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone:
That the whole life of Athens were in this,
Thus would I eat it.

Ape. Here, I will mend thy feaſt.

Tim. Firſt mend thy company, take away thy ſelf.

Ape. So I ſhall mend mine own, by th'lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended ſo, it is but botcht;
If not, I would it were.

Ape. VVhat wouldſt thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlewind: if thou wilt,
Tell them there I have Gold, look, ſo I have.

Ape. Here is no uſe for Gold.

Tim. The beſt, and trueſt:
For here it ſleeps, and do's no hyred harm.

Ape. Where ly'ſt a nights Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.
Where feed'ſt thou a daies Apemantus?

Ape. Where my ſtomack finds meat, or rather where I eat it.

Tim. Would poiſon were obedient, and knew my mind.

Ape. Where wouldſt thou ſend it?

Tim. To ſawce thy diſhes.

Ape. The middle of humanity thou never kneweſt, but the extremity of both ends. When thou waſt in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mockt thee, for too much curioſity: in thy Rags thou knoweſt none, but art deſpis'd for the contrary. There's a Medler for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Ape. Doſt hate a Medler?

Tim. I, though it look like thee.

Ape. And th'hadſt hated Medlers ſooner, thou ſhould'ſt have loved thy ſelf better now. What man did'ſt thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who without thoſe means thou talk'ſt of, didſt thou ever know belov'd?

Ape. My ſelf.

Tim. I underſtand thee, thou hadſt ſome means to keep a Dog.

Ape. What things in the world canſt thou neereſt compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women neereſt, but men: men are the things themſelves. What wouldſt thou do with the world Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Ape. Give it the Beaſts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldſt thou have thy ſelf fall in the confuſion of men, and remain a Beaſt with the Beaſts.

Ape. I Timon.

Tim. A beaſtly ambition, which the Gods grant thee t'attain to. If thou wert the Lyon, the Fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the Lamb, the Fox would eat thee: if thou wert the Fox, the Lyon would ſuſpect thee, when peradventue thou wert accus'd by the Aſſe: if thou wert the Aſſe, thy dulneſſe would torment thee: and ſtill thou liv'dſt but as a Breakfaſt to the Wolfe. If thou wert the Wolfe, thy greedineſſe would afflict thee, and oft thou ſhouldſt hazard thy life for thy dinner. Wert thou the Unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own ſelf the conqueſt of thy fury. Wert thou a Bear, thou would'ſt be kill'd by the Horſe: wert thou a Horſe, thou would'ſt be ſeiz'd by the Leopard: wert thou a Leopard, thou wert German to the Lion, and the ſpots of thy kindred, were Jurors on thy life. All thy ſafety were remotion, and thy defence abſence. What Beaſt couldſt thou be, that were not ſubject to a Beaſt: and what a Beaſt art thou already, that ſee'ſt not thy loſſe in transformation.

Ape. If thou couldſt pleaſe me
With ſpeaking to me thou might'ſt
Have hit upon it here.
The Common-wealth of Athens is become
A Forreſt of Beaſts.

Tim. How has the Aſſe broke the wall, that thou art out of the City.

Ape. Yonder comes a Poet and a Painter:
The Plague of Company light upon thee:
I will fear to catch it, and give way.
When I know not what elſe to do,
Ile ſee thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee,
Thou ſhalt be welcome.
I had rather be a Beggars Dog
Then Apemantus.

Ape. Thou art the Cap
Of all the Fools alive.

Tim. VVould thou wert clean enough
To ſpit upon.

Ape. A plague on thee,
Thou art too bad to curſe.

Tim. All Villains
That do ſtand by thee, are pure.

Ape. There is no Leproſie,
But what thou ſpeak'ſt.

Tim. If I name thee, ile beat thee;
But I ſhould infect my hands.

Ape. I would my tongue
Could rot them off.

Tim. Away thou iſſue of a mangy dog.
Choller does kill me,
That thou art alive, I ſwound to ſee thee.

Ape. VVould thou would'ſt burſt.

Tim. Away thou tedious Rogue, I am ſorry I ſhall loſe a ſtone by thee.

Ape. Beaſt.

Tim. Slave.

Ape. Toad.

Tim. Rogue, Rogue, Rogue.
I am ſick of this falſe world, and will love nought
But even the meer neceſſities upon't:
Then Timon preſently prepare thy grave:
Lye where the light Foam of the Sea may beat
Thy grave-ſtone daily, make thine Epitaph,
That death in me, at others lives may laugh.
O thou ſweet King-killer, and dear divorce
Twixt natural Sunne and fire: thou bright defiler
Of Himens pureſt bed, thou valiant Mars
Thou ever, young, freſh, loved, and delicate wooer,
VVhoſe bluſh doth thawe the conſecrated Snow
That lies on Dians lap.
Thou viſible God,
That ſouldreſt cloſe Impoſſibilities.
And mak'ſt them kiſſe; that ſpeak'ſt with every Tongue

To every purpose; O thou touch of hearts,
Think thy slave-man rebels, and by thy vertue
Set them into confounding oddes, that Beasts
May have the world in Empire.
Ape. VVould 'twere so,
But not till I am dead. Ile say th'hast Gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd too shortly.
Tim. Throng'd too?
Ape. I.
Tim. Thy back I prythee.
Ape. Live, and love thy misery.
Tim. Long live so, and so die. I am quit.
Ape. Mo things like men;
Eat Timon, and abhor them. Exit Apeman.

Enter the Bandetti.

1. VVhere should he have this Gold? It is some poor Fragment, some slender Ort of his remainder: the meer want of Gold, and the falling from of his Friends, drove him into this Melancholly.
2 It is nois'd
He hath a Mass of Treasure.
3. Let us make the assay upon him, if he care not for't, he will supply us easily: if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?
2 True: for he bears it not about him;
'Tis hid.
1 Is not this he?
All. VVhere?
2 'Tis his description.
3 He? I know him.
All. Save thee Timon.
Tim. Now Thieves.
All. Soldiers, not Thieves.
Tim. Both too, and womens Sons.
All. VVe are not thieves, but men
That much do want.
Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat:
VVhy should you want? Behold, the Earth hath Roots:
Within this Mile break forth an hundred Springs:
The Oakes bear Mast, the Briers Scarlet Hips,
The bounteous Huswife Nature, on each bush,
Layes her full Mess before you. VVant? why want?
1 VVe cannot live on Grass, on Beries, VVater,
As Beasts, and Birds, and Fishes.
Ti. Nor on the Beasts themselves, the Birds and Fishes,
You must eat men. Yet thankes I must you con,
That you are thieves profest: that you work not
In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves
Here's Gold. Go, suck the subtle bloud o'th Grape,
Till the high Feaver seeth your Bloud to Froth,
And so scape hanging. Trust not the Physitian,
His Antidotes are poyson, and he slayes
Moe then you Rob: Take wealth, and live together,
Do Villain do, since you protest to do't.
Like workmen, Ile example you with Theevery:
The Sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast Sea. The Moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire, she snatches from the Sun.
The Sea's a thief, whose liquid Surge, resolves
The Moon into Salt teares. The Earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolne
From gen'ral excrement: Each thing's a thief.
The Lawes, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Ha's uncheck'd theft. Love not your selves, away,
Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut throates;
All that you meet are thieves: to Athens go,
Break open shops, nothing can you steal
But thieves do lose it: steal less, for this I give you
And Gold confound you howsoere: Amen.
3 H'as almost charm'd me from my Profession, by perswading me to it.
1 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us not to have us thrive in our mystery.
2 Ile believe him as an Enemy,
And give over my Trade.
1 Let us first see peace in Athens, there is no time so miserable but a man may be true. Exeunt Thieves.

Enter the Steward to Timon.

Stew. Oh you Gods!
Is yond'd despis'd and ruinous man my Lord?
Full of decay and failing? Oh Monument
And wonder of good deeds, evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour has desp'rate want made?
What vilder thing upon the earth, then Friends,
Who can bring Noblest minds, to basest ends,
How rarely does it meet with this times guise,
When man was wisht to love his Enemies:
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischiefe me, then those that do.
Has caught me in his eye, I will present my honest grief
Unto him; and as my Lord, still serve him with my life.
My dearest Master.
Tim. Away: what art thou?
Stew. Have you forgot me, Sir?
Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men.
Then if thou grunt'st th'art a man,
I have forgot thee.
Stew. An honest poor Servant of yours.
Tim. Then I know thee not:
I nev'r had honest man about me, I all,
I kept were Knaves, to serve in meat to Villaines.
Stew. The Gods are witness,
Never did poor Steward wear a truer grief
For his undone Lord, then mine eyes for you.
Tim. What dost thou weep?
Come nearer, then I love thee
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind: whose eyes do never give,
But through Lust and Laughter: pitie's sleeping:
Strange times that weep with laughing, not with weeping.
Stew. I beg of you to know me, good my Lord,
T'accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth lasts,
To entertain me as your Steward still.
Tim. Had I a Steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable?
It almost turnes my dangerous Nature wild.
Let me behold thy face: Surely, this man
Was born of woman.
Forgive my general, and exceptless rashness
You perpetual sober Gods. I do proclaim
One honest man: Mistake me not, but one:
No more I pray, and he's a Steward.
How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thy self: But all save thee,
I fell with Curses.
Me thinkes thou art more honest now then wise:
For, by oppressing and betraying me,

Thou might'ſt have ſooner got another Service:
For many ſo arrive at ſecond Maſters,
Upon their firſt Lords neck. But tell me true,
(For I muſt ever doubt, though ne're ſo ſure)
Is not thy kindneſs ſubtle, covetous,
If not a Uſuring kindneſs, and as rich men deal Gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Stew. No my moſt worthy Maſter, in whoſe breſt
Doubt, and ſuſpect (alas) are plac'd too late:
You ſhould have fear'd falſe times, when you did Feaſt.
Suſpect ſtill comes where an eſtate is leaſt.
That which I ſhew, Heaven knowes, is meerly Love,
Duty, and Zeal, to your unmatched mind,
Care of your Food and Living, and believe it,
My moſt honour'd Lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or preſent, I'de exchange
For this one wiſh, that you had power and wealth
To requite me, by making rich your ſelf.

Tim. Look thee 'tis ſo: thou ſingly honeſt man,
Here take: the Gods out of my miſery,
Ha's ſent thee treaſure. Go, live rich and happy.
But thus condition'd: Thou ſhalt build from men:
Hate all, curſe all, ſhew Charity to none,
But let the famiſht fleſh ſlide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the Beggar. Give to dogs
What thou denyeſt to men. Let Priſons ſwallow 'em,
Debts wither 'em to nothing, be men like blaſted woods
And may Diſeaſes lick up their falſe bloods,
And ſo farewel, and thrive.

Stew. O let me ſtay and comfort you my Maſter:

Tim. If thou hat'ſt Curſes
Stay not: flee, whil'ſt thou art bleſt and free:
Ne're ſee thou man, and let me ne're ſee thee. Exit.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far
Where he abi des.

Poet. What's to be thought of him?
Does the Rumour hold for true,
That he's ſo full of Gold?

Pain. Certain.
Alcibiades reports it: Phrinia and Timandra
Had Gold of him, he likewiſe enrich'd
Poor ſtrugling Soldiers, with great quantity.
'Tis ſaid, he gave unto his Steward
A mighty Sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his,
Has been but a try for his Friends.

Pain. Nothing elſe:
You ſhall ſee him a Palm in Athens again,
And flouriſh with the higheſt:
Therefore, 'tis not amiſs, we tender our loves
To him, in this ſuppos'd diſtreſs of his:
It will ſhew honeſtly in us,
And is very likely to load our purpoſes
With what they travail for,
If it be a juſt and true report, that goes
Of his having.

Poet. What have you now
To preſent unto him?

Painter. Nothing at this this time
But my Viſitation: only I will promiſe him
An excellent Piece.

Poet. I muſt ſerve him ſo too;
Tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Painter. Good as the beſt
Promiſing, is the very Ayr o'th' Time;
It opens the eyes of Expectation.
Performance, is ever the duller for his act,
And but in the plainer and ſimpler kind of people,
The deed of Saying is quite out of uſe.
To promiſe, is moſt Courtly, and faſhionable;
Performance, is a kind of Will or Teſtament
Which argues a great ſickneſs in his judgment
That makes it.

Enter Timon from his Cave.

Timon. Excellent Workman.
Thou canſt not paint a man ſo bad
As is thy ſelf.

Poet. I am thinking
What I ſhall ſay I have provided for him:
It muſt be a perſonating of himſelf:
A Satyre againſt the ſoftneſs of Proſperity,
With a Diſcovery of the infinite Flatteries
That follow youth and opulency.

Timon. Muſt thou needs
Stand for a Villain in thine own Work?
Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men?
Do ſo, I have Gold for thee.

Poet. Nay let's ſeek him.
Then do we ſin againſt our own eſtate.
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Painter. True:
When the day ſerves before black-corner'd night;
Find what thou want'ſt, by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. Ile meet you at the turn:
What a God's Gold, that he is worſhipt.
In a baſer Temple, then where Swine feed?
'Tis thou that rigg'ſt the Bark, and plow'ſt the Fome,
Setleſt admired reverence in a Slave,
To thee be worſhipt, and thy Saints for aye:
Be crown'd with Plagues, that thee alone obey.
Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail worthy Timon.

Pain. Our late Noble Maſter.

Timon. Have I once liv'd
To ſee two honeſt men?

Poet. Sir:
Having often of your open Bounty taſted,
Hearing you were retyr'd, your Friends faln off,
Whoſe thankleſs Natures (O abhorred Spirits)
Not all the whips of Heaven, are large enough,
What, to you,
Whoſe Star-like Nobleneſs gave life and influence
To their whole being? I am rapt, and cannot cover
The monſtrous bulk of this Ingratitude
With any ſize of words.

Timon. Let it go,
Naked men may ſee't the better:
You that are honeſt, by being what you are,
Make them beſt ſeen, and known.

Pain. He, and my ſelf
Have travel'd in the great ſhower of your gifts,
And ſweetly felt it.

Timon. I, you are honeſt men.

Paint. We are hither come
To offer you our ſervice.

Timon. Moſt honeſt men:

Why how shall I requite you?
Can you eat Roots, and drink cold water, no?
Both. What we can do,
Wee'l do, to do you service.
Tim. Y'are honest men,
Y'nave heard that I have Gold
I am sure you have, speak truth, y'are honest men.
Pain. So it is said my Noble Lord, but therefore Came not my Friend, nor I.
Tim. Good honest man: thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens, tha'rt indeed the best,
Thou counterfet'st most lively.
Pain. So, so, my Lord.
Tim. E'ne so sir as I say. And for thy fiction,
Why thy Verse swells with stuffe so fine and smooth,
That thou art even Naturall in thine Art.
But for all this (my honest Natur'd friends)
I must needs say you have a little fault,
Marry 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
You take much pains to mend.
Both. Beseech your Honour
To make it known to us.
Tim. You'l take it ill.
Both. Most thankfully, my Lord.
Tim. Will you indeed?
Both. Doubt it not worthy Lord.
Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,
That mightily deceives you.
Both. Do we my Lord?
Tim. I, and you hear him cogge,
See him dissemble,
Know his grosse patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom, yet remain assur'd
That he's a made-up Villain.
Pain. I know none such, my Lord.
Poet. Nor I.
Tim. Look you,
I love you well, ile give you Gold
Rid me these Villains from your companies;
Hang them, or stab them, drown them in draught,
Confound them by some course, and come to me,
Ile give you Gold enough
Both. Name them my Lord, let's know them.
Tim. You that way, and you this:
But two in company:
Each man apart, all single, and alone,
Yet an arch Villain keeps him company:
If where thou art, two villains shall not be,
Come not neer him. If thou would'st not reside
But where one villain is, then him abandon.
Hence, pack, there's Gold, ye came for Gold ye slaves:
You have work for me, ; there's payment, thence,
You are an Alcumist, make Gold of that:
Out Rascall dogges. Exeunt.

Enter Steward, and two Senators.

Stew. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon:
For he is set so onely to himself,
That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.
1 Sen. Bring us to his Cave.
It is our part and promise to th' Athenians
To speak with Timon.
2 Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas Time and Greefs
That fram'd him thus. Time with his fairer hand,
Offering the Fortunes of his former daies,
The former man may make him: bring us to him
And chance it as it may.
Stew. Here is his Cave:
Peace and content be here, Timon, Timon,
Look out, and speak to friends: Th'Athenians
By two of their most reverend Senate greet thee:
Speak to them Noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his Cave.

Tim. Thou Sun that comfort burn,
Speak and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister, and each falsé
Be as a Catherizing to the root o'th tongue
Consuming it with speaking.
1 Worthy Timon.
Tim. Of none but such as you,
And you of Timon.
1. The Senators of Athens greet thee Timon.
Tim. I thank them,
And would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.
1. O forget
What we are sorry for our selves in thee:
The Senators, with one consent of love,
Intreat thee back to Athens, who have thought
On special Dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.
2. They confesse
Toward thee, forgetfulnesse too general grosse;
Which now the publike Body, which doth seldom,
Play the re-canter, feeling in it self
A lack of Timons aid, hath since withall
Of it own fall, restraining aid to Timon,
And send forth us to make their sorrowed render,
Together, with a recompence more fruitful
Then their offence can weigh down by the Dramme,
I even such heaps and summes of Love and Wealth,
As shall to thee blot out, what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee, the figures of their Love,
Ever to read them thine.
Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprize me to the very brink of tears;
Lend me a fools heart, and a womans eies,
And ile beweep these comforts, worthy Senators.
1. Therefore so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens, thine and ours to take
The Captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allowed with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades h'approaches wild
Who like a Boar too savage, doth root up
His Countreys peace.
2. And shakes his threatning Sword
Against the walls of Athens.
1. Therefore Timon.
Tim. Well sir, I will: therefore I will sir thus:
If Alcibiades kill my Countreymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by th'Beards,
Giving our holy Virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd warre:
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it.

In pitty of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him tak't at worst: For their knives care not,
While you have throats to answer. For my self,
There's not a whittle in th'unruly Camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverendst Throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous Gods,
As Theeves to Keepers.

Stew. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why I was writing of my Epitaph,
It will be seen to morrow. My long sickness
Of Health, and Living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still,
Be Alcibiades your plague; you his,
And last so long enough.

1. We speak in vain,

Tim. But yet I love my Countrey, and am not
One that rejoyces in the common wrack,
As common bruit doth put it.

1. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving Countrey-men.

1. These words become your lips as they passe thorow them.

2. And enter into our ears, like great Triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them,
And tell them, that to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of Hostile strokes, their Aches losses,
Their pangs of Love, with other incident throwes
That Natures fragile vessell doth sustain
In lifes uncertain voyage, I will some kindnesse do them,
Ile teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades wrath.

1. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a Tree which grows here in my Close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it. Tell my Friends,
Tell Athens, in the frequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that who so please
To stop Affliction, let him take his haste;
Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe,
And hang himself. I pray you do my greeting.

Stew. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall Find him.

Tim. Come not to me again, but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting Mansion
Upon the Beached Verge of the salt Flood,
Which once a day with his embossed Froth
The turbulent Surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your Oracle:
Lips, let four words go by, and Language end:
What is amisse, Plague and Infection mend.
Graves onely be mens works, and Death their gain;
Sunne, hide thy beams, Timon hath done his Raign.

Exit Timon.

1. His discontents are unremoveably coupled to Nature.

2. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our deer peril.

1. It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

Enter two other Senators, with a Messenger.

1. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his Files
As full as thy report?

Mes. I have spoke the least.
Besides his expedition promises present approach.

2. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mes. I met a Currier, one mine ancient friend,
Whom though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like Friends. This man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timons Cave,
With Letters of intreaty, which imported
His Fellowship i'th'cause against your City,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter the other Senators.

1. Here come our Brothers.

3. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The Enemies Drumme is heard and fearful scouring
Doth choak the air with Dust: In, and prepare,
Ours is the fall I fear, our foes the Snare. Exeunt.

Enter a Souldier in the woods seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description this should be the place.
Who's here? Speak hoa. No answer? What is this?
Tymon is dead, who hath out-strecht his span,
Some Beast read this; There do's not live a Man.
Dead sure, and this his Grave, what's on this Tomb?
I cannot read: the Character ile take with wax,
Our Captain hath in every figure skill,
An ag'd interpreter, though young in daies:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. Exit.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his powers before Athens.

Alc. Sound to this Coward and lascivious Town,
Our terrible approach.

Sounds a parly.

The Senators appear upon the walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all Licencious measure, making your wills
The scope of Justice. Till now my self and such
As slept within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our traverst Arms, and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,
When crouching Marrow in the bearer strong
Cries (of it self) no more: Now breathlesse wrong,
Shall sit and pant in your great Chairs of ease,
And pursie Insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble and young;
When thy first griefs were but a meer conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause to fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages Balme,
To wipe out our ingratitude, with Loves
Above their quantity.

2. So did we wooe
Transformed Timon to our Cities love
By humble Message, and by promist means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of warre.

1. These walls of ours,
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd your grief: Nor are they such,
That these great Towres, Trophees, & Schools should fall
For privare faults in them.

2. Nor are they living

Who were the motives that you first went out,
Shame (that they wanted cunning in excess)
Hath broke their hearts, March, Noble Lord,
Into our City with thy Banners spred,
By decimation and a tythed death;
If thy Revenges hunger for that Food
Which Nature loathes, take thou the destin'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted dye,
Let die the spotted.

1 All have not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take,
On those that are, Revenge: Crimes, like Lands
Are not inherited, then dear Countryman,
Bring in thy rankes, but leave without thy rage,
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and those Kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended, like a Shepheard,
Approach the Fold, and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2 What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Then hew to't with thy Sword.

1 Set but thy foot
Against our rampyr'd gates, and they shall ope:
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou't enter Friendly.

2. Throw thy Glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our Confusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Town till we
Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alc. Then there's my Glove,
Descend and open your uncharged Ports,
Those Enemies of Timons, and mine own
Whom you your selves shall set out for reproof,
Fall and no more; and to atone your feares
With my more Noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of Regular Justice in your Cities bounds,
But shall be remedied by your publick Lawes
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most Nobly spoken.

Alc. Descend, and keep your words.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Noble General, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd upon the very hem o'th' Sea,
And on his Gravestone, this Insculpture which
With wax I brought away: whose soft Impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcibiades reades the Epitaph.

Here lies a wretched Coarse, of wretched Soul bereft,
Seek not my name: A Plague consume you, Wicks left:
Here lie I Timon, who alliving men, did hate,
Pass by, and curse thy fill, but stay not here thy gate.

These well expresse in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhord'st in us our humane griefes,
Scorn'd'st our Braines flow, and those our droplets, which
From niggard Nature fall; yet Rich Conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low Grave: on faults forgiven. Dead
Is Noble Timon, of whose Memory
Hereafter more. Bring me into your City,
And I will use the Olive with my Sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war, make each
Prescribe to other, as each others Leach.
Let our Drums strike. Exeunt.

THE TRAGEDY OF JULIUS CÆSAR.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Flavius, Murellus, and certain Commoners over the Stage.

Flavius.

HEnce: home you idle Creatures, get you home:
Is this a Holiday? What, know you not (Being Mechanicall) you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day, without the signe
Of your Profession? Speak, what Trade art thou?

Car. Why Sir, a Carpenter.

Mur. Where is thy Leather apron, and thy Rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparrel on?
You sir, what Trade are you?

Cobl. Truly Sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but as you would say, a Cobler.

Mur. But what Trade art thou? answer me directly.

Cobl. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may use with a safe Conscience, which is indeed Sir, a mender of bad soules.

Fla. What Trade thou knave? Thou naughty knave, what Trade?

Cobl. Nay I beseech you Sir, be not out with me: yet if you be out Sir I can mend you.

Mur. What meanst thou by that: Mend me, thou sawcy Fellow?

Cobl. Why sir, Cobble you.

Fla. Thou art a Cobler art thou?

Cobl. Truely sir, all that I live by is with the Aule: I meddle with no Tradesmans matters, nor womans matters; but withall I am indeed Sir a Surgeon to old Shooes, when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trode upon Neats-Leather, have gone upon my handy work.

Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Cobl. Truly sir, to wear out their shooes, to get my self into more work. But indeed sir we make Holy-day to see Cæsar, and to rejoyce in his Triumph.

Mur. Wherefore rejoyce?
What Conquest brings he home?
What Tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in Captive bonds his Chariot wheels.
You Blocks, you stones, you worse then senseless things:
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft?
Have you climb'd up to Walls and Battlements,
To Towers and Windows? Yea to Chimney tops,
Your Infants in your Arms, and there have sate
The live-long day with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey passe the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his Chariot but appear,
Have you not made an Universal shout,
That Tyber trembled underneath her banks
To hear the replication of your sounds,
Made in her Concave Shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now cull out a Holy-day?
And do you now strew Flowers in his way,
That comes in Triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone,
Runne to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the Gods to intermit the Plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Fla. Go, go, good Countrey-men, and for this fault
Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears
Into the Channell, till the lowest streame
Do kisse the most exalted Shores of all.

Exeunt all the Commoners.

See where their basest mettle be not mov'd,
They vanish tongue-ty'd in their guiltinesse:
Go you down that way towards the Capitoll,
This way will I: Disrobe the Images,
If you do find them deckt with Ceremonies.

Mur. May we do so?
You know it is the Feast of Lupercall.

Fla. It is no matter, let no Images
Be hung with the Cæsars Trophies: Ile about,
And drive away the Vulgar from the streets;
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing Feathers, pluckt from Cæsars wing,
Will make him flye an ordinary pitch,
Who else would sore above the view of men.
And keep us all in servile fearfulnesse. Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, Antony for the Course, Calphurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, Caska, a Soothsayer: after them Murellus and Flavius.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Cask. Peace ho, Cæsar speaks.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Calp. Here my Lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonio's way,
When he doth run his course. Antonio.

Ant. Cæsar, my Lord.

Cæs. Forget not in your speed Antonio,
To touch Calphurnia: for our Elders say,

The

The Barren touched in, this holy chase,
Shake off their sterril curse.
Ant. I shall remember
When Cæsar saies Do this; it is perform'd.
Cæs. Set on, and leave no Ceremony out.
Sooth. Cæsar.
Cæs. Ha? Who calls?
Cask. Bid every noise be still: peace yet again.
Cæs. Who is it in the presse, that calls on me?
I hear a Tongue shriller then all the Musick
Cry, Cæsar: Speak, Cæsar is turn'd to hear.
Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.
Cæs. What man is that?
Br. A Sooth-sayer bids you beware the Ides of March.
Cæs. Set him before me, let me see his face,
Cassi. Fellow, come from the throng, look upon Cæsar.
Cæs. What saist thou to me now? Speak once again.
Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.
Cæs. He is a Dreamer let us leave him: Passe.
Sennet. Exeunt. Manet Brut. & Cass.
Cassi. Will you go see the order of the course?
Brut. Not I.
Cassi. I pray you do.
Brut. I am not Gamesom: I do lack some part
Of that quick Spirit that is in Antony:
Let me not hinder Cassius your desires;
Ile leave you.
Cassi. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eies that gentlenesse
And shew of Love, as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn, and too strange a hand
Over your Friends, that loves you.
Bru. Cassius.
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veyl'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my Countenance
Meerly upon my self. Vexed I am
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions onely proper to my self,
Which give some soyle (perhaps) to my Behaviours:
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd
(Among which number Cassius be you one)
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Then that poor Brutus with himself at warre,
Forgets the shews of Love to other men.
Cassi. Then Brutus, I have much mistook your passion,
By means whereof, this Brest of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy Cogitations.
Tell me good Brutus, can you see your face?
Brut. No Cassius:
For the eye sees not himself, but by reflection,
By some other things.
Cassius. 'Tis just,
And it is very much lamented Brutus,
That you have no such Mirrors, as will turn
Your hidden worthinesse into your eye,
That you might see your shadow:
I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Cæsar) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this ages yoak,
Have wish'd that Noble Brutus had his eies.
Bru. Into what dangers would you
Lead me Cassius?
That you would have me seek into my self,
For that which is not in me?
Cæs. Therefore good Brutus be prepar'd to hear;
And since you know you cannot see your self
So well as by Reflection; I your Glasse,
Will modestly discover to your self
That of your self, which yet you know not of,
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus
Were I a common Laughter, or did use
To stale with ordinary Oaths my Love
To every new Protester: if you know,
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandall them: or if you know,
That I professe in Banqueting
To all the Rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish and Shout.

Bru. What means this Showting?
I do fear the people choose Cæsar
For their King.
Cassi. I do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.
Bru. I would not Cassius, yet I love him well:
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it, that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the general good,
Set Honour in one eye, and death i'th'other,
And I will look on both indifferently:
For let the Gods so speed me, as I love
The name of Honour, more then I fear death.
Cassi. I know that vertue to be in you Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour,
Well, Honor is the subject of my Story:
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life: But my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing, as I my self.
I was born free as Cæsar, so were you,
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the Winters cold, as well as he.
For once upon a Raw and Gusty day,
The troubled Tyber chasing with her Shores,
Cæsar saies to me, dar'st thou Cassius now
Leap in with me into this angry Flood,
And swim to yonder Point? Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,
And bad him follow: so indeed he did.
The Torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty Sinews, throwing it aside,
And stemming it with hearts of Controversie.
But ere we could arrive the Point propos'd,
Cæsar cry'd. Help me Cassius, or I sink.
I (as Æneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the Flames of Troy, upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear) so, from the waves of Tyber
Did I the tired Cæsar: And this Man
Is now become a God, and Cassius is
A wretched Creature, and must bend his body,
If Cæsar carelesly but nod on him.
He had a Feaver when he was in Spain
And when the Fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: Tis true, this God did shake,
His Coward lips did from their colour flye,
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the World,
Did loose his Lustre: I did hear him groan:
I, and that tongue of his that bad the Romans
Mark him, and writ his Speeches in their Books,
Alas, it cryed, Give me some drink Titinius,

As

As a sick Girle: Ye Gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the Majestick world,
And bear the Palm alone.
Shout. Flourish.
Bru. Another generall shout?
I do believe, that these applauses are
For some new Honours, that are heap'd on Cæsar.
Cassi. Why man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find our selves dishonourable Graves.
Men at some time, are Masters of their Fates.
The fault (dear Brutus) is not in our Stars,
But in our Selves, that we are underlings.
Brutus and Cæsar: What should be in that Cæsar?
Why should that name be sounded more then yours
Write them together: yours is as fair a Name:
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well.
Weigh them, it is as heavy: Conjure with'em man,
Brutus will start a Spirit as soon as Cæsar.
Now in the names of all the Gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd.
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble Bloods.
When went there by an Age, since the great Flood,
But it was fam'd with more then with one man?
When could they say (till now) that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walkes incompast but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and Room enough
When there is in it but one only man.
O! you and I, have heard our Fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
Th'eternal Devil to keep his State in Rome,
As easily as a King.
Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous:
What you would work me to, I have some aim:
How I have thought of this, and of these times
I shall recount hereafter: For this present,
I would not so (with love I might entreat you)
Be any further mov'd: What you have said,
I will consider: what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time
Both meet to hear, and answer such high things.
Till then my Noble Friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a Villager,
Then to repute himself a Son of Rome
Under these hard Conditions, as this time
Is like to lay upon us.
Cassi. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much shew of fire from Brutus.

Enter Cæsar and his Train.

Bru. The Games are done,
And Cæsar is returning.
Cassi. As they pass by,
Pluck Casca by the Sleeve,
And he will (after his sowr fashion) tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to day.
Bru. I will do so: but look you Cassius,
The angry spot doth blow on Cæsars brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train;
Calphurnia's Cheek is pale, and Cicero
Looks with such Ferret, and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol
Being crost in Conference, by some Senators.
Cassi. Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Cæs. Antonio.
Ant. Cæsar.
Cæs. Let me have men about me that are fat,
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep a nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look,
He thinkes too much: such men are dangerous.
Ant. Fear him not Cæsar, he's not dangerous,
He is a Noble Roman, and well given.
Cæs. Would he were fatter; But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid,
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,
He is a great Observer, and he lookes
Quite through the Deeds of men. He loves no Playes,
As thou dost Antony: he heares no Musick:
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing,
Such men as he, be never at hearts ease
Whiles they behold a greater then themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd,
Then what I fear: for alwaies I am Cæsar,
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly, what thou think'st of him.
Sennit.
Exeunt Cæsar and his Train.
Cask. You pul'd me by the Cloak, would you speak with me?
Bru. I Casca, tell us what hath chanc'd to day
That Cæsar lookes so sad.
Cask. Why you were with him, were you not?
Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.
Casca. Why there was a Crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand thus, and then the people fell a shouting.
Bru. What was the second noyse for?
Cask. Why for that too.
Cassi. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?
Cask. Why for that too.
Bru. Was the Crown offer'd him thrice?
Cask. I marry was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler then other; and at every putting by, mine honest Neighbours shouted.
Cæs. Who offer'd him the Crown?
Cask. Why Antony.
Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.
Casca. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it: It were meer Foolery, I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a Crown, yet 'twas not a Crown neither, 'twas one of these Coronets: and as I told you, he put it by once: but for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again: then he put it by again: but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time: he put it the third time by, and still as he refus'd it, the rabblement howted, and clapp'd their chopt hands, and threw up their sweaty Nightcaps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath, because Cæsar refus'd the Crown, that it had (almost) choaked Cæsar: for he swounded, and fell down at it: And for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my Lips, and receiving the bad Ayr.
Cassi.

Cassi. But soft I pray you: what did Cæsar swound?

Cask. He fell down in the Market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Brut. 'Tis very like he hath the falling sickness.

Cassi. No, Cæsar hath it not: but you, and I. And honest Caska, we have the falling sickness.

Cask. I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down, if the tag-rag people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleas'd, and displeas'd them, as they use to do the Players in the Theatre, I am no true man.

Brut. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Cask. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common Heard was glad he refus'd the Crown, he pluckt me ope his Doublet, and offer'd them his Throat to cut: and I had been a man of any Occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to Hell among the Rogues, and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done, or said any thing amiss, he desir'd their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four Wenches where I stood, cryed, Alass good Soul, and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabb'd their Mothers, they would have done no less.

Brut. And after that, he came thus sad away.

Cask. I.

Cassi. Did Cicero say any thing?

Cask. I, he spoke Greek.

Cassi. To what effect?

Cask. Nay, and I tell you that, Ile ne're look you i'th' face again. But those that understood him, smil'd at one another, and shook their heads: but for mine own part it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Murellus and Flavius, for pulling Scarffes off Cæsars Images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more Foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cass. Will you sup with me to night, Caska?

Cask. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cassi. Will you dine with me to morrow?

Cask. I, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cassi. Good, I will expect you.

Cask. Do so: farewel both.

Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be?
He was quick Mettle, when he went to School.

Cassi. So is he now, in execution
Of any bold or noble Enterprize,
How-ever he puts on this tardy form:
This Rudeness is a Sawce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomack to digest his words
With better Appetites.

Brut. And so it is:
For this time I will leave you:
To morrow if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you: or if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cassi. I will do so: till then, think of the world.

Exit Brutus.

Well Brutus, thou art Noble: yet I see
Thy honourable Metal may be wrought
From that it is dispos'd, therefore 'tis meet,
That Noble minds keep ever with their likes:
For who so firm, that cannot be seduc'd?
Cæsar doth bear me hard, but he loves Brutus.
If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,
He should not humor me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw,
As if they came from several Citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely
Cæsars ambition shall be glanced at.
And after this, let Cæsar seat him sure,
For we will shake him, or worse daies endure.

Exit.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Caska, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Caska: brought you Cæsar home?
Why are you breathless, and why stare you so?

Cask. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of Earth
Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,
I have seen Tempests, when the scolding winds
Have riv'd the knotty Oakes, and I have seen
Th'ambitious Ocean swell, and rage, and foam,
To be exalted with the threatning Clouds:
But never till to night, never till now,
Did I go through a Tempest-dropping-fire.
Either there is a Civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too sawcy with the Gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Cask. A common slave, you know him well by sight,
Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
Like twenty Torches joyn'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides, I ha'not since put up my Sword,
Against the Capitol I met a Lion,
Who glaz'd upon me, and went surely by,
Without annoying me. And there were drawn
Upon a heap, a hundred ghastly women,
Transformed with their fear, who swore, they saw
Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday, the Bird of Night did sit,
Even at Noon day, upon the Market place,
Howting, and shreeking. When these Prodigies
Do so conjoyntly meet, let not men say,
These are their Reasons they are Natural:
For I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the Climate, that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves,
Comes Cæsar up the Capitol to morrow?

Cask. He doth: for he did bid Antonio
Send word to you, he would be there to morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Caska:
This disturbed Sky is not to walk in.

Cask. Farewel Cicero.

Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?

Cask. A Romane.

Cas. Caska, by your voyce.

Cask. Your Ear is good.
Cassius, What night is this?

Cassi. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Cask. Who ever knew the Heavens menace so?

Cassi. Those that have known the Earth so full of faults.

For

For my part I have walk'd about the ſtreets,
Submitting me unto the perillous Night:
And thus unbraced, Caska, as you ſee,
Have bar'd my Boſom to the Thunder-ſtone:
And when the croſſe blew Lightning ſeem'd to open
The Breſt of Heaven, I did preſent my ſelf
Even in the aime, and very flaſh of it. (vens?
Cask. But wherefore did you ſo much tempt the Hea-
It is the part of men, to fear and tremble,
When the moſt Mighty Gods by tokens ſend
Such dreadful Heraulds, to aſtoniſh us.
Caſſi. You are dull, Caska:
And thoſe ſparks of Life that ſhould be in a Roman,
You do want, or elſe you uſe not,
You look pale, and gaze, and put on fear,
And caſt your ſelf in wonder,
To ſee the ſtrange impatience of the Heavens:
But if you would conſider the true cauſe,
Why all theſe fires, why all theſe gliding Ghoſts,
Why Birds and Beaſts, from quality and kind,
Why Old men, Fools, and Children calculate,
Why all theſe things change from their Ordinance,
Their Natures, and pre-formed Faculties,
To monſtrous quality; why you ſhall find,
That Heaven hath infus'd them with theſe Spirits,
To make them inſtruments of fear, and warning,
Unto ſome monſtrous State.
Now could I (Caska) name to thee a man,
Moſt like this dreadful Night,
That Thunders, Lightens, opens Graves, and tears,
As doth the Lyon in the Capitol;
A man no mightier then thy ſelf, or me,
In perſonal action; yet prodigious grown
And fearful as theſe ſtrange eruptions are.
Cask. Tis Cæſar that you mean,
Is it not, Caſſius?
Caſ. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have Sinews and Limbs like to their Anceſtors;
But woe the while, our Fathers minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our Mothers ſpirits,
Our yoak, and ſufferance, ſhew us womaniſh.
Cask. Indeed, they ſay, the Senators to morrow
Mean to eſtabliſh Cæſar as a King:
And he ſhall wear his Crown by Sea, and Land,
In every place, ſave here in Italy.
Caſ. I know where I will weare this Dagger then;
Caſſius from bondage will deliver Caſſius:
Therein, ye Gods, you make the weak moſt ſtrong;
Therein, ye Gods, you Tyrants do defeat.
Nor Stony Tower, nor Walls of beaten Braſſe,
Nor air-leſſe Dungeon, nor ſtrong Links of Iron,
Can be retentive to the ſtrength of Spirit:
But Life being weary of theſe worldly Barres,
Never lacks power to diſmiſſe it ſelf.
If I know this, know all the world beſides,
That part of Tyranny that I do bear,
I can ſhake off at pleaſure. Thunder ſtill.
Cask. So can I:
So every Bond-man in his own hand bears
The power to Cancel his Captivity.
Caſ. And why ſhould Cæſar be a Tyrant then?
Poor man, I know he would not be a Wolfe,
But that he ſees the Romans are but Sheep;
He were no Lyon, were not Romans Hindes.
Thoſe that with haſte will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak Straws. What traſh is Rome?
What Rubbiſh, and what Offall? when it ſerves
For the baſe matter, to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæſar. But oh grief,
Where haſt thou led me? I (perhaps) ſpeak this
Before a willing Bond-man: then I know
My anſwer muſt be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Cask. You ſpeak to Caska, and to ſuch a man,
That is no fleering Tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redreſſe of all theſe Griefs,
And I will ſet this foot of mine as farre,
As who goes farthеſt.
Caſ. There's a Bargain made.
Now know you, Caska, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the Nobleſt minded Romans
To under-goe, with me, an enterprize,
Of Honourable dangerous conſequence;
And I do know by this, they ſtay for me
In Pompeys Porch; for now this fearful night,
There is no ſtirre, or walking in the ſtreets,
And the Complexion of the Element
Is Favours, like the work we have in hand,
Moſt bloody, fiery, and moſt terrible.

Enter Cinna.

Cask. Stand cloſe a while, for here comes one in haſte.
Caſ. Tis Cinna, I do know him by his Gate,
He is a friend. Cinna, where haſte you ſo?
Cinna. To find out you: Who's that, Metellus Cymber?
Caſ. No, it is Caska, one incorporate
To our Attempts. Am I not ſtaid for, Cinna?
Cin. I am glad on't.
What a fearful Night?
There's two or three of us have ſeen ſtrange ſights.
Caſ. Am I not ſtaid for? tell me.
Cin. Yes, you are, O Caſſius,
If you could but winne the Noble Brutus
To our party——
Caſ. Be you content. Good Cinna take this paper,
And look you lay it in the Prætors Chair,
Where Brutus may but find it: and throw this
In at his Window; ſet this up with waxe
Upon old Brutus Statue: all this done,
Repair to Pompeys Porch, where you ſhall find us.
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?
Cin. All, but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone
To ſeek you at your houſe. Well, I will hie,
And ſo beſtow theſe papers as you bad me.
Caſ. That done, repair to Pompeys Theater.
Exit Cinna.
Come Caska, you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his houſe: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.
Cask. O, he ſits high in all the peoples hearts:
And that which would appear offence in us,
His Countenance, like richeſt Alchymie,
Will change to Vertue, and to Worthineſſe.
Caſ. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,
You have right well conceited: let us go,
For it is after Mid-night, and ere day,
We will awake him, and be ſure of him.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Brutus in his Orchard.

Bru. What Lucius, hoe?
I cannot, by the progresse of the Starres,
Give guesse how neer to day—Lucius, I say?
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
When Lucius, when? awake, I say: what Lucius?

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Call'd you, my Lord?

Bru. Get me a Taper in my Study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my Lord. Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death: and for my part,
I know no personal cause, to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his Nature, there's the question?
It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder,
And that craves wary walking: Crown him that,
And then I grant we put a sting in him,
That at his will he may do danger with.
Th'abuse of Greatnesse, is, when it disjoynes
Remorse from power: And to speak truth of Cæsar,
I have not known, when his affections sway'd
More then his Reason. But tis a common proofe,
That Lowlinesse is young Ambitions Ladder,
Whereto the Climber upward turns his face:
But when he once attains the upmost Round,
He then unto the Ladder turns his back.
Looks in the Clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend: so Cæsar may;
Then lest he may, prevent. And since the quarrel
Will bear no colour, for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these, and these extremities:
And therefore think him as a Serpents egge,
Which hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous;
And kill him in the shell.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. The Taper burneth in your Closet, Sir:
Searching the window for a Flint, I found
This Paper, thus seal'd up, and I am sure
I did not lye there when I went to bed.

Gives him the Letter.

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day:
Is not to morrow (Boy) the first of March?

Luc. I know not, Sir.

Bru. Look in the Callender, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, Sir. Exit.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air.
Give so much light: that I may read by them.

Opens the Letter and reads.

Brutus thou sleep'st; awake, and see thy self:
Shall Rome, &c. speak, strike, redresse.
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake.
Such instigations have been often dropt.
Where I have took them up:
Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one mans awe? What Rome?
My Ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a King.
Speak, strike, redresse. Am I entreated
To speak, and strike? O Rome, I make the promise,
If the redresse will follow, thou receivest
Thy full Petition at the hand of Brutus.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fifteen daies.

Knock within.

Bru. Tis good. Go to the Gate, some body knocks:
Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing,
And the first motion, all the Interim is
Like a Phantasma, or a hideous Dream:
The Genius, and the mortal instruments
Are then in councell; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, Sir, there are moe with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, Sir, their Hats are pluckt about their ears,
And half their Faces buried in their Cloaths,
That by no means I may discover them,
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let'em enter:
They are the Faction. O Conspiracy,
Sham'st thou to shew thy dang'rous Brow by Night,
When evils are most free? O then, by day
Where wilt thou find a Cavern dark enough,
To mask thy monstrous Visage? Seek none Conspiracy,
Hide it in Smiles, and Affability:
For if thou path thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus it self were dim me enough,
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, Cassius, Caska, Decius, Cinna, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your Rest:
Good morrow Brutus, do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all Night:
Know I these men, that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here
But honors you: and every one doth wish,
You had but that opinion of your self,
Which every Noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Caska; this Cinna; and this Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.
What watchful Cares doe interpose themselves
Betwixt your Eies and Night?

Cas. Shall I intreat a word? They whisper.

Dec. Here lies the East: doth not the day break here?

Cask. No.

Cin. O pardon, Sir, it doth, and yon grey Lines,
That fret the Clouds, are Messengers of Day.

Cask. You shall confesse that you are both deceiv'd:
Here as I point my Sword, the Sunne arises,
Which is a great way growing on the South,

Weigh-

Weighing the youthful Season of the year.
Some two moneths hence, up higher toward the North
He first presents his fire, and the high East
Stands as the Capitol, directly here.
Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.
Cassi. And let us swear our resolution.
Bru. No, not an Oath: if not the Face of men,
The sufferance of our soules, the times abuse;
If these be Motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence, to his idle bed:
So let high-sighted-Tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by Lottery. But if these
(As I am sure they do) bear fire enough
To kindle Cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting Spirits of women; Then Country men,
What need we any spur, but our own cause
To prick us to redress? What other Bond,
Then secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? And what other Oath,
Then Honesty to Honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it.
Swear Priests and Cowards, and men cautelous,
Old feeble Carrions, and such suffering soules
That welcom wrongs: Unto bad causes, swear
Such Creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even vertue of our Enterprize,
Nor th'insuppressive Mettle of our Spirits,
To think, that or our Cause, or our Performance
Did need an Oath. When every drop of bloud
That every Roman beares, and Nobly beares
Is guilty of a several Bastardy,
If he do break the smallest Particle
Of any promise that hath past from him.
Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.
Cask. Let us not leave him out.
Cin. No, by no meanes.
Met. O let us have him, for his Silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion.
And buy mens voyces, to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands,
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.
Bru. O name him not; let us not break with him.
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.
Cas. Then leave him out.
Cask. Indeed, he is not fit.
Dec. Shall no man else be toucht, but only Cæsar?
Cas. Decius, well urg'd: I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar,
Should out-live Cæsar, we shall find of him
A shrewd Contriver. And you know, his means
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.
Bru. Our course will seem too bloudy, Caius Cassius,
To cut the Head off, and then hack the Limbs:
Like wrath in death, and Envy afterwards.
For Antony, is but a Limb of Cæsar.
Let's be Sacrificers, but not Butchers Caius:
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar,
And in the Spirit of men, there is no bloud:
O that we then could come by Cæsars Spirits,
And not dismember Cæsar! But (alas)
Cæsar must bleed for it. And gentle Friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully:
Let's carve him, as a Dish fit for the Gods,
Not hew him as a Carkass fit for Hounds;
And let our hearts, as subtle Masters do,
Stir up their Servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious.
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd Purgers, not Murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him:
For he can do no more then Cæsars Arm,
When Cæsars head is off.
Cas. Yet I fear him,
For in the ingrafted Love he beares to Cæsar.
Bru. Alas good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought, and die for Cæsar.
And that were much he should: for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.
Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die,
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.
Clock strikes.
Bru. Peace, count the Clock.
Cas. The Clock hath stricken three.
Treb. 'Tis time to part.
Cas. But it is doubtful yet,
Whether Cæsar will come forth to day, or no:
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main Opinion he held once,
Of Fantasie, of Dreams, and Ceremonies:
It may be, these apparent Prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this Night,
And the perswasion of his Augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to day.
Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,
I can ore-sway him: for he loves to hear,
That Unicornes may be betray'd with trees,
And Bears with Glasses, Elephants with Holes,
Lions with Toiles, and men with Flatterers,
But, when I tell him, he hates Flatterers,
He saies, he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work:
For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.
Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.
Bru. By the eight hour, is that the uttermost?
Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.
Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hatred,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey,
I wonder none of you have thought of him.
Bru. Now good Metellus go along by him:
He loves me well, and I have given him Reasons,
Send him but hither, and Ile fashion him.
Cas. The Morning comes upon's:
Wee'l leave you Brutus,
And friends disperse your selves; but all remember
What you have said, and shew your selves true Romans.
Bru. Good Gentlemen, look fresh and merrily,
Let not our lookes put on our purposes,
But bear it as our Roman Actors do,
With untir'd spirits, and formal Constancy,
And so good morrow to you every one. Exeunt.
Manet Brutus.
Boy: Lucius: Fast asleep? It is no matter,
Enjoy the hony-heavy-dew of Slumber:
Thou hast no Figures, nor no Fantasies,

Which busie care drawes, in the braines of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus. my Lord.

Bru. Portia, What mean you? wherefore rise you now?
It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weak condition, to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. Y'have ungently Brutus
Stole from my Bed: and yesternight at Supper
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your armes a-cross:
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me, with ungentle lookes.
I urg'd you further, then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stampt with your foot:
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
But with an angry wafter of your hand
Gave sign for me to leave you: So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much inkindled, and withal;
Hoping it was but an effect of Humor,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;
And could it work so much upon your shape,
As it hath much prevail'd on your Condition,
I should not know you Brutus. Dear my Lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the meanes to come by it.

Bru. Why so I do: good Portia go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it Physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humors
Of the dark Morning? What, is Brutus sick?
And will he steal out of his wholsom bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the Night?
And tempt the Rheumy, and unpurged Ayr
To add unto his sickness? No my Brutus,
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which by the Right and Vertue of my place
I ought to know of: And upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once commended Beauty,
By all your vowes of Love, and that great Vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self; your half;
Why you are heavy, and what men to night
Have had resort to you: for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of Marriage, tell me Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no Secrets
That appertain to you? Am I your self,
But as it were in sort, or limitation?
To keep with you at meales, comfort your Bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the Suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus Harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.
I grant I am a woman; but withal,
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant I am a woman; but withal,
A woman well reputed: Cato's Daughter.
Think you, I am no stronger then my Sex
Being so Father'd, and so Husbanded?
Tell me your Counsels, I will not disclose em:
I have made strong proof of my Constancy,
Giving my self a voluntary wound
Here, in the Thigh: Can I bear that with patience,
And not my Husbands Secrets?

Bru. O ye Gods!
Render me worthy of this Noble wife. Knock.
Hearke, hearke, one knocks; Portia go in a while,
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements, I will construe to thee,
All the Characters of my sad browes:
Leave me with haste, Exit Portia.

Enter Lucius, and Ligarius.

Lucius, who's that knockes?

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how?

Cai. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O what a time have you chose out brave Caius
To wear a Kerchief? Would you were not sick.

Cai. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of Honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Cai. By all the Gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome,
Brave Son, deriv'd from honourable Loynes,
Thou like an Exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified Spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible,
Yea get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work,
That will make sick men whole.

Cai. But are not some whole, that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Cai. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on. Thunder.

Bru. Follow me then. Exeunt.

Thunder and Lightning.
Enter Julius Cæsar in his Night-Gown.

Cæsar. Nor Heaven, nor Earth,
Have been at peace to night:
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cryed out;
Help, ho: they murder Cæsar. Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord.

Cæs. Go bid the Priests do present Sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of Success.

Ser. I will my Lord. Exit.

Enter Calphurnia.

Cal. What mean you Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth; the things that threaten'd me,
Ne'r lookt but on my back: When they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Calp.

Calp. Cæsar, I never stood on Ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me: There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the Watch.
A Lioness hath whelped in the streets,
And Graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriours fight upon the Clouds
In Rankes and Squadrons, and right form of war
Which drizzel'd bloud upon the Capitol:
The noise of Battel hurried in the Ayr:
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And Ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar, these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoyded
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty Gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth: for these Predictions
Are to the world in general, as to Cæsar.

Calp. When Beggars die, there are no Comets seen,
The Heavens themselves blaze forth the death of Princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths,
The valiant never tast of death but once:
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seemes to me most strange that men should fear,
Seeing that death, a necessary end
Will come, when it will come.

Enter a Servant.

VVhat say the Augurers?

Ser. They would not have you to stir forth to day.
Plucking the Entrals of an Offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæs. The Gods do this in shame of Cowardise:
Cæsar should be a Beast without a heart
If he should stay at home to day for fear:
No, Cæsar shall not; Danger knowes full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous then he.
VVe heare two Lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible,
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas my Lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence:
Do not go forth to day: Call it my fear,
That keepes you in the house, and not your own.
VVe'l send Mark Antony to the Senate house,
And he shall say, you are not well to day:
Let me upon my knee prevail in this

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not well,
And for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail: Good morrow worthy Cæsar,
I come to fetch you to the Senate house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the Senators,
And tell them that I will not come to day:
Cannot, is false: and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come to day, tell them so Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a Lye?
Have I in Conquest stretcht mine Arm so far,
To be afear'd to tell Gray-beards the truth:
Decius, go tell them, Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laught at when I tell them so.

Cæs. The cause is in my will, I will not come,
That is enough to satisfie the Senate.
But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calphurnia here my wife, stayes me at home:
She dream't to night she saw my Statue,
Which like a Fountain, with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure bloud: and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bath their hands in it:
And these does she apply, for warnings and portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted,
It was a vision, fair and fortunate:
Your Statue spouting bloud in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving bloud, and that great men shall press
For Tinctures, Staines, Reliques, and Cognisance.
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say,
And know it now, the Senate have concluded
To give this day a Crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
Break up the Senate, till another time,
When Cæsars wife shall meet with better Dreames:
If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper
Lo Cæsar is affraid?
Pardon me Cæsar, for my dear dear love
To your Proceeding bids me tell you this:
And reason to my love is liable.

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now Calphurnia?
I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my Robe, for I will go.

Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, Cinna, and Publius.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcom Publius.
What Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good morrow Casca, Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was ne're so much your enemy,
As that same Ague which hath made you lean.
What is't a Clock?

Bru. Cæsar, tis strucken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your paines and curtesie.

Enter Antony.

See Antony, that Revels long a-nights,
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow Antony.

Ant. So to most Noble Cæsar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now Cynna, now Metellus: what Trebonius,
I have an houres talk in store for you:
Remember that you call on me to day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will; and so near will I be,
That your best Friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good Friends go in, and tast some wine with me
And we (like Friends) vvill straightvvay go together.

Bru. That every like is not the same, O Cæsar,
The heart of Brutus earnes to think upon. Exeunt.

Enter Artemidorus.

Cæsar, beware of Brutus, take heed of Cassius; come not near Caska, have an eye to Cynna, trust not Trebonius, mark well Metellus Cymber, Decius Brutus loves thee not: Thou hast wrong'd Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar: If thou beest not Immortal, look about you: Security gives way to Conspiracy. The mighty Gods defend thee.

Thy Lover Artemidorus.

Here will I stand, till Cæsar pass along,
And as a Suitor will I give him this:
My heart laments, that Vertue cannot live
Out of the teeth of Emulation.
If thou read this, O Cæsar, thou maiest live;
If not, the Fates with Traytors do contrive.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I prythee Boy, run to the Senate-house,
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone,
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand Madam.

Por. I would have had thee there and here again
Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there:
O Constancy, be strong upon my side,
Set a huge Mountain 'tween my Heart and Tongue:
I have a mans mind, but a womans might:
How hard it is for women to keep counsel.
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word Boy, if thy Lord look well,
For he went sickly forth: and take good note
What Cæsar doth, what Suitors press to him.
Hark Boy, what noyse is that?

Luc. I hear none Madam.

Por. Prythee listen well:
I heard a bussling Rumour like a Fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth Madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither Fellow, which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good Lady.

Por. What is't a clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour Lady.

Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam not yet, I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suite to Cæsar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have Lady, if it will please Cæsar
To be so good to Cæsar, as to hear me:
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be,
Much that I fear may chance:
Good morrow to you: here the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Cæsar at the heeles,
Of Senators, of Prætors, common Suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man (almost) to death:
Ile get me to a place more voyd, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along. Exit.

Por. I must go in:
Aye me! How weak a thing
The heart of woman is? O Brutus,
The Heavens speed thee in thine enterprize.
Sure the Boy heard me: Brutus hath a suit
That Cæsar will not grant. O, I grow faint:
Run Lucius, and commend me to my Lord,
Say I am merry; Come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish.

Enter Cæsar, Brutus, Cassius, Caska, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cynna, Antony, Lepidus. Artemidorus, Popilius, and the Soothsayer.

Cæs. The Ides of March are come.

Sooth. I Cæsar, but not gone.

Art. Hail Cæsar: read this Schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to ore-read
(At your best leisure) this his humble suit.

Art. O Cæsar, read mine first: for mine's a suit
That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it grea. Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches us our self, shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not Cæsar, read it instantly.

Cæs. What, is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirra, give place.

Cas. What, urge you your Petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

Pop. I wish your Enterprize to day may thrive.

Cas. What enterprize Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena?

Cas. He wisht to day our enterprize might thrive:
I fear our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Look how he makes to Cæsar: mark him.

Cas. Caska be sudden, for we fear prevention.
Brutus what shall be done? If this be known,
Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,
For I will slay my self.

Bru. Cassius be constant:
Popilius Lena speakes not of our purposes.
For look he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Cas. Trebonius knowes his time: for look you Brutus
He drawes Mark Antony out of the way.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber, let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.

Bru. He is addrest: press near, and second him.

Cin. Caska, you are the first that reares your hand.

Cæs. Are we all ready? What is now amiss,
That Cæsar and his Senate must redress?

Metel. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar,
Metellus Cimber throwes before thy Seat
An humble heart.

Cæs. I must prevent thee Cymber:
These couchings, and these lowly curtesies
Might fire the bloud of ordinary men,
And turn pre-Ordinance, and first Decree,
Into the lane of Children. Be not fond,
To think that Cæsar beares such Rebel bloud
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth Fooles, I mean sweet words,
Low-crooked-curtsies, and base Spaniel fawning:
Thy Brother by decree is banished:
If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a Cur out of my way:
Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voyce more worthy then my own,

To

To sound more sweetly in great Cæsars ear,
For the repealing of my banish'd Brother?
Bru. I kisse thy hand, but not in flattery Cæsar:
Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
Cæs. What Brutus?
Cas. Pardon Cæsar: Cæsar pardon:
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To begge infranchisement for Publius Cimber.
Cæs. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you,
If I could pray to move, Prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the Northern Starre,
Of whose true fixt, and resting quality,
There is no fellow in the firmament,
The Skies are painted with unnumbred sparks,
They are all fire, and every one doth shine:
But, there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So, in the world, 'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number, I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he,
Let me a little shew it, even in this:
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.
Cin. O Cæsar.
Cæs. Hence: wilt thou lift up Olympus?
Dec. Great Cæsar.
Cæs. Do not Brutus bootlesse kneel?
Cask. Speak hands for me.
They stab Cæsar.
Cæs. Et tu Brute.——Then fall Cæsar.
Cin. Liberty, Freedom; Tyranny is dead,
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.
Cas. Some to the common Pulpits, and cry out
Liberty, freedome, and Enfranchisement.
Bru. People and Senators, be not affrighted:
Fly not, stand still, ambitions debt is paid.
Cask. Go to the Pulpit Brutus.
Dec. And Cassius too.
Bru. Where's Publius?
Cin. Here quite confounded with this mutiny.
Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsars
Should chance——
Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius good cheer,
There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else: so tell them Publius.
Cas. And leave us Publius, lest that the people
Rushing on us, should do your Age some mischief.
Bru. Do so, and let no man abide this deed,
But we the Doers.
Enter Trebonius.
Cas. Where is Antony?
Treb. Fled to his house amaz'd:
Men, Wives, and Children, stare, cry out, and run,
As it were Doomesday.
Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures:
That we shall die we know, tis but the time
And drawing daies out, that men stand upon.
Cask. Why he that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.
Bru. Grant that, and then is death a Benefit:
So are we Cæsars friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoop Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Cæsars blood
Up to the Elbowes, and besmear our Swords:
Then walk we forth even to the Market place,
And waving our red weapons o're our heads,
Let's all cry Peace, Freedom, and Liberty.
Cas. Stoop then, and wash. How many Ages hence
Shall this our lofty Scene be acted over,
In States unborn, and Accents yet unknown?
Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompey's Basis lies along,
No worthier then the dust?
Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd,
The men that gave their Countrey liberty.
Dec. What, shall we forth?
Cas. I, every man away.
Brutus shall lead, and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest, and best hearts of Rome.
Enter a Servant.
Bru. Soft, who comes here? a friend of Antonies.
Ser. Thus Brutus, did my Master bid me kneel;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down,
And being prostrate, thus he bad me say,
Brutus is Noble, Wise, Valiant, and Honest,
Cæsar was Mighty, Bold, Royal, and Loving:
Say, I love Brutus, and I honor him;
Say, I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The Fortunes and Affairs of Noble Brutus,
Thorough the hazards of this untrod State,
With all true Faith. So saies my Master Antony
Bru. Thy Master is a Wise and Valiant Roman,
I never thought him worse:
Tell him, so please him come unto this place
He shall be satisfied, and by my honour
Depart untouch'd.
Ser. Ile fetch him presently. Exit Servant.
Bru. I know that we shall have him well to Friend.
Cas. I wish we may: But yet have I a mind
That fears him much: and my misgiving still
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.
Enter Antony.
Bru. But here comes Antony:
Welcome Mark Antony.
Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lye so low?
Are all thy Conquests, Glories, Triumphs, Spoils,
Shrunk to this little Measure? Fare thee well.
I know not Gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I my self, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsars deaths hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth, as those your Swords; made rich
With the most Noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whil'st your purpled hands do reek and smoak
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find my self so apt to die.
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The Choice and Master Spirits of this age.
Bru. O Antony! Beg not your death of us:
Though now we must appear bloody and cruell,
As by our hands, and this our present Act
You see we do: yet see you but our hands,

And this, the bleeding buſineſſe they have done:
Our hearts you ſee not, they are pittiful:
And pitty to the general wrong of Rome,
As fire drives out fire, ſo pitty, pitty,
Hath done this deed on Cæſar. For your part,
To you, our Swords have leaden points Mark Antony;
Our Arms in ſtrength of malice, and our Hearts
Of Brothers temper, do receive you in,
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Caſ. Your voice ſhall be as ſtrong as any mans,
In the diſpoſing of new Dignities.

Bru. Onely be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beſide themſelves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cauſe,
Why I, that did love Cæſar when I ſtrook him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wiſdom:
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
Firſt Marcus Brutus will I ſhake with you;
Next Caius Caſſius do I take your hand;
Now Decius Brutus yours, now yours Metellus;
Yours Cinna; and my valiant Caſka, yours;
Though laſt, not leaſt in love, yours good Trebonius,
Gentlemen all: alas, what ſhall I ſay,
My credit now ſtands on ſuch ſlippery ground,
That one of two bad waies you muſt conceit me,
Either a Coward, or a flatterer.
That I did love thee Cæſar, O tis true:
If then thy Spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer then thy death,
To ſee thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes?
Moſt Noble in the preſence of thy Coarſe,
Had I as many eies, as thou haſt wounds,
Weeping as faſt as they ſtream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, then to cloſe
In terms of friendſhip with thine enemies.
Pardon me Julius, here was't thou bay'd brave heart.
Here didſt thou fall, and here thy Hunters ſtand
Sign'd in thy ſpoil, and Crimſon'd in thy Lethe.
O world! thou waſt the Forreſt to this Hart,
And this indeed, O world, the Hart of thee.
How like a Deer, ſtricken by many Princes,
Doſt thou here lye?

Caſ. Mark Antony.

Ant. Pardon me Caius Caſſius:
The enemies of Cæſar, ſhall ſay this:
Then, in a friend, it is cold Modeſty.

Caſ. I blame you not for praiſing Cæſar ſo,
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prickt in number of our friends,
Or ſhall we on; and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Cæſar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you ſhall give me Reaſons,
VVhy, and wherein Cæſar was dangerous.

Bru. Or elſe were this a ſavage ſpectacle:
Our Reaſons are ſo full of good regard,
That were you Antony the Son of Cæſar,
You ſhould be ſatisfied.

Ant. That's all I ſeek,
And am moreover ſuitor that I may
Produce his body to the Mirket-place,
And in the Pulpit as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his Funeral.

Bru. You ſhall Mark Antony

Caſ. Brutus, a word with you:
You know not what you do; do not conſent
That Antony ſpeak in his Funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter.

Bru. By your pardon:
I will my ſelf into the Pulpit firſt,
And ſhew the reaſon of our Cæſars death,
What Antony ſhall ſpeak, I will proteſt
He ſpeaks by leave, and by permiſſion:
And that we are contented Cæſar ſhall
Have all true Rites, and lawful Ceremonies.
It ſhall advantage more, then do us wrong.

Caſ. I know not what may fall, I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here take you Cæſars body:
You ſhall not in your Funeral ſpeech blame us,
But ſpeak all good you can deviſe of Cæſar,
And ſay you doo't by our permiſſion:
Elſe ſhall you not have any hand at all
About his Funeral. And you ſhall ſpeak
In the ſame Pulpit whereto I am going,
After my ſpeech is ended.

Ant. Be it ſo:
I do deſire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us. Exeunt.

Manet Antony.

O pardon me, thou bleeding peece of Earth:
That I am meek and gentle with theſe Butchers.
Thou art the Ruines of the Nobleſt man
That ever lived in the Tide of Times.
Woe to the hand that ſhed this coſtly blood.
Over thy wounds, now do I propheſie,
(Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue)
A Curſe ſhall light upon the limbs of men;
Domeſtick fury, and fierce civil ſtrife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and deſtruction ſhall be ſo in uſe,
And dreadful objects ſo familiar,
That Mothers ſhall but ſmile, when they behold
Their Infants quartered with the hands of Warre:
All pity choak'd with cuſtom of fell deeds,
And Cæſars Spirit ranging for Revenge,
With Ate by his ſide, come hot from Hell,
Shall in theſe Confines, with a Monarks voice,
Cry havock, and let ſlip the Dogs of Warre,
That this foul deed, ſhall ſmell above the earth
With Carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter Octavio's Servant.

You ſerve Octavius Cæſar, do you not?

Ser. I do Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæſar did write for him to come to Rome.

Ser. He did receive his Letres, and is coming,
And bid me ſay to you by word of mouth——
O Cæſar!

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee a-part and weep;
Paſſion I ſee is catching, for mine eies,
Seeing thoſe Beads of ſorrow ſtand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy Maſter coming?

Ser. He lies to night within ſeven Leagues of Rome.

Ant. Poſt back with ſpeed,
And tell him what hath chanc'd:
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of ſafety for Octavius yet,
Hie hence, and tell him ſo. Yet ſtay a while,

Thou

Thou shalt not back, till I have born this Coarse
Into the market place: There shall I try
In my Oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men,
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand. Exeunt.

Enter Brutus and goes into the Pulpit, and Cassius with the Plebeians.

Ple. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me Audience friends.
Cassius go you into the other street,
And part the Numbers:
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, goe with him,
And publike Reasons shall be rendred
Of Cæsars death.

1 Ple. I will hear Brutus speak.

2. I will hear Cassius, and compare their Reasons,
When severally we hear them rendred.

3. The Noble Brutus is ascended: Silence.

Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, Countrey-men, and Lovers, hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear. Beleeve me for mine Honor, and have respect to mine Honor, that you may beleeve. Censure me in your wisedome, and awake your Senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this Assembly, any deer friend of Cæsars, to them I say, that Brutus love to Cæsar, was no lesse then his. If then, that Friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I lov'd Cæsar lesse, but that I lov'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all Slaves; then that Cæsar were dead, to live all Free-men? As Cæsar lov'd me, I weep for him; as he was Fortunate, I rejoyce at it; as he was valiant, I honour him: But, as he was Ambitious, I slew him. There is Teares for his Love: Joy, for his Fortune: Honour, for his Valour: and Death for his Ambition. Who is here so base that would be a Bondman? If any, speak, for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak, for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his Countrey? If any, speak, for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None Brutus, none.

Brutus. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar then you shall do to Brutus. The Question of his death, is inroll'd in the Capitoll: his Glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforc'd, for which he suffered death.

Enter Mark Antony, with Cæsars body.

Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony, who though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the Common-wealth, as which of you shall not. With this I depart, that as I slew my best Lover for the good of Rome, I have the same Dagger for my self, when it shall please my Countrey to need my Death.

All. Live Brutus, live, live.

1. Bring him with Triumph home unto his house,
2. Give him a Statue with his Ancestors.
3. Let him be Cæsar.
4. Cæsars better parts,
Shall be Crown'd in Brutus.

1. Wee'l bring him to his house,
With Showts and Clamors.

Bru. My Countrey-men.

2. Peace, silence, Brutus speaks.

1. Peace ho.

Bru. Good Countrey-men, let me depart alone,
And (for my sake) stay here with Antony:
Do grace to Cæsars Corps, and grace his speech
Tending to Cæsars Glories, which Mark Antony
(By our permission) is allow'd to make.
I do intreat you, not a man depart.
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. Exit.

1. Stay ho, and let us hear Mark Antony.

3. Let him go up into the publique Chair,
Wee'l hear him: Noble Antony go up.

Ant. For Brutus sake I am beholding to you.

4. What does he say of Brutus!

3. He saies for Brutus sake
He finds himself beholding to us all.

4. 'Twere best speak no harme of Brutus here?

1. This Cæsar was a Tyrant.

3. Nay that's certain:
We are glad that Rome is rid of him,

2. Peace, let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans.

All. Peace hoe, let us hear him.

An. Friends, Romans, Countrey-men, lend me your ears:
I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him:
The evil that men do, lives after them,
The good is oft enterred with their bones,
So let it be with Cæsar. The Noble Brutus,
Hath told you Cæsar was Ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it
Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest,
(For Brutus is an honourable man,
So are they all, all Honourable men)
Come I to speak in Cæsars funeral.
He was my Friend, faithful, and just to me;
But Brutus saies, he was Ambitious,
And Brutus is an Honourable man.
He hath brought many Captives home to Rome,
Whose Ransomes did the general Coffers fill:
Did this in Cæsar seem Ambitious?
When that the poor have cry'd, Cæsar hath wept:
Ambition should be made of sterner stuffe,
Yet Brutus saies, he was Ambitious:
And Brutus is an Honourable man.
You all did see, that on the Lupercall,
I thrice presented him a Kingly Crown,
Which he did thrice refuse. Was this Ambition?
Yet Brutus saies he was Ambitious:
And sure he is and Honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know;
You all did love him once, not without cause,
What cause with-holds you then, to mourn for him?
O Judgement! thou art fled to brutish Beasts,
And Men have lost their Reason. Bear with me,
My heart is in the Coffin there with Cæsar.
And I must pawse till it come back to me.

1. Me thinks there is much reason in his sayings:
If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cæsar ha's had great wrong.

3. Ha's he Masters? I fear there will a worse come in (his place.

4. Mark'd

4 Mark'd ye his words? he would not take the Crown,
Therefore tis certain, he was not Ambitious.
1. If it be found so, some will deer abide it.
2. Poor soul, his eies are red as fire with weeping.
3. There's not a Nobler man in Rome then Antony.
4. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.
Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cæsar might
Have stood against the world: Now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O Masters! If I were dispos'd to stirre
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and Rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong:
Who (you all know) are Honourable men.
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong my self and you,
Then I will wrong such Honourable men.
But here's a Parchment, with the Seal of Cæsar,
I found it in his Closet, tis his Will:
Let but the Commons hear this Testament:
(Which pardon me) I do not mean to read,
And they would goe and kisse dead Cæsars wounds,
And dip their Napkins in his Sacred blood:
Yea, beg a hair of him for Memory,
And dying, mention it within their Wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich Legacy
Unto their issue.
4. Wee'l hear the VVill, read it Mark Antony.
All. The VVill, the VVill; we will hear Cæsars Will.
Ant. Have patience gentle Friends, I must not read it.
It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you:
You are not VVood, you are not Stones, but men:
And being men, hearing the VVill of Cæsar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad;
Tis good you know not that you are his Heirs,
For if you should, O what would come of it?
4. Read the VVill, wee'l hear it Antony:
You shall read us the VVill, Cæsars VVill.
Ant. VVill you be Patient? will you stay a while?
I have o're shot my self to tell you of it,
I fear I wrong the Honourable men,
Whose Daggers have stabb'd Cæsar: I do fear it.
4. They were Traitors, Honourable men?
All. The VVill, the Testament.
2. They were Villains, Murderers: the VVill, read the VVill.
Ant. You will compell me then to read the VVill;
Then make a Ring about the Corps of Cæsar,
And let me shew you him that made the will:
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?
All. Come down.
2. Descend.
3. You shall have leave.
4. A Ring, stand round.
1. Stand from the Hearse, stand from the Body.
2. Roome for Antony, most Noble Antony.
Ant. Nay presse not so upon me, stand farre off.
All. Stand back, room, bear back.
Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this Mantle, I remember
The first time ever Cæsar put it on,
Twas on a Summers evening in his Tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii
Look, in this place ran Cassius Dagger through:
See what a Rent the envious Casca made:
Through this, the welbeloved Brutus stab'd
And as he pluck'd his cursed Steel away.
Mark how the blood of Cæsar followed it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no:
For Brutus as you know, was Cæsars Angel.
Judge, O you Gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him:
This was the most unkindest cut of all.
For when the Noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong then Traitors armes,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his Mighty heart,
And in his Mantle, muffling up his face,
Even at the Base of Pompey's Statue
(Which all the while ran blood) great Cæsar fell.
O what a fall was there, my Countrey-men?
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whil'st bloody Treason flourish'd over us.
O now you weep, and I perceive you feel
The dint of pitty: These are gracious drops.
Kind Souls, what weep you, when you but behold
Our Cæsar's Vesture wounded? Look you here,
Here is Himself, marr'd as you see with Traitors.
1. O pitteous spectacle!
2. O Noble Cæsar!
3. O woful day!
4. O Traitors, Villains!
1. O most bloody sight!
2. We will be reveng'd: Revenge
About, seek, burn, fire, kill, slay,
Let not a Traitor live.
Ant. Stay Countrey-men.
1. Peace there, hear the Noble Antony,
2. Wee'l hear him, wee'l follow him, wee'l dye with him. (you up
Ant. Good Friends, sweet Friends, let me not stirre
To such a suddain Flood of Mutiny:
They that have done this Deed, are Honourable,
What private griefs they have, alas I know not,
That made them do it: They are wise and honourable,
And will no doubt with reasons answer you.
I come not (Friends,) to steal away your hearts;
I am no Orator, as Brutus is;
But (as you know me all) a plain blunt man
That love my friend, and that they know full well,
That give me publick leave to speak of him:
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stirre mens Blood. I onely speak right on:
I tell you that, which you your selves do know,
Shew you sweet Cæsars wounds, poor, poor dumb mouths
And bid them speak for me: But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your Spirits, and put a Tongue
In every Wound of Cæsar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.
All. Wee'l Mutiny.
1. Wee'l burn the house of Brutus.
3. Away then, come seek the Conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me Countrey-men, yet hear me speak.
All. Peace hoe, hear Antony, most Noble Antony.
Ant. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what.
Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?
Alas you know not, I must tell you then:
You have forgot the Will I told you of.
All. Most true, the Will, let's stay and hear the Will.
Ant. Here is the Will, and under Cæsars Seal:
To every Roman Citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy five Drachmaes.

2 Ple. Most Noble Cæsar, wee'l revenge his death.
3 Ple. O Royal Cæsar.
Ant. Hear me with patience.
All. Peace hoa.
Ant. Moreover he hath left you all his Walkes,
His private Arbours, and new-planted Orchards,
On this side Tyber, he hath left them you,
And to your heires for ever: common pleasures
To walk abroad, and recreate your selves.
Here was a Cæsar: when comes such another?
1 Ple. Never, never: come, away, away:
Wee'l burn his body in the holy place,
And with the Brands fire all the Traytors houses.
Take up the body.
2 Ple. Go fetch fire.
3 Ple. Pluck down Benches.
4 Ple. Pluck down Formes, Windowes, any thing.
Exeunt Plebeians.
Ant. Now let it work: Mischief thou art a-foot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.
How now Fellow?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is he?
Ser. He and Lepidus are at Cæsars house.
Ant. And thither will I straight, to visit him:
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us any thing.
Ser. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like Madmen through the Gates of Rome.
Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people
How I had moved them. Bring me to Octavius. Exeunt.

Enter Cinna the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cin. I dreamt to night, that I did feast with Cæsar,
And things unluckily charge my Fantasie:
I have no will to wander forth of doores,
Yet something leads me forth.
1 What is your name?
2 Whither are you going?
3 Where do you dwell?
4 Are you a married man, or a batchelor?
2 Answer every man directly.
1 I, and briefly.
4 I, and wisely.
3 I, and truly, you were best.
Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? where do I dwel? am I a married man, or a batchellor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a batchelour.
2 That's as much as to say, they are fooles that marry: you'l bear me a bang for that I fear: Proceed directly.
Cin. Directly I am going to Cæsars Funeral.
1 As a Friend, or an Enemy?
Cin. As a Friend.
2 That matter is answered directly.
4. For your dwelling: briefly.
Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
3 Your name sir, truly.
Cin. Truly my name is Cinna.
1 Tear him to pieces, he's a Conspirator.
Cin. I am Cinna the Poet, I am Cinna the Poet.
4 Tear him for his bad Verses, tear him for his bad Verses.
Cin. I am not Cinna the Conspirator.
4 It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
3 Tear him, tear him; Come Brands hoe, Firebrands: to Brutus, to Cassius, burn all. Some to Decius houses, and some to Casca's, some to Ligarius: Away, go.
Exeunt all the Plebeians.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus.

Ant. These many then shall die, their names are prickt.
Oct. Your Brother too must die: consent you Lepidus?
Lep. I do consent.
Oct. Prick him down Antony.
Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your Sisters son, Mark Antony.
Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I dam him.
But Lepidus, go you to Cæsars house:
Fetch the Will hither, and we shall determine
How to cut off some charge in Legacies.
Lep. What? shall I find you here?
Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol. Exit Lepidus.
Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on Errands: is it fit
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?
Oct. So you thought him
And took his voyce who should be prickt to die
In our black Sentence and Proscription.
Ant. Octavius, I have seen more daies then you;
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease our selves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them, as the Ass bears Gold,
To groan and sweat under the Businesse,
Either led or driven, as we point the way:
And having brought our treasure, where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off
(Like to the empty Ass) to shake his eares,
And graze in Commons.
Oct. You may do your will:
But he's a tri'd, and valiant Souldier.
Ant. So is my Horse Octavius, and for that
I do appoint him store of Provender.
It is a Creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on:
His corporal Motion, govern'd by my Spirit,
And in some taste, is Lepidus but so:
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth:
A barren spirited Fellow, one that feeds
On Objects, Arts, and Imitations.
Which out of use, and stal'd by other men
Begin his fashion. Do not talk of him,
But as a property: and now Octavius,
Listen great things. Brutus and Cassius
Are levying Powers; We must straight make head:
Therefore let our Alliance be combin'd,
Our best Friends made, and our best meanes stretcht out,
And let us presently go sit in Council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open Perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,

And

And bayed about with many Enemies,
And some that smile have in their hearts I fear
Millions of Mischiefes. Exeunt.

Drums. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, and the Army. Titinius and Pindarus meet them.

Bru. Stand ho.
Luc. Give the word ho, and Stand.
Bru. What now Lucilius, is Cassius near?
Luc. He is at hand, and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his Master.
Bru. He greets me well. Your Master Pindarus
In his own change, or by ill Officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone: But if he be at hand
I shall be satisfied.
Pin. I do not doubt
But that my Noble Master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard, and Honour.
Bru. He is not doubted. A word Lucilius,
How he receiv'd you: let me be resolv'd.
Luc. With curtesie, and with respect enough,
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly Conference
As he hath us'd of old.
Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend, cooling: Ever note Lucilius,
When Love begins to sicken and decay
It useth an enforced Ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple Faith:
But hollow men, like Horses hot at hand,
Make gallant shew, and promise of their Mettle:
Low March within.
But when they should endure the bloudy Spur,
They fall their Crest, and like deceitful Jades
Sink in the Trial. Comes his Army on?
Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:
The greater part, the Horse in general
Are come with Cassius.
Enter Cassius, and his Powers.
Bru. Hearke, he is arriv'd:
March gently on to meet him.
Cas. Stand ho.
Bru. Stand ho, speak the word along.
Stand.
Stand.
Stand.
Cas. Most Noble Brother; you have done me wrong.
Bru. Judge me you Gods; wrong I mine Enemies?
And if not so, how should I wrong a Brother?
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours, hides wrongs,
And when you do them——
Bru. Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefes softly, I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our Armies here
(Which should perceive nothing but Love from us)
Let us not wrangle. Bid them move away:
Then in my Tent Cassius enlarge your Griefes
And I will give you audience.
Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our Commanders lead their Charges off
A little from this ground.
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like, and let no man
Come to our Tent, till we have done our Conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. Exeunt.
Manent Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my Letter, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, was slighted off.
Bru. You wrong'd your self to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet,
That every nice offence should bear his Comment.
Bru. Let me tell you Cassius, you your self,
Are much condemn'd to have an itching Palm,
To sell, and Mart your Offices for Gold
To Undeservers.
Cas. I, an itching Palm?
You know that you are Brutus that speakes this,
Or by the Gods, this speech were else your last.
Bru. The name of Cassius honours this Corruption,
And Chastisement doth therefore hide his head.
Cas. Chastisement?
Bru. Remember March, the Ides of March remember:
Did not great Julius bleed for Justice sake?
What Villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for Justice? What, shall one of Us,
That struck the Formost man of all this world,
But for supporting Robbers: shall we now,
Contaminate our fingers, with base bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large Honours
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a Dog, and bait the Moon,
Then such a Roman.
Cas. Brutus, bait not me,
Ile not endure it: you forget your self,
To hedge me in, I am a Souldier, I,
Older in practise, abler then your self
To make Conditions.
Bru. Go to: you are not Cassius.
Cas. I am.
Bru. I say, you are not.
Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget my self:
Have mind upon your health: Tempt me no farther.
Bru. Away slight man.
Cas. Is't possible?
Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way, and room to your rash Choler?
Shall I be frighted, when a mad man stares?
Cas. O ye Gods, ye Gods, must I endure all this?
Bru. All this? I more. Fret till your proud heart break,
Go shew your Slaves how Cholerick you are,
And make your Bondmen tremble. Must I boudge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the Gods
You shall digest the Venom of your spleen
Though it do split you. For from this day forth,
Ile use you for my Mirth, yea for my Laughter,
When you are waspish.
Cas. Is it come to this?
Bru. You say, you are a better Souldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of Noble men.
Cas. You wrong me every way:
You wrong me Brutus:
I said, an Elder Souldier, not a Better.
Did I say Better?
Bru. If you did, I care not.
Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.
Bru. Peace, peace, you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas.

Cassi. I durst not.
Bru. No.
Cassi. What? durst not tempt him?
Bru. For your life you durst not.
Cassi. Do not presume too much upon my love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for.
Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror Cassius in your threats.
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they passe by me, as the idle Wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain summes of Gold, which you deny'd me,
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for Drachmaes, then to wring
From the hard hands of Peazants, their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for Gold to pay my Legions,
Which you deny'd me: was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus growes so covetous,
To lock such Rascal Counters from his friends,
Be ready gods with all your Thunder-bolts,
Dash him to peeces.
Cas. I deny'd you not.
Bru. You did.
Cassi. I did not. He was but a Fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart
A friend should bear his friends infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater then they are.
Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.
Cassi. You love me not.
Bru. I do not like your faults.
Cassi. A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Bru. A flatterers would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.
Cassi. Come Antony, and young Octavius come,
Revenge your selves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is a-weary of the world:
Hated by one he loves, brav'd by his brother,
Check'd like a bondman, all his faults observ'd,
Set in a Note-book, learn'd, and con'd by roat
To cast into my Teeth. O I could weep
My Spirit from mine eies: There is my Dagger,
And here my naked Breast: Within a heart
Deerer then Pluto's Mine: Richer then Gold:
If that thou beest a Roman, take it forth.
I that deny'd thee Gold, will give my heart:
Strike as thou didst at Cæsar, for I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lovedst him better
Then ever thou lovedst Cassius.
Bru. Sheath your Dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope,
Do what you will, dishonour, shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoaked with a Lamb
That carries anger, as the Flint bears fire,
Who much inforced, shews a hasty spark,
And strait is cold agen.
Cassi. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but Mirth and Laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill temper'd, vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.
Cassi. Do you confesse so much? Give me your hand.
Bru. And my heart too.
Cassi. O Brutus!
Bru. What's the matter?
Cassi. Have not you love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my Mother gave me
Makes me forgetful?
Bru. Yes Cassius and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
He'l think your Mother chides, and leave you so.

Enter a Poet.

Po. Let me go in to see the Generals,
There is some grudge between em, tis not meet
They be alone.
Luci. You shall not come to them.
Poet. Nothing but death shall stay me.
Cassi. How now? What's the matter?
Poet. For shame you Generals? what do you mean?
Love, and be friends, as two such men should be,
For I have seen more years I'me sure then ye.
Cassi. Ha, ha, how vildly doth this Cynick rhime?
Bru. Get you hence sirrah: Sawcy fellow, hence.
Cassi. Bear with him Brutus, tis his fashion.
Bru. Ile know his humour, when he knows his time:
What should the Warres do with these jigging fools?
Companion, hence.
Cassi. Away, away be gone. Exit Poet.
Brut. Lucillius and Titinius bid the Commanders
Prepare to lodge their Companies to night.
Cassi. And come your selves, and bring Messala with you
Immediately to us
Bru. Lucius, a bowl of Wine.
Cassi. I did not think you could have been so angry.
Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.
Cassi. Of your Philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.
Brut. No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead.
Cassi. Ha? Portia?
Bru. She is dead.
Cassi. How scap'd I killing, when I crost you so?
O insupportable, and touching losse!
Upon what sickness?
Bru. Impatient of my absence.
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony,
Have made themselves so strong: For with her death
That tydings came. With this she fell distract,
And (her Attendants absent) swallow'd fire.
Cassi. And dy'd so?
Bru. Even so.
Cassi. O ye immortal Gods!

Enter Boy with wine, and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her: Give me a bowle of wine
In this I bury all unkindnesse Cassius. Drinks.
Cassi. My heart is thirsty for that Noble pledge,
Fill Lucius, till the Wine ore-swell the Cup:
I cannot drink too much of Brutus love.

Enter Titinius, and Messala.

Bru. Come in Titinius:
Welcome good Messala:
Now sit we close about this Taper here,
And call in question our necessities.
Cassi. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru. No more I pray you.
Messala, I have here received Letters,
That young Octavius, and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mess. My self have Letters of the self same tenure.
Bru. With what Addition.
Mess. That by proscription, and bills of Outlary,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred Senators.
Bru. Therein our Letters do not well agree:
Mine speak of seventy Senators, that dy'd
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cassi. Cicero one?
Mess. Cicero is dead, and by that order of proscription.
Had you your Letters from your wife my Lord?
Brut. No Messala.
Mess. Nor nothing in you Letters writ of her?
Bru. Nothing Messala.
Mess. That me thinks is strange.
Bru. Why aske you?
Hear you ought of her, in yours?
Mess. No my Lord.
Bru. Now as you are a Roman tell me true.
Mess. Then like a Roman, bear the truth I tell,
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.
Bru. Why farewell Portia: we must die Messala:
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.
Mess. Even so great men, great losses should endure.
Cassi. I have as much of this in Art as you,
But yet my Nature could not bear it so.
Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently.
Cassi. I do not think it good.
Bru. Your reason?
Cassi. This it is:
'Tis better that the enemy seek us
So shall he waste his means, weary his Souldiers,
Doing himself offence, whilst we lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimblenesse.
Bru. Good reasons must of force give place to better:
The people 'twixt Philippi, and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection:
For they have grudg'd us Contribution.
The Enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresht, new added, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off.
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.
Cassi. Hear me good brother.
Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,
That we have try'd the utmost of our friends:
Our Legions are brim full, our cause is ripe,
The Enemy encreaseth every day,
We at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a Tide in the affairs of men,
Which taken at the Flood, leads on to Fortune:
Omitted, all the voyage of their life,
Is bound in Shallowes, and in Miseries.
On such a full Sea, are we now a-float,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or loose our ventures.
Cassi. Then with your will go on: we'll along
Our selves, and meet them at Philippi.
Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And Nature must obey Necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest:
There is no more to say.
Cassi. No more, good night,
Early to morrow will we rise, and hence.

Enter Lucius.

Bru. Lucius my Gown: farewell good Messala,
Good night Titinius: Noble, Noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.
Cassi. O my deer brother:
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division tween our souls:
Let it not Brutus.

Enter Lucius with the Gown.

Bru. Every thing is well.
Cassi. Good night my Lord.
Bru. Good night good brother.
Tit. Messa. Good night Lord Brutus.
Bru. Farewel every one. Exeunt.
Give me the Gown. Where is thy instrument?
Luc. Here in the Tent.
Bru. What thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave I blame thee, thou art ore-watch'd.
Call Claudio, and some other of my men,
Ile have them sleep on Cushions in my Tent.
Luc. Varrus and Claudio.

Enter Varrus and Claudio.

Var. Calls my Lord?
Bru. I pray you sirs, lie in my Tent and sleep,
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On businesse to my brother Cassius.
Var. So please you, we will stand,
And watch your pleasure.
Bru. I will not have it so: lie down good sirs,
It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.
Look Lucius, here's the book I sought for so:
I put it in the pocket of my Gown.
Luc. I was sure your Lordship did not give it me.
Bru. Bear with me good boy, I am much forgetful.
Canst thou hold up thy instrument a strain or two.
And touch thy heavy eies a while.
Luc. I my Lord an't please you.
Bru. It does my Boy;
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.
Luc. It is my duty Sir.
Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might,
I know young bloods look for a time of rest.
Luc. I have slept my Lord already.
Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again:
I will not hold thee long. If I do live,
I will be good to thee.

Musick and a Song.

This is a sleepy Tune: O murderous slumber!
Layest thou thy Leaden Mace upon my boy,
That plaies thee Musick? Gentle knave good night:
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument,
Ile take it from thee, and (good boy) good night.
Let me see, let me see? is not the Leaf turn'd down
Where I left reading? Here it is I think.

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

How ill this Taper burns. Ha! Who comes here?
I think it is the weakenesse of mine eies
That shapes this monstrous Apparition.
It comes upon me: Art thou any thing?
Art thou some God, some Angell, or some Devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what thou art.
Ghost. Thy evil Spirit Brutus.
Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost.

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi,
Brut. Well: then I shall see thee again?
Ghost. I, at Philippi.
Bru. Why I will see thee at Philippi then:
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest.
Ill Spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.
Boy, Lucius, Varrus, Claudio, Sirs: awake:
Claudio.
Luci. The strings my Lord are false.
Bru. He thinkes he still is at his Instrument.
Lucius, awake.
Luci. My Lord.
Bru. Didst thou dream Lucius, that thou so cryedst out?
Luc. My Lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Bru. Yes that thou didst; Didst thou see any thing?
Luc. Nothing my Lord.
Bru. Sleep again Lucius: Sirra Claudio, fellow,
Thou, awake.
Var. My Lord.
Clau. My Lord.
Bru. Why did you so cry out sirs in your sleep?
Both. Did we my Lord?
Bru. I: saw you any thing?
Var. No my Lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I my Lord.
Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius:
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.
Both. It shall be done my Lord. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.
Octa. Now Antony, our hopes are answered,
You said the Enemy would not come down,
But keep the hils and upper regions:
It proves not so; their battels are at hand,
They mean to warn us at Philippi here:
Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tut I am in their bosomes, and I know
Wherfore they do it: They could be content
To visit other places, and come down
With fearful bravery: thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have Courage:
But tis not so.
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Prepare you Generals,
The Enemy comes on in gallant shew:
Their bloudy sign of Battel is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your Battel softly on
Upon the left hand of the even field.
Octa. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.
Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?
Octa. I do not cross you: but I will do so. March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army.
Bru. They stand, and would have parley.
Cas. Stand fast Titinius, we must out and talk.
Octa. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of Battel?
Ant. No Cæsar, we will answer on their Charge.
Make forth, the Generals would have some words.
Octa. Stir not until the Signal.
Bru. Words before blowes: is it so Countreymen?
Octa. Not that we love words better, as you do.
Bru. Good words are better then bad strokes Octavius.
Ant. In your bad strokes Brutus, you give good words,
Witness the hole you made in Cæsars heart,
Crying long live, hail Cæsar.
Cassi. Antony,
The posture of your blowes are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hibla bees,
And leave them honey-lesse.
Ant. Not stinglesse too.
Bru. O yes, and soundlesse too:
For you have stolne their buzzing Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.
Ant. Villaines: you did not so, when your vile daggers
Hack one another in the sides of Cæsar:
You shew'd your teeth like Apes,
And fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsars feet:
Whilst damned Casca, like a Cur, behind
Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers!
Cassi. Flatterers? Now Brutus thank your self
This tongue had not offended so to day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.
Octa. Come, come, the cause. If arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops:
Look, I draw a Sword against Conspirators,
When think you that the Sword goes up again?
Never till Cæsars three and thirty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar
Have added Slaughter to the Sword of Traytors.
Bru. Cæsar, Thou canst not die by Traytors hands,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.
Octa. So I hope:
I was not born to die on Brutus Sword.
Bru. O if thou were the Noblest of thy Strain,
Young-man, thou couldst not die more honourable.
Cassi. A peevish School-boy, worthies of such honour
Joyn'd with a Masker and a Reveller.
Ant. Old Cassius still.
Octa. Come Antony: away:
Defiance Traytors, hurle we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to day, come to the field:
If not, when you have stomackes.
Exit Octavius, Antony, and Army.
Cassi. Why now blow wind, swell billow,
And swim Barke:
The Storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. Ho Lucillius, heark, a word with you.
Lucillius, and Messala stand forth.
Luc. My Lord.
Cas. Messala.
Messa. What saies my General?
Cas. Messala, this is my Birth-day: as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand Messala:
Be thou my witnesse, that against my will,
(As Pompey was) am I compell'd to set
Upon one battel all our Liberties.
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: Now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former Ensign
Two mighty Eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our Souldiers hands,

Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This Morning are they fled away, and gone,
And in their steads, do Ravens, Crowes and Kites
Fly ore our heads, and downward look on us
As we were sickly prey; their shadowes seem
A Canopy most fatal, under which
Our Army lies, ready to give up the Ghost.
Messa. Believe not so.
Cassi. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all peril, very constantly.
Bru. Even so Lucillius.
Cassi. Now most Noble Brutus,
The gods to day stand friendly, that we may
Lovers in peace, lead on our dayes to age.
But since the affaires of men rests still incertain,
Lets reason with the worst that may befal.
If we do lose this Battel, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then determined to do?
Bru. Even by the rule of that Philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato, for the death
Which he did give himself, I know not how:
But I do find it Cowardly, and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life, arming my self with patience,
To stay the providence of some high Powers,
That govern us below.
Cassi. Then if we lose this Battel,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Through the streets of Rome.
Bru. No Cassius, no:
Think not thou Noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome
He bears too great a mind, But this same day
Must end that work, that Ides of March begun.
And whether we shall meet again, I know not:
Therefore our everlasting farewel take:
For ever, and for ever, farewel Cassius,
If we do meet again, why we shall smile:
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Cassi. For ever, and for ever, farewel Brutus:
If we do meet again, wee'l smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.
Bru. Why then lead on. O that a man might know
The end of this dayes business, ere it come:
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come ho, away. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride Messala, ride and give these Bils
Unto the Legions, on the other side.
Lowd Alarum.
Let them set on at once: for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavio's wing:
And sudden push gives them the overthrow:
Ride, ride Messala, let them all come down. Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cassi. O look Titinius, look, the Villaines fly:
My self have to mine own turn'd Enemy:
This Ensign here of mine was turning back,
I slew the Coward, and did take it from him.
Titin. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early,
Who having some advantage on Octavius
Took it too eagerly: his Souldiers fell to spoyl,
Whilst we by Antony are all inclos'd.

Enter Pindarus.

Pind. Fly further off my Lord: fly further off,
Mark Antony is in your Tents my Lord:
Fly therefore Noble Cassius, fly far off.
Cassi. This hill is far enough. Look, look Titinius
Are those my Tents where I perceive the fire?
Tit. They are, my Lord.
Cassi. Titinius, if thou lovest me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder Troops
And here again, that I may rest assur'd
Whether yond Troups, are Friend or Enemy.
Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. Exit.
Cassi. Go Pindarus, get thither on that hill,
My sight was ever thick: regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.
This day I breath'd first, time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end,
My life is run his compass. Sirra, what newes?
Pind. Above. O my Lord.
Cassi. What newes?
Pind. Titinius is enclosed round about
With horsemen, that make to him on the Spur,
Yet he spurs on. Now they are almost on him:
Now Titinius, Now some light: O he lights too.
He's tane. Shout.
And hark, they shout for joy.
Cassi. Come down, behold no more:
O Coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend tane before my face!

Enter Pindarus.

Come hither sirrah; In Parthia did I take thee Prisoner,
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath,
Now be a Freeman, and with this good Sword
That ran through Cæsars bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: Here, take thou the Hilts,
And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the Sword—Cæsar thou art reveng'd,
Even with the Sword that kill'd thee. Kils him.
Pin. So, I am free,
Yet would not so have been
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius,
Far from this Contry Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

Enter Titinius, and Messala.

Messa. It is but change, Titinius: for Octavius
Is overthrown by Noble Brutus power,
As Cassius Legions are by Antony.
Titin. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.
Messa. Where did you leave him?
Titin. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his Bondman, on this hill.
Messa. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?
Titi. He lies not like the Living. O my heart!
Messa. Is not that he?
Titin. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting Sun:
As in thy red Rayes thou dost sink to night;

So

So in his red blood Cassius day is set.
The Sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone,
Clowds, Dewes, and Dangers come; our deeds are done:
Mistrust of my successe hath done this deed.
Messa. Mistrust of good successe hath done this deed.
O hatefull Error, Melancholies Child:
VVhy dost thou shew to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O Error soon conceiv'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the Mother that engendred thee.
Tit. VVhat Pindarus? VVhere art thou Pindarus?
Messa. Seek him Titinius: whilst I go to meet
The Noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it:
For piercing Steel, and Darts invenomed
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tydings of this sight.
Tit. Hye you Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while:
VVhy didst thou send me forth brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends, and did not they
Put on my brows this wreath of Victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their (shouts?
Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing.
But hold thee, take this Garland on thy Brow,
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
VVill do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius:
By your leave gods: This is a Romans part,
Come Cassius Sword, and find Titinius heart. Dyes.

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Messala, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucillius.

Bru. VVhere, where Messala, doth his body lie?
Messa. Loe yonder, and Titinius mourning it.
Bru. Titinius face is upward.
Cato. He is slain.
Bru. O Julius Cæsar thou art mighty yet,
Thy Spirit walkes abroad, and turns our Swords
In our own proper Entrails. Low Alarums.
Cato. Brave Titinius,
Look where he have not Crownd dead Cassius.
Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well:
It is impossible, that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow: friends I owe moe tears
To this dead man, then you shall see me pay.
I shall find time, Cassius: I shall find time.
Come therefore, and to Tharsus send his body,
His funerals shall not be in our Camp,
Least it discomfort us. Lucillius come,
And come young Cato, let us to the field,
Labio and Flavius set our Battails on:
Tis three a clock, and Romans yet ere night,
VVe shall try fortune in a second fight. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Messala, Cato, Lucillius, and Flavius.

Bru. Yet Countreymen: O yet, hold up your heads.
Cato. VVhat Bastard doth not? who will goe with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field.
I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe.
A Foe to Tyrants, and my Countreys friend.
I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe.
Enter Souldiers and fight.
And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I.
Brutus my Countries friend: know me for Brutus.
Luc. O young and Noble Cato, art thou down?
Why now thou dyest, as bravely as Titinius,
And may'st be honour'd being Cato's Son.
Sold. Yield, or thou dyest.
Luc. Onely I yield to die:
There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight:
Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death
Sold. We must not: a Noble Prisoner.

Enter Antony.

2 Sold. Roome hoe: tell Antony, Brutus is tane.
1 Sold. Ile tell thee news, here comes the General,
Brutus is tane, Brutus is tane my Lord.
Ant. Where is he?
Luc. Safe Antony, Brutus is safe enough:
I dare assure thee, that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the Noble Brutus:
The gods defend him from so great a shame,
When you do find him or alive, or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.
Ant. This is not Brutus friend, but I assure you,
A prize no lesse in worth: keep this man safe,
Give him all kindnesse. I had rather have Such men my friends, then enemies. Go on,
And see where Brutus be alive or dead,
And bring us, unto Octavius Tent,
How every thing is chanc'd. Exeunt.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Bru. Come poor remains of friends, rest on this Rock.
Clit. Statillius shew'd the Torch-light, but my Lord
He came not back, he is or tane, or slain.
Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word,
It is a deed in fashion. Harke thee, Clitus.
Clit. What I, my Lord? No, not for all the world.
Bru. Peace then, no words.
Clit. Ile rather kill my self.
Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius
Dard. Shall I do such a deed?
Clit. O Dardanius.
Dar. O Clitus.
Clit. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?
Dar. To kill him, Clitus: look he meditates.
Clit. Now is that Noble Vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eies.
Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius, list a word.
Volum. What saies my Lord?
Bru. Why this, Volumnius:
The Ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two severall times by night: at Sardis, once;
And this last night, here in Philippi-fields:
I know my hour is come.
Volum. Not so, my Lord.
Bru. Nay I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes,
Our enemies have beat us to the Pit: Low Alarum.
It is more worthy, to leap in our selves,
Then tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius
Thou knowest that we two went to school together:
Even for that our love of old, I prethee
Hold thou my Swords Hilt, while I run on it.
Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my Lord.
Alarum still.

Cli. Fly, fly my Lord, there is no tarrying here.
Bru. Farewell to you, and you, and you Volumnius.
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep:
Farewell to thee, to Strato, Countreymen:
My heart doth joy, that yet all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this loosing day
More then Octavius and Mark Antony,
By this vile Conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once, for Brutus tongue
Hath almost ended his lives History:
Night hangs upon mine eies, my bones would rest,
That have but labour'd, to attain this hour.

Alarum. Cry within. Fly, flye, flye.
Cli. Flye my Lord, flye:
Bru. Hence: I will follow:
I prethee Strato, stay thou by thy Lord,
Thou art a fellow of a good respect:
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it.
Hold then my Sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou Strato?
Strat. Give me your hand first. Fare you well my Lord.
Bru. Farewell good Strato.——Cæsar, now be still,
I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. Dyes.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Antony, Octavius, Messala, Lucillius, and the Army.
Octa. What man is that?
Messa. My Masters man. Strato, where is thy Master?
Stra. Free from the bondage you are in Messala,
The Conquerors can but make a fire of him:
For Brutus onely overcame himself,
And no man else hath honor by his death.
Luci. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee Brutus
That thou hast prov'd Lucillius saying true.
Octa. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them,
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Stra. I, if Messala will preferre me to you.
Octa. Do so, good Messala.
Messa. How dyed my Lord, Strato?
Stra. I held the Sword, and he did run on it.
Messa. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my Master.
Ant. This was the Noblest Roman of them all:
All the Conspirators save onely he,
Did that they did, in envy of great Cæsar:
He, onely in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the Elements
So mixt in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world; This was a man.
Octa. According to his Vertue, let us use him
With all respect, and rites of Burial.
Within my Tent his bones to night shall lye,
Most like a Souldier ordered honorably:
So call the field to rest, and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 WHen shall we three meet again?
In Thunder, Lightning, or in Rain?
2 When the Hurly-burly's done,
When the Battel's lost and won.
3 That will be ere the set of Sun.
1 Where the place?
2 Upon the Heath.
3 There to meet with Macbeth.
1 I come, Gray-Malkin.
All. Padocke calls anon: fair is foul, and foul is fair,
Hover through the fog and filthy air. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter King, Malcolme, Donalbaine, Lenox, with attendants, meeting a bleeding Captain.

King. What bloudy man is that? he can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.
Mal. This is the Serjeant,
Who like a good and hardy Souldier fought
Gainst my Captivity: Hail, hail brave friend;
Say to the King, the knowledge of the broyl,
As thou didst leave it.
Cap. Doubtful it stood,
As two spent Swimmers, that do cling together,
And choak their Art: The mercilesse Macdonnel
(VVorthy to be a Rebel, for to that
The multiplying Villaines of Nature
Do swarm upon him) from the western Isles
Of Kernes and Gallow glasses is supply'd,
And Fortune on his damned Quarry smiling,
Shew'd like a Rebels whore: but all's too weak:
For brave Macbeth (well he deserves that name)
Disdaining Fortune, with his brandisht Steel,
VVhich smoak'd with bloudy execution
(Like Valours Minion) carv'd out his passage,
Till he fac'd the Slave:
VVhich nev'r shook hands, nor bad farewel to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the Nave to th' Chops,
And fix'd his head upon our Battlements.

King. O valiant Cousin, worthy Gentleman.
Cap. As whence the Sun gins his reflection,
Shipwracking Stormes, and direful Thunders breaking
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swels: Mark King of Scotland, mark,
No sooner justice had, with Valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heeles,
But the Norweyan Lord, surveying vantage,
VVith furbusht Armes, and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.
King. Dismaid not this our Captaines, Macbeth and Banquo?
Cap. Yes, as Sparrowes Eagles;
Or the Hare, the Lyon.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As Cannons overcharg'd with double Crackes
So they doubly redoubled stroaks on the Foe:
Except they meant to bath in reeking VVounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell: but I am faint,
My Gashes cry for help.
King. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds
They smack of Honour both: Go get him Surgeons.

Enter Rosse and Angus.

VVho comes here?
Mal. The worthy Thane of Rosse.
Lenox. VVhat hast lookes through his eyes?
So should he look, that seemes to speak things strange.
Rosse. God save the King.
King. VVhence cam'st thou, worthy Thane?
Rosse. From Fife, great King,
VVhere the Norweyan Banners flout the Sky,
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal Traytor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal Conflict,
Till that Bellona's Bridegroom, lapt in proof
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against Point, rebellious arm gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and to conclude,
The Victory fell on us.
King. Great happiness.
Rosse. That now Sweno, the Norwayes King,
Craves composition:
Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmes-hill,
Ten thousand Dollars, to our general use.

King.

King. No more that Thane of Cawdor ſhall deceive
Our boſom intereſt: Go pronounce his preſent death,
And with his former Title great Macbeth.
Roſſe. Ile ſee it done.
King. What he hath loſt, noble Macbeth hath won.
Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Where haſt thou been, Siſter?
2 Killing Swine.
3 Siſter, where thou?
1 A Saylors wife had Cheſtnuts in her Lap,
And mounche, and mounche, and mounche:
Give me, quoth I.
Anoynt thee, Witch, the Rump-fed Ronyon cries.
Her husband's to Aleppo gone, Maſter oth' Tiger:
But in a Syve Ile thither ſayle,
And like a Rat without a tayl,
Ile do, Ile do, and Ile do.
2 Ile give thee a wind.
1 Th'art kind.
3 And I another.
1 I my ſelf have all the other,
And the very Ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know.
Ith' Shipmans Card.
I'le drain him dry as Hay:
Sleep ſhall neither night nor day
Hang upon his Pent-houſe Lid:
He ſhall live a man forbid:
Weary Sev'nights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:
Though his Bark cannot be loſt,
Yet it ſhall be Tempeſt-toſt.
Look what I have.
2 Shew me, ſhew me.
1 Here I have a Pilots Thumb,
Wrackt, as homeward he did come. Drum within.
3 A Drum, a Drum:
Macbeth doth come.
All. The weyward Siſters, hand in hand,
Poſters of the Sea and Land.
Thus do go, about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine.
Peace, the Charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not ſeen.
Banq. How far is't call'd to Soris? What are theſe,
So wither'd, and ſo wild in their attire,
That look not like th'inhabitants oth'Earth,
And yet are on't? Live you, or are you aught
That man may queſtion? you ſeem to underſtand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny Lips: you ſhould be Women,
And yet your Beards forbid me to interpret
That you are ſo.
Mac. Speak if you can: what are you?
1 All hail Macbeth, hail to thee Thane of Glamis.
2 All hail Macbeth, hail to thee Thane of Cawdor.
3 All hail Macbeth, that ſhalt be King hereafter.
Banq. Good ſir, why do you ſtart, and ſeem to fear
Things that do ſound ſo fair? i'th name of truth
Are ye fantaſtical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye ſhew? My Noble Partner
You greet with preſent Grace, and great prediction
Of Noble having, and of Royal hope,
That he ſeems wrapt withal; to me you ſpeak not.
If you can look into the Seeds of Time,
And ſay, which Grain will grow, and which will not,
Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear
Your favours, nor your hate.
1 Hayl.
2 Hayl.
3 Hayl.
1 Leſſer then Macbeth, and greater.
2 Not ſo happy, yet much happier.
3 Thou ſhalt get Kings, though thou be none:
So all hail Macbeth, and Banquo.
1 Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail.
Macb. Stay you imperfect Speakers, tell me more:
By Sinels death, I know I am Thane of Glamis,
But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives
A proſperous Gentleman: And to be King,
Stands not within the proſpect of belief,
No more then to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this ſtrange intelligence, or why
Upon this blaſted heath you ſtop our way
With ſuch Prophetique greeting?
Speak, I charge you. Witches vaniſh.
Banq. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And theſe are of them: whither are they vaniſh'd?
Macb. Into the Ayr: and what ſeem'd corporal,
Melted, as breath into the wind.
Would they had ſtaid.
Banq. Were ſuch things here, as we do ſpeak about?
Or have we eaten on the inſane Root,
That takes the Reaſon Priſoner?
Macb. Your Children ſhall be Kings.
Banq. You ſhall be King.
Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too: went it not ſo?
Banq. Toth' ſelf-ſame tune, and words: who's here?

Enter Roſſe, and Angus.

Roſſ. The King hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
The news of thy ſucceſs: and when he reads
Thy perſonal Venture in the Rebels fight,
His wonders and his Praiſes do contend,
Which ſhould be thine, or his: ſilenc'd with that,
In viewing o're the reſt o'th'ſelf-ſame day,
He finds thee in the ſtout Norweyan Rankes,
Nothing afeard of what thy ſelf didſt make
Strange Images of death, as thick as tale
Can poſt with poſt, and every one did bear
Thy praiſes in his Kingdomes great defence,
And powr'd them down before him.
Ang. We are ſent,
To give thee from our Royal Maſter thankes,
Only to herrald thee into his ſight,
Not pay thee.
Roſſe. And for an earneſt of a greater honour,
He bad me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor:

In

In which addition hail most worthy Thane,
For it is thine.
Banq. What can the Devil speak true?
Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives:
Why do you dresse me in his borrowed Robes?
Ang. Who was the Thane, lives yet,
But under heavy judgement bears that life,
Which he deserves to loose.
Whether he was combin'd with those of Norway
Or else did line the Rebel with hidden help,
And vantage; or that with both he labour'd
In his Countreys wrack, I know not:
But Treasons Capital, confess'd, and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.
Macb. Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind. Thanks for your pains.
Do you not hope your Children shall be Kings,
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no lesse to them.
Banq. That trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the Crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But tis strange:
And oftentimes, to winne us to our harme,
The instruments of Darkenesse tell us Truths,
Winne us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.
Cousins, a word, I pray you.
Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy Prologues to the swelling Act
Of the imperial Theam. I thank you Gentlemen:
This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.
If ill? why hath it given me earnest of successe,
Commencing in a Truth? I am Thane of Cawdor.
If good? why do I yield to that suggestion,
Whose horrid Image doth unfix my heire,
And make my seated heart knock at my Ribbs,
Against the use of nature? present fears
Are lesse then horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose Murther yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man,
That function is smother'd in surmise,
And nothing is, but what is not.
Banq. Look how our Partners rapt.
Macb. If chance will have me King,
Why Chance may Crown me.
Without my stirre.
Banq. New honors come upon him
Like our strange Garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.
Macb. Come what come may,
Time, and the hour, runs through the roughest day.
Banq. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.
Macb. Give me your favour:
My dull brain was wrought with things forgotten.
Kind Gentlemen, your pains are registred,
Where every day I turn the Leaf,
To read them.
Let us toward the King; think upon
What hath chanc'd: and at more time,
The Interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.
Banq. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then enough:
Come friends.

Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Flourish. Enter King, Lenox, Malcolme, Donalbain, and Attendants.

King. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Are not those in Commission yet return'd?
Mal. My Liege, they are not yet come back.
But I have spoke with one that saw him die:
Who did report, that very frankly he
Confess'd his Treasons, implor'd your Highnesse pardon
And set forth a deep Repentance:
Nothing in his life became him,
Like the leaving it. He dy'd,
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As twere a carelesse trifle.
King. There's no Art,
To find the minds construction in the face:
He was a Gentleman, on whom I built
An absolute Trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.

O worthyest Cousin,
The sinne of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so farre before,
That swiftest Wine of Recompence is slow:
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst lesse deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks, and payment,
Might have been mine: onely I have left to say,
More is thy due, then more then all can pay.
Macb. The service, and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it paies it self
Your Highnesse part, is to receive our Duties:
And our Duties are to your Throne and State.
Children, and Servants; which do but what they should
By doing every thing safe toward your love
And honor.
King. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo
That hast no lesse deserv'd, nor must be known
No lesse to have done so: Let me enfold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.
Banq. There if I grow,
The Harvest is your own.
King. My plentious joyes,
Wanton in fulnesse, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, Kinsman, Thanes,
And you whose places are the neerest, know,
We will establish our Estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter,
The Prince of Cumberland: which honor must
Not unaccompanied, invest him only.
But signes of Nobleness, like Starrs shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Envernes
And bind us further to you.
Ma. The Rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:
Ile be my self the Herbenger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife, with your approach:
So humbly take my leave.
King. My worthy Cawdor.
Macb. The Prince of Cumberland: that is a step,
On which I must fall down, or else o're leap,

For

For in my way it lies. Starrs hide your fires,
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand: yet let that be,
Which the eie fears, when it is done to see. Exit.

King. True, worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations, I am fed:
It is a Banquet to me. Lets after him,
Whose care is gone before, to bid us welcome:
It is a peerlesse kinsman. Exeunt.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Macbeths wife alone with a Letter.

Lady. They met me in the day of success: and I have learn'd by the perfect'st report, they have more in them, then mortal knowledge. When I burnt in desire to question them further, they made themselves Air. into which they vanish'd. Whilst I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came Missives from the King, who all hail'd me Thane of Cawdor, by which Title before, these weyward Sisters saluted me, and referr'd me to the coming on of time, with hail King that shalt be. This have I thought good to deliver thee (my dearest partner of greatnesse) that thou might'st not lose the dues of rejoycing by being ignorant of what Greatnesse is promis'd thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.
Glamis thou art, and Cawdor, and shalt be
What thou art promis'd: yet do I fear thy Nature,
It is too full o'th' Milk of humane kindnesse,
To catch the neerest way. Thou wouldst be great,
Art not without ambition: but without
The illnesse should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily: wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly winne.
Thouldst have, great Glamis, that which cries,
Thus thou must do if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Then wishest should be undone. High thee hither,
That I may powre my Spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that thee hinders from the Golden Round,
Which Fate and Metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withall. Enter Messenger.
What is your tidings?
Mess. The King comes here to night,
Lady. Thou'rt mad to say it.
Is not thy Master with him? who, wer't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.
Mess. So please you, it is true: our Thane is coming,
One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Then would make up his Message.
Lady. Give him tending,
He brings great news. Exit Messenger.
The Raven himself is hoarse,
That croakes the fatall entrance of Duncane
Under my Battlements. Come you Spirits,
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me from the Crown to the Toe, top-full
Of direst Cruelty: make thick my blood,
Stop up th'access and passage to Remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of Nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between Th'effect, and it. Come to my Womans Brests,
And take my Milk for Gall, you Murth'ring Ministers,
VVhere-ever in your sightlesse substances,
You wait on Natures Mischief. Come thick Night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoak of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the Blanket of the dark,
To cry, hold, hold. Enter Macbeth.
Great Glamis, worthy Cawdor,
Greater then both, by the all-hail hereafter,
Thy Letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.
Macb. My dearest Love,
Duncane comes here to night.
Lady. And when goes hence?
Macb. To morrow, as he purposes.
Lady. O never,
Shall Sunne that morrow see.
Your Face, my Thane is as a book, where men
May read strange matters to beguile the time.
Look like the time, bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
But be the Serpent under't. He that's coming,
Must be provided for: and you shall put
This Nights great businesse into my dispatch,
VVhich shall to all our Nights and Daies to come,
Give solely Soveraign sway and Masterdom.
Macb. VVe will speak further.
Lady. Onely look up cleer:
To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. Exeunt

Scæna Sexta.

Hoboyes, and Torches. Enter King, Malcolm, Donalbain. Banquo, Lenox, Macduffe, Rosse, Angus, and Attendants.

King. This Castle hath a pleasant seat,
The air nimbly and sweetly recommends it self
Unto our gentle senses.
Banq. This Guest of Summer,
The Temple-haunting Barlet does approve,
By his loved Mansonry, that the Heavens breath,
Smells wooingly here: no Jutty frieze,
Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantage, but this Bird
Hath made his pendant bed, and procreant Cradle,
VVhere they must breed, and haunt: I have observ'd
The air is delicate, Enter Lady.
King. See, see, our honor'd Hostesse:
The love that follows us, sometime is our trouble,
VVhich still we thank as Love. Herein I teach you,
How you shall bid god-eyld us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.
Lady. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
VVere poor, and single Businesse, to contend
Against those honors deep, and broad,
VVherewith your Majesty loads our house:
For those of old, and the late Dignities,
Heap'd up to them, we rest your Hermits.

King.

King. VVhere's the Thane of Cawdor?
VVe courſt him at the heeles, and had a purpoſe
To be his Purveyor: But he rides vvell,
And his great Love (ſharp as his Spur) hath holp him
To his home before us: Fair and Noble Hoſteſs
VVe are your gueſt to night.
Lady. Your Servants ever,
Have theirs, themſelves, and vvhat is theirs in compt,
To make their Audit at your highneſs pleaſure,
Still to return your ovvn.
King. Give me your hand:
Conduct me to mine Hoſt, vve love him highly,
And ſhall continue, our Graces tovvards him.
By your leave Hoſteſs. Exeunt.

Scæna Septima.

Ho boyes. Torches.
Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with Diſhes and Service over the Stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it vvere done, vvhen tis done, then 'tvvere vvell,
It were done quickly: if th'Aſſaſſination
Could trammel up the Conſequence, and catch
With his ſurceaſe, Succeſs: that but this blow
Might be the be all, and the end all. Here,
But here, upon this Bank and School of time,
We'ld jump the life to come. But in theſe Caſes,
We ſtill have judgment here, that we but teach
Bloudy inſtructions, which being taught, return
To plague th'ingredience of our poyſon'd Chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double truſt;
Firſt, as I am his Kinſman, and his Subject,
Strong both againſt the Deed: then, as his Hoſt,
Who ſhould againſt his Murderer ſhut the door,
Not bear the knife my ſelf. Beſides this Duncane
Hath born this Faculty ſo meek: hath been
So clear in his great Office, that his Vertues
Will plead like Angels, Trumpet-tongu'd againſt
The deep damnation of his taking off:
And Pity, like a naked new-born-babe,
Striding the blaſt, or heavens Cherubin, hors'd
Upon the ſightleſs Curriors of the Ayr,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That teares ſhall drown the wind. I have no Spur
To prick the ſides of my intent, but only
Vaulting Ambition, which ore-leapes it ſelf,
And fals on th'other. Enter Lady.
How now? What Newes?
La. He has almoſt ſupt: why have you left the chamber?
Mac. Hath he ask'd for me?
Lady, Know you not, he has?
Mac. We will proceed no further in this Buſineſs:
He hath honour'd me of late, and I have bought
Golden Opinions from all ſorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their neweſt gloſs,
Not caſt aſide ſo ſoon.
Lady. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dreſt your ſelf? hath it ſlept ſince?
And wakes it now to look ſo green and pale?
At what it did ſo freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou affear'd
To be the ſame in thine own Act, and Valour,
As thou art in deſire? Would'ſt thou have that
Which thou eſteem'ſt the Ornament of Life,
And live a Coward in thine own eſteem?
Letting I dare not, wait upon I would,
Like the poor Cat i'th'Addage.
Macb. Prethee peace:
I dare do all that may become a man,
Who dares no more, is none.
Lady. What beaſt was't then
That made you break this Enterprize to me?
When you durſt do it, then you were a man:
And to be more then what you were, you would
Be ſo much more the man. Nor time, nor place
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themſelves, and that their fitneſs now
Do's unmake you. I have given Suck, and know
How tender 'tis to love the Babe that milkes me,
I would, while it was ſmiling in my face,
Have pluckt my Nipple from his boneleſs Gummes,
And daſht the Braines out, had I but ſo ſworn
As you have done to this.
Macb. If we ſhould fail?
Lady. We fail?
But ſcrew your courage to the ſticking place,
And we'l not fail: when Duncan is aſleep,
(Whereto the rather ſhall his daies hard Journey
Soundly invite him) his two Chamberlaines
Will I with wine, and waſſel, ſo convince,
That Memory, the warder of the Brain,
Shall be a Fume, and the Receit of Reaſon
A Lymbeck only, when in Swiniſh ſleep,
Their drenched Natures lie as in a Death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
Th'unguarded Duncan? What not put upon
His ſpungy Officers? who ſhall bear the guilt
Of our great quell.
Macb. Bring forth Men-Children only:
For thy undaunted Mettle ſhould compoſe
Nothing but Males. VVill it not be receiv'd,
VVhen we have mark'd with bloud thoſe ſleepy two
Of his own Chamber, and us'd their very Daggers,
That they have don't?
Lady. VVho dares receive it other,
As we ſhall make our Griefes and Clamor rore,
Upon his Death?
Macb. I am ſetled, and bend up
Each corporal Agent to this terrible Feat,
Away, and mock the time with faireſt ſhow,
Falſe Face muſt hide what the falſe heart doth know.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Banquo, and Fleance, with a Torch before him.

Banq. How goes the Night, Boy?
Fleance. The Moon is dovvn: I have not heard the Clock.
Banq. And ſhe goes dovvn at Tvvelve.
Flean. I tak't, 'tis later, Sir.
Banq. Hold, take my Svvord:
There's Husbandry in Heaven,
Their Candles are all out: take thee that too.

A heavy Summons lies like Lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep:
Merciful Powers, restrain in me the cursed thoughts
That Nature gives way to in repose.

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a Torch.

Give me my Sword: who's there?
Macb. A friend.
Banq. What Sir, not yet at rest? the King's a bed,
He hath been in unusual pleasure:
And sent forth a great Largess to your Offices.
This Diamond he greets your Wife withal,
By the name of most kind Hostess,
And shut it up in measurelesse content.
Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.
Banq. All's well.
I dreampt last night of the three weyward Sisters:
To you they have shew'd some truth.
Macb. I think not of them:
Yet when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that Business,
If you would grant the time.
Ban. At your kind leisure.
Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,
When 'tis, it shall make honour for you.
Banq. So I lose none,
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd, and Allegiance clear,
I shall be counsell'd.
Macb. Good repose the while.
Banq. Thankes Sir: the like to you. Exit Banquo.
Macb. Go bid thy Mistress, when my drink is ready
She strike upon the Bell. Get thee to bed. Exit.
Is this a dagger, which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still,
Art thou not fatal Vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A Dagger of the Mind, a false Creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed Brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable,
As this which now I draw.
Thou marshalst me the way that I was going,
And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fooles o'th' other Senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade, and Dudgeon, Gouts of bloud,
Which was not so before. There's no such thing:
It is the bloudy Business, which informes
Thus to mine eyes. Now o're the one half world
Nature seemes dead, and wicked Dreams abuse
The Curtain'd sleep: Witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecates Offerings: and wither'd Murther,
Alarum'd by his Centinel, the wolfe,
Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquins ravishing sides, towards his design
Moves like a Ghost. Thou sowr and firm-set Earth
Hear not my steps, which they may walk, for fear
Thy very stones prate of my where-about,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suites with it. Whiles I threat, he lives:
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.
A Bell rings.
I go, and it is done: the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncane, for it is a Knell,
That summons thee to heaven, or to hell. Exit.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Lady.
La. That which hath made them drunk, hath made me bold:
What hath quench'd them, hath given me fire.
Hark, peace: it was the Owl that shriek'd,
The fatal Bell-man, which gives the stern'st good-night,
He is about it, the Doores are open:
And the surfetted Groomes do mock their charge
With Snores. I have drugg'd their Possets,
That death and Nature do contend about them,
Whether they live, or die.
Enter Macbeth.
Macb. Who's there? what hoa?
Lady. Alack, I am afraid they have awak'd,
And 'tis not done: th'attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us: heark: I laid their Daggers ready,
He could not miss em. Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had don't.
My Husband?
Macb. I have done the deed:
Didst thou not hear a noyse?
Lady. I heard the Owl schream, and the Crickets cry.
Did not you speak?
Macb. When?
Lady. Now.
Macb. As I descended?
Lady. I.
Macb. Heark, who lies ith'second Chamber?
Lady. Donalbaine.
Macb. This is a sorry sight.
Lady. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.
Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep,
And one cry'd Murder, that they did wake each other:
I stood, and heard them: but they did say their Prayers,
And addrest them again to sleep.
Lady. There are two lodg'd together.
Macb. One cry'd God blesse us, and Amen the other,
As they had seen me with these hangmans hands:
Listning their fear, I could not say Amen,
When they did say God blesse us.
Lady. Consider it not so deeply.
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce Amen?
I had most need of blessing, and Amen stuck in my throat.
Lady. These deeds must not be thought
After these waies: so, it will make us mad.
Macb. Me thought I heard a voyce cry, sleep no more:
Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep,
Sleep that knits up the ravel'd Sleeve of Care,
The death of each daies Life, sore Labours Bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great Natures second Course,
Chief nourisher in lifes feast.
Lady. What do you mean?
Macb. Still it cry'd, sleep no more to all the house:
Glamis hath murther'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleep no more: Macbeth shall sleep no more.
Lad. Who was it, that thus cry'd? why worthy Thane,
You do unbend your Noble strength, to think
So brain-sickly of things: Go, get some water,

And

And wash this filthy witness from your Hand,
Why did you bring these Daggers from the place?
They must lye there: go carry them, and smear
The sleepy Groomes with bloud.
Macb. I'le go no more:
I am afraid, to think what I have done:
Look on't again, I dare not.
Lady. Infirm of purpose:
Give me the Daggers: the sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as Pictures: 'tis the Eye of Child-hood,
That fears a painted Devil. If he do bleed,
I'le gild the Faces of the Groomes withall,
For it must seem their Guilt. Exit.

Knock within.

Macb. Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noise appalls me?
What Hands are here? hah: they pluck out mine Eyes.
Will all great Neptune's Ocean wash this bloud
Clean from my Hand? no: this my Hand will rather
The multitudinous Seas incarnardine,
Making the Green one, Red.

Enter Lady.

Lady. My hands are of your colour: but I shame
To wear a heart so white. Knock.
I hear a knocking at the South entry:
Retire we to our Chamber:
A little Water cleares us of this deed.
How easie is it then? your Constancy
Hath left you unattended, Knock.
Heark, more knocking.
Get on your Night-Gown, lest occasion call us,
And shew us to be Watchers: be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.
Macb. To know my deed, Knock.
'Twere best not know my self.
Wake Duncan with thy knocking:
I would thou could'st. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter a Porter.

Knocking within.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed: if a man were Porter of Hell Gate, he should have old turning the Key. Knock. Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there i'th'name of Belzebub? Here's a a Farmer, that hang'd himself on th'expectation of Plenty: Come in time, have Napkins enough about you, here you'll sweat for't. Knock. Knock, Knock, Who's there in th'other Devil's Name? Faith here's an Equivocator; that could swear in both the Scales, against either Scale, who committed Treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to Heaven: oh come in, Equivocator. Knock. Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there? Faith here's an English Taylor come hither, for stealing out of a French Hose: Come in Taylor, here you may roast your Goose. Knock. Knock, Knock, Never at quiet: What are you? but this place is too cold for Hell. I'le Devil-Porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the Primrose-way to th'everlasting Bonfire. Knock. Anon, anon, I pray you remember the Porter.

Enter Macduff, and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend; e're you went to bed,
That you do lye so late?
Port. Faith Sir, we were carousing till the second Cock:
And Drink, Sir, is a great provoker of three things.
Macd. What three things does Drink especially provoke?
Port. Marry, Sir, Nose-painting, Sleep, and Urine.
Lechery, Sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it Provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drink may be said to be an Equivocator with Lechery: it makes him and it marres him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it perswades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.
Macd. I believe, Drink gave thee the Lye last Night.
Port. That it did, Sir, i'the very Throat on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and (I think) being too strong for him, though he took up my Legges sometime, yet I made a Shift to cast him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macd. Is thy Master stirring?
Our knocking has awak'd him: here he comes.
Lenox. Good morrow, Noble Sir.
Macb. Good morrow both.
Macd. Is the King stirring, worthy Thane?
Macb. Not yet.
Macd. He did command me to call timely on him,
I have almost slipt the hour.
Macb. I'le bring you to him.
Macd. I know this is a joyfull trouble to you:
But yet 'tis one.
Macb. The labour we delight in, Physick's pain:
This is the Door.
Macd. I'le make so bold to call, for 'tis my limited service. Exit Macduffe.
Lenox. Goes the King hence to day.
Macb. He does: he did appoint so.
Lenox. The Night has been unruly:
Where we lay, our Chimneys were blown down.
And (as they say) lamentings heard i'th' Air;
Strange Schreems of Death,
And Prophesying, with Accents terrible,
Of dire combustions, and confus'd Events,
New hatch'd to th'wofull time.
The obscure Bird clamor'd the live-long Night,
Some say, the Earth was feaverous,
And did shake.
Macb. 'Twas a rough Night.
Lenox. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.

Macd. O horrour, horrour, horrour!
Tongue nor Heart cannot conceive, nor name thee.
Macb. and Lenox. What's the matter?
Macd. Confusion now hath made his Master-piece:
Most sacrilegious Murther hath broke ope
The Lord's annointed Temple, and stole thence
The Life o'th' Building.
Macb. What is't you say? the Life?
Lenox. Mean you his Majesty?
Macb. Approach the Chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon. Do not bid me speak:

See, and then ſpeak your ſelves: awake, awake,
Exeunt Macbeth and Lenox.
Ring the Alarum-Bell: Murther, and Treaſon,
Banquo, and Donalbaine: Malcolme awake,
Shake off this Downy ſleep, Death's counterfeit,
And look on Death it ſelf: up, up, and ſee
The great Doom's Image: Malcolme, Banquo,
As from your Graves riſe up, and walk like Sprights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell.
Bell rings. Enter Lady.
Lady. What's the buſineſs?
That ſuch a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The ſleepers of the Houſe? ſpeak, ſpeak.
Macd. O gentle Lady,
'Tis not for you to hear what I can ſpeak:
The repetition in a Woman's ear,
Would murther as it fell.
Enter Banquo.
O Banquo, Banquo, Our Royal Maſter's murther'd.
Lady. VVoe, alas:
What, in our houſe?
Ban. Too cruel, any where.
Dear Duff, I prythee contract thy ſelf,
And ſay, it is not ſo.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Roſſe.

Macb. Had I but dy'd an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a bleſſed time: for from this inſtant,
There's nothing ſerious in Mortality:
All is but toyes: Renown and Grace is dead,
The Wine of Life is drawn, and the mere Lees
Is left this Vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolme, and Donalbaine.

Donal. What is amiſs?
Macb. You are, and do not know't:
The Spring, the Head, the Fountain of your Bloud
Is ſtopt; the very Source of it is ſtopt.
Macd. Your Royal Father's murther'd.
Mal. Oh, by whom?
Lenox. Thoſe of his Chamber, as it ſeem'd, had don't:
Their Hands and Faces were all badg'd with bloud,
So were their Daggers, which unwip'd, we found
Upon their Pillows: they ſtar'd, and were diſtracted,
No man's life was to be truſted with them.
Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.
Macd. VVherefore did you ſo?
Macb. Who can be wiſe, amaz'd, temp'rate, & furious,
Loyal, and Neutral, in a moment? No man:
Th'expedition of my violent Love
Out-run the pauſer, Reaſon. Here lay Duncan,
His ſilver skin, lac'd with his Golden Bloud,
And his gaſh'd Stabs, look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Ruines waſtfull entrance: there the Murtherers,
Steep'd in the Colours of their Trade; their Daggers
Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refrain,
That had a heart to love, and in that heart,
Courage, to make's love known?
Lady. Help me hence, hoa.
Macd. Look to the Lady.
Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,
That moſt may claim this argument for ours?
Donal. What ſhould be ſpoken here,
VVhere our Fate hid within an awger-hole,
May ruſh, and ſeize us? Let's away,
Our tears are not yet brew'd.
Mal. Nor our ſtrong Sorrow
Upon the foot of Motion,
Banq. Look to the Lady:
And when we have our naked Frailties hid,
That ſuffer in expoſure; let us meet,
And queſtion this moſt bloudy piece of work,
To know it further. Feares and ſcruples ſhake us:
In the great Hand of God I ſtand, and thence,
Againſt the un-divulg'd pretence I fight
Of treaſonous Malice.
Macd. And ſo do I.
All. So all.
Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readineſs,
And meet i'th'Hall together.
All. Well contented. Exeunt.
Malc. VVhat will you do?
Let's not conſort with them:
To ſhew an unfelt Sorrow, is an Office
Which the falſe man do's eaſie.
I'le to England.
Don. To Ireland, I:
Our ſeparated fortune ſhall keep us both the ſafer:
Where we are, there's Daggers in mens Smiles;
The near in bloud, the nearer bloudy.
Malc. This murtherous ſhaft that's ſhot,
Hath not yet lighted: and our ſafeſt way,
Is to avoid the aime. Therefore to houſe,
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But ſhift away: there's warrant in that Theft
VVhich ſteals it ſelf, when there's no mercy left.
Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Roſſe, with an Old man.

Old man. Threeſcore and ten I can remember well,
VVithin the volume of which time, I have ſeen
Houres dreadfull, and things ſtrange: but this ſore Night
Hath trifled former knowings.
Roſſe. Ha, good Father,
Thou ſeeſt the heavens, as troubled with man's Act,
Threatens his bloudy Stage: by th'Clock 'tis Day,
And yet dark Night ſtrangles the travelling Lamp:
Is't Night's predominance, or the Day's ſhame,
That Darkneſs do's the face of Earth intombe,
VVhen living Light ſhould kiſs it?
Old man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done: on Tueſday laſt,
A Faulcon towring in her pride of place,
VVas by a Mowſing Owle hawkt at, and kill'd.
Roſſe. And Duncan's horſes,
(A thing moſt ſtrange, and certain)
Beauteous, and ſwift, the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their ſtalls, flung out,
Contending 'gainſt Obedience, as they would Make war with Mankind.
Old man. 'Tis ſaid, they eat each other.
Roſſe. They did ſo:

To

To th'amazement of mine eyes that look'd upon't.

Enter Macduff.

Here comes the good Macduff.
How goes the world Sir, now?

Macd. VVhy see you not?

Roſſe. Is't known who did this more then bloudy deed?

Macd. Thoſe that Macbeth hath ſlain.

Roſſe. Alas the day,
What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were ſuborned,
Malcolm, and Donalbain the King's two Sonnes
Are ſtolne away and fled, which puts upon them
Suſpition of the deed.

Roſſe. 'Gainſt Nature ſtill,
Thriftleſs Ambition, that will raven upon
Thine own lives means: then 'tis moſt like,
The Soveraignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be inveſted.

Roſſe. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colmekill,
The Sacred Store-houſe of his Predeceſſors,
And Guardian of their Bones.

Roſſe. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No Couſin, I'le to Fife.

Roſſe. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well may you ſee things well done there: Adieu.
Leſt our old Robes ſit eaſier then our new.

Roſſe. Farewell, Father.

Old M. God's beniſon go with you Sir, and with thoſe
That would make good of bad, and Friends of Foes.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo.

Banq. Thou haſt it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weyward Woman promis'd, and I fear
Thou playd'ſt moſt foulely for't: yet it was ſaid
It ſhould not ſtand in thy Poſterity,
But that my ſelf ſhould be the Root, and Father
Of many Kings. If there come truth from them,
As upon thee Macbeth, their Speeches ſhine,
Why by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my Oracles as well,
And ſet me up in hope. But huſh, no more.

Senit ſounded. Enter Macbeth as King, Lady Lenox, Roſſe, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief Gueſt.

La. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great Feaſt,
And all things unbeconing.

Macb. To night we hold a ſolemn Supper, ſir,
And I'le requeſt your preſence.

Banq. Let your Highneſs
Command upon me, to the which my duties
Are with a moſt indiſſoluble tye
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Banq. I, my good Lord.

Macb. We ſhould have elſe deſir'd your good advice
(Which ſtill hath been both grave, and proſperous)
In this dayes Councel: but we'll take to morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Banq. As far, my Lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this, and Supper. Go not my Horſe the better,
I muſt become a borrower of the Night,
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our Feaſt.

Ban. My Lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloudy Couſins are beſtow'd
In England, and in Ireland, not confeſſing
Their cruel Parricide, filling their hearers
With ſtrange invention. But of that to morrow,
When therewithall we ſhall have cauſe of State,
Craving us jointly. Hye you to horſe:
Adieu, till you return at Night.
Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. I, my good Lord: our time does call upon's.

Macb. I wiſh your Horſes ſwift, and ſure of foot:
And ſo do I commend you to their backs.
Farewell. Exit Banquo.
Let every man be maſter of his time,
'Till ſeven at Night, to make ſociety
The ſweeter welcome:
We will keep our ſelf till Supper time alone:
While then, God be with you. Exeunt Lords.
Sirrha, a word with you: Attend thoſe men
Our pleaſure?

Servant. They are, my Lord, without the Pallace Gate.

Macb. Bring them before us. Exit Servant.
To be thus, is nothing, but to be ſafely thus:
Our feares in Banquo ſtick deep,
And in his Royalty of Nature reigns that
Which would be fear'd. 'Tis much he dares,
And to that dauntleſs temper of his Mind,
He hath a Wiſdome, that doth guide his Valour,
To act in ſafety. There is none but he,
Whoſe being I do fear: and under him,
My Genius is rebuk'd, as it is ſaid
Mark Anthony's was by Cæſar, He chid the Siſters,
When firſt they put the Name of King upon me
And bad them ſpeak to him. Then Prophet-like,
They hayl'd him Father to a Line of Kings.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitleſs Crown,
And put a barren Scepter in my Gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal Hand,
No Son of mine ſucceeding: if't be ſo,
For Banquo's Iſſue have I fill'd my Mind,
For them, the gracious Duncan have I murther'd,
Put Rancours in the Veſſel of my Peace
Only for them, and mine eternal Jewel
Given to the common Enemy of Man,
To make them Kings, the Seeds of Banquo Kings:
Rather then ſo, come Fate into the Liſt,
And champion me to th'utterance.
Who's there?

Enter Servant, and two Murtherers.

Now go to the Door, and ſtay there 'till we call.

Exit Servant.

Was it not yeſterday we ſpoke together?

Murth. It was, ſo pleaſe your Highneſs.

Macb. Well then,
Now you have conſider'd of my ſpeeches?

Know, that it was he, in the times paſt,
Which held you ſo under fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent ſelf,
This I made good to you, in our laſt conference,
Paſt in probation with you:
How you were born in hand, how croſt:
The Inſtruments: who wrought with them:
And all things elſe, that might
To half a Soul, and to a Notion craz'd,
Say, thus did Banquo.

1. Murth. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did ſo:
And went further, which is now
Our point of ſecond meeting.
Do you find your patience ſo predominant
In your nature, that you can let this go?
Are you ſo Goſpell'd to pray for this good man,
And for his Iſſue, whoſe heavy hand
Hath bow'd you to the Grave, and begger'd
Yours for ever?

1. Murth. We are men, my Liege.

Macb. I, in the Catalogue ye go for men,
As Hounds, and Greyhounds, Mungrels, Spaniels, Currs,
Showghes, Water-Rugs, and Demy-Wolves are clipt
All by the Name of Doggs: the valued file
Diſtinguiſhes the ſwift, the ſlow, the ſubtle,
The Houſe-keeper, the Hunter, every one
According to the gift, which bounteous Nature
Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the Bill,
That writes them all alike: and ſo of men.
Now, if you have a ſtation in the file,
Not i'th'worſt rank of Manhood, ſay't,
And I will put the buſineſs in your Boſomes,
Whoſe execution takes your Enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart; and love of us,
Who wear our Health but ſickly in his Life,
Which in his Death were perfect.

2. Murth. I am one my Liege,
Whom the vile Blowes and Baffets of the world
Hath ſo incens'd that I am reckleſs what I doe,
To ſpight the World.

1. Murth. And I another,
So weary with Diſaſters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would ſet my Life on any Chance,
To mend it or be rid on't.

Macd. Both of you know Banquo was your Enemy.

Murth. True, my Lord.

Macb. So is he mine: and in ſuch bloudy diſtance,
That every minute of his being, thruſts
Againſt my near'ſt of Life: and though I could
With bare-fac'd power ſweep him from my ſight,
And bid my will avouch it; yet I muſt not,
For certain friends that are both his, and mine,
Whoſe loves I may not drop, but wail his fall,
Who I my ſelf ſtruck down: and thence it is,
That I to your aſſiſtance do make love,
Masking the buſineſs from the common Eye,
For ſundry weighty Reaſons.

2. Murth. We ſhall, my Lord,
Perform what you command us.

1. Murth. Though our Lives ------

Macb. Your Spirits ſhine through you.
Within this hour, at moſt,
I will adviſe you where to plant your ſelves,
Acquaint you with the perfect Spy o'th'time,
The moment on't, for't muſt be done to Night,
And ſomething from the Palace: alwayes thought,
That I require a clearneſs; and with him,
To leave no Rubs nor Botches in the VVork:
Fleans, his Son, that keeps him company,
Whoſe abſence is no leſs material to me,
Then is his Fathers, muſt embrace the fate
Of that dark hour: reſolve your ſelves a-part,
I'le come to you anon.

Murth. VVe are reſolv'd, my Lord.

Macb. I'le call upon you ſtraight: abide within,
It is concluded: Banquo, thy Soule's flight,
If it find Heaven, muſt find it out to Night. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macbeth's Lady, and a Servant.

Lady. Is Banquo gone from Court?

Servant. I, Madam, but returns again to Night.

Lady. Say to the King, I would attend his leiſure,
For a few words.

Servant. Madam, I will. Exit.

Lady. Nought's had, all's ſpent,
VVhere our deſire is got without content:
'Tis ſafer, to be that which we deſtroy,
Then by deſtruction dwell in doubtfull joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my Lord, why do you keep alone?
Of ſorryeſt Fancies your Companions making,
Uſing thoſe Thoughts, which ſhould indeed have dy'd
VVith them they think on: things without all remedie
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have ſcorch'd the Snake, not kill'd it:
She'll cloſe, and be her ſelf, whileſt our poor Malice
Remains in danger of her former Tooth.
But let the frame of things dis-joynt,
Both the Worlds ſuffer,
E're we will eat our Meal in fear, and ſleep
In the affliction of theſe terrible Dreames,
That ſhake us Nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have ſent to peace:
Then on the torture of the Mind to lie
In reſtleſs extaſie:
Duncan is in his Grave:
After Life's fitfull Fever, he ſleeps well,
Treaſon has done his worſt: nor Steel nor Poiſon
Malice domeſtick, foreign Levie, nothing
Can touch him further.

Lady. Come on:
Gentle my Lord, ſleek o're your rugged Looks,
Be bright and Jovial 'mong your Gueſts to Night.

Macb. So ſhall I, Love, and ſo I pray be you:
Let your remembrance ſtill apply to Banquo,
Preſent him Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
Unſafe the while, that we muſt lave
Our Honours in theſe flattering ſtreames,
And make our Faces Vizards to our Hearts,
Diſguiſing what they are.

Lady. You muſt leave this.

Macb. O, full of Scorpions is my Mind, dear Wife:
Thou know'ſt, that Banquo and his Fleans lives.

Lady. But

Lady. But in them, Nature's Coppie's not eterne.
Macb. There's comfort yet, they are assailable,
Then be thou jocund: e're the Bat hath flown
His Cloyster'd flight, e're to black Hecat's summons
The shard-born Beetle, with his drowsie hums,
Hath rung Night's yawning Peale,
There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.
Lady. What's to be done?
Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest Chuck,
'Till thou applaud the deed: Come, seeling Night,
Skarf up the tender Eye of pittifull Day,
And with thy bloudy and invisible Hand
Cancell and tear to pieces that great Bond,
Which keeps me pale. Light thickens,
And the Crow makes wing to th'Rookie Wood:
Good things of Day begin to droop, and drowze,
Whiles Night's black Agents to their Preys do rowze.
Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee still:
Things bad begun, make strong themselves by ill:
So prythee go with me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter three Murtherers.

1. But who did bid thee joyn with us?
3. Macbeth.
2. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers
Our Offices, and what we have to doe,
To the direction just.
1. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of Day.
Now spurres the latest traveller apace,
To gain the timely Inn, and near approaches
The subject of our Watch.
3. Heark, I hear Horses.
Banquo within. Give us a Light there, hoa.
2. Then 'tis he:
The rest, that are within the note of expectation,
Already are i'th'Court.
1. His Horses go about.
3. Almost a mile: but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to th'Palace Gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleans, with a Torch.

2. A Light, a Light.
3. 'Tis he.
1. Stand to't.
Ban. It will be Rain to Night.
1. Let it come down.
Ban. O, Treachery!
Flie good Fleans, flie, flie, flie,
Thou may'st revenge. O Slave!
3. Who did strike out the Light?
1. Was't not the way?
3. There's but one down: the Son is fled.
2. We have lost
Best half of our Affair.
1. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.
Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Banquet prepar'd. Enter Macbeth, Lady, Rosse, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down:
At first and last, the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thanks to your Majesty.
Macb. Our self will mingle with Society,
And play the humble Host:
Our Hostess keeps her State, but in the best time
We will require her welcome.
Lady. Pronounce it for me, Sir, to all our Friends,
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter first Murtherer.

Macb. See they encounter thee with their hearts thanks
Both sides are even: here I'le sit i'th'mid'st,
Be large in Mirth, anon we'll drink a Measure
The table round. There's bloud upon thy face.
Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without, then he within.
Is he dispatch'd?
Mur. My Lord his throat is cut, that I did for him.
Macb. Thou art the best o'th'Cut-throats,
Yet he's good that did the like for Fleans:
If thou did'st it, thou art the Non-pareil.
Mur. Most Royal Sir
Fleans is scap'd,
Macb. Then comes my Fit again:
I had else been perfect;
Whole as the Marble, founded as the Rock,
As broad, and general, as the casing Air:
But now I am cabin'd, crib'd, confin'd, bound in
To sawcy doubts, and feares. But Banquo's safe?
Mur. I, my good Lord: safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a Death to Nature.
Macb. Thanks for that,
There the grown Serpent lies, the worm that's fled
Hath Nature, that in time will Venom breed,
No teeth for th'present. Get thee gone, to morrow
Well hear our selves again. Exit Murtherer.
Lady. My Royal Lord,
You do not give the Cheer, the Feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis making:
'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at home:
From thence, the sawce to meat is Ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it

Enter the Ghost of Banquo, and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macb. Sweet Remembrancer:
Now good digestion wait on Appetite,
And health on both.
Lenox. May't please your Highness sit.
Macb. Here had we now our Countrie's Honour, roof'd,
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present:
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness,
Then pitie for Mischance.
Rosse. His absence (Sir)
Layes blame upon his promise. Pleas't your Highness
To grace us with your Royal Company?

Macb. The table's full.
Lenox. Here is a place reserv'd, Sir.
Macb. Where?
Lenox. Here my good Lord.
What is't that moves your Highnesse?
Macb. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good Lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did it; never shake
Thy goary locks at me.
Rosse. Gentlemen rise, his Highnesse is not well.
Lady. Sit worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth. Pray you keep seat,
The fit is momentany, upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his Passion,
Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?
Macb. I, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appall the Devil.
Lady. O, proper stuff!
This is the very painting of your fear:
This is the Air-drawn-Dagger which you said
Led you to Duncan. O, these flawes and starts
(Impostors to true fear) would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire
Authoriz'd by her Grandam: shame it self,
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You look but on a stool.
Macb. Prythee see there:
Behold, look, loe, how say you:
Why what care I, if thou canst nod, speak too.
If Charnel-houses, and our Graves must send
Those that we bury, back; our Monuments
Shall be the Mawes of Kites. Exit Ghost.
Lady. What? quite unman'd in folly.
Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.
Lady. Fie for shame.
Macb. Bloud hath been shed e're now, i'th'olden time
E're humane Statue purg'd the gentle Weal:
I, and since too, Murthers have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That when the Brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end; But now they rise again
With twenty mortal murthers on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: this is more strange
Then such a Murther is.
Lady. My worthy Lord
Your Noble Friends do lack you.
Macb. I do forget:
Do not muse at me my most worthy Friends,
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all,
Then I'le sit down: Give me some wine, fill full:
Enter Ghost.
I drink to th'general joy o'th whole Table,
And to our dear Friend Banquo, whom we miss:
Would he were here! to all; and him we thirst,
And all to all.
Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Macb. Avant, and quit my sight, let the earth hide thee:
Thy bones are marrowless: thy bloud is cold:
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.
Lady. Think of this good Peers
But as a thing of Custome: 'tis no other,
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.
Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian Bear,
The arm'd Rhinoceros, or th'Hyrcan tyger,
Take any shape but that, and my firm Nerves
Shall never tremble. Or be alive again,
And dare me to the Desart with thy Sword:
If trembling I inhabit, then protest me
The Baby of a Girl. Hence horrible shadow, Exit.
Unreal mock'ry hence. Why so, be gone
I am a man again: pray you sit still.
Lady. You have displac'd the mirth,
Broke the good meeting, with most admir'd disorder.
Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome us like a Summer's Cloud
Without our special wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural Rubie of your Cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.
Rosse. What signes, my Lord?
La. I pray you speak not: he grows worse and worse,
Question enrages him: at once, goodnight,
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.
Lenox. Good night, and better health
Attend his Majesty.
La. A kind goodnight to all. Exeunt Lords.
Macb. It will have bloud they say:
Bloud will have Bloud:
Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak:
Augures, and understood Relations, have
By Maggot Pyes, & Choughes, and Rooks brought forth
The secret'st man of bloud. What is the night?
La. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.
Macb. How say'st thou that Macduff denies his person
At our great bidding?
La. Did you send to him, Sir?
Macb. I hear it by the way: But I will send:
There's not a one of them but in his house
I keep a Servant Fee'd. I will to morrow
(And betimes I will) to the wizard Sisters.
More shall they speak: for now I am bent to know
By the worst means, the worst, for mine own good,
All causes shall give way, I am in bloud
Spent in so far, that should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o're:
Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,
Which must be acted, e're they may be scann'd.
Lady. You lack the season of all Natures, sleep.
Macb. Come, we'll to sleep; My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:
We are yet but young indeed. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Hecate.

1. Why how now Hecate, you look angerly?
Hec. Have I not reason (Beldames) as you are?
Sawcy, and over-bold, how did you dare
To trade, and traffick with Macbeth,
In Riddles, and Affairs of death;

And

And I the Mistress of your Charmes,
The close contriver of all harmes,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or shew the glory of our Art?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward Son,
Spightfull, and wrathfull, who (as others do)
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: Get you gon,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i'th' Morning: thither he
Will come, to know his Destinie,
Your Vessels, and your Spells provide,
Your Charmes, and every thing beside;
I am for th' Air: this night I'le spend
Unto a dismal, and a Fatal end.
Great busines must be wrought e're Noon.
Upon the Corner of the Moon
There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound,
I'le catch it e're it come to ground;
And that distill'd by Magick slights,
Shall raise such Artificial Sprights,
As by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his Confusion.
He shall spurn Fate, scorn Death, and beat
His hopes 'bove Wisedome, Grace, and Fear:
And you all Know, Security
Is mortals chiefest Enemy.

Musick, and a Song.

Heark, I am call'd: my little Spirit see
Sits in a Foggy cloud, and stayes for me.

Sing within. Come away, come away, &c.

1. Come, let's make haste, she'll soon be Back again. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Lenox, and another Lord.

Lenox. My former Speeches,
Have but hit your Thoughts,
Which can interpret farther: Onely I say
Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth: marry he was dead:
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late.
Whom you may say (if't please you) Fleans kill'd,
For Fleans fled: Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbane
To kill their gracious Father? Damned Fact,
How it did grieve Macbeth? Did he not straight
In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,
That were the Slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep?
Was that not Nobly done? I, and wisely too:
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
To hear the men deny't. So that I say,
He ha's borne all things well, and I do think,
That had he Duncan's Sonnes under the Key,
(As and't please Heaven he shall not) they shall find
What 'twere to kill a Father: So should Fleans.
But peace; for from broad words, and cause he fail'd
His presence at the Tyrant's Feast; I hear
Macduffe lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestowes himself?

Lord. The Sonnes of Duncan
(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Live in the English Court, and is receiv'd
Of the most Pious Edward, with such grace,
That the malevolence of Fortune, nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduffe
Is gone, to pray the holy King, upon his aid
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the help of these (with him above
To ratifie the Work) we may again
Give to our Tables meat) sleep to our Nights:
Free from our Feasts, and Banquets bloudy knives;
Do faithfull Homage, and receive free Honours,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath so exasperate their King, that he Prepares for some attempt of War.

Lenox. Sent he to Macduffe?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute, Sir, not I,
The cloudy Messenger turns me his back,
And hums; as who should say, you'll rue the time
That clogges me with this Answer.

Lenox. And that well might
Advise him to a Caution, t'hold what distance
His wisedome can provide. Some holy Angel
Flie to the Court of England, and unfold
His Message e're he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering Countrey,
Under a hand accurs'd.

Lord. I'le send my Prayers with him. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1. Thrice the brinded Cat hath mew'd.
2. Thrice, and once the Hedges Pig whin'd.
3. Harpier cryes, 'tis time, 'tis time.
1. Round about the Cauldron go:
In the poison'd Entrails throw
Toad, that under cold stone,
Dayes and Nights, has thirty one:
Swelted Venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i'th'charmed pot.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn, and Cauldron bubble.

2. Fillet of a Fenny Snake,
In the Cauldron boil and bake:
Eye of Newt, and Toe of Frog:
Wooll of Bat, and Tongue of Dog:
Adders Fork, and Blind-worms Sting,
Lizards Leg, and Howlet's Wing:
For a Charm of powerfull trouble,
Like a Hell-broth, boil and bubble.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble,
Fire burn, and Cauldron bubble.

3. Scale of Dragon, Tooth of Wolf,
Witches Mummy, Maw, and Gulf
Of the ravin'd salt Sea Shark:
Root of Hemlock, digg'd i'th'dark:
Liver of Blaspheming Jew.
Gall of Goat, and Slips of Yew,
Sliver'd in the Moon's Eclipse:

Nose

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,
Finger of Birth-strangled Babe,
Dirch-deliver'd by a Drab,
Make the Gruel thick, and slab.
Add thereto a Tyger's Chawdron,
For th' Ingredience of our Cauldron.
All. Double, double, toil and trouble,
Fire burn, and Cauldron bubble.
2. Cool it with a Baboon's blood,
Then the Charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate, and the other three Witches.

Hec. O well done: I commend your paines,
And every one shall share i' th'gaines:
And now about the Cauldron sing
Like Elves and Fairies in a Ring,
Inchanting all that you put in.
Musick and a Song. Black Spirits, &c.
2. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes:
Open Locks, whoever knocks.
Enter Macbeth.
Macb. How now you secret, black, and midnight Hags?
What is't you do?
All. A deed without a name.
Macb. I conjure you, by that which you Profess,
(How-e're you come to know it) answer me:
Though you untie the windes, and let them fight
Against the Churches: Though the yesty Waves
Confound and swallow Navigation up:
Though bladed Corn be lodg'd, and trees blown down,
Though Castles topple on their Warders heads:
Though Palaces, and Pyramids do slope
Their heads to their Foundations: though the treasure
Of Natures Germain, tumble altogether,
Even 'till destruction sicken: Answer me
To what I ask you.
1. Speak.
2. Demand.
3. We'll answer.
1. Say, if th'had'st rather hear it from our mouthes,
Or from our Masters.
Macb. Call'em: let me see'em.
1. Pour in Sowes blood, that hath eaten
Her nine Farrow: Greace that's sweaten
From the Murtherers Gibbet, throw
Into the Flame.
All. Come high or low:
Thy Self and Office deftly show. Thunder.
1. Apparition, an Armed Head.
Macb. Tell me thou unknown power.
1. He knowes thy thought:
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.
1. Appar. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth:
Beware Macduff,
Beware the Thane of Fife: dismiss me. Enough.
He Descends.
Macb. What-e're thou art, for thy good caution, thanks.
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more.
1. He will not be commanded: here's another
More potent then the first. Thunder.
2. Apparition, a Bloudy Child.
2. Appar. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth.
Macb. Had I three eares, I'd hear thee.
2. Appar. Be bloudy, bold, and resolute:
Laugh to scorn
The power of man: For none of woman borne
Shall harm Macbeth. Descends.
Macb. Then live Macduff: what need I fear of thee?
But yet I'le make assurance, double sure,
And take a Bond of Fate: thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted Fear, it lies;
And sleep in spight of thunder. Thunder.
3. Apparition, a Child crowned, with a Tree in his hand.
What is this, that rises like the issue of a King,
And weares upon his Baby-brow, the round
And top of Soveraignty?
All. Listen, but speak not to't.
3. Appar. Be Lyon metled, proud, and take no care:
Who chafes, who frets, or where Conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until
Great Byrnam wood, to high Dunsinane Hill
Shall come against him. Descend.
Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the Forrest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound Root? Sweet boadments, good:
Rebellious dead, rise never 'till the Wood
Of Byrnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the Lease of Nature, pay his breath
To time, and mortal Custome. Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your Art
Can tell so much: Shall Banquo's issue ever
Reign in this Kingdome?
All. Seek to know no more.
Macb. I will be satisfied. Deny me this,
And an eternal Curse fall on you: Let me know.
Why sinks that Cauldron? & what noise is this? Hoboyes.
1. Shew.
2. Shew.
3. Shew.
All. Shew his Eyes, and grieve his Heart,
Come like shadows, so depart.
A shew of eight Kings, and Banquo last, with a glass in his hand.
Macb. Thou art too like the Spirit of Banquo: Down:
Thy Crown do's scar mine Eye-balls. And thy hair
Thou other Gold-bound-brow, is like the first:
A third, is like the former. Filthy Haggs,
Why do you shew me this? ---- A fourth? Start eye!
What will the Line stretch out to th'crack of Doom?
Another yet? A seventh? I'le see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who beares a glass,
Which shewes me many more: and some I see,
That two-fold Balls, and treble Scepters carry.
Horrible sight: Now I see 'tis true,
For the Bloud-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. What is this so?
1. I Sir, all this is so. But why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come Sisters, cheer we up his sprights,
And shew the best of our delights.
I'le Charm the Air to give a sound,
While you perform your Antique round:
That this great King may kindly say,
Our duties, did his welcome pay. Musick.
The Witches Dance, and vanish.
Macb. Where are they? Gone?
Let this pernicious hour,
Stand aye accursed in the Kalender.
Come in, without there. Enter Lenox.
Lenox. What's your Graces will?

Macb.

Macb. Saw you the Wizard Sisters?
Lenox. No my Lord.
Macb. Came they not by you?
Lenox. No indeed my Lord.
Macb. Infected be the Air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them. I did hear
The galloping of Horse. Who was't came by?
Len. 'Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word:
Macduff is fled to England.
Macb. Fled to England?
Len. I, my good Lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits:
The flighty purpose never is o're-took
Unless the deed go with it. From this moment,
The very firstling of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now
To Crown my thoughts with Acts: be it thought & done:
The Castle of Macduff, I will suprize.
Seize upon Fife; give to th'edge o'th'Sword
His Wife, his Babes, and all unfortunate Soules
That trace him in his Line. No boasting like a Fool,
This deed I'le do, before this purpose cool,
But no more sights. Where are these Gentlemen?
Come bring me where they are. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macduff's Wife, her Son, and Rosse.

Wife. What had he done, to make him fly the Land?
Rosse. You must have patience Madam.
Wife. He had none:
His flight was madness: when our Actions do not,
Our feares do make us traytors.
Rosse. You know not
Whether it was his wisedome, or his fear.
Wife. Wisedome? to leave his wife, to leave his Babes,
His Mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does flie? He loves us not.
He wants the natural touch: for the poor Wren
(The most diminitive of Birds) will fight,
Her young ones in her Nest, against the Owle:
All is the Fear, and nothing is the Love;
As little is the Wisedome, where the flight
So runns against all reason.
Rosse. My dearest Couz,
I pray you school your self; But for your Husband,
He is Noble, Wise, Judicious, and best knowes
The fits o'th'Season. I dare not speak much further,
But cruel are the times, when we are traytors
And do not know our selves: when we hold Rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent Sea
Each way, and move. I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'le be here again:
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward,
To what they were before. My pretty Cousin,
Blessing upon you.
Wife. Father'd he is,
And yet he's Fatherless.
Rosse. I am so much a Fool, should I stay longer
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
I take my leave at once. Exit Rosse.

Wife. Sirra, your Father's dead,
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As Birds do, Mother.
Wife. What with wormes and flies?
Son. With what I get, and so do they.
Wife. Poor Bird,
Thoud'st never fear the Net, nor Line,
The Pitfall, nor the Gin.
Son. Why should I Mother?
Poor Birds they are not set for:
My Father is not dead for all your saying.
Wife. Yes, he is dead:
How wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. Nay how will you do for a Husband?
Wife. Why I can buy me twenty at any Market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
Wife. Thou speak'st with all thy wit,
And yet i'faith with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my Father a traitor, Mother?
Wife. I, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
Wife. Why one that sweares, and lyes.
Son. And be all traitors that do so?
Wife. Every one that do's so, is a traitor,
And must be hang'd.
Son. And must they all be hang'd, that swear and lye?
Wife. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
Wife. Why, honest men.
Son. Then the Lyars and Swearers are Fools: for there are Lyars and Swearers enow, to beat the honest men, and hang up them.
Wife. Now God help thee, poor Monkey:
But how wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not it were a good signe, that I should quickly have a new Father.
Wife. Poor pratler, how thou talk'st?

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Bless you fair Dame: I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honour I am perfect;
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly.
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here: hence with your little ones;
To fright you thus, Me thinks I am too savage:
To do worse to you, were fell Cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you,
I dare abide no longer. Exit Messenger.
Wife. Whither should I flie?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world: where to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly. Why then (alas)
Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say I had done no harm?
What are these faces?

Enter Murtherers.

Mur. Where is your Husband?
Wife. I hope in no place so unsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.
Mur. He's a Traitor.
Son. Thou ly'st thou shag-ear'd Villain.
Mur. What you Egg?
Young fry of treachery?
Son. He has kill'd me Mother,
Run away I pray you. Exit, crying Murther.

Scena

Scena Tertia.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us ſeek out ſome deſolate ſhade, and there
Weep our ſad boſomes empty.
Macd. Let us rather
Hold faſt the mortal Sword: and like good men,
Beſtride our downfall Birthdome: each new Morn,
New Widows howl, new Orphans cry, new ſorrows
Strike Heaven on the face, that it reſounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out
Like Syllable of Dolour.
Mal. What I believe, I'le wail;
What know, believe; and what I can redreſs,
As I ſhall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have ſpoke, it may be ſo perchance.
This Tyrant, whoſe ſole Name bliſters our tongues,
Was once thought honeſt: you have lov'd him well,
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young, but ſomething
You may diſcern of him through me, and wiſdome
To offer up a weak, poor innocent Lamb
T'appeaſe an angry God.
Macd. I am not treacherous.
Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous Nature may recoil
In an Imperial charge. But I ſhall crave your pardon:
That which you are, my thoughts cannot tranſpoſe;
Angels are bright ſtill, though the brighteſt fell.
Though all things foul would wear the brows of Grace,
Yet Grace muſt ſtill look ſo.
Macd. I have loſt my Hopes.
Malc. Perchance even there
VVhere I did find my doubts
VVhy in that rawneſs left you Wife, and Children?
Thoſe precious Motives, thoſe ſtrong knots of Love,
VVithout leave-taking. I pray you,
Let not my Jealouſies, be your Diſhonours,
But mine own Safeties: you may be rightly juſt,
VVhat-ever I ſhall think.
Macd. Bleed, bleed poor Country,
Great Tyranny, lay thou thy Baſis ſure,
For goodneſs dares not check thee: wear thou thy wrongs
The Title is afear'd. Fare thee well Lord,
I would not be the Villain that thou think'ſt,
For the whole Space that's in the Tyrant's Graſp,
And the rich Eaſt to boot.
Mal. Be not offended:
I ſpeak not as in abſolute fear of you:
I think our Country ſinks beneath the yoak,
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gaſh
Is added to her wounds. I think withall,
There would be hands uplifted in my right:
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thouſands. But for all this,
When I ſhall tread upon the Tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my Sword; yet my poor Country
Shall have more vices then it had before,
More ſuffer, and more ſundry wayes then ever,
By him that ſhall ſucceed.
Macd. What ſhould he be?
Mal. It is my ſelf I mean, in whom I know
All the particulars of Vice ſo grafted,
That when they ſhall be open'd black Macbeth
Will ſeem as pure as Snow, and the poor State
Eſteem him as a Lamb, being compar'd
VVith my confineleſs harmes.
Macd. Not in the Legions
Of horrid Hell, can come a Devil more damn'd
In evils, to top Macbeth.
Macb. I grant him Bloudy,
Luxurious, Avaricious, Falſe, Deceitfull,
Sudden, Malicious, ſmoaking of every ſinne
That has a name. But there's no bottom, none
In my Voluptuouſneſs: Your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The Ciſtern of my Luſt, and my Deſire
All continent Impediments would o're-bear
That did oppoſe my will. Better Macbeth,
Then ſuch an one to reign.
Macd. Boundleſs intemperance
In Nature is a Tyranny: It hath been
Th'untimely emptying of the happy Throne,
And fall of many Kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may
Convey your pleaſures in a ſpacious plenty,
And yet ſeem cold. The time you may ſo hoodwink:
We have willing Dames enough: there cannot be
That Vulture in you, to devour ſo many
As will to Greatneſs dedicate themſelves,
Finding it ſo inclin'd.
Mal. VVith this, there growes
In my moſt ill-compos'd Affection, ſuch
A ſtanchleſs Avarice, that were I King,
I ſhould cut off the Nobles for their Lands,
Deſire his Jewels, and this others Houſe,
And my more-having would be as a Sawce
To make me hunger more, that I ſhould forge
Quarrels unjuſt againſt the Good and Loyal,
Deſtroying them for wealth.
Macd. This Avarice
Sticks deeper: grows with more pernicious root
Then Summer-ſeeming Luſt: and it hath bin
The Sword of our ſlain Kings: yet do not fear,
Scotland hath Poiſons to fill up your will
Of your mere Own. All theſe are portable,
VVith other Graces weigh'd.
Mal. But I have none. The King-becoming Graces,
As Juſtice, Verity, Temp'rance, Stableneſs,
Bounty, Perſeverance, Mercy, Lowlineſs,
Devotion, Patience, Courage, Fortitude;
I have no reliſh of them, but abound
In the diviſion of each ſeveral Crime,
Acting it many wayes. Nay had I power I ſhould
Pour the ſweet Milk of Concord, into Hell,
Uproar the univerſal peace, confound
All unity on earth.
Macd. O Scotland, Scotland!
Mal. If ſuch a one be fit to govern, ſpeak:
I am as I have ſpoken.
Mac. Fit to govern? No not to live. O Nation miſerable!
With an untitled Tyrant, bloudy Sceptred,
When ſhalt thou ſee thy wholeſome dayes again?
Since that the trueſt Iſſue of thy Throne
By his own Interdiction ſtands accurſt,
And do's blaſpheme his breed? thy Royal Father
VVas a moſt Sainted-King: the Queen that bore thee,
Oftner upon her knees, then on her feet,
Dy'd every day ſhe liv'd. Fare thee well,

These Evils thou repeat'ſt upon thy ſelf,
Hath baniſht me from Scotland. O my Breaſt,
Thy hope ends here.
Mal. Macduff, this Noble paſſion
Child of Integrity, hath from my ſoul
Wip'd the black Scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth, and honour. Devilliſh Macbeth,
By many of theſe traines, hath ſought to win me
Into his power: and modeſt Wiſedome plucks me
From over-credulous haſte: but God above
Deal between thee and me; For even now
I put my ſelf to thy direction, and Unſpeak mine own detraction. Here abjure
The taints, and blames I laid upon my ſelf,
For ſtrangers to my Nature, I am yet
Unknown to women, never was forſwore,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my Faith, would not betray
The Devil to his Fellow, and delight
No leſs in truth then life. My firſt falſe ſpeaking
Was this upon my ſelf, what I am truly
Is thine, and my poor Countries to command:
Whither indeed, before thy here approach,
Old Seyward with ten thouſand warlike men
Already at a point, was ſetting forth?
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodneſs
Be like our warranted Quarrel. Why are you ſilent?
Macd. Such welcome, and unwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well, more anon. Comes the King forth
I pray you?
Doct. I Sir: there are a crew of wretched Soules
That ſtay his Cure: their malady convinces
The great aſſay of Art. But at his touch,
Such ſanctity hath Heaven given his hand,
They preſently amend. Exit.
Mal. I thank you Doctor.
Macd. What's the Diſeaſe he means?
Mal. 'Tis call'd the Evil,
A moſt miraculous work in this good King,
Which often ſince my here remain in England,
I have ſeen him doe: How he ſolicits heaven
Himſelf beſt knows: but ſtrangely viſited people
All ſwolne and Ulcerous, pittifull to the eye,
The mere deſpair of Surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden ſtamp about their necks,
Put on with holy Prayers, and 'tis ſpoken
To the ſucceeding Royalty he leaves
The healing Benediction: with this ſtrange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of Propheſie,
And ſundry Bleſſings hang about his Throne,
That ſpeak him full of Grace.

Enter Roſſe.

Macd. See who comes here.
Malc. My Countreyman: but yet I know him not.
Macd. My ever gentle Couſin, welcome hither.
Malc. I know him now. Good God betimes remove
The means, the means that makes us ſtrangers.
Roſſe. Sir, Amen.
Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?
Roſſ. Alas poor Countrey,
Almoſt afraid to know it ſelf. It cannot
Be call'd our Mother, but our Grave; where nothing
But who knows nothing is once ſeen to ſmile:
Where ſighes and groans, and ſhrieks that rent the air
Are made, not mark'd: Where violent ſorrow ſeems
A Modern extaſie: the Dead-man's knell,
Is there ſcarce ask'd for who, and good men's lives
Expire before the Flowers in their Caps,
Dying, or e're they ſicken.
Macd. Oh relation; too nice, and yet too true.
Malc. What's the neweſt grief?
Roſſe. That of an houres age, doth hiſs the ſpeaker,
Each minute teems a new one.
Macd. How does my Wife?
Roſſe. Why well.
Macd. And all my Children?
Roſſe. Well too.
Macd. The Tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?
Roſſe. No, they were well at peace when I did leave'em.
Macd. Be not a niggard of your ſpeech: how gos't?
Roſſe. When I came hither to tranſport the Tidings
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a Rumour
Of many worthy Fellows, that were out,
Which was to my belief witneſt the rather,
For that I ſaw the Tyrant's Power a-foot,
Now is the time of help: your eye in Scotland
Would create Souldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire diſtreſſes.
Malc. Be't their comfort
We are coming thither: Gracious England hath
Lent us good Seyward, and ten thouſand men,
An older, and a better Souldier, none
That Chriſtendome gives out.
Roſſe. Would I could anſwer
This comfort with the like. But I have words
That would be howl'd out in the deſert air,
Where hearing ſhould not latch them.
Macd. What concern they,
The general cauſe, or is it a Fee-grief
Due to ſome ſingle Breaſt?
Roſſe. No mind that's honeſt
But in it ſhares ſome woe, though the main part
Pertains to you alone.
Macd. If it be mine
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.
Roſſe. Let not your eares deſpiſe my tongue for ever,
Which ſhall poſſeſs them with the heavieſt ſound
That ever yet they heard.
Macd. Humh: I gueſs at it.
Roſſe. Your Caſtle is ſurpriz'd: your Wife, and Babes
Savagely ſlaughter'd: to relate the manner
Were on the Quarry of theſe murther'd Deer
To add the death of you.
Malc. Mercifull Heaven:
What man, ne're pull your hat upon your brows:
Give ſorrow words; the grief that do's not ſpeak,
Whiſpers the o're-fraught heart, and bids it break.
Macd. My Children too?
Roſſ. Wife, Children, Servants, all that could be found.
Macd. And I muſt be from thence? My wife kill'd too?
Roſſe. I have ſaid.
Malc. Be comforted.
Let's make us Med'cines of our great Revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.
Macd. He has no Children. All my pretty ones?
Did you ſay All? O Hell-Kite! All?
What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Damm
At one fell ſwoop?
Malc. Diſpute it like a man.
Macd. I ſhall do ſo.

But

But I must also feel it as a man;
I cannot but remember such things were
That were most precious to me: Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinfull Macduff,
They were all strook for thee: Naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine
Fell slaughter on their soules: Heaven rest them now.
Mal. Be this the Whetstone of your sword, let grief
Convert to anger: blunt not the heart, enrage it.
Macd. O I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And Braggart with my tongue. But gentle Heavens,
Cut short all intermission: Front to Front,
Bring thou this Fiend of Scotland, and my self
Within my Swords length set him, if he scape
Heaven forgive him too.
Mal. This time goes manly:
Come go we to the King, our Power is ready,
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the Powers above
Put on their Instruments: Receive what cheer you may,
The Night is long that never finds the Day. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doctor of Physick, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two Nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd?
Gent. Since his Majesty went into the Field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her Night-Gown upon her, unlock her Closet, take forth Paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.
Doct. A great perturbation in Nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching. In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what (at any time) have you heard her say?
Gent. That Sir, which I will not report after her.
Doct. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.
Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech. Enter Lady with a Taper.
Lo you, here she comes: This is her very guise, and upon my life fast asleep; observe her, stand close.
Doct. How came she by that light?
Gent. Why it stood by her: she has light by her continually, 'tis her command.
Doct. You see her eyes are open.
Gent. I but their sense are shut.
Doct. What is it she do's now?
Look how she rubbs her hands.
Gent. It is an accustom'd action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.
Lad. Yet here's a spot.
Doct. Heark, she speaks, I will set down what comes from her, to satisfie my remembrance the more strongly.
La. Out damned spot: out I say. One: Two: Why then 'tis time to do't: Hell is murky. Fie, my Lord, fie, a Souldier, and afear'd? what need we fear? who knows it, when none can call our power to account: yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much bloud in him.
Doct. Do you mark that?
Lad. The Thane of Fife, had a wife: where is she now? What will these hands ne're be clean? No more o'that my Lord, no more o'that: you marre all with starting.
Doct. Go to, go to:
You have known what you should not.
Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.
La. Here's the smell of bloud still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.
Oh, oh, oh.
Doct. What a sigh is there? The heart is sorely charg'd.
Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosome, for dignity of the whole body.
Doct. Well, well, well.
Gent. Pray God it be Sir.
Doct. This disease is beyond my practise: yet I have known those which have walkt in their sleep, who have dyed holyly in their beds.
Lad. Wash your hands, put on your Night-Gowne, look not so pale: I tell you yet again Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.
Doct. Even so?
Lady. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the Gate: Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: What's done, cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed.
Exit Lady.
Doct. Will she go now to bed?
Gent. Directly.
Doct. Foul whisp'rings are abroad: unnatural deeds
Do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets:
More needs she the Divine, then the Physician:
God, God forgive us all. Look after her,
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,
And still keep eyes upon her: So good night:
My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight.
I think, but dare not speak.
Gent. Good night good Doctor. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Drum and Colours. Enter Menteth, Cathnes, Angus, Lenox, Souldiers.

Men. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His Uncle Seyward, and the good Macduff.
Revenges burn in them: for their dear causes
Excite the mortified man.
Ang. Neer Byrnam wood
Shall we meet them, that way are they coming.
Cath. Who knows if Donalbaine be with his brother?
Lenox. For certain Sir, he is not: I have a File
Of all the Gentry; there is Seyward's Son,
And many unruff Youths, that even now
Protest their first of Manhood.
Ment. What do's the Tyrant.
Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly Fortifies,
Some say he's mad: Others, that lesser hates him,
Do call it valiant Fury, but for certain

He

He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
Within the belt of Rule.
Ang. Now do's he feel
His secret Murthers sticking on his hands,
Now minutely Revolts upbraid his faith-breach:
Those he commands, move only in command,
Nothing in love: Now do'es he feel his Title
Hang loose about him, like a Giants Robe
Upon a Dwarfish Thief.
Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester'd Senses to recoyl, and start,
When all that is within him, do's condemne.
It self, for being there.
Cath. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd:
Meet we the Med'cine of the sickly Weal,
And with him pour we in our Countries purge,
Each drop of us.
Lenox. Or so much as it needs,
To dew the Soveraign Flower, and drown the Weeds
Make we our March towards Birnam. Exeunt Marching.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Mac. Bring me no more Reports, let them flye all:
Till Birnam Wood remove to Dunsinane,
I cannot taint with Fear. What's the Boy Malcolme?
Was he not born of Woman? The Spirits that know
All mortal Consequences, have pronounc'd me thus:
Fear not Macbeth, no man that's born of woman
Shall e're have power upon thee. Then flye false Thanes,
And mingle with the English Epicures,
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.
Enter a Servant.
The Devil damne thee black, thou cream-fac'd Loon:
Where got'st thou that Goose-look.
Ser. There is ten thousand.
Macb. Geese Villain?
Ser. Souldiers sir.
Macb. Go prick thy face, and over-red thy fear
Thou Lilly-liver'd Boy. What Souldiers, Patch?
Death of thy soul, those linnen cheeks of thine
Are Counsellors to fear. What Souldiers Whay-face?
Ser. The English Force, so please you.
Macb. Take thy face hence. Seyton, I am sick at heart,
When I behold: Seyton, I say, this push
Will cheer me ever, or disease me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is faln into the Sear, the yellow Leaf,
And that which should accompany Old Age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of Friends,
I must not look to have: but in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep, Mouth-honor, breath
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton?
Enter Seyton.
Sey. What's your Gracious pleasure?
Mac. What news more?
Sey. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported.
Mac. I'le fight, till from my bones, my flesh is hackt.
Give me my Armor.
Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.
Mac. I'le put it on:
Send out more horses, skir the Country round,
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine Armor:
How do's your Patient, Doctor?
Doct. Not so sick my Lord,
As she is troubled with thick-comming Fancies
That keep her from her rest.
Macb. Cure her from that:
Canst thou not Minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the Memory a rooted Sorrow,
Raise out the written troubles of the Brain,
And with some sweet oblivious Antidote
Cleanse the stuft bosome, of that perillous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?
Doct. Therein the Patient
Must Minister unto himself.
Macb. Throw Physick to the Dogs, I'le none of it.
Come, put mine Armor on: give me my Staffe:
Seyton, send out: Doctor, the Thanes flye from me:
Come sir, dispatch. If thou couldd'st Doctor, cast
The water of my Land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine Health,
I would applaud thee to the very Eccho,
That should applaud again. Pull't off I say,
What Rubarb, Cæny, or what Purgative drug
Would scour these English hence: hearst thou of them?
Doct. I my good Lord: your Royal preparation
Makes us hear something.
Macb. Bring it after me:
I will not be afraid of Death and Bane,
Till Birnam Forrest come to Dunsinane.
Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away, and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Drum and Colours. Enter Malcolme, Seyward, Macduffe, Seywards Son, Menteth, Cathnes, Angus, and Souldiers Marching.

Malc. Cousin I hope the dayes are near at hand
That Chambers will be safe.
Ment. We doubt it nothing.
Seyw. What Wood is this before us?
Ment. The Wood of Birnam.
Malc. Let every Souldier hew him down a Bough,
And bear't before him, thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our Hoast, and make discovery
Erre in report of us.
Sold. It shall be done.
Seyw. We learn no other, but the confident Tyrant,
Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down befor't.
Malc. 'Tis his main hope:
For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and lesse have given him the Revolt,
And none serve with him, but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absent too.
Macd. Let our best Censures
Before the true event, and put we on

Induſtrious Souldierſhip.
Sey. The time approaches,
That will with due deciſion make us know
What we ſhall ſay we have, and what we owe:
Thoughts ſpeculative, their unſure hopes relate,
But certain iſſue, ſtrokes muſt arbitrate,
Towards which, advance the war. Exeunt marching.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, and Souldiers, with Drum and Dolours.

Macb. Hang out our Banners on the outward walls,
The Cry is ſtill, they come: Our Caſtles ſtrength
Will laugh a Siege to ſcorn: Here let them lie,
Till Famine and the Ague eat them up:
Were they not forc'd with thoſe that ſhould be ours,
We might have met them darefull, beard to beard,
And beat them backward home. What is that noyſe?
A cry within of Women.
Sey. It is the cry of women, my good Lord.
Macb. I have almoſt forgot the taſte of Fears:
The time has been, my ſenſes would have cool'd
To hear a Night-ſhrick, and my Fell of hair
Would at a diſmal Treatiſe rouze, and ſtir
As life were in't. I have ſupt full with horrors,
Direneſſe familiar to my ſlaughterous thoughts
Cannot once ſtart me. Wherefore was that cry?
Sey. The Queen (my Lord) is dead.
Macb. She ſhould have dy'd hereafter;
There would have been a time for ſuch a word:
To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the laſt Syllable of Recorded time:
And all our yeſterdayes, have lighted Fooles
The way to ſtudy death. Out, out, brief Candle,
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poor Player,
That ſtruts and frets his hour upon the Stage,
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an Ideot, full of ſound and fury
Signifying nothing.
Enter a Meſſenger.
Thou com'ſt to uſe thy tongue: thy ſtory quickly.
Meſ. My Gracious Lord,
I ſhould report that which I ſay I ſaw,
But know not how to do't.
Macb. Well, ſay ſir.
Meſ. As I did ſtand my watch upon the hill
I look'd toward Byrnam, and anon me thought
The Wood began to move.
Macb. Lyar, and Slave.
Meſ. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not ſo:
Within this three mile you may ſee it coming.
I ſay, a moving Grove.
Macb. If thou ſpeak'ſt falſe,
Upon the next tree ſhalt thou hang alive
Till Famine cling thee: If thy ſpeech be ſooth,
I care not if thou do'ſt for me as much.
I pull in Reſolution, and begin
To doubt the Equivocation of the Fiend,
That lies like truth. Fear not, till Byrnam Wood
Do come to Dunſinane, and now a Wood
Comes toward Dunſinane. Arme, arme, and out,
If this which he avouches do's appear,
There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here;
I'gin to be a weary of the Sun;
And wiſh th'eſtate o'th' world were now undone.
Ring the alarum Bell; blow Wind, come wrack,
At leaſt we'll die with Harneſs on our back. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Drum and Colours.
Enter Malcolme, Seyward, Macduffe, and their Army, with Boughes.

Mal. Now near enough:
Your Leavy Screens throw down,
And ſhew like thoſe you are: You (worthy Uncle)
Shall with my Couſin, your right Noble ſon,
Lead our firſt Battell. Worthy Macduffe, and we Shall take upon's what elſe remains to do
According to our order.
Sey. Fare you well:
Do we but find the Tyrants power to night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.
Macd. Make all our Trumpets ſpeak, give them all breath,
Thoſe clamorous Harbingers of bloud, & death. Exeunt.
Alarums continued.

Scena Septima.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have ty'd me to a ſtake, I cannot flye,
But Bear-like I muſt fight the courſe. What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.
Enter young Seyward.
Y. Sey. What is thy name?
Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
Y. Sey. No: though thou call'ſt thy ſelf a hotter name
Then any is in hell.
Macb. My name's Macbeth.
Y. Sey. The Devill himſelf could not pronounce a Title
More hatefull to mine ear.
Macb. No: nor more fearfull.
Y. Sey. Thou lieſt thou abhorred tyrant, with my ſword
I'le prove the lye thou ſpeak'ſt.
Fight, and young Seyward's ſlain.
Macb. Thou waſt born of Woman;
But ſwords I ſmile at, Weapons laugh to ſcorn,
Brandiſh'd by man that's of a Woman born. Exit.
Alarums. Enter Macduffe.
Macd. That way the noiſe is: tyrant ſhew thy face,
If thou beeſt ſlain, and with no ſtroak of mine,
My Wife and Childrens Ghoſts will haunt me ſtill:
I cannot ſtrike at wretched Kernes, whoſe armes
Are hyr'd to bear their Staves; either thou Macbeth,
Or elſe my ſword with an unbattered edge
I ſheath again undeeded. There thou ſhould'ſt be,
By this great clatter, one of greateſt note

Seems

Seems bruited. Let me find him Fortune,
And more I beg not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolme and Seyward.

Seyw. This way my Lord, the Castles gently rendred:
The tyrants people, on both sides do fight;
The Noble Thanes do bravely in the War,
The day almost it self professes yours,
And little is to do.
Malc. We have met with Foes
That strike beside us.
Sey. Enter, sir, the Castle. Exeunt. Alarum.

Enter Macbeth.

Mac. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Enter Macduffe.

Macd. Turn Hell-hound, turn.
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get the back, my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.
Macd. I have no words,
My voice is in my sword, thou bloudier Villain
Then termes can give thee out. Fight, Alarum.
Macb. Thou losest labour,
As easie may'st thou the intrenchant Aire
With thy keen sword impresse, as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable Crests,
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.
Macd. Dispair thy Charme,
And let the Angell whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduffe was from his Mothers wombe
Untimely ript.
Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so;
For it hath Cow'd my better part of man:
And be these Jugling Fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense,
That keep the word of promise to our eare,
And break it to our hope. I'le not fight with thee.
Macd. Then yield thee Coward,
And live to be the shew, and gaze o'th'time.
We'll have thee, as our Rarer Monsters are Painted upon a Pole, and under-writ,
Here may you see the Tyrant.
Macb. I will not yield
To kisse the ground before young Malcolmes feet,
And to be baited with the Rabbles curse,
Though Byrnam Wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body,
I throw my warlike Shield: Lay on Macduffe,
And damn'd be him, that first cryes hold, enough
Exeunt fighting. Alarums.

Enter fighting, and Macbeth slain.
Retreat and Flourish. Enter with Drum and Colours.
Malcolme, Seyward, Rosse, Thanes, and Souldiers.

Mal. I would the Friends we misse, were safe arriv'd.
Sey. Some must go off: and yet by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.
Mal. Macduffe is missing, and your noble Son.
Ross. Your son my Lord, has paid a Souldiers debt;
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowesse confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he dy'd.
Sey. Then he is dead?
Ross. I, and brought off the Field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.
Sey. Had he his hurts before.
Ross. I, on the Front.
Sey. Why then, Gods Souldier be he:
Had I as many sons, as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so his Knell is knoll'd.
Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'le spend for him.
Sey. He's worth no more,
They say he parted well, and paid his score,
And so God be with him. Here comes newer comfort.

Enter Macduffe, with Macbeths head.

Macd. Hail King, for so thou art.
Behold where stands
Th'Usurpers cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compast with thy Kingdomes Pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds:
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,
Hail King of Scotland.
All. Hail King of Scotland. Flourish.
Mal. We shall not spend a large expence of time,
Before you reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My Thanes and Kinsmen
Henceforth be Earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honor nam'd: What's more to do
Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exil'd Friends abroad,
That fled the Snares of watchfull tyranny,
Producing forth the cruell Ministers
Of this dead Butcher, and his Fiend-like Queen;
Who (as 'tis thought) by self and violent hands,
Took off her life. This, and what needfull else
That calls upon us, by the Grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time and place:
So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite, to see us Crown'd at Scone.
Flourish. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of HAMLET, Prince of Denmark.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Barnardo and Francisco, two Centinels.

Barnardo.

WHo's there?

Fran. Nay answer me: Stand and unfold your self.

Bar. Long live the King.

Fran. Barnardo?

Bar. He.

Fran. You come most chearfully upon your hour.

Bar. 'Tis now struck twelve, get thee to Bed Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks: 'tis bitter cold, And I am sick at heart.

Bar. Have you had quiet Guard?

Fran. Not a Mouse stirring.

Barn. Well, goodnight. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the Rivals of my Watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand who's there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And Liege-men to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O farewel honest Souldier, who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Barnardo has my place: give you good night.

Exit Francisco.

Mar. Holla Barnardo.

Bar. Say, what is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Bar. Welcome Horatio, welcome good Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to night.

Bar. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio sayes, 'tis but our phantasie, And will not let belief take hold of him Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us, Therefore I have intreated him along With us, to watch the minutes of this night, That if again this Apparition come, He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Bar. Sit down a while; And let us once again assail your eares, That are so fortified against our story, What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down, And let us hear Barnardo speak of this.

Bar. Last night of all, When yon same Star, that's westward from the Pole Had made his course t'illume that part of heaven. Where now it burns, Marcellus and my self, The Bell then beating one.

Mar. Peace, break thee off: Enter the Ghost. Look where it comes again.

Bar. In the same figure like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a Scholler; speak to it Horatio.

Bar. Looks it not like the King? Mark it Horatio.

Hor. Most like: It harrows me with fear and wonder

Bar. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night, Together with that fair and warlike forme In which the Majesty of buried Denmark Did sometimes march: By heaven I charge thee speak.

Mar. It is offended.

Bar. See, it stalks away.

Hor. Stay: speak; speak: I charge thee, speak.

Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Bar. How now Horatio? You tremble and look pale: Is not this something more then fantasie? What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God I might not this believe Without the sensible and true avouch Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King?

Hor. As thou art to thy self, Such was the Armor he had on, When th'ambitious Norway combatted: So frouned he once, when in an angry parle He smot the sledded Polax on the Ice. 'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and just at this same hour, With Martial stalk, hath he gone by our Watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not: But in the grosse and scope of my opinion, This boads some strange eruption to our State.

Mar. Good now sit down, and tell me he that knows Why this same strict and most observant Watch, So nightly toils the subject of the Land, And why such daily cast of Brazon Cannon And forraign Mart for Implements of War: Why such impresse of Shipwrights, whose sore Task Dos't not divide the Sunday from the week, What might be toward, that this sweaty haste Doth make the night joynt-laborour with the day: Who ist that can informe me?

Hor. That can I,

At leaſt the whiſper goes ſo: Our laſt King,
Whoſe Image even but now appear'd to us,
Was (as you know) by Fortinbras of Norway,
(Thereto prick'd on by a moſt emulate pride)
Dar'd to the Combate. In which, our valiant Hamlet,
(For ſo this ſide of our known world eſteem'd him)
Did ſlay this Fortinbras: who by a ſeal'd Compact,
Well ratified by Law, and Heraldry,
Did forfeit (with his life) all thoſe his Lands
Which he ſtood ſeiz'd on, to the Conqueror:
Againſt the which, a Moity competent
Was gaged by our King: which had return'd
To the Inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he bin Vanquiſher, as by the ſame Cov'nant
And carriage of the Article deſign'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now ſir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle, hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a Liſt of Landleſſe Reſolutes,
For food and Dyet, to ſome enterprize
That hath a ſtomack in't: which is no other
(And it doth well appear unto our State)
But to recover of us by ſtrong hand
And termes compulſative, thoſe foreſaid Lands
So by his father loſt: and this (I take it)
Is the main motive of our Preparations,
The ſourſe of this our Watch, and the chief head
Of this poſt-haſte, and Romage in the Land.

Enter Ghoſt again.

But ſoft, behold: Loe, where it comes again:
I'le croſſe it, though it blaſt me. Stay Illuſion:
If thou haſt any ſound, or uſe of voice,
Speak to me. If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do eaſe, and grace to me; ſpeak to me.
If thou art privy to thy Countries Fate
(Which happily foreknowing may avoid) Oh ſpeak.
Or, if thou haſt uphoorded in thy life
Extorted Treaſure in the wombe of Earth,
(For which, they ſay, you ſpirits oft walk in death)
Speak of it. Stay, and ſpeak. Stop it Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I ſtrike at it with my Partizan?

Hor. Do if it will not ſtand,

Barn. 'Tis here.

Hor. 'Tis here.

Mar. 'Tis gone. Exit Ghoſt.

We do it wrong, being ſo Majeſticall
To offer it the ſhew of Violence,
For it is as the aire, invulnerable,
And our vain blows, malicious mockery.

Barn. It was about to ſpeak, when the Cock crew.

Hor. And then it ſtarted, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearfull Summons. I have heard,
The Cock that is the Trumpet to the day,
Doth with his lofty and ſhrill-ſounding throat
Awake the God of Day: and at his warning,
Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Aire,
Th'extravagant and erring ſpirit, hyes
To his Confine. And of the truth herein,
This preſent Object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the Cock.
Some ſayes, that ever 'gainſt that ſeaſon comes
Wherein our Saviours Birth is celebrated,
The Bird of Dawning ſingeth all night long:
And (they ſay) no ſpirit can walk abroad,
The nights are wholſome, then no Planets ſtrike,
No fairy talks, nor Witch hath power to Charme:
So hallow'd, and ſo gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it,
But look, the Morn in Ruſſet Mantle clad,
Walks o're the Dew of yon high Eaſtern hill,
Break we our Watch up, and by my advice
Let us impart what we have ſeen to night
Unto young Hamlet. For upon my life,
This ſpirit dumb to us, will ſpeak to him:
Do you conſent we ſhall acquaint him with it,
As needfull in our Loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't I pray, and I this morning know
Where we ſhall find him moſt conveniently. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Clandius, King of Denmark, Gertrude the Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, and his Siſter Ophelia, Lords Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear Brothers death,
The Memory be green: and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole Kingdome
To be contracted in one brow of woe:
Yet ſo far hath Diſcretion fought with Nature,
That we with wiſeſt ſorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of our ſelves.
Therefore our ſometimes Siſter, now our Queen,
Th'Imperial Joyntreſſe of this warlike State,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,
With one Auſpicious, and one Dropping eye,
With mirth in Funeral, and with Dirge in Marriage,
In equal Scale weighing Delight and Dole
Taken to wife; nor have we herein barr'd
Your better Wiſdomes, which have freely gone
With this affair along, for all our thanks.
Now follows, that you know young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak ſuppoſal of our worth;
Or thinking by our late dear Brothers death,
Our State to be diſjoynt, and out of Frame,
Colleagued with the dream of his Advantage;
He hath not fail'd to peſter us with Meſſage,
Importing the ſurrender of thoſe lands
Loſt by his Father, with all Bonds of Law
To our moſt valiant Brother. So much for him.

Enter Voltimand and Cornelius.

Now for our ſelf, and for this time of meeting
Thus much the buſineſſe is. We have here writ
To Norway, Uncle of young Fortinbras,
Who impotent and bedrid, ſcarcely hears
Of this his Nephews purpoſe, to ſuppreſſe
His further gate herein. In that he Levies,
The Liſts, and full proportions are all made
Out of his ſubject: and we here diſpatch
You good Cornelius, and you Voltimand,
For bearing of this greeting to old Norway,
Giving to you no further perſonal power
To buſineſſe with the King, more then the ſcope
Of theſe dilated Articles allow:
Farewell, and let your haſte commend your duty.

Volt. In that, and all things, will we ſhew our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell.

Exit Voltimand and Cornelius.

And now Laertes, what's the news with you?

You told us of some suit. What is't Laertes?
You cannot speak of Reason to the Dane,
And loose your voice. What would'st thou beg, Laertes,
That shall not be my Offer, not thy Asking?
The head is not more Native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Then is the Throne of Denmark to thy father.
What would'st thou have Laertes?

Laer. Dread my Lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France.
From whence, though willingly I came to Denmark
To shew my duty in your Coronation,
Yet now I must confesse, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again towards France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon,

King. Have you your Fathers leave?
What sayes Polonius.

Pol. He hath my Lord:
I do beseech you give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes, time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will:
But now my Cosin Hamlet, and my Son?

Ham. A little more then kin, and lesse then kind.

King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so my Lord, I am too much i'th'Sun,

Que. Good Hamlet cast thy nightly colour off,
And let thine eye look like a Friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy veiled lids
Seek for thy Noble Father in the dust;
Thow know'st 'tis common, all that live must die,
Passing through Nature, to Eternity.

Ham. I Madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be;
Why seems it so particular with thee.

Ham. Seems Madam? Nay, it is: I know not Seems:
'Tis not alone my Inky Cloak (good Mother)
Nor Customary suits of solemne Black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitfull River in the Eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the Visage,
Together with all Formes, Moods, shews of Grief,
That can denote me truly. These indeed Seem,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that Within, which passeth show;
These, but the Trappings, and the Suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable
In your Nature Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your Father:
But you must know, your father lost a father,
That father lost, lost his, and the Surviver bound
In filial Obligation, for some terme
To do obsequious Sorrow. But to persever
In obstinate Condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornnesse. 'Tis unmanly grief,
It shews a will most incorrect to Heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An Understanding simple, and unschool'd:
For, what we know must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sence,
Why should we in our peevish Opposition
Take it to heart? Fie, 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature,
To Reason most absur'd, whose common theam
Is death of Fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first Coarse, till he that died to day,
This must be so. We pray you throw to earth
This unprevailing woe, and think of us,
As of a Father; For let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our Throne,
And with no lesse Nobility of Love,
Then that which deerest Father bears his Son,
Do I impart towards you. For your intent
In going back to School in Wittenberg,
It is most retrogarde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest Courtier Cosin, and our Son.

Que. Let not thy Mother lose her Prayers Hamlet:
I prethee stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best
Obey you Madam.

King. Why 'tis a loving, and a fair Reply,
Be as our self in Denmark. Madam come,
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart, in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to day,
But the great Cannon to the Clouds shall tell,
And the Kings Rouce, the heavens shall bruit again,
Respeaking earthly Thunder. Come away. Exeunt.

Manet Hamlet.

Ham. Oh that this too too solid Flesh, would melt,
Thaw, and resolve it self into a Dew:
Or that the Everlasting had not fixt
His Cannon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God, O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seems to me all the uses of this world?
Fie on't? Oh fie, 'tis an unweeded Garden
That grows to Seed: things rank, and grosse in Nature
Possesse it meerly. That it should come to this:
But two months dead: Nay, not so much; not two,
So excellent a King, that was to this
Hyperion to a Satyre: so loving to my Mother,
That he might not beteen the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and Earth
Must I remember: why she would hang on him,
As if encrease of Appetite had grown
By what it fed on; and yet within a month?
Let me not think on't: Frailty, thy name is woman:
A little Month, or ere those shoos were old,
With which she followed my poor Fathers body
Like Niobe, all tears. Why she, even she,
(O heaven! A beast that wants discourse of Reason
Would have mourn'd longer) married with mine Uncle,
My fathers brother: but no more like my father,
Then I to Hercules. Within a Month?
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing of her gauled eyes,
She married. O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets:
It is not, nor it cannot come to good.
But break my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Horatio, Barnard, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your Lordship.

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio, or I do forget my self.

Hor. The same my Lord,
And your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend,
I'le change that name with you:
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?

Marcellus.

Marcellus.
Mar. My good Lord.
Ham. I am very glad to see you: good even sir.
But what in faith make you from Wittenberg.
Hor. A Truant disposition, good my Lord.
Ham. I would have your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To take it truster of your own report
Against your self. I know you are no Truant:
But what is your affair in Elsenour?
We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.
Hor. My Lord, I came to see your Fathers Funeral.
Ham. I prithee do not mock me (fellow Student)
I think it was to see my Mothers wedding.
Hor. Indeed my Lord, it followeth hard upon.
Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio: the Funeral Bak'd meats,
Did coldly furnish forth the Marriage tables;
Would I had met my dearest Foe in heaven,
E're I had ever seen that day Horatio.
My father, me thinks I see my father.
Hor. O where, my Lord?
Ham. In my minds eye (Horatio)
Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly King.
Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all:
I should not look upon his like again.
Hor. My Lord, I think I saw him yesternight.
Ham. Saw? Who?
Hor. My Lord, the King your Father.
Ham. The King my Father!
Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attentive ear; till I may deliver
Upon the witnesse of these Gentlemen,
This marvel to you.
Ham. For heavens love let me hear.
Hor. Two nights together, had these Gentlemen
(Marcellus and Barnardo) on their Watch
In the dead waste and middle of the night
Been thus encountred. A figure like your father,
Arm'd at all points exactly, Cap a Pe,
Appears before them, and with solemne March
Goes slow and stately: By them thrice he walk'd,
By their oppress't and fear-surprized eyes,
Within his Truncheons length; whilst they be still'd
Almost to Jelly with the Act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadfull secrecy impart they did,
And I with them the third night kept the Watch,
Whereas they had deliver'd both in time,
Forme of the thing; each word made true and good,
The Apparition comes. I knew your Father:
These hands are not more like.
Ham. But where was this?
Mar. My Lord upon the platforme where we watcht.
Ham. Did you not speak to it?
Hor. My Lord, I did;
But answer made it none: yet once me thought
It lifted up its head, and did addresse
It self to motion, like as it would speak:
But even then, the morning Cock crew loud;
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanisht from our sight.
Ham. 'Tis very strange.
Hor. As I do live, my honorable Lord, 'tis true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it.
Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.
Hold you the Watch to night?
Both. We do my Lord?
Ham. Arm'd, say you?
Both. Arm'd, my Lord.
Ham. From top to toe?
Both. My Lord, from head to foot.
Ham. Then saw you not his face?
Hor. O yes, my Lord, he wore his Beaver up.
Ham. What, lookt he frowningly?
Hor. A countenance more in sorrow then in anger.
Ham. Pale, or red?
Hor. Nay, very pale.
Ham. And fixt his eyes upon you?
Hor. Most constantly.
Ham. I would I had been there.
Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.
Ham. Very like, very like: staid it long?
Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.
All. Longer, longer.
Hor. Not when I saw't.
Ham. His Beard was grisly?
Hor. It was, I have seen it in his life,
A Sable Silver'd.
Ham. I'le watch to night; perchance 'twill walk again.
Hor. I warrant you it will.
Ham. If it assume my noble fathers person,
I'le speak to it, though hell it self should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto concealed this sight;
Let it be trebble in your silence still:
And whatsoever else shall hap to night,
Give it an understanding but no tongue;
I will require your loves; so, fare ye well:
Upon the Platforme 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'le visit you.
All. Our duty to your Honor. Exeunt.
Ham. Your love, as mine to you: farewell.
My fathers spirit in Armes? All is not well:
I doubt some foul play: would the night were come;
Till then sit still my soul; foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'rewhelm them to mens eyes. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.
Laer. My necessaries are imbark'd, farewell:
And sister, as the Winds give benefit,
And Convoy is assistant; do not sleep,
But let me hear from you,
Ophe. Do you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favours,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in Bloud;
A Violet in the youth of Primy Nature;
Forward, not permanent; sweet, not lasting
The suppliance of a minute; No more.
Ophe. No more but so.
Laer. Think it no more:
For nature cressant does not grow alone,
In thews and Bulk: but as his Temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withall. Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no foyle nor cautell doth besmerch
The vertue of his fear: but you must fear

His

His greatneſſe weigh'd, his will is not his own:
For he himſelf is ſubject to his Birth:
He may not, as unvalued perſons do,
Carve for himſelf; for, on his choyce depends
The ſanctity and health of the whole State.
And therefore muſt his choyce be circumſcrib'd
Unto the voyce and yielding of that body,
Whereof he is the head. Then if he ſayes he loves you,
It fits your wiſdome ſo far to believe it;
As he in his peculiar Sect and force
May give his ſaying deed: which is no further,
Then the main voice of Denmark goes withall.
Then weigh that loſſe your honor may ſuſtain,
If with too credent ear you liſt his Songs;
Or loſe your heart; or your chaſte treaſure open
To his unmaſtred importunity.
Fear it Ophelia, fear it my dear Siſter,
And keep within the rear of your affection;
Out of the ſhot and danger of deſire.
The chariſt maide is prodigal enough,
If ſhe unmask her beauty to the Moone:
Vertue it ſelf ſcapes not calumnious ſtroaks,
The Canker galls the infant of the ſpring
Too oft before the Buttons be diſclos'd,
And in the morn and liquid dew of Youth,
Contagious blaſtments are moſt imminent.
Be wary then, beſt ſafety lies in fear;
Youth to it ſelf rebels, though none elſe near.

Ophe. I ſhall th'effect of this good Leſſon keep,
As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother
Do not as ſome ungracious Paſtors do,
Shew me the ſteep and thorny way to heaven;
Whileſt like a puft and reckleſſe Libertine
Himſelf, the Primroſe path of dalliance treads,
And reaks not his own read.

Laer. Oh, fear me not.

Enter Polonius.

I ſtay too long; but here my Father comes:
A double bleſſing is a double grace;
Occaſion ſmiles upon a ſecond leave.

Polon. Yet here Laertes? Aboard, aboard for ſhame,
The wind ſits in the ſhoulder of your ſail,
And you are ſtaid for there: my bleſſing with you:
And theſe few Precepts in thy memory,
See thou Character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion'd thought his Act:
Be thou familiar; but by no means vulgar:
The friends thou haſt, and their adoption try'd,
Grapple them to thy ſoul, with hoops of ſteel:
But do not dull thy palm, with entertainment
Of each unhatch'd, unfledg'd Comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel: but being in
Bear't that th'oppoſed may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear; but few thy voice:
Take each mans cenſure: but reſerve thy judgement:
Coſtly thy habit as thy purſe can buy;
But not expreſt in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man.
And they in France of the beſt rank and ſtation,
Are of a moſt ſelect and generous cheff in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be:
For Loan oft loſes both it ſelf and friend:
A borrowing dulls the edge of Husbandry.
This above all; to thine own ſelf be true:
And it muſt follow, as the Night the Day,
Thou canſt not then be falſe to any man.
Farwell: my bleſſing ſeaſon this in thee.

Laer. Moſt humbly do I take my leave, my Lord.

Polon. The time invites you, go, your ſervants tend.

Laer. Farewell Ophelia, and remember well
What I have ſaid to you.

Ophe. 'Tis my memory lockt,
And you your ſelf ſhall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. Exit Laer.

Polon. What is't Ophelia, he ſaid to you?

Ophe. So pleaſe you, ſomething touching the L. Hamlet.

Polon. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you your ſelf
Have of your audience been moſt free and bounteous,
If it be ſo, as ſo it is put on me;
And that in way of caution: I muſt tell you,
You do not underſtand your ſelf ſo clearly,
As it behooves my Daughter, and your honour.
What is between you, give me up the truth?

Ophe. He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders of his affection to me.

Polon. Affection, puh. You ſpeak like a green Girle,
Unſifted in ſuch perilous circumſtance.
Do you believe his tenders as you call them?

Ophe. I do not know, my Lord, what I ſhould think.

Pol. Marry I'le teach you; think your ſelf a Baby,
That you have tane his tenders for true pay,
Which are not ſtarling. Tender your ſelf more dearly;
Or not to crack the wind of the poor Phraſe,
Roaming it thus, you'll tender me a fool.

Ophe. My Lord, he hath importun'd me with love,
In honorable faſhion.

Polon. I, faſhion you may call it, go to, go to.

Ophe. And hath given countenance to his ſpeech,
My Lord, with all the vows of heaven.

Polon. I, Springs to catch Woodcocks. I do know
When the bloud burns, how prodigal the ſoul
Gives the tongue vows: theſe blaſes, daughter,
Giving more light then heat; extinct in both,
Even in their promiſe, as it is a making;
You muſt not take for fire. For this time Daughter,
Be ſomewhat ſcanter of your Maiden preſence,
Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Believe ſo much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walk,
Then may be given you. In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows; for they are Broakers,
Not of the eye, which their inveſtments ſhew:
But meer implorators of unholy Suits,
Breathing like ſanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all:
I would not, in plain termes, from this time forth,
Have you ſo ſlander any moment leiſure,
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet:
Look too't, I charge you; come your way.

Ophe. I ſhall obey my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, Marcellus.

Ham. The aire bites ſhrew'dly: it is very cold?

Hor. It is a nipping and eager aire.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it ha's ſtrook.

Hor. Indeed I heard it not: then it drawes near the ſeaſon,
Wherein the Spirit held his wont to walk.

What

What do's this mean my Lord?
Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his rouse,
Keeps waſſels, and the ſwaggering upſpring reels,
And as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The Kettle Drum and Trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.
Hor. Is it a cuſtome?
Ham. I marry is't:
And to my mind, though I am native here,
And to the manner born: It is a cuſtome
More honour'd in the breach, then the obſervance.
Enter Ghoſt.
Hor. Look my Lord, it comes.
Ham. Angels and Miniſters of grace defend us:
Be thou a ſpirit of health, or Goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee aires from heaven, or blaſts from hell,
Be thy events wicked or charitable,
Thou com'ſt in ſuch a queſtionable ſhape
That I will ſpeak to thee. I'le call thee Hamlet,
King, Father, Royal Dane: Oh, oh, anſwer me,
Let me not burſt in ignorance; but tell
Why thy Canoniz'd bones hearſed in death,
Have burſt their Cearments, why the Sepulcher
Wherein we ſaw thee quietly Inurn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and Marble jaws,
To caſt thee up again? What may this mean?
That thou dead Coarſe again in compleat ſteel,
Reviſitſt thus the glimpſes of the Moon,
Making night hideous? and we fools of Nature,
So horridly to ſhake our diſpoſition,
With thoughts beyond thee; reaches of our ſouls,
Say, why is this, wherefore? what ſhould we do?
Ghoſt Beckens Hamlet.
Hor. It beckens you to go away with it,
As if it ſome impartment did deſire
To you alone.
Mar. Look with what courteous action
It wafts you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.
Hor. No, by no means,
Ham. It will not ſpeak: then will I follow it.
Hor. Do not my Lord.
Ham. Why, what ſhould be the fear?
I do not ſet my life at a Pins fee?
And for my ſoul what can it do to that?
Being a thing immortal as it ſelf:
It waves me forth again; I'le follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you toward the Floud my Lord?
Or to the dreadfull Sonnet of the Cliffe,
That beetles o're his baſe into the Sea,
And there aſſumes ſome other horrible forme,
Which might deprive your Soveraignty of Reaſon,
And draw you into madneſſe? think of it.
Ham. It wafts me ſtill: go on, I'le follow thee.
Mar. You ſhall not go my Lord.
Ham. Hold off your hand.
Hor. Be rul'd, you ſhall not go,
Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty Artire in his body,
As hardy as the Nemean Lions Nerve:
Still am I call'd? Unhand me Gentlemen:
By heav'n, I'le make a Ghoſt of him that lets me:
I ſay away, go on, I'le follow thee.
Exeunt Ghoſt and Hamlet.
Hor. He waxes deſperate with imagination.
Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.
Hor. Have after, to what iſſue will this come?
Mar. Something is rotten in the State of Denmark.
Hor. Heaven will direct it.
Mar. Nay, let's follow him. Exeunt.
Enter Ghoſt and Hamlet.
Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? ſpeak; I'le go no further.
Ghoſt. Mark me.
Ham. I will.
Ghoſt. My hour is almoſt come,
When I to ſulpherous and tormenting Flames
Muſt render up my ſelf.
Ham. Alas poor Ghoſt.
Ghoſt. Pitty me not, but lend thy ſerious hearing
To what I ſhall unfold.
Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.
Gho. So art thou to revenge, when thou ſhalt hear.
Ham. What?
Ghoſt. I am thy fathers ſpirit.
Doom'd for a certain terme to walk the night;
And for the day confin'd to faſt in fiers,
Till the foul crimes done in my dayes of Nature,
Are burnt and purg'd away: But that I am forbid
To tell the ſecrets of my Priſon-houſe;
I could a Tale unfold, whoſe lighteſt word
Would harrow up thy ſoul, freez thy young bloud,
Make thy two eyes like Starrs, ſtart from their Spheres,
Thy knotty and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to ſtand an end
Like Quills upon the fretfull Porpentine:
But this eternal blazon muſt not be
To ears of fleſh and bloud; liſt Hamlet, oh liſt,
If thou didſt ever thy dear father love.
Ham. Oh heaven!
Ghoſt. Revenge his foul and moſt unnatural Murther.
Ham. Murther?
Gho. Murther moſt foul, as in the beſt it is;
But this moſt foul, ſtrange, and unnatural.
Ham. Haſte, haſte me to know it,
That I with wings as ſwift
As Meditation, or the thoughts of Love,
May ſweep to my Revenge.
Ghoſt. I find thee apt,
And duller ſhould'ſt thou be then the fat weed
That rots it ſelf in eaſe, on Lethe Wharfe,
Would'ſt thou not ſtir in this. Now Hamlet hear:
It's given out, that ſleeping in mine Orchard,
A Serpent ſtung me: ſo the whole ear of Denmark,
Is by a forged proceſſe of my death
Rankly abus'd: But know thou noble youth,
The Serpent that did ſting thy fathers life,
Now wears his Crown.
Ham. O my Prophetick ſoul: mine Uncle?
Ghoſt. I, that inceſtuous, that adulterate Beaſt
With witchcraft of his wits, hath traiterous gifts,
Oh wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to ſeduce? Won to his ſhamefull Luſt
The will of my moſt ſeeming vertuous Queen:
Oh Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whoſe love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand, even with the Vow
I made to her in Marriage; and to decline
Upon a Wretch, whoſe natural gifts were poor
To thoſe of mine. But Vertue, as it never will be moved,
Though Ledwneſſe court it in a ſhape of heaven:
So Luſt, though to a radiant Angell link'd,
Will feat it ſelf in a Celeſtial bed, and prey in Garbage.

But

But ſoft, me thinks I ſent the mornings Aire:
Brief let me be: ſleeping within mine Orchard,
My cuſtome alwayes in the afternoon;
Upon my ſecure hour thy Uncle ſtole
With juyce of curſed Hebenon in a Viol,
And in the Porches of mine ears did pour
The leaporous Diſtilment; whoſe effect
Holds ſuch an enmity with bloud of Man;
That ſwift as Quick-ſilver it courſes through
The natural Gates and Allies of the body;
And with a ſudden vigour it doth poſſet
And curd, like Aygre droppings into Milk,
The thin and wholſome bloud: ſo did it mine
And a moſt inſtant Tetter bak'd about,
Moſt Lazar-like, with vile and loathſome cruſt,
All my ſmooth body.
Thus was I, ſleeping by a Brothers hand,
Of Life, of Crown, and Queen at once diſpatcht:
Cut off even in the bloſſomes of my Sin,
Unhouzzled, diſappointed, unnaneld,
No reckoning made, but ſent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head,
Oh horrible, Oh horrible, moſt horrible:
If thou haſt nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the Royal Bed of Denmark be
A Couch for Luxury and damned Inceſt,
But howſoever thou purſueſt this Act,
Taint not thy mind; nor let thy ſoul contrive
Againſt thy Mother ought; leave her to heaven,
And to thoſe thorns that in her boſome lodge,
To prick and ſting her. Fare thee well at once,
The Glow-worme ſhews the Matine to be near,
And gins to pale his uneffectual Fire:
Adieu, adieu, Hamlet: remember me. Exit.

Ham. Oh all you hoſt of heaven! Oh Earth; what elſe?
And ſhall I couple hell? Oh fie: hold my heart;
And you my ſinews, grow not inſtant Old;
But bear me ſtiffly up: remember thee?
I, thou poor Ghoſt, while memory holds a ſeat
In this diſtracted Globe: Remember thee?
Yea, from the table of my memory,
I'le wipe away all trivial fond Records,
All ſaws of books, all formes, all preſſures paſt,
That youth and obſervation coppied there;
And thy Commandment all alone ſhall live
Within the book and Volume of my brain,
Unmixt with baſer matter; yes, yes, by heaven:
Oh moſt pernicious woman!
Oh Villain, Villain, ſmiling damned Villain!
My Tables, my Tables: meet it is I ſet it down,
That one may ſmile, and ſmile and be a Villain;
At leaſt I'm ſure it may be ſo in Denmark;
So Uncle there you are: now to my word;
It is; adieu, adieu, Remember me: I have ſworn't.

Hor, & Mar. within. My Lord, my Lord.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. Lord Hamlet.
Hor. Heaven ſecure him.
Mar. So be it.
Hor. Illo, ho, ho, my Lord.
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy; come bird, come.
Mar. How is't my Noble Lord?
Hor. What news, my Lord?
Ham. Oh wonderfull!
Hor. Good my Lord tell it.
Ham. No, you'll reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my Lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my Lord.
Ham. How ſay you then, would heart of man once think it?
But you'll be ſecret?
Both. I, by heav'n, my Lord.
Ham. There's ne're a villain dwelling in all Denmark
But he's an arrant Knave.
Hor. There needs no Ghoſt my Lord, come from the Grave to tell us this.
Ham. Why right, you are i'th'right;
And ſo without more circumſtance at all,
I hold it fit that we ſhake hands, and part:
You as your buſineſſe and deſires ſhall point you;
For every man has buſineſſe and deſire,
Such as it is: and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'le go pray.
Hor. Theſe are but wild and hurling words, my Lord.
Ham. I'm ſorry they offended you heartily:
Yes faith, heartily:
Hor. There's no offence my Lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is my Lord,
And much offence too, touching this Viſion here:
It is an honeſt Ghoſt, that let me tell you:
For your deſire to know what is between us,
O're-maſter't as you may. And now good friends,
As you are Friends, Schollers, and Souldiers,
Give me one poor requeſt.
Hor. What is't my Lord? we will.
Ham. Never make known what you have ſeen to night.
Both. My Lord we will not.
Ham. Nay, but ſwear't.
Hor. In faith my Lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I my Lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my Sword.
Mar. We have ſworn my Lord already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my ſword, indeed.
Gho. Swear. Ghoſt cries under the Stage.
Ham. Ah ha boy, ſay'ſt thou ſo. Art thou there true-penny? Come on, you hear this fellow in the ſelleridge.
Conſent to ſwear.
Hor. Propoſe my oath my Lord.
Ham. Never to ſpeak of this that you have ſeen.
Swear by my Sword.
Gho. Swear.
Ham. Hic & ubique? Then we'll ſhift for ground,
Come hither Gentlemen.
And lay your hands again upon my ſword.
Never to ſpeak of this that you have heard:
Swear by my Sword.
Gho. Swear.
Ham. Well ſaid old Mole, can'ſt work i'th'ground ſo faſt?
A worthy Pioner, once more remove good friend.
Hor. Oh day and night, but this is wondrous ſtrange.
Ham. And therefore as a ſtranger bid it welcome.
There are more things in heaven and earth Horatio,
Then are dream't of in our Philoſophy. But come,
Here as before, never ſo help you mercy,
How ſtrange or odde ſo ere I bear my ſelf;
(As I perchance hereafter ſhall think meet
To put an antick diſpoſition on:)
That you at ſuch time ſeeing me, never ſhall
With armes encombred thus, or thus, head ſhake;
Or by pronouncing of ſome doubtfull phraſe;
As well, we know, or we could, and if we would,
Or if we liſt to ſpeak; or there be and if there might,
Or ſuch ambiguous giving out to note,

That

That you know ought of me; this not to do:
So grace and mercy at your most need help you:
Swear.
Ghost. Swear.
Ham. Rest, rest perturbed Spirit: so Gentlemen,
With all my love commend me to you;
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is,
May do t'expresse his love and friending to you,
God willing shall not lack: let us go in together,
And still your fingers on your lips I pray,
The time is out of joynt: Oh cursed spight,
That ever I was born to see it right.
Nay, come, let's go together. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Polonius and Reynoldo.

Pol. Give him his money, and those notes Reynoldo.
Reynol. I will my Lord.
Pol. You shall do marvels wisely: good Reynoldo.
Before you visit him you make inquiry
Of his behaviour.
Reyn. My Lord, I did intend it.
Polon. Marry, well said:
Very well said. Look you sir,
Enquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and who; what means; and where they keep:
What company, at what expence: and finding
By this encompassement and drift of question,
That they do know my son: Come you more near
Then your particular demands will touch it,
Take you as 'twere some distant knowledge of him,
And thus, I know his father and his friends,
And in part him. Do you mark this Reynoldo?
Reynol. I, very well my Lord,
Polon. And in part him, but you may say not well;
But if't be he I mean, he's very wilde;
Addicted so and so; and there put on him
What forgeries you please: marry, none so rank,
As may dishonor him: take heed of that:
But sir, such wanton, wilde, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.
Reynol. As gaming my Lord.
Polon. I, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
Quarrelling, Drabbing. You may go so far.
Rey. My Lord that would dishonour him.
Polon. Faith no, as you may season it in the charge;
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to Incontinency;
That's not my meaning; but breath his faults so quaintly,
That they may seem the taints of liberty;
The flash and out-break of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unreclaim'd blood of general assault.
Reynol. But my good Lord.
Polon. Wherefore should you do this?
Renol. I my Lord, I would know that.
Polon. Marry sir, here's my drift,
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sulleyes on my Son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i'th'working:
Mark you your party in converse; him you would sound,
Having ever seen. In the prenominate crimes,
The youth you breath of guilty, be assur'd
He closes with you in this consequence:
Good sir, or so, or friend, or Gentleman.
According to the Phrase and the Addition,
Of man and Country.
Reynol. Very good my Lord.
Polon. And then sir do's he this?
He do's: what was I about to say?
I was about to say nothing: where did I leave?
Reynol. At closes in the consequence:
At friend, or so, and Gentleman.
Polon. At closes in the consequence, I marry,
He closes with you thus. I know the Gentleman,
I saw him yesterday, or 'tother day;
Or then, or then, with such and such, and as you say,
There was he gaming, there o'retook in's Rouse,
Their falling out at Tennis; or perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sail;
Videlicet, a Brothel, or so forth. See you now;
Your bait of falshood, takes this Cape of truth;
And thus do we of wisdome and of reach
With Windlesses, and with assayes of Byas,
By indirections find directions out:
So by my former Lecture and advice
Shall you my son; you have me, have you not?
Reynol. My Lord, I have.
Polon. God buy you; fare you well.
Reynol. Good my Lord.
Polon. Observe his inclination in your self,
Reynol. I shall my Lord.
Polon. And let him ply his Musick.
Reynol. Well, my Lord. Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Polon. Farewell:
How now Ophelia, what's the matter?
Ophe. Alas my Lord, I have been so affrighted.
Pol. With what, in the Name of Heaven?
Ophe. My Lord, as I was sowing in my Chamber,
Lord Hamlet with his doublet all unbrac'd,
No Hat upon his head, his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his Ancle,
Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other,
And with a look so pitteous in purport,
As if he had been loosed out of Hell,
To speak of horrors: he comes before me.
Polon. Mad for thy love?
Ophe. My Lord, I do not know: but truly I do fear it.
Polon. What said he?
Ophe. He took me by the wrist.
Then goes he to the length of all his Arme;
And with his other hand, thus o're his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it. Long staid he so,
At last, a little shaking of my arme,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
He rais'd a sigh, so hideous and profound,
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk,
And end his being. That done, he lets go,
And with his head over his shoulders turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes,
For out adoors he went without their help;
And to the last, bended their light on me.
Polon. Go with me, I will go seek the King,
This is the very extasie of Love,
Whose violent property foredoes it self,

And leads the will to desperate Undertakings,
As oft as any passion under heaven,
That do's afflict our Natures. I am sorry,
What have you given him any hard words of late?
Ophe. No my good Lord: but as you did command,
I did repell his Letters, and deny'd
His accesse to me.
Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry that with better speed and judgement
I had not quoted him. I fear he did but trifle,
And meant to wrack thee: but beshrew my jealousie:
It seems it is as proper to our Age,
To cast beyond our selves in our opinions,
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come go we to the King,
This must be known, which being kept close might move
More grief to hide, then hate to utter love. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Queen, Rosincrosse, and Guildenstare cum aliis.

King. Welcome dear Rosincros and Guildenstare.
Moreover, that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you, did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlets transformation: so I call it,
Since not th'exterior, nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should be
More then his fathers death, that thus hath put him
So much from th'understanding of himself,
I cannot deem of. I intreat you both,
That being of so young dayes brought up with him:
And since so Neighbour'd to his youth, and humor,
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our Court
Some little time: so by your Companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather
So much as from Occasions you may glean,
That open'd lies within our remedy,
Qu. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you,
And sure I am, two men there are not living,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To shew us so much gentry and good will,
As to expend your time with us a while,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your Visitation shall receive such thanks,
As fits a Kings remembrance.
Rosin. Both your Majesties
Might by the Soveraign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures, more into command
Then to Entreaty.
Guil. We both obey,
And here give up our selves, in the full bent,
To lay our services freely at your feet,
To be commanded.
King. Thanks Rosincros, and gentle Guildenstare.
Que. Thanks Guildenstare and gentle Rosincros,
And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too-much changed son.
Go some of ye,
And bring the Gentlemen where Hamlet is.
Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practises,
Pleasant and helpfull to him. Exeunt.

Queen. Amen.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The Ambassadors from Norway, my good Lord,
Are joyfully return'd.
King. Thou still hast been the father of good News.
Pol. Have I, my Lord? Assure you, my good Liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God, one to my gracious King:
And I do think, or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of Policy, so be sure
As I have us'd to do, that I have found
The very cause of Hamlets Lunacy.
King. O speak of that, that I do long to hear.
Pol. Give first admittance to th'Ambassadors,
My News shall be the News to that great Feast.
King. Thy self do grace to them, and bring them in.
He tells me my sweet Queen, that he hath found
The head and sourse of all your sons distemper.
Qu. I doubt it is no other, but the main,
His fathers death, and our o're-hasty Marriage.

Enter Polonius, Voltimand, and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him. Welcome good Friends:
Say Voltimand, what from our Brother Norway?
Volt. Most fair return of Greetings, and Desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppresse
His Nephews Levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polak:
But better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your Highnesse, whereat grieved,
That so his Sicknesse, Age, and Impotence
Was falsely born in hand, sends out Arrests
On Fortinbras, which he (in brief) obeys,
Receives rebuke from Norway: and in fine,
Makes Vow before his Uncle, never more
To give th'assay of armes against your Majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand Cronws in annual Fee,
And his commission to imploy those Souldiers
So levied as before, against the Polak:
With an intreaty herein further shewn,
That it might please you to give quiet passe
Through your Dominions for his enterprize.
On such regards of safety and allowance,
As therein are set down.
King. It likes us well:
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this Businesse.
Mean time we thank you, for your well-look't labor.
Go to your rest, at night we'll Feast together.
Most welcome home. Exit Ambas.
Pol. This businesse is very well ended.
My Liege and Madam, to expostulate
What Majesty should be, what Duty is,
Why day is day; night, night; and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste Night, Day, and Time.
Therefore, since Brevity is the soul of Wit,
And tediousnesse, the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief. Your Noble Son is mad:
Mad call I it; for to define true Madnesse,
What is't, but to be nothing else but mad.
But let that go.
Qu. More matter, with lesse Art.
Pol. Madam, I swear I use no Art at all:
That he is mad 'tis true: 'Tis true, 'tis pitty,
And pitty it is true: A foolish figure,
But farewell it: for I will use no Art.

Mad

Mad let us grant him then: and now remains
That we find out the cauſe of this effect,
Or rather ſay, the cauſe of this defect;
For this effect defective, comes by cauſe,
Thus it remaines, and the remainder thus. Perpend.
I have a Daughter: have, whil'ſt ſhe is mine,
Who in her Duty and Obedience, marke,
Hath given me this: now gather, and ſurmiſe.

The Letter.

To the Celeſtiall, and my Soules Idoll, the moſt beautified Ophelia.

That's an ill Phraſe, a vilde Phraſe, beautified is a vilde Phraſe: but you ſhall hear theſe in her excellent white boſome, theſe.

Quee. Came this from Hamlet to her.

Pol. Good Madam ſtay awhile, I will be faithfull.

Doubt thou, the Starres are fire,
Doubt, that the Sun doth move:
Doubt Truth to be a Lyar,
But never Doubt, I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at theſe Numbers: I have not Art to reckon my groanes; but that I love thee beſt, oh moſt Beſt believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, moſt dear Lady, whilſt this Machine is to him, Hamlet.

This in Obedience hath my Daughter ſhew'd me:
And more above hath his ſoliciting,
As they fell out by Time, by meanes, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath ſhe receiv'd his Love?

Pol. What doe you think of me?

King. As of a man, faithfull and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove ſo. But what might you think?
When I had ſeen his hot love on the wing,
As I perceived it, I muſt tell you that
Before my Daughter told me, what might you
Or my dear Majeſty your Queen here, think,
If I had play'd the Deske or Table-book,
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumbe,
Or look'd upon this Love, with idle ſight,
What might you think? No, I went round to work,
And my young Miſtris thus I did beſpeak;
Lord Hamlet is a Prince out of thy Sphere,
This muſt not be: and then, I precepts gave her,
That ſhe ſhould lock her ſelf from his Reſort,
Admit no Meſſengers, receive no Tokens:
Which done, ſhe took the fruits of my Advice,
And he repulſed, a ſhort Tale to make,
Fell into a Sadneſſe, then into a Faſt,
Thence to a Watch, thence into a Weakneſſe,
Thence to a Lightneſſe, and by this declenſion
Into the Madneſſe whereon now he raves,
And all we waile for.

King. Doe you think 'tis this?

Quee. It may be very likely.

Pol. Hath there been ſuch a time, I'de fain know that,
That I have poſitively ſaid, 'tis ſo,
When it prov'd otherwiſe?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwiſe,
If Circumſtances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the Center.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know ſometimes
He walkes four houres together, here
In the Lobby.

Quee. So he has indeed.

Pol. At ſuch a time I'le looſe my Daughter to him,
Be you and I behind an Arras then,
Marke the encounter: If he love her not,
And be not from his reaſon faln thereon;
Let me be no Aſſiſtant for a State,
And keep a Farme and Carters,

King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a Book.

Quee. But look where ſadly the poor wretch
Comes reading.

Pol. Away I doe beſeech you, both away,
I'le board him preſently. Exit King and Queen.
Oh give me leave. How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Doe you know me, my Lord?

Ham. Excellent, excellent well: y'are a Fiſhmonger.

Pol. Not I, my Lord.

Ham. Then I would you were ſo honeſt a man.

Pol. Honeſt, my Lord?

Ham. I, Sir, to be honeſt as this world goes, is to be one pick'd out of two thouſand.

Pol. That's very true, my Lord.

Ham. For if the Sun breed Maggots in a dead Dog, being a good kiſſing Carrion——
Have you a Daughter?

Pol. I have, my Lord.

Ham. Let her not walk ith' Sun: Conception is a bleſſing, but not as your Daughter may conceive. Friend look too't.

Pol. How ſay you by that? Still harping on my Daughter: yet he knew me not at firſt; he ſaid I was a Fiſhmonger: he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth, I ſuffered much extremity for love: very near this. I'le ſpeak to him again. What doe you read, my Lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my Lord?

Ham. Between whom?

Pol. I mean the matter you mean, my Lord.

Ham. Slanders, Sir: for the Satyricall ſlave ſayes here, that old men have gray Beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick Amber, or Plum-Tree Gumme: and that they have a plentifull lock of Wit, together with weak Hammes. All which, Sir, though I moſt powerfully, and potently believe, yet I hold it not Honeſty to have it thus ſet down: For you your ſelf, Sir, ſhould be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madneſſe.
Yet there is Method in't: will you walke
Out of the ayre, my Lord?

Ham. Into my Grave?

Pol. Indeed that is out oth' Ayre:
How pregnant (ſometimes) his replies are?
A happineſſe,
That often Madneſſe hits on,
Which Reaſon and Sanity could not
So proſperouſly be deliver'd of.
I will leave him,
And ſuddenly contrive the meanes of meeting
Between him, and my Daughter.
My honourable Lord, I will moſt humbly
Take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, Sir, take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withall, except my life, my life.

Polon. Fare you well, my Lord.

Ham. Theſe tedious old fools.

Polon. You go to ſeek my Lord Hamlet; there he is.

Enter Roſincros and Guildenſtar.

Roſin. God ſave you, Sir.

Guild. Mine honour'd Lord?

Roſin. My moſt dear Lord?

Ham. My excellent good friends? How doſt thou Guildenſtar? Oh, Roſincros, good Lads: How doe ye both?

Roſin. As the indifferent Children of the earth.

Guild. Happy, in that we are not over-happy: on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Soales of her Shooe?

Roſin. Neither, my Lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waſte, or in the middle of her favour?

Guild. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the ſecret parts of Fortune? Oh, moſt true: ſhe is a Strumpet. Whats the newes.

Roſin. None, my Lord, but that the World's grown honeſt.

Ham. Then is Doomes-day near: but your newes is not true. Let me queſtion more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deſerved at the hands of fortune, that ſhe ſends you to priſon hither?

Guild. Priſon, my Lord?

Ham. Denmark's a Priſon.

Roſin. Then is the World one.

Ham. A goodly one, in which there are many Confines, Wards, and Dungeons; Denmark being one o' th' worſt.

Roſin. We think not ſo, my Lord.

Ham. Why then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it ſo: to me it is a priſon.

Roſin. Why then your Ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your minde.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a Nut-ſhell, and count my ſelf a King of infinite ſpace; were it not that I have bad dreames.

Guild. Which dreames indeed are Ambition: for the very ſubſtance of the Ambitious, is meerly the ſhadow of a Dreame.

Ham. A dreame it ſelf is but a ſhadow.

Roſin. Truly, and I hold Ambition of ſo airy and light a quality, that it is but a ſhadowes ſhadow.

Ham. Then are our Beggars bodies; and our Monarchs, and out-ſtretcht Heroes, the Beggars ſhadowes: ſhall we to th' Court: for, by my fey I cannot reaſon?

Both. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No ſuch matter. I will not ſort you with the reſt of my ſervants: for to ſpeak to you like an honeſt man: I am moſt dreadfully attended; but in the beaten way of friendſhip. What make you at Elſinoore?

Roſin. To viſit you, my Lord, no other occaſion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and ſure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny; were you not ſent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free viſitation? Come, deale juſtly with me: come, come; nay ſpeak.

Guild. What ſhould we ſay, my Lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to the purpoſe; you were ſent for; and there is a kind of confeſſion in your looks; which your modeſties have not craft enough to colour, I know the good King and Queen have ſent for you.

Roſin. To what end, my Lord?

Ham. That you muſt teach me: but let me conjure you by the rights of your fellowſhip, by the conſonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preſerved love, and by what more dear, a better propoſer could charge you withall; be even and direct with me, whether you were ſent for or no.

Roſin. What ſay you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you: if you love me, hold not off.

Guild. My Lord, we were ſent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; ſo ſhall my anticipation prevent your diſcovery of your ſecrecy to the King and Queen: moult no feather, I have of late, but wherefore I know not, loſt all my mirth, forgone all cuſtome of exerciſe; and indeed, it goes ſo heavenly with my diſpoſition; that this goodly frame, the earth, ſeems to me a ſterill Promontory; this moſt excellent Canopy the Ayre look you this brave o're-hanging, this Majeſticall Roof, fretted with golden fire; why, it appeared no other thing to me, then a foule and peſtilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How Noble in Reaſon? how infinite in faculty? in forme and moving how expreſſe and admirable? in Action, how like an Angel? in apprehenſion, how like a god? the beauty of the world, the Parragon of Animals; und yet to me, what is this Quinteſſence of Duſt? Man delights not me; no, nor Woman neither, though by your ſmiling you ſeem to ſay ſo.

Roſin. My Lord, there was no ſuch ſtuffe in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I ſaid, Man delights not me?

Roſin. To think my Lord, if you delight not in Man, what Lenton entertainment the Players ſhall receive from you: we coated them on the way, and hither are they comming to offer you Service.

Ham. He that playes the King ſhall be welcome; his Majeſty ſhall have Tribute of me: the adventurous Knight ſhall uſe his Foyle and Target: The Lover ſhall not ſigh gratis, the humorous man ſhall end his part in peace: the Clown ſhall make thoſe laugh, whoſe lungs are tickled ath' ſere: and the Lady ſhall ſay her mind freely; or the blank Verſe ſhall halt for't: what Players are they?

Roſin. Even thoſe you were wont to take delight in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chances it they travell? their reſidence both in reputation and profit was better both wayes.

Roſin. I think their Inhibition comes by the meanes of the late innovation?

Ham. Doe they hold the ſame eſtimation they did when I was in the City? Are they ſo follow'd?

Roſin. No indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? doe they grow ruſty?

Roſin. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; But there is, Sir, an airy of Children, little Yaſes, that cry out on the top of queſtion; and are moſt tyrannically clapt for't: theſe are now the faſhion, fashion, and so be-rattle the common Stages (so they call them) that many wearing Rapiers, are afraid of Goose Quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What are they Children? Who maintains 'em? How are they escoted? Will they pursue the Quality no longer then they can sing? Will they not say afterwards if they should grow themselves to common Players (as it is like most if their meanes are no better) their Writers doe them wrong to make them exclaim against their own Succession.

Rosin. Faith there has been much to doe on both sides: and the Nation holds it no sin, to tarre them to controversie. There was for a while, no money bid for argument, unlesse the Poet and the Player went to Cuffes in the Question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Guild. Oh there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Doe the Boyes carry it away?

Rosin. I that they doe my Lord, Hercules & his load too.

Ham. It is not strange for mine Unkle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mowes at him while my Father lived; give twenty, forty, an hundred Ducates a piece, for his picture in Little. There is something in this more then Naturall, if Philosophy could find it out.

Flourish for the Players.

Gild. There are the Players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinoore: your hands, come: The appurtenance of Welcome, is Fashion and Ceremony. Let me comply with you in the Garbe, lest my extent to the Players (which I tell you must shew fairly outward) should more appear like entertainment then yours. You are welcome: but my Unkle Father, and Aunt Mother are deceiv'd.

Guild. In what, my dear Lord?

Ham. I am but mad North, North-West: when the Wind is Southerly, I know a Hawke from a Handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, Gentlemen,

Ham. Heark you Guildenstar, and you too: at each ear a hearer: that great Baby you see there, is not yet out of his swathing clouts.

Rosin. Happily he's the second time come to them: for they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will Prophesie, He comes to tell me of the Players. Mark it, you say right, Sir: for a Munday morning 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My Lord, I have newes to tell you.

Ham. My Lord, I have newes to tell you,
When *Rosci*us an Actor in Rome------

Pol. The Actors are come hither, my Lord.

Ham. Buzze, buzze.

Pol. Upon mine honour.

Ham. Then can each Actor on his Asse------

Pol. The best Actors in the world, either for Tragedy, Comedy, History, Pastorall: Pastoricall-Comicall-Historicall-Pastorall: Tragicall-Historicall; Tragicall-Comicall-Historicall-Pastorall: Scæne indivible, or Poem unlimited. Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light, for the law of Writ, and the Liberty. These are the onely men.

Ham. O Jephta, Judge of Israel, what a Treasure hadst thou?

Pol. What a Treasure had he, my Lord?

Ham. Why one fair Daughter, and no more.
The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my Daughter.

Ham. Am I not ith' right, old Jephta?

Pol. If you call me Jephta, my Lord, I have a Daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay that followes not.

Pol. What followes then, my Lord?

Ham. Why, as by lot, God wot? and then you know, It came to passe, as most like it was: the first row of the Pans Chanson will shew you more. For look where my Abridgements come.

Enter four or five Players.

Y'are welcome Masters, welcome all. I am glad to see thee well; welcome good friends. Oh my old friend? Thy face is valiant since I saw thee last: Com'st thou to beard me in Denmark? what my young Lady and Mistris? Berlady your Lordship is nearer heaven, then when I saw you last, by the altitude of a Choppine. Pray God your voyce, like a piece of uncurrant gold, be not crack'd within the Ring. Masters, you are all welcome: we'll e'ne to't like French Faulconers, flye at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality: come, a passionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my Lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never Acted: or if it was, not above once, for the Play I remember pleas'd not the Million, 'twas Cautary to the Generall: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgement in such matters, cryed in the top of mine) an excellent Play; well digested in the Scænes, set down with as much modesty, as cunning. I remember one said, there was no Sallets in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the Author of affectation, but call'd it an honest method. One chief speech in it, I chiefly lov'd, 'twas Æneas Tale to Dido, and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priams slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this Line, let me see, let me see: The rugged Pyrrhus, like th Hyrcanian Beast. It is not so: it begins with Pyrrhus.

The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose Sable Armes
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When his lay couched in the Ominous Horse,
Hath now this dread and black Complexion smear'd
With Heraldry more dismall: head to foot
Now is he to take Geules, horridly Trick'd
With blood of Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sons,
Bak'd and impasted, with the parching streets,
That lend a tyrannous, and damned light
To their vilde Murthers, roasted in wrath and fire,
And thus o'resized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like Carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus
Old Grandsire Priam seeks.

Pol. Fore God, my Lord, well spoken, with good accent, and good discretion.

1. Play. Anon he findes him,
Striking too short at Greeks. His antick Sword,
Rebellious to his Arme, lies where it falls
Repugnant to command: unequall match,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives, in rage strikes wide:
But with the whiffe and winde of his fell Sword,
Th'unnerved father falls. Then senseless Illium,
Seeming to feele his blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his Base, and with a hideous crash
Takes Prisoner Pyrrhus eare. For loe, his Sword
Which was declining on the Milky head
Of Reverend Priam, seem'd ith' Aire to stick:

So as a Tirant Pyrrhus ſtood,
And lik'd a Newtrall to his will and matter, did nothing.
But as we often ſee againſt ſome ſtorme,
A ſilence in the heavens, the Rack ſtand ſtill,
The bold windes ſpeechleſſe, and the Orbe below
As huſh as death: Anon the dreadfull Thunder
Doth rend the Region. So after Pyrrhus pawſe,
A rowſed Vengeance ſets him new a work,
And never did the Cyclops hammers fall
On Mars his Armours, forg'd for proof Eterne,
With leſſe remorſe then Pyrrhus bleeding ſword
Now falls on Priam,
Out, out, thou Strumpet-Fortune, all you gods,
In generall Synod take away her power:
Break all the Spokes and Fallies from her wheele,
And bowle the round Nave down the hill of heaven.
As low as to the fiends.

Pol. This is two long.

Ham. It ſhall to th' Barbers with your Beard. Prethee ſay on: He's for a Jigge, or a tale of Bawdry, or he ſleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba.

1. Play. But who, O who, had ſeen the Mobled Queen.

Ham. The Mobled Queen?

Pol. That's good: Mobled Queen is good.

1. Play. Run bare-foot up and down,
Threatning the flame
With Biſſon Rheume: a clout about that head,
VVhere late the Diadem ſtood, and for a Robe
About her lank and all o're-teamed Loynes,
A Blanket in th'alarum of fear caught up.
VVho this had ſeen, with tongue in Venome ſteep'd,
Gainſt fortunes State, would Treaſon have pronounc'd?
But if the gods themſelves did ſee her then,
VVhen ſhe ſaw Pyrrhus make malicious ſport
In mincing with his Sword her Husbands limbes.
The inſtant Burſt of Clamour that ſhe made
(Unleſs things mortall meant them not all)
VVould have made milche the burning eyes of heaven,
And paſſion in the Gods.

Pol. Look where he has not turn'd his colour, and has teares in's Eyes. Pray you no more.

Ham. 'Tis well, I'le have thee ſpeak out the reſt ſoon. Good my Lord, will you ſee the Players well beſtow'd. Doe ye hear, let them be well us'd: for they are the abſtracts, and brief Chronicles of the time. After your death, you were better have a bad Epitaph, then their ill report while you lived.

Pol. My Lord, I will uſe them according to their deſert.

Ham. Godsbodikins man, better. Uſe every man after his deſert, and who ſhould ſcape whipping: uſe them after your own Honour and Dignity. The leſſe they deſerve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, ſirs. Exit Polonius.

Ham. Follow him friends: we'll hear a Play to morrow. Doſt thou hear me, old friend, can you play the murther of Gonzago?

Play. I, my Lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to morrow night. You could for a need ſtudy a ſpeech of ſome dozen or ſixteen lines, which I would ſet down, and inſert in't? Could ye not?

Play. I, my Lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that Lord, and look you mock him not. My good friends, I'le leave you till night, you are welcome to Elſinoore.

Roſin. Good my Lord. Exeunt

Manet Hamlet.

Ham. I ſo, god buy'ye: Now I am alone.
Oh what a Rogue and Pezant ſlave am I?
Is it not monſtrous that this Player here,
But in a Fiction, in a dreame of Paſſion,
Could force his Soule ſo to his whole conceit,
That from her working, all his viſage warm'd;
Teares in his eyes, diſtraction in's aſpect,
A broken voyce, and his whole Function ſuiting
With formes, to his conceit? and all for nothing?
For Hecuba?
What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he ſhould weep for her? what would he doe,
Had he the motive and the Cue for paſſion
That I have, he would drown the Stage with teares,
And cleave the generall eare with horrid ſpeech:
Make mad the guilty, and apale the free.
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed,
The very faculty of Eyes and Eares. Yet I,
A dull and muddy-metled Raſcall, peake
Like John-a-dreames, unpregnant of my cauſe,
And can ſay nothing: No, not for a King,
Upon whoſe property, and moſt dear life,
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a Coward?
Who calls me Villain? breaks my pate a-croſſe?
Plucks off my Beard, and blowes it in my face?
Tweaks me by th' Noſe, gives me the Lye ith' Throat,
As deep as to the Lungs? who does me this?
Ha? Why ſhould I take it? for it cannot be,
But I am Pigeon-Liver'd, and lack Gall
To make Oppreſſion bitter, or ere this,
I ſhould have fatted all the Region Kites
With this Slaves Offall, bloody: a Bawdy villain,
Remorſeleſſe, Treacherous, Lecherous, kindleſſe villain!
Oh Vengeance!
Who? what an Aſſe am I? I ſure, this is moſt brave,
That I, the Son of the dear murthered,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven, and hell,
Muſt (like a Whore) unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-curſing like a very Drab,
A Scullion? Fye upon't. Foh. About my Brain.
I have heard, that guilty Creatures ſitting at a Play,
Have by the very cunning of the Scæne,
Been ſtruck ſo to the ſoule, that preſently
They have proclaim'd their Malefactions.
For Murther, though it have no tongue, will ſpeak
With moſt miraculous Organ. I'le have theſe Players,
Play ſomething like the murder of my Father,
Before mine Uncle. I'le obſerve his looks,
I'le rent him to the quick: if he but blench
I know my courſe. The Spirit that I have ſeen
May be the Devil, and the Devil hath power
T'aſſume a pleaſing ſhape, yea, and perhaps
Out of my weakneſſe, and my melancholly,
As he is very potent with ſuch Spirits,
Abuſes me to damn me. I'le have grounds
More Relative then this: The Play's the thing,
Wherein I'le catch the Conſcience of the King. Exit.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Roſincros, Guildenſtar, and Lords.

King. And can you by no drift of circumſtance
Get from him why he puts on this Confuſion,
Grating ſo harſhly all his dayes of quiet

With

With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.
Rosin. He does confesse he feeles himself distracted,
But from what cause he will by no meanes speak.
Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,
But with a crafty Madnesse keeps aloof:
When we would bring him on to some Confession
Of his true state,
Quee. Did he receive you well?
Rosin. Most like a Gentleman.
Guild. But with much forcing of his disposition.
Rosin. Niggard of question, but of our demands
Most free in his reply.
Quee. Did you assay him to any pastime?
Rosin. Madam, it so fell out, that certain Players
We o're-took on the way: of these we told him,
And there did seem in him a kind of Joy
To hear of it: They are about the Court,
And (as I think) they have already order
This night to play before him.
Pol. 'Tis most true:
And he beseech'd me to intreat your Majesties
To hear and see the matter.
King. With all my heart, and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclin'd. Good Gentlemen,
Give him a further edge, and drive his purpose on
To these delights.
Rosin. We shall, my Lord. Exeunt.
King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too,
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may there
Affront Ophelia. Her Father, and my self (lawfull espials)
Will so bestow our selves, that seeing unseen
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behaved,
If 't be th'affliction of his love, or no.
That thus he suffers for.
Quee. I shall obey you:
And for your part, Ophelia, I doe wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlets wildnesse: so shall I hope your Virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your Honours.
Ophe. Madam, I wish it may.
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious so please ye
We will bestow our selves: Read on this Book,
That shew of such an exercise may colour
Your lonelinesse. We are oft to blame in this
'Tis too much prov'd, that with Devotions visage,
And pious Action, we do surge o're
The Devil himself.
King. Oh 'tis true:
How smart a lash that speech doth give my Conscience?
The Harlots Cheek beautied with plaistring Art
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Then is my deed, to my most painted word,
Oh heavy burthen!
Pol. I hear him comming, let's withdraw, my Lord.
Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Question:
Whether 'tis Nobler in the mind to suffer
The Slings and Arrowes of outragious Fortune,
Or to take Armes against a Sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them: to dye, to sleep
No more: and by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ake, and the thousand naturall shocks
That flesh is heir to? 'Tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die to sleep,
To sleep, perchance to dreame; I, there's the rub,
For in that sleep of death, what dreames may come,
When he hath shuffled off this mortall coyle,
Must give us pawse. There's the respect
That makes Calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The Oppressors wrong, the poor mans Contumely,
The pangs of dispriz'd Love, the Lawes delay,
The insolence of Office, and the spurnes
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his Quietus make
With a bare Bodkin? Who would these Fardles bear
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscovered Country, from whose Born
No Traveller returns, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Then flye to others that we know not of.
Thus Conscience does make Cowards of us all,
And thus the Native hue of Resolution
Is sicklied o're, with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprizes of great pith and moment,
With this regard their Currants turn away,
And loose the name of Action. Soft you now,
The fair Ophelia? Nymph, in thy Horizons
Be all my sins remembred.
Ophe. Good my Lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?
Ham. I humbly thank you: well, well, well.
Ophe. My Lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to redeliver.
I pray you now, receive them.
Ham. No, no, I never gave you ought.
Ophe. My honour'd Lord, I know right well you did,
And with them words of so sweet breath compos'd,
As made the things more rich, then perfume left:
Take these again, for to the Noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.
There, my Lord.
Ham. Ha, ha: are you honest?
Ophe. My Lord.
Ham. Are you faire?
Ophe. What meanes your Lordship?
Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your Honesty should admit no discourse to your Beauty.
Ophe. Could beauty, my Lord, have better Comerce then your honesty?
Ham. I truly: for the power of beauty, will sooner transforme honesty from what it is, to a Bawd, then the force of honesty can translate Beauty into his likenesse. This was sometimes a Paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.
Ophe. Indeed, my Lord, you made me believe so.
Ham. You should not have believed me. For virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.
Ophe. I was the more deceived.
Ham. Get thee to a Nunnery. Why would'st thou be a breeder of Sinners? I am my self indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my Mother had not born me. I am very proud, revengefull. Ambitious, with more offenses at my beck, then I have thoughts to put them in imagination, to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such Fellowes as I do crawling between Heaven and Earth. We are arrant Knaves all, believe none of us. Go thy wayes to a Nunnery. Where's your Father?

Ophe. At home, my Lord.

Ham. Let the doores be shut upon him, that he may play the Fool no way, but in's own house. Farewell.

Ophe. O help him, you sweet heavens.

Ham. If thou do'st Marry, I'le give thee this Plague for thy Dowry. Be thou as chaste as Ice, as pure as Snow, thou shalt not escape Calumny. Get thee to a Nunnery. Go, farewell. Or if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool: for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a Nunnery, go, and quickly too. Farewell.

Ophe. O heavenly Powers, restore him.

Ham. I have heard of your pratling too, well enough. God has given you one pace, and you make your selfanother: you gidge, you amble, and you lispe, and nick-name Gods Creatures, and make your wantonnesse, your ignorance. Go, I'le no more on't, it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more Marriages. Those that are married already, all but one shall, the rest shall keep as they are, To a Nunnery, go. Exit Hamlet.

Ophe. O what a Noble mind is here o're-thrown?
The Courtiers, Soldiers, Schollars? Eye, tongue, sword,
Th'expectancy and Rose of the fair State,
The glasse of fashion, and the mould of forme,
Th'observ'd of all Observers, quite, quite down.
I am of Ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the Hony of his Musick Vowes:
Now see that Noble, and most Soveraign Reason,
Like sweet Bells jangled out of tune, and harsh,
That unmatch'd fortune and feature of blown youth,
Blasted with extasie. Oh woe is me,
T'have seen what I have seen: see what I see.

Enter King, and Polonius.

King. Love? his affections doe not that way tend,
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like Madnesse. There's something in his soule,
O're which his Melancholly sits on brood,
And I doe doubt the hatch, and the disclose
Will be some danger, which how to prevent;
I have in quick determination.
Thus set it down. He shall with speed to England
For the demand of our neglected Tribute:
Haply the Seas and Countreys different
With variable Objects, shall expell
This something setled matter in his heart:
Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall doe well. But yet do I believe
The Origin and Commencement of this grief
Sprung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia?
You need not tell us, what Lord Hamlet said,
We heard it all. My Lord, doe as you please,
But if you hold it fit after the Play,
Let his Queen Mother all alone intreat him
To shew his Griefs: let her be round with him.
And I'le be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him: Or confine him where
Your wisdome best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madnesse in great Ones, must not unwatch'd go.
Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, and two or three of the Players.

Ham. Speak the Speech I pray you, as I pronounc'd it to you trippingly on the Tongue. But if you mouth it, as many of your Players do, I had as lieve the Town-Cryer had spoke my Lines: Nor do not saw the aire too much with your hand thus, but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) the whirl-wind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothnesse. O it offends me to the Soule, to see a robustious Perriwig-pated fellow, tear a Passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the eares of the Groundlings: who (for the most part) are capable of nothing, but inexplicable dumb shewes, and noyse: I could have such a fellow whipt for o're-doing Termagant: it out-Herods Herod. Pray you avoid it.

Player. I warrant your Honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither: but let your own Discretion be your Tutor. Suite the Action to the word, the word to the Action, with this speciall observance: That you o're-stop not the modesty of Nature; for any thing so over-done, is from the purpose of Playing, whose end both at the first and now, was and is, to hold as 'twere the Mirrour up to Nature; to shew Vertue her own Feature, Scorn her own Image, and the very Age and Body of the Time, his form and pressure. Now, this over-done, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilfull laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one, must in your allowance o'reway a whole Theatre of others. Oh, there be Players that I have seen Play, and heard others praise, and that highly (not to speak it prophanely) that neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gate of Christian, Pagan, or Norman, have so strutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of Natures Journey-men had made men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity so abominably.

Play. I hope we have reform'd that indifferently with us, Sir.

Ham. O reform it altogether. And let those that play your Clowns, speak no more then is set down for them. For there be of them, that will of themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren Spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time, some necessary question of the Play be then to be considered: that's Villanous, and shews a most pittifull Ambition in the Fool that uses it. Go make you ready. Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosincros, and Guildenstar.

How now, my Lord?
Will the King hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the Queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the Players make haste. Exit Polonius.
Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. We will, my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Horatio.

Ham. What hoa, Horatio?

Hora. Here, sweet Lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'ne as just a man
As e're my Converse coap'd withall.

Hora. O my dear Lord.

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no Revenue hast, but thy good spirits

To

To feed and cloathe thee. Why ſhould the poor be flat-
No, let the Candied tongue, like abſurd pomp, (ter'd ?
And crook the pregnant Hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow faining ? Doſt thou hear,
Since my dear Soule was Miſtris of my choyſe,
And could of men diſtinguiſh, her election
Hath ſeal'd thee for her ſelf. For thou haſt been
As one in ſuffering all, that ſuffers nothing.
A man that fortune buffets, and rewards
Hath tane with equall thanks. And bleſt are thoſe,
Whoſe blood and Judgement are ſo well co-mingled,
That they are not a Pipe for fortunes finger.
To ſound what ſtop ſhe pleaſe. Give me that man,
That is not Paſſions Slave, and I will wear him
In my hearts Core : I, in my heart of heart,
As I doe thee. Something too much of this.
There is a Play to night before the King,
One Scene of it comes near the Circumſtance
Which I have told thee, of my Fathers death.
I prethee, when thou ſeeſt that Act a-foot,
Even with the Comment of my Soule
Obſerve mine Unkle : if his occulted guilt,
Do not it ſelf unkennell in one ſpeech,
It is a damned Ghoſt that we have ſeen :
And my imaginations are as foule
As Vulcan's Styth. Give him needfull note,
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgements joyn,
To cenſure of his ſeeming.

Hora. Well, my Lord.
If he ſteale ought the whil'ſt this Play is playing,
And ſcape detecting, I will pay the Theft.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Roſincros, Guildenſtar, and other Lords attendant, with his Guard carrying Torches. Daniſh March. Sound a Flouriſh.

Ham. They are comming to the Play : I muſt be idle. Get you a place.

King. How fares my Couſin Hamlet ?

Ham. Excellent ifaith, of the Camelions diſh : I eat the Aire promiſe-cramm'd, you cannot feed Capons ſo.

King. I have nothing with this anſwer, Hamlet, theſe words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now my Lord, you plaid once ith' Univerſity, you ſay ?

Polon. That I did, my Lord, and was accounted a good Actor

Ham. And what did you enact ?

Polo. I did enact Julius Cæſar, I was kill'd ith' Capitoll : Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a bruit part of him, to kill ſo Capitall a Calf there. Be the Players ready ?

Roſin. I, my Lord, they ſtay upon your patience.

Quee. Come hither, my good Hamlet, ſit by me.

Ham. No, good Mother, here's Mettle more attractive.

Polo. Oh ho, doe you mark that ?

Ham. Lady, ſhall I lye in your Lap ?

Ophe. No, my Lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your Lap ?

Ophe. I, my Lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant Country matters ?

Ophe. I think nothing, my Lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between Maids Legs.

Ophe. What is, my Lord ?

Ham. Nothing.

Ophe. You are merry, my Lord ?

Ham. Who I ?

Ophe. I, my Lord.

Ham. Oh God, your onely Jigge-maker : what ſhould a man doe, but be merry. For look you how cheerfully my Mother looks, and my Father di'd within's two houres.

Ophe. Nay, 'tis twice two moneths, my Lord.

Ham. So long ? Nay then let the Devil wear black, for I'le have a Suit of Sables. Oh heavens ! dye two moneths ago, and not forgotten yet ? then there's hope, a great mans Memory may out-live his life half a year : But berlady he muſt build Churches then : or elſe ſhall he ſuffer not thinking on, with the Hobby-horſe, whoſe Epitaph is, for o, for o, the Hobby-horſe is forgot.

Hoboyes play. The dumbe ſhew enters.
Enter a King and Queen, very lovingly ; the Queen embracing him. She kneeles ; and makes ſhew of Proteſtation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck. Layes him down upon a Bank of Flowers. She ſeeing him a-ſleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a Fellow, takes off his Crown, kiſſes it, and poures poyſon in the Kings eares, and Exits. The Queen returns, findes the King dead, and makes paſſionate Action. The Poyſoner, with ſome two or three Mutes comes in again, ſeeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away : The Poyſoner wooes the Queen with Gifts, ſhe ſeems loth and unwilling a while, but in the end accepts his love. Exeunt.

Ophe. What means this, my Lord ?

Ham. Marry this is Miching Malicho, that means Miſchief.

Ophe. Belike this ſhew imports the Argument of the Play ?

Ham. We ſhall know by theſe fellowes : the Players cannot keep counſell, they'll tell all.

Ophe. VVill they tell us what this ſhew meant ?

Ham. I, or any ſhew that you'll ſhew him. Be not you aſham'd to ſhew, he'll not ſhame to tell you what it meanes.

Ophe. You are naught, you are naught, I'le make the Play.

Enter Prologue.

For us, and for our Tragedy,
Here ſtooping to your Clemency ;
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a Prologue, or the Poeſie of a Ring ?

Ophe. 'Tis brief, my Lord.

Ham. As Womans love.

Enter King, and Queen.

King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus Cart gon round,
Neptunes ſalt Waſh, and Tellus Orbed ground :
And thirty dozen Moons with borrowed ſheen,
About the world have time, twelve thirties been,
Since Love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands
Unite co-mutuall, in moſt ſacred Bands.

Quee. So many Journeys may the Sun and Moon
Make us again count o're, ere love be done.
But woe is me, you are ſo ſick of late,
So farre from cheer, and from your former ſtate,
That I diſtruſt you : yet though I diſtruſt,
Diſcomfort you (My Lord) it nothing muſt :
For womens Fear and Love, holds quantity,

In

In neither ought, or in extremity:
Now what my love is, proof hath made you know,
And as my love is fixt, my fear is so.
King. Faith I must leave thee, Love, and shortly too:
My operant Powers my functions leave to doe
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd, and haply, one as kind.
For Husband shalt thou------
Quee. Oh confound the rest:
Such Love must needs be Treason in my brest:
In second Husband let me be accurst,
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.
Ham. Wormwood, Wormwood.
Quee. The instances that second Marriage move,
Are base respects of Thrift, but none of Love.
A second time, I kill my Husband dead,
When second Husband kisses me in Bed.
King. I do believe you. Think what now you speak:
But what we do determine, oft we break;
Purpose is but the slave to Memory,
Of violent Birth, but poor validity:
Which now like fruit unripe sticks on the Tree,
But fall unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay our selves, what to our selves is debt:
What to our selves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of other Grief or Joy,
Their own enactors with themselves destroy:
Where Joy most revels, Grief doth most lament;
Grief joyes, Joy grieves on slender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our Loves should with our Fortunes change.
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether Love lead Fortune, or else Fortune Love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flyes,
The poor advanc'd makes friends of Enemies:
And hitherto doth Love on Fortune tend,
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend?
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his Enemy.
But orderly to end where I begun,
Our Wills and Fates doe so contrary run,
That our Devices still are overthrown,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.
So think thou wilt no second husband wed.
But dye thy thoughts, when thy first Lord is dead.
Quee. Nor Earth to give me food, nor heaven light,
Sport and repose lock from me day and night:
Each opposite that blankes the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy:
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If once a Widdow, ever I be Wife.
Ham. If she should break it now.
King. 'Tis deeply sworn:
Sweet, leave me here a while,
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep.
Quee. Sleep rock thy brain, Sleeps.
And never come mischance between us twain. Exit.
Ham. Madam, how like you the Play?
Quee. The Lady protests too much me thinkes.
Ham. Oh but she'll keep her word,
King. Have you heard the Argument, is there no Offence in't?
Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poyson in jest, no Offence ith' world.
King. What do you call the Play?
Ham. The Mouse-trap: Marry how? Tropically:
This Play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the Dukes name, his wife Baptista: you shall see anon: 'tis a knavish piece of work: but what o' that? Your Majesty, and we that have free soules, it touches us not: let the gall'd jade winch: our withers are unwrung,

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the King.
Ophe. You are a good Chorus, my Lord.
Ham. I could interpret between you and your love: if I could see the Puppets dallying.
Ophe. You are keen, my Lord, you are keen.
Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.
Ophe. Still better and worse.
Ham. So you mistake Husbands.
Begin Murderer. Pox, leave thy damnable Faces, and begin. Come, the croaking Raven doth bellow for Revenge.
Lucian. Thoughts black, hands apt,
Drugs fit, and Time agreeing:
Confederate season, else no Creature seeing:
Thou mixture rank, of Midnight-Weeds collected,
With Hecates Ban, thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy naturall Magick, and dire property,
On wholsome life, usurp immediately.

Poures the poyson in his eares.

Ham. He poysons him ith' Garden for's estate: His names Gonzago: the Story is extant, and writ in choyce Italian. You shall see anon how the Murtherer gets the love of Gonzago's Wife.
Ophe. The King rises.
Ham. What, frighted with false fire.
Quee. How fares my Lord?
Pol. Give o're the Play.
King. Give me some Light. Away,
All. Lights, Lights, Lights. Exeunt.

Manet Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why let the strucken Deer go weep,
The Hart ungalled play:
For some must watch, while some must sleep?
So runs the world away.
Would not this, Sir, and a Forrest of Feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me; with two Provinciall Roses on my rac'd Shooes, get me a Fellowship in a cry of Players, sir.
Hor. Half a share.
Ham. A whole one I,
For thou dost know: Oh Damon dear,
This Realme dismantled was of Jove himself,
And now reigns here,
A very very Pajock.
Hora. You might have Rim'd.
Ham. Oh good Horatio, I'le take the Ghosts word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?
Hora. Very well, my Lord.
Ham. Upon the talk of the poysoning?
Hora. I did very well note him.

Enter Rosincros and Guildenstar.

Ham. Oh, ha? come some Musick. Come the Recorders
For if the King like not the Comedy.
Why then belike he likes it not perdy.
Come, some Musick.
Guild. Good my Lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham.

Ham. Sir, a whole Hiſtory.
Guild. The King, ſir.
Ham. I, ſir, what of him.
Guild. Is in his retirement, marvellous diſtemper'd.
Ham. With drink, Sir?
Guild. No, my Lord, rather with choller.
Ham. Your wiſedome ſhould ſhew it ſelf more rich to ſignifie this to his Doctor; for me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plunge him into farre more Choller.
Guild. Good my Lord, put your diſcourſe into ſome frame, and ſtart not ſo wildly from my affaire.
Ham. I am tame, Sir, pronounce.
Guild. The Queen your Mother, in moſt great affliction of ſpirit, hath ſent me to you.
Ham. You are welcome.
Guild. Nay, good my Lord, this courteſie is not of the right breed. If it ſhall pleaſe you to make me a wholſome anſwer, I will doe your Mothers commandement: if not, your pardon, and my return ſhall be the end of my buſineſſe.
Ham. Sir, I cannot.
Guild. What my Lord?
Ham. Make you a wholſome anſwer: my wits diſeas'd. But ſir, ſuch anſwers as I can make, you ſhall command: or rather you ſay, my mother: therefore no more but to the matter. My mother you ſay.
Roſin. Then thus ſhe ſayes: your behaviour hath ſtroke her into amazement, and admiration.
Ham. Oh wonderfull Son; that can ſo aſtoniſh a Mother. But is there no ſequell at the heeles of this Mother admiration?
Roſin. She deſires to ſpeak with you in her Cloſet ere you go to bed.
Ham. We ſhall obey, were ſhe ten times our Mother. Have you any further Trade with us?
Roſin. My Lord, you once did love me.
Ham. So I doe ſtill, by theſe pickers and ſtealers.
Roſin. Good my Lord, what is your cauſe of diſtemper? You do freely bar the door of your own Liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.
Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.
Roſin. How can that be, when you have the voyce of the King himſelf, for your ſucceſſion in Denmark?
Ham. I, but while the graſſe growes, the Proverbe is ſomething muſty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me ſee to withdraw with you, why doe you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toile?
Guild. O my Lord, if my Duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.
Ham. I doe not well underſtand that. Will you play upon this Pipe?
Guild. My Lord, I cannot.
Ham. I pray you.
Guild. Believe me, I cannot.
Ham. I doe beſeech you.
Guild. I know no touch of it, my Lord.
Ham. 'Tis as eaſie as lying: govern theſe Ventiges with your finger and thumbe, give it breath with your mouth, and it will diſcourſe moſt excellent Muſick. Look you, theſe are the ſtops.
Guild. But theſe cannot I command to any utterance of harmony, I have not the skill.
Ham. Why look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me: you would play upon me: you would ſeem to know my ſtops: you would pluck out the heart of my Myſtery; you would ſound me from my loweſt Note, to the top of my compaſſe: and there is much Muſick, excellent Voyce, in this little Organ, yet cannot you make it. Why doe you think, that I am eaſier to be plaid on then a Pipe? Call me what Inſtrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. God bleſſe you, Sir.

Enter Polonius.

Polon. My Lord, the Queen would ſpeak with you, and preſently.
Ham. Doe you ſee that Cloud, thats almoſt in ſhape like a Camell.
Polon. By th' Miſſe, and it's like a Camell indeed.
Ham. Me thinks it is like a Weazell.
Polon. It is back'd like a Weazell.
Ham. Or like a Whale?
Polon. Very like a Whale.
Ham. Then will I come to my Mother by and by;
They foole me to the top of my bent.
I will come by and by.
Polon. I will ſay ſo. Exit.
Ham. By and by is eaſily ſaid. Leave me friends:
'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When Church-yards yawn, and Hell it ſelf breathes out
Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood,
And do ſuch bitter buſineſs as the day
Would quake to look on. Soft now, to my Mother;
Oh heart, looſe not thy Nature; let not ever
The Soule of Nero enter this firm boſome:
Let me be cruell, not unnaturall,
I will ſpeak Daggers to her, but uſe none:
My tongue and Soule in this be Hypocrites.
How in my words ſomever ſhe be ſhent,
To give them ſeales, never my ſoule conſent.

Enter King, Roſincros, and Guildenſtar.

King. I like him not, nor ſtands it ſafe with us,
To let his madneſſe range. Therefore prepare you,
I your Commiſſion will forthwith diſpatch,
And he to England ſhall along with you,
The termes of our eſtate, may not endure
Hazard ſo dangerous as doth hourely grow
Out of his Lunacies.
Guild. We will our ſelves provide:
Moſt holy and Religious fear it is
To keep thoſe many bodies ſafe
That live and feed upon your Majeſty.
Roſin. The ſingle
And peculiar life is bound
With all the ſtrength and Armour of the minde,
To keep it ſelf from noyance: but much more,
That Spirit, upon whoſe ſpirit depends and reſts
The lives of many, the ceaſe of Majeſty
Dies not alone: but like a Gulf doth draw
What's near it, with it, It is a maſſie wheele
Fixt on the Somnet of the higheſt Mount,
To whoſe huge Spoakes, ten thouſand leſſer things
Are mortiz'd and adjoin'd: which when it falls,
Each ſmall annexment, petty conſequence
Attends the boyſtrous Ruine. Never alone
Did the King ſigh, but with a generall groan.
King. Arme you, I pray you to this ſpeedy Voyage;
For we will Fetters put upon this fear,

Which

Which now goes too free-footed.
Both. We will haste us. Exeunt Gent.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My Lord, he's going to his Mothers Closet:
Behind the Arras I'le convey my self
To hear the Processe. I'le warrant she'll tax him home.
And as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet that some more audience then a Mother,
Since Nature makes them partiall, should o're-hear
The speech of vantage, Fare you well my Liege,
I'le call upon you e're you go to bed,
And tell you what I know. Exit.

King. Thanks, dear my Lord.
Oh my offence is rank, it smells to heaven,
It hath the primall eldest curse upon't,
A brothers murther. Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will:
My stronger guilt, defeats my strong intent,
And like a man to double businesse bound,
I stand in pawse where I shall first begin,
And both neglect; what if this cursed hand
Were thicker then it self with brothers blood,
Is there not Rain enough in the sweet heavens
To wash it white as Snow? whereto serves mercy,
But to confront the visage of Offence?
And whats in Prayer, but this two-fold force,
To be fore-stalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being down? Then I'le look up,
My fault is past. But oh, what forme of Prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foule Murther:
That cannot be, since I am still possest
Of those effects for which I did the Murther
My Crown, mine own Ambition, and my Queen:
May one be pardon'd, and retain th'offence?
In the corrupted currants of this world,
Offences guilded hand may shove by Justice,
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize it self
Buyes out the Law; but 'tis not so above,
There is no shuffling, there the Action lies
In his true Nature, and we our selves compell'd
Even to the teeth and fore-head of our faults,
To given in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what Repentance can. What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
Oh wretched state? oh bosome, black as death!
Oh limed soule, that strugling to be free,
Art more ingag'd: Help Angels, make assay:
Bow stubborn knees, and heart with strings of Steele,
Be soft as sinewes of the new-born Babe,
All may be well.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I doe it pat, now he is praying,
And now I'le do't, and so he goes to heaven,
And so am I revenge'd: that would be scann'd,
A Villain kills my Father, and for that
I his foule Son, doe this same Villain send
To heaven. O this is hire and Sallery, not Revenge.
He took my Father grossely, full of bread,
With all his Crimes broad blown, as fresh as May,
And how his Audit stands, who knowes, save heaven:
But in our circumstance and course of thought
'Tis heavy with him: and am I then revenge'd,
To take him in the purging of his Soule,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage? No.
Up Sword, and know thou a more horrid hent
When he is drunk asleep; or in his Rage,
Or in th'incestuous pleasure of his bed,
At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of Salvation in't,
Then trip him, that his heeles may kick at heaven,
And that his Soule may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes. My Mother stayes,
This Physick but prolongs thy sickly dayes. Exit.
King. My words flye up, my thoughts remain below,
Words without thoughts, never to heaven go. Exit.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Polo. He will come straight:
Look you lay home to him,
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your Grace hath soree'nd, and stood between
Much heat and him. I'le silence me e'ne here:
Pray you be round with him.
Ham. within. Mother, mother, mother.
Quee. I'le warrant you, fear me not.
Withdraw, I hear him comming.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, Mother, what's the matter?
Que. Hamlet, thou hast thy Father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my Father much offended.
Que. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Come, go, you question with an idle tongue.
Quee. Why how now, Hamlet?
Ham. What's the matter now?
Quee. Have you forgot me?
Ham. No, by the Rood, not so:
You are the Queen, your Husbands Brothers wife,
But would you were not so. You are my Mother.
Quee. Nay, then I'le set those to you that can speak.
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down, you shall not budge:
You go not till I set up a glasse.
Where you may see the inmost part of you?
Quee. What wilt thou doe? thou wilt not murther me?
Help, help, hoa.
Pol. What hoa, help, help, help.
Ham. How now, a Rat? dead for a Ducate, dead.
Pol. Oh I am slain. Kills Polonius.
Quee. Oh me, hast thou done?
Ham. Nay I know not, is it the King?
Quee. Oh what a rash and blood deed is this?
Ham. A bloody deed, almost as bad good Mother,
As kill a King, and marry with his Brother.
Quee. As kill'd a King?
Ham. I, Lady, 'twas my word.
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell,
I took thee for thy Betters, take thy fortune,
Thou find'st to be too busie, is some danger.
Leave wringing of your hands, peace, sit you down,
And let me wring your heart, for so I shall
If it be made of penetrable stuffe;
If damned Custome have not braz'd it so,
That it is proof and bulwarke against Sense.
Qu. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue,
In noyse so rude against me?
Ham. Such an Act
That blurres the grace and blush of Modesty,
Calls Virtue Hypocrite, takes off the Rose
From the fair fore-head of an innocent love,
And makes a blister there. Makes marriage vowes
As false as Dicers Oathes. O such a Deed,

As

As from the body of contraction plucks
The very ſouſe, and ſweet Religion makes
A rapſody of words. Heavens face doth glow,
Yea this ſolidity and compound maſſe,
With triſtfull viſage as againſt the doom,
Is thought-ſick at the act.
Quee. Aye me, what act, that roares ſo loud, and thunders in the Index.
Ham. Look here upon this Picture, and on this,
The counterfeit preſentment of two brothers:
See what a grace ſeated on his Brow,
Hyperions curles, the front of Jove himſelf,
An eye like Mars, to threaten or command
A Station like the Herald Mercury,
Now lighted on a heaven-kiſſing hill:
A Combination, and a forme indeed,
Where every god did ſeem to ſet his Seale,
To give the world aſſurance of a man.
This was your Husband. Look you now what followes.
Here is your Husband, like a Mildew'd Deer
Blaſting his wholſome breath. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair Mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this Moore? Ha? have you eyes?
You cannot call it Love: For at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgement: and what judgement
Would ſtep from this to this? What Devil was't,
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
O Shame! where is thy bluſh? Rebellious Hell,
If thou canſt mutine in a Matrons bones,
To flaming youth, let Virtue be as wax.
And melt in her own fire. Proclaime no ſhame,
When the compulſive Ardure gives the charge,
Since Froſt it ſelf, as actively doth burn,
As Reaſon panders VVill.
Quee. O Hamlet, ſpeak no more.
Thou turnſt mine eyes into my very ſoule,
And there I ſee ſuch black and grained ſpots.
As will not leave their Tinct.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank ſweat of an enſeamed bed,
Stew'd in Corruption; honying and making love
Over the naſty Stye.
Quee. Oh ſpeak to me, no more,
Theſe words like Daggers enter in mine eares.
No more, ſweet Hamlet.
Ham. A Murderer, and a Villain:
A Slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe
Of your precedent Lord. A vice of Kings,
A Cutpurſe of the Empire and the Rule.
That from a ſhelf, the precious Diadem ſtole,
And put it in his Pocket.
Quee. No more.

Enter Ghoſt.

Ham. A King of ſhreds and patches.
Save me: and hover o're me with your wings
You heavenly Guards. VVhat would you gracious figure?
Quee. Alaſs he's mad.
Ham. Doe you not come your tardy Son to chide,
That laps'd in Time and Paſſion, let's go by
Th'important acting of your dread command? Oh ſay.
Ghoſt. Doe not forget: this Viſitation
Is but to whet thy almoſt blunted purpoſe.
But look Amazement on thy Mother ſits;
O ſtep between her, and her fighting Soule,
Conceit in weakeſt bodies, ſtrongeſt works.
Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, Lady?
Quee. Alaſs, how is't with you?
That thus you bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the Corporall ayre doe hold diſcourſe.
Forth at your eyes, your ſpirits wildely peep,
And as the ſleeping Souldiers in th'Alarme,
Your bedded hair, like life in Excrements,
Start up, and ſtand an end. O gentle Son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy diſtemper
Sprinkle coole patience. VVhereon doe you look?
Ham. On him, on him, look you how pale he glares,
His form and cauſe conjoyn'd, preaching to ſtones,
VVould make them capable. Doe not look upon me,
Leaſt with this pittious action you convert
My ſtern effects: then what have I to doe,
VVill want true colour; teares perchance for blood.
Quee. To whom doe you ſpeak this?
Ham. Doe you ſee nothing there?
Quee. Nothing at all, yet all that is I ſee.
Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?
Quee. No, nothing but our ſelves.
Ham. VVhy look you there: look how it ſteales away;
My Father in his habite, as he lived.
Look where he goes even now out at the Portall. Exit.
Quee. This is the very coynage of your brain,
This bodileſſe Creation extaſie is very cunning in.
Ham. Extaſie?
My Pulſe, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthfull Muſick. It is not madneſſe
That I have uttered; bring me to the Teſt
And I the matter will re-word: which madneſſe
VVould gamboll from. Mother, for love of Grace,
Lay not a flattering Unction to your ſoule,
That not your treſpaſſe, but my madneſſe ſpeaks:
It will but skin and filme the Ulcerous place,
Whilſt rank Corruption running all within,
Infects unſeen. Confeſſe your ſelf to heaven,
Repent whats paſt, avoid what is to come,
And doe not ſpread the Compoſt or the Weeds,
To make them rank. Forgive me this my Virtue,
For in the fatneſſe of theſe purſie times,
Virtue it ſelf, of Vice muſt pardon beg,
Yea curbe, and wooe, for leave to doe him good.
Quee. Oh Hamlet,
Thou haſt cleft my heart in twain.
Ham. O throw away the worſer part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night, but go not to mine Unkle's bed,
Aſſume a Virtue, if you have it not, refrain to night,
And that ſhall lend a kind of eaſineſſe
To the next abſtinence. Once more good night,
And when you are deſirous to be bleſt,
I'le bleſſing beg of you. For this ſame Lord,
I doe repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it ſo.
To puniſh me with this, and this with me,
That I muſt be their Scourge and Miniſter.
I will beſtow him, and will anſwer well
The death I gave him: ſo again, good night.
I muſt be cruell, onely to be kind;
Thus bad begins, and worſe remains behind.
Quee. What ſhall I doe?
Ham. Not this by no meanes that I bid you doe:
Let the blunt King tempt you again to bed,
Pinch Wanton on your cheek, call you his Mouſe,
And let him for a pair of reechy kiſſes,

Or

Or padling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravell all this matter out,
That I eſſentially am not in madneſſe,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know,
For who thats but a Queen, fair, ſober, wiſe,
Would from a Paddock, from a Bat, a Gibbe,
Such dear concernings hide? Who would doe ſo?
No, in deſpight of Senſe and Secrecy,
Unpeg the Basket on the houſes top:
Let the Birds flie, and like the famous Ape,
To try Concluſions, in the Basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Que. Be thou aſſur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life: I have no life to breathe
What thou haſt ſaid to me.

Ham. I muſt to England, you know that?

Quee. Alack, I had forgot: 'Tis ſo concluded on.

Ham. This man ſhall ſet me packing:
I'le lug the Guts into the Neighbour room;
Mother, good night. Indeed this Counſellor
Is now moſt ſtill, moſt ſecret, and moſt grave,
Who was in life a fooliſh prating Knave.
Come, Sir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night, Mother.

Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.

Enter King.

King. There's matters in theſe ſighes.
Theſe profound heaves
You muſt tranſlate: 'tis fit we underſtand them.
Where is your Son?

Quee. Ah, my good Lord, what have I ſeen to night?

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Quee. Mad as the Seas, and winde, when both contend
Which is the Mightier, in his lawleſſe fit
Behind the Arras, hearing ſomething ſtirre,
He whips his Rapier out, and cries a Rat, a Rat,
And in his brainiſh apprehenſion kills
The unſeen good old man.

King. Oh heavy deed.
It had been ſo with us had we been there:
His Liberty is full of threats to all,
To you your ſelf, to us, to every one.
Alaſs, how ſhall this bloody deed be anſwered?
It will be laid to us, whoſe providence
Should have kept ſhort, reſtrain'd, and out of haunt,
This Mad young man. But ſo much was our love,
We would not underſtand what was moſt fit,
But like the Owner of a foule diſeaſe,
To keep it from divulging, let's it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Quee. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd,
O're whom his very madneſſe like ſome Oare
Among a Minerall of Mettalls baſe
Shewes it ſelf pure. He weeps for what is done.

King. Oh Gertrude, come away:
The Sun no ſooner ſhall the Mountains touch,
But we will ſhip him hence, and this vilde deed,
We muſt with all our Majeſty and Skill
Both countenance, and excuſe. Enter Roſincros, and Ho Guildenſtar: Guildenſtar.
Friends both, go joyn you with ſome further aide:
Hamlet in madneſſe hath Polonius ſlain,
And from his Mothers Cloſet hath he dragg'd him.
Go ſeek him out, ſpeak fair, and bring the body
Into the Chappell. I pray you haſte in this. Exit. Gent.
Come Gertrude, we'll call up our wiſeſt friends,
To let them know both what we mean to doe,
And what's untimely done. Oh come away,
My ſoule is full of diſcord and diſmay. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely ſtowed.

Gentlemen within. Hamlet, Lord Hamlet.

Ham. What noyſe? who calls on Hamlet?
Oh here they come. Enter Roſincros, and Guildenſtar.

Roſ. What have you done my Lord with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with duſt, whereto 'tis kin.

Roſin. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the Chappell.

Ham. Doe not believe it.

Roſin. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your Counſell, and not mine own. Beſides, to be demanded of a Spunge, what replication ſhould be made by the Son of a King.

Roſin. Take you me for a Spunge, my Lord?

Ham. I, ſir, that ſokes up the Kings Countenance, his Rewards, his Authorities (but ſuch Officers doe the King beſt ſervice in the end.) He keeps them like an Ape in the corner of his jaw, firſt mouth'd to be laſt ſwallowed, when he needs what you have glean'd, it is but ſqueezing you, and Spunge you ſhall be dry again.

Roſin. I underſtand you not, my Lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knaviſh ſpeech ſleeps in a fooliſh eare.

Roſin. My Lord, you muſt tell us where the body is, and go with us to the King.

Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King, is a thing-----

Guild. A thing, my Lord?

Ham. Of nothing? bring me to him, hide Fox, and all after. Exeunt.

Enter King.

King. I have ſent to ſeek him, and to find the body:
How dangerous is it that this man goes looſe:
Yet muſt not we put the ſtrong Law on him:
He's lov'd of the diſtracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes:
And where 'tis ſo, th'Offenders ſcourge is weigh'd
But nearer the offence: to bear all ſmooth, and even,
This ſudden ſending him away, muſt ſeem
Deliberate pawſe, diſeaſes deſperate grown,
By deſperate appliance are relieved,
Or not at all. Enter Roſincros.
How now? what hath befaln?

Roſin. Where the dead body is beſtow'd, my Lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Roſin. Without, my Lord, guarded to know your pleaſure.

King. Bring him before us.

Roſin. Hoa, Guildenſtar? bring in my Lord.

Enter Hamlet, and Guildenſtar.

King. Now Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At Supper.

King. At Supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten, a certain convocation of Wormes are e'ne at him. Your worm is your onely Emperor for diet. We fat all creatures elſe to fat us, and we fat our ſelves for Magots. Your fat King and your lean Beggar is but variable ſervice, two diſhes, but to one Table, that's the end.

King. What doſt thou mean by this?

Ham.

Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go a Progress through the gut of a Beggar.

King. Where is Polonius.

Ham. In heaven, send thither to see. If your Messenger find him not there, seek him i'th'other place your self: but indeed, if you find him not this moneth, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the Lobbey.

King. Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay 'till ye come.

K. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especial safety
Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done, must send thee hence
With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thy self,
The Bark is ready, and the wind at help,
Th'Associates tend, and every thing at bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. I, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a Cherub that sees him: but come, for England. Farewell dear Mother.

King. Thy loving Father Hamlet.

Hamlet. My Mother: Father and Mother is Man and Wife: Man and Wife is one flesh, and so my Mother. Come, for England. Exit.

King. Follow him at foot,
Tempt him with speed aboord:
Delay it not, I'le have him hence to night.
Away, for every thing is seal'd and done
That else leans on th'Affair, pray you make haste.
And England, if my love thou hold'st at ought,
As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
Since yet thy Cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish Sword, and thy free awe
Payes homage to us; thou may'st not coldly set
Our Soveraign Process, which imports at full
By letters conjuring to that effect
The present death of Hamlet. Do it England,
For like the Hectick in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me: 'till I know 'tis done,
How-e're my haps, my joyes were ne're begun. Exit.

Enter Fortinbras with an Army.

For. Go Captain, from me to the Danish King,
Tell him that by his license, Fortinbras
Claims the conveyance of a promis'd March
Over his Kingdome. You know the Rendevouz:
If that his Majesty would ought with us,
We shall express our dutie in his eye,
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my Lord.

For. Go safely on. Exit.

Enter Queen and Horatio.

Qu. I will not speak with her.

Hor. She is importunate, indeed distract, her mood will needs be pitied.

Qu. What would she have?

Hor. She speaks much of her Father; says she heares
There's tricks i'th'world, and hems, and beats her heart,
Spurns enviously at Straws, speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense: Her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to Collection; they aim at it,
And both the words up fit to their own thoughts,
Which at her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,
Indeed would make one think there would be thoughts
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Qu. 'Twere good she were spoken with,
For she may strow dangerous conjectures
In ill breeding minds. Let her come in
To my sick Soul (as sin's true nature is)
Each toy seems Prologue, to some great amisse,
So full of Artless jealousie is guilt,
It spills it self in fearing to be spilt.

Enter Ophelia distracted.

Oph. Where is the beauteous Majesty of Denmark?

Qu. How now Ophelia.

Oph. How should I your true love know from another one?
By his cockle hat and staff, and his sandal shoon,

Qu. Alas sweet Lady: what imports this Song?

Ophe. Say you? Nay pray you mark.
He is dead and gone, Lady, he is dead and gone,
At his head a grass-green Turfe, at his heels a stone.

Enter King.

Qu. Nay but Ophelia.

Oph. Pray you mark.
White his Shrowd as the Mountain-Snow.

Qu. Alas, look here my Lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers:
Which be-wept to the grave did not go,
With True-love flowers.

King. How do ye, pretty Lady?

Oph. Well, God dil'd you. They say the Owle was a Baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your Table.

King. Conceit upon her Father.

Ophe. Pray you let us have no words of this: but when they ask you what it means, say you this:
To morrow is S. Valentine's day, all in the morn betime,
And I a Maid at your window, to be your Valentine.
Then up he rose, and don'd his clothes, and dupt the chamber dore:
Let in a Maid, that out a Maid never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia.

Oph. Indeed la? without an oath, I'le make an end on't.
By Gis, and by S. Charity:
Alack, and fie for shame.
Young men will do't, if they come to't,
By Cock they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promis'd me to wed:
So would I ha done, by yonder Sun,
And thou had'st not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient, but I cannot chuse but weep, to think they should lay him i'th'cold ground: My Brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my Coach: Goodnight Ladies: Goodnight sweet Ladies: Goodnight, goodnight. Exit.

King. Follow her close,
Give her good watch I pray you:
Oh this is the poison of deep grief, it springs
All from her Father's death. Oh Gertrude, Gertrude,
When Sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in Battels. First, her Father slain,
Next your Son gone, and he most violent author
Of his own just remove: the people muddied,
Thick and unwholsome in their thoughts and whispers,
For good Polonius death; and we have done but greenly,
In hugger mugger to inter him. Poor Ophelia
Divided from her self, and her fair judgement,

Without the which we are Pictures, or mere Beasts,
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her Brother is in secret come from France,
Keeps on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds
And wants not Buzzers to infect his eare
With pestilent speeches of his fathers death,
Where in necessity of matter Beggar'd
Will nothing stick our persons to arraign
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering Piece in many places,
Gives me superfluous death. A Noise within.

Enter a Messenger.

Que. Alack, what noise is this?
King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door. What is the matter?
Mes. Save your self, my Lord.
The Ocean (over-peering of his List)
Eats not the Flats with more impetuous haste
Then young Laertes, in a Riotous head,
O're-beares your Officers, the rabble call him Lord,
And as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, Custome not known,
The Ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry choose we? Laertes shall be King.
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
Laertes shall be King, Laertes King.
Quee. How chearfully on the false Trail they cry,
Oh this is the Counter, you false Danish Doggs.

Noise within. Enter Laertes.

King. The doors are broke.
Laer. Where is the King, Sirs? Stand you all without.
All. No, let's come in.
Laer. I pray you give me leave.
All. We will, we will.
Laer. I thank you: Keep the door.
Oh thou vild King, give me my father.
Quee. Calmely, good Laertes.
Laer. That drop of bloud, that calmes
Proclaims me Bastard:
Cries Cuckold to my Father, brands the Harlot
Even here between the chaste unsmitched brow
Of my true Mother.
King. What is the cause Laertes,
That thy Rebellion looks so Giant-like?
Let him go Gertrude: Do not fear our person:
There's such Divinity doth hedge a King,
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will. Tell me Laertes,
Why art thou thus incenst? Let him go Gertrude,
Speak man.
Laer. Where's my Father?
King. Dead.
Quee. But not by him.
King. Let him demand his fill.
Laer. How came he dead? I'le not be Juggl'd with
To hell Allegiance: Vows, to the blackest Devil.
Conscience and Grace, to the Profoundest Pit.
I dare Damnation: to this point I stand,
That both the worlds I give to negligence,
Let come what comes: only I'le be reveng'd
Most throughly for my Father.
King. Who shall stay you?
Laer. My Will, not all the world.
And for my means, I'le husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.
King. Good Laertes:
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, if writ in your revenge,
That Soop-stake you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and Looser.
Laer. None but his Enemies.
King. Will you know them then.
Laer. To his good Friends thus wide I'le ope my Armes,
And like the kind life-rendring Pelican,
Repast them with my bloud.
King. Why now? what noise is that?
Like a good child, and a true Gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your Father's death,
And am most sensible in grief for it,
It shall as level to your Judgement pierce
As day do's to your eye.

A noise within. Let her come in.

Enter Ophelia.

Laer. How now? what noise is that?
Oh heat dry up my brains, teares seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye.
By heaven thy madness shall be paid by weight,
'Till our Scale turns the beam. Oh Rose of May,
Dear Maid, kind Sister, sweet Ophelia:
Oh heavens, is't possible, a young Maid's wits,
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in Love, and where 'tis fine,
It sends some precious instance of it self
After the thing it loves.
Oph. They bore him bare-fac'd on the Beer.
Hey non noney, noney, hey noney:
And on his grave rains many a tear,
Fare you well my Dove.
Laer. Had'st thou thy wits, and did'st perswade Revenge, it could not move thus.
Oph. You must sing down a-down, and you call him a-down-a. Oh, how the wheels become? It is the false Steward that stole his Master's daughter.
Laer. This nothing's more then matter.
Oph. There's Rosemary, that's for Remembrance. Pray Love remember: and there's Pancies, that's for Thoughts.
Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.
Oph. There's Fennel for you, and Columbines: there's Rew for you, and here's some for me. We may call it Herb-Grace a Sundayes: Oh you must wear your Rue with a difference. There's a Daisie, I would give you some Violets, but they wither'd all when my Father dyed: They say, he made a good end;
For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.
Laer. Thought, and Affliction, Passion, Hell it self: She turns to favour; and to prettiness.
Oph. And will he not come again.
And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead, go to thy Death-bed,
He never will come again.
His Beard as white as Snow.
All Flaxen was his Pole:
He is gone, he is gone, and we cast away mone,
Gramercy on his Soul.
And of all Christian Soules, I pray God.
God bu'ye. Exit Ophelia.
Laer. Do you see this, you gods?
King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
Or you deny me right: goe but a-part,

Make

Make choice of whom your wiſeſt friends you will,
And they ſhall hear and judge 'twixt you and me;
If by direct or by Collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our Kingdome give,
Our Crown, our Life, and all that we call Ours
To you in ſatisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we ſhall joyntly labour with your ſoul
To give it due content.
Laer. Let this be ſo:
His means of death, his obſcure burial:
No Trophee, Sword, nor Hatchment o're his bones,
No Noble rite, nor formal oſtentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I muſt call in queſtion.
King. So you ſhall:
And where th' offence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me. Exeunt.

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hora. What are they that would ſpeak with me?
Ser. Sailors Sir, they ſay they have letters for you.
Hora. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I ſhould be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Saylor.

Sayl. God bleſs you Sir.
Hora. Let him bleſs thee too.
Sayl. He ſhall Sir, and't pleaſe him. There's a Letter for you Sir: it comes from th' Ambaſſadours that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio: as I am let to know it is.

Reads the Letter.

Horatio, when thou ſhalt have overlook'd this, give theſe fellows ſome means to the King: They have Letters for him. E're we were two dayes old at Sea, a Pyrate of very Warlike appointment gave us Chace. Finding our ſelves too ſlow of Sail, we put on a compelled Valour. In the Grapple, I boorded them: On the inſtant they got clear of our Ship, ſo I alone became their Priſoner. They have dealt with me, like Thieves of Mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to do a good turn for them. Let the King have the Letters I have ſent, and repair thou to me with as much haſte as thou wouldeſt flie death. I have words to ſpeak in your ear, will make thee dumb, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter. Theſe good fellows will bring thee where I am. Roſincroſs and Guildenſtar hold their courſe for England. Of them I have us much to tell thee, Farewell.

He that thou knoweſt thine,
Hamlet.

Come, I will give you way for theſe your Letters,
And do't the ſpeedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. Exit.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now muſt your conſcience my acquittance ſeal,
And you muſt put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your Noble Father ſlain,
Purſued my life.
Laer. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not againſt theſe feats,
So crimefull, and ſo Capital in Nature,
As by your Safety, Wiſedome, all things elſe,
You mainly were ſtirr'd up?
King. O for two ſpecial Reaſons,
Which may to you (perhaps) ſeem much unſinewed,
And yet to me they are ſtrong. The Queen his Mother,
Lives almoſt by his looks: and for my ſelf,
My Virtue or my Plague, be it either which,
She's ſo conjunctive to my life and Soul;
That as the Star moves not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motive,
Why to a publick count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him,
Who dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone,
Convert his Gyves to Graces. So that my Arrows
Too ſlightly timbred for ſo loud a Wind,
Would have reverted to my Bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.
Laer. And ſo have I a Noble father loſt,
A Siſter driven into deſperate termes,
Who was (if praiſes may go back again)
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.
King. Break not your ſleeps for that,
You muſt not think
That we are made of ſtuff, ſo flat and dull,
That we can let our Beard be ſhook with danger,
And think it paſtime. You ſhortly ſhall hear more,
I lov'd your father, and we love your ſelf,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine ——

Enter a Meſſenger.

How now? What Newes?
Meſ. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Majeſty: this to the Queen.
King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?
Meſ. Saylors my Lord they ſay, I ſaw them not:
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them.
King. Laertes you ſhall read them:
Leave us. Exit Meſſenger.
High and Mighty, you ſhall know I am ſet naked on your Kingdome. To morrow ſhall I beg leave to ſee your Kingly Eyes. When I ſhall (firſt asking your Pardon thereunto) recount th'Occaſions of my ſudden, and more ſtrange return. Hamlet.
What ſhould this mean? Are all the reſt come back?
Or is it ſome abuſe? Or no ſuch thing?
Laer. Know you the hand?
King. 'Tis Hamlet's Character, naked, and in a Poſtſcript here he ſayes alone: Can you adviſe me?
Laer. I'm loſt in it, my Lord, but let him come,
It warms the very ſickneſs in my heart,
That I ſhall live and tell him to his teeth:
Thus diddeſt thou.
King. If it be ſo Laertes, as how ſhould it be ſo?
How otherwiſe? will you be rul'd by me?
Laer. If ſo you'll not o're-rule me to a peace.
King. To thine own peace: if he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it; I will work him
To an exploit now ripe in my Device,
Under the which he ſhall not chooſe but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame ſhall breathe,
But even his Mother ſhall uncharge the practice,
And call it accident: Some two Moneths hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy.
I've ſeen my ſelf and ſerv'd againſt the French,
And they ran well on horſe-back; but this Gallant

had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his Horse,
As had he been encorps't and demy-Natur'd
With the brave Beast, so far he past my thought,
That I in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life Lamound.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed
And Gemme of all our Nation.

King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a Masterly report,
For Art and exercise in your defence;
And for your Rapier most especially,
That he cry'd out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you Sir. This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his Envy,
That he could nothing do but wish and beg,
Your sudden coming over to play with him;
Now out of this.

Laer. Why out of this, my Lord?

King. Laertes, was your Father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father,
But that I know Love is begun by Time:
And that I see in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it:
Hamlet come back, what would you undertake,
To shew your self your Father's son indeed,
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i'th'Church.

King. No place indeed should Murther Sanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds: but good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your Chamber?
Hamlet return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads, he being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the Foils? So that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A Sword un-baited, and in a pass of practice,
Requite him for your Father.

Laer. I will do't,
And for that purpose I'le anoint my Sword:
I bought an Unction of a Mountebank
So mortal, I but dipt a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no Cataplasme so rare,
Collected from all Simples that have Virtue
Under the Moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratcht withall: I'le touch my point,
With this contagion, that if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh what convenience both of time and means
May fit us to our shape, if this should fail;
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assai'd; therefore this Project
Should have a back or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof: Soft, let me see,
We'll make a solemn wager on your commings,
I ha't: when in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouts more violent to the end,
And that he calls for drink; I'le have prepar'd him
A Chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there; how now sweet Queen.

Enter Queen.

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they'll follow: your Sister's drown'd Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O where?

Queen. There is a Willow grows aslant a Brook,
That shews his hoar leaves in the glassie stream:
There with fantastick Garlands did she come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Daisies, and long Purples,
That liberal Shepheards give a grosser name;
But our cold Maids do Dead Men's Fingers call them:
There on the pendant boughes, her Coronet weeds
Clambring to hang; an envious sliver broke,
When down the weedy Trophies, and her self,
Fell in the weeping Brook, her cloathes spred wide,
And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her up,
Which time she chaunted snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature Native, and deduced
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
'Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious by,
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my teares: but yet
It is our trick, Nature her custome holds,
Let shame say what it will; when these are gone
The woman will be out: Adieu my Lord,
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it. Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his rage?
Now fear I this will give it start again,
Therefore let's follow. Exeunt.

Enter two Clownes.

Clown. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Other. I tell thee she is, and therefore make her Grave straight, the Crowner hath sate on her, and finds it Christian burial.

Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned her self in her own defence?

Other. Why 'tis found so.

Clo. It must be Se offendendo, it cannot be else: for here lies the point: If I drown my self wittingly, it argues an Act: and an Act hath three branches. It is an Act to do, and to perform; argall she drown'd her self wittingly.

Other. Nay but hear you Goodman Delver.

Clown. Give me leave; here lies the water, good: here stands the man, good: if the man go to his water and drown himself: it is will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that? But if the water come to him and drown him; he drowns not himself. Argall, he that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

Other. But is this Law?

Clo. I marry is't, Crowner's Quest Law.

Other.

Other. Will you ha' the truth on't: if this had not been a Gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian Burial.

Clo. Why there thou say'st. And the more pitie that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my Spade; there is no ancient Gentlemen, but Gardiners, Ditchers and Grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

Other. Was he a Gentleman?

Clo. He was the first that ever bore Armes,

Other. Why he had none.

Clo. What, art a Heathen? how dost thou understand the Scripture? the Scripture sayes Adam digg'd; could he dig without Armes? I'le put another question to thee; if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thy self------

Other. Go to.

Clo. What is he that builds stronger then either the Mason, the Ship-wright, or the Carpenter?

Other. The Gallows-maker, for that Frame out-lives a thousand Tenants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallowes does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou do'st ill to say the Gallowes is built stronger then the Church: Argall, the Gallowes may do well to thee. To't again, Come.

Other. Who builds stronger than a Mason, a Ship-wright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I, tell me that, and unyoke.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

Clo. To't.

Other. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio a far off.

Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull Ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are askt this question next, say a Grave-maker: the Houses that he makes, lasts till Dooms-day: go, get thee to Yaughan, fetch me a stoap of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did love, did love,
me thought it was very sweet,
To contract O the for a my behove,
O me thought there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at Grave-making?

Hor. Custome hath made it in him a property of easinesse.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little imployment hath the daintier sense.

Clown sings.

But Age with his stealing steps
hath caught me in his clutch:
And hath shipped me intill the Land,
as if I never had bin such.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the Knave jowles it to th'ground, as if it were Cain's Jaw-bone, that did the first murther: It might be the Pate of a Politician which this Ass o're-Offices: one that could circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could say, Good Morrow sweet Lord: how dost thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord such a one, that prais'd my Lord such a ones horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why e'en so: and now my Lady Worme's; Chap-less, and knockt about the Mazzard with a Sexton's Spade, here's fine Revolution, if we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at Loggets with'em? mine ake to think on't.

Clown sings.

A Pick-axe and a Spade, a Spade,
for and a shrowding-sheet:
O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Guest is meet.

Ham. There's another: why might not that be the Scull of a Lawyer? where be his Quiddits now? his Quillets? his Cases? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doe's he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the Sconce with a dirty Shovel, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoveries: Is this the fine of his Fines, and the recovery of his Recoveries, to have his fine Pate full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchases, and double ones too, then the length and breadth of a pair of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Box; and must the Inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skinnes?

Hor. I my Lord, and of Calve-skinnes too.

Ham. They are Sheep and Calves that seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow: whose Grave's this Sir?

Clo. Mine Sir:

O a pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed: for thou lieſt in't.

Clo. You lie out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lye in't, to be in't, and say 'tis thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick, therefore thou lyest.

Clo. 'Tis a quick lye, Sir, 'twill away again from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

Clo. For no man Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a Woman Sir; but rest her Soul she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the Knave is? we must speak by the Card, or equivocation will follow us: by the Lord, Horatio, these three yeares I have taken note of it, the Age is grown so picked, and the toe of the Pesant comes so near the heel of our Courtier, he galls his Kibe. How long hast thou been a Grave-maker?

Clo. Of all the dayes i'th'year, I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet o'recame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that was mad and sent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he sent into England?

Clo. Why, because he was mad; he shall recover his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

Clown. 'Twill not be seen in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Clo. Very strangely they say.

Ham. How strangely?

Clo. Faith e'en with loosing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Clo. Why here in Denmark: I have been Sexstone here, Man and Boy thirty yeares.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'th'earth 'ere he rot?

Clo. Ifaith, if he be rotten before he dye (as we have many pocky Coarses now adayes, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight year, or nine year. A Tanner will last you nine yeares.

Ham. Why he, more than another?

Clo. Why Sir, his hide is tann'd with his Trade, that he will keep out water a great while. And your water is a sore Decayer of your whorson dead body, here's a Scull now: this Scull has lain in the Earth three and twenty yeares.

Ham. Whose was it?

Clo. A whoreson mad Fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad Rogue, a pour'd a Flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same Scull Sir, this same Scull Sir, was Yorick's Scull, the Kings Jester.

Ham. This?

Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas poor Yorick, I knew him Horatio, a fellow of infinite Jest, of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his back a thousand times: And how abhorred my imagination is, my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lippes, that I have kist I know not how oft. Where be your Jibes now? Your Gambals? Your Songs? Your flashes of Merriment that were wont to set the Table on a Roar? No one now to mock your own Jeering? Quite chop-fall'n? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come. Make her laugh at that: prythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my Lord?

Ham. Do'st thou think Alexander lookt o'this fashion i'th'earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? Puh.

Hor. E'en so my Lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return Horatio. Why may not imagination trace the Noble dust of Alexander, 'till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider: too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No faith, not a jot. But to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelyhood to lead it; as thus, Alexander dyed: Alexander was buried: Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereto he was converted) might they not stop a Beer-barrel?

Imperial Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.
Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a Wall, t'expell the Winter's flaw.
But soft, but soft, aside; here comes the King.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The Queen, the Courtiers. What is't that they follow,
And with such maimed rights? This doth betoken,
The Coarse they follow, did with desperate hand,
Foredoe it's own life; 'twas some Estate.
Couch we a while, and mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very Noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else?

Priest. Her Obsequies have been as far enlarg'd,
As we have warrantie, her death was doubtfull,
And but that great command, o'resways the order,
She should in ground unsanctied have lodg'd,
'Till the last Trumpet. For charitable prayer,
Shards, Flints, and Pebbles, should be thrown on her?
Yet here she is allowed her Virgin Rites,
Her Maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of Bell and Burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done:
We should prophane the service of the dead,
To sing sage Requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-departed Soules.

Laer. Lay her i'th'earth,
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May Violets spring. I tell thee (churlish Priest)
A Ministring Angel shall my Sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia?

Queen. Sweets, to thee sweet farewell,
I hop'd thou would'st have been my Hamlet's wife:
I thought thy Bride-bed to have deckt (sweet Maid)
And not thave strew'd thy Grave.

Laer. Oh terrible wooer,
Fall ten times treble on that curs'ed head,
Whose wicked deed, thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd thee of. Hold off the earth a while,
'Till I have caught her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the Grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
'Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o're-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blew Olympus.

Ham. What is he, whose griefs
Bears such an Emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandring Starres, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The Devil take thy soul.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well,
I prythee take thy fingers from my throat;
Sir, though I am not spleenative and rash,
Yet have I something in me dangerous,
Which let thy wiseness fear. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet.

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him upon this Theme.
Until my eye-lids will no longer wag.

Queen. Oh my Son, what Theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers
Could not (with all their quantity of love)
Make up my summe. What wilt thou do for her?

King. Oh he is mad, Laertes.

Qu. For love of God forbear him.

Ham. Come shew me what thou'lt do.
Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't tear thy self?
Woo't drink up Esile, eat a Crocodile?

I'le

I'le do't. Do'lt thou come hither to whine;
To out-face me with leaping in her Grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I.
And if thou prate of Mountains; let them throw
Millions of Acres on us, 'till our ground
Sindging his pate against the burning Zone,
Make Ossa like a Wart. Nay, and thou'lt mouthe,
I'le rant as well as thou.

King. This is mere madness:
And thus a while the fit will work on him:
Anon as patient as the female Dove,
When that her golden Cuplet are disclos'd;
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you sir:
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever; but it is no matter:
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The Cat will mew, and Dog will have his day. Exit.

King. I pray you good Horatio wait upon him,
Strengthen your patience in our last nights speech,
We'll put the matter to the present push.
Good Gertrude set some watch over your Son,
This Grave shall have a living Monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
'Till then in patience our proceeding be. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, Sir; now let me see the other,
You do remember all the circumstance.

Hor. Remember it my Lord.

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep; me thought I lay
Worse then the mutines in the Bilboes, rashly,
(And praise be rashness for it) let us know,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our dear plots do pause, and that should teach us,
There's a Divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my Cabin
My Sea-gown scarft about me in the dark,
Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire,
Finger'd their Packet, and in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again, making so bold,
(My teares forgetting manners) to unseal
Their grand Commission, where I found, Horatio,
Oh royal knavery; An exact command,
Larded with many several sorts of reason:
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,
With hoo, such Buggs and Goblins in my life,
That on the supervize no leasure bated,
No not to stay the grinding of the Axe,
My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the Commission, read it at more leisure:
But wilt thou hear how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with Villains,
E're I could make a Prologue to my brains,
They had begun the Play. I sate me down,
Devis'd a new Commission, wrote it fair,
I once did hold it as our Statists doe,
A baseness to write fair; and laboured much
How to forget that learning: but Sir now,
It did me yeoman's service: wilt thou know
The effects of what I wrote?

Hor. I, good my Lord.

Ham. An earnest Conjuration from the King,
As England was his faithfull Tributary,
As love between them, as the Palm should flourish,
As Peace should still her wheaten Garland wear,
And stand a Comma 'tween their amities,
And many such like Assis of great charge,
That on the view and know of these Contents,
Without debatement further, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving time allowed.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinate;
I had my Father's Signet in my Purse,
Which was the modell of that Danish Seal:
Folded the Writ up in forme of the other,
Subscrib'd it, gav'th'Impression, plac'd it safely,
The changling never known: Now, the next day
Was our Sea-fight, and what to this was sement,
Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstar and Rosincroß, go to't.

Ham. Why man, they did make love to this imployment
They are not near my conscience; their debate
Doth by their own insinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous when baser nature comes
Between the pass, and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a King is this?

Ham. Does it not, think'st thee, stand me now upon,
He that hath kill'd my King, and whor'd my Mother,
Popt in between th'election and my hopes,
Thrown out his Angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage; is't not perfect conscience,
To quit him with his arme? And is't not to be damn'd
To let this Canker of our nature come
In further evil.

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,
What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short.
The interim's mine, and a man's life's no more
Than to say one: but I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot my self;
For by the image of my cause I see
The pourtraiture of his; I'le count his favours:
But sure the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a Towring passion.

Hor. Peace, who comes here?

Enter Osrick. (mark.

Osr. Your Lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir; dost know this waterfly?

Hor. No my good Lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a Vice to know him: he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beast be Lord of Beasts, and his Crib shall stand at the King's Messe; 'tis a Chough; but as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet Lord, if your friendship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his Majesty.

Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of spirit; put your Bonnet to his right use, 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your Lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold, the wind is Northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my Lord, indeed.

Ham. Me thinks it is very soultry, and hot for my Complexion.

Osrick.

Osr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very soultry, as 'twere I cannot tell how: but my Lord, his Majesty bad me signifie to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.

Osr. Nay, in good faith, for mine ease in good faith: Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and Dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.

Osr. The King Sir has wag'd with him six Barbary horses, against the which he impon'd, as I take it, six French Rapiers and Poinards, with their assignes, as Girdle, Hangers, or so: three of the carriages in faith are very dear to fancie, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?

Osr. The Carriages Sir, are the Hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our sides; I would it might be Hangers 'till then; but on, six Barbary Horses, against six French Swords: their Assignes and three liberal conceited carriages, that's the French, but against the Danish; why is this impon'd as you call it?

Osr. The King Sir, hath laid that in a dozen passes between you and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; He hath one twelve for mine, and that would come to immediate tryal, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Orf. I mean my Lord the opposition of your person in tryal.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the Hall; if it please his Majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the Foyles be brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpose; I will win for him if I can: if not, I'le gain nothing but my shame, and the odde hits.

Osr. Shall I redeliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your Lordship. Exit.

Ham. Yours, yours; he does well to commend it himself, there are no tongues else for's tongue.

Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Comply with his Dug before he suck't it: thus had he and nine more of the same Beavy that I know the drossie Age doats on; only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and doe but blow them to their Tryals, the Bubbles are out.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I do not think so, since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall winne at the oddes; but thou wouldest not think how all here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gaingiving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey. I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defie Augury; there's a special Providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it be not to come, it will be now: if it be not now; yet it will come; the readiness is all, since no man has ought of what he leaves. What is't to leave betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with Foyles, and Gantlets, a Table and Flagons of Wine on it.

Kin. Come Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

Ham. Give me your pardon Sir, I've done you wrong,
But pardon't as you are a Gentleman.
This presence knows,
And you must needs have heard how I am punish'd
With sore distraction? What have I done
That might your natures honour, and exception
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness:
Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himself be tane away:
And when he's not himself, do's wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it:
Who does it then? His madness? If't be so,
Hamlet is of the Faction that is wrong'd,
His Madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.
Sir, in this Audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil,
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot mine Arrow o're the house,
And hurt my Mother.

Laer. I am satisfied in Nature,
Whose Motive in this case should stir me most
To my Revenge. But in my terms of honour
I stand aloof, and will no reconcilement,
'Till by some elder Masters of known honour,
I have a voice, and president of peace
To keep my name ungorg'd. But 'till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I do embrace it freely,
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the Foyles: Come on.

Laer. Come on for me.

Ham. I'le be your Foyle Laertes, in mine ignorance,
Your skill shall like a Star i'th'brightest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me Sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give the Foyles young Osrick,
Cousin Hamlet, you know the wager.

Ham. Very well my Lord,
Your Grace hath laid the oddes a'th'weaker side.

King. I do not fear it,
I have seen you both:
But since he is better'd, we have therefore oddes.

Laer. This is too heavy,
Let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well,
These Foyles have all a length. Prepare to Play.

Osr. I my good Lord.

King. Set me the Stopes of Wine upon that Table:
If Hamlet give the first, or second hit,
Or quit in answer of a third exchange,
Let all the Battlements their Ordnance fire,
The King shall drink to Hamlet's better breath,
And in the Cup an Union shall he throw
Richer than that, which four successive Kings
In Denmark's Crown have worn.

Give

Give me the Cups,
And let the Kettle to the Trumpets speak,
The trumpets to the Canoneer without,
The Cannons to the Heavens, the Heaven to Earth,
Now the King drinks to Hamlet. Come, begin,
And you the Judges bear a wary eye.
Ham. Come on sir.
Laer. Come on sir. They play.
Ham. One.
Laer. No.
Ham. Judgement.
Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.
Laer. Well: again.
King. Stay, give me drink.
Hamlet, this Pearl is thine,
Here's to thy health. Give him the Cup.
Trumpet sound, shot goes off.
Ham. I'le play this bout first, set by a while.
Come: another hit; what say you?
Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.
King. Our Son shall win:
Qu. He's fat, and scant of breath.
Here's a Napkin, rub thy brows,
The Queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.
Ham. Good Madam.
King. Gertrude, do not drink.
Qu. I will my Lord;
I pray you pardon me.
King. It is the poison'd Cup, it is too late.
Ham. I dare not drink yet Madam,
By and by.
Qu. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Laer. My Lord, I'le hit him now.
King. I do not think't.
Laer. And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.
Ham. Come, for the third.
Laertes, you but dally,
I pray you pass with your best violence,
I am afeard you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? Come on. Play.
Osr. Nothing neither way.
Laer. Have at you now.
In scuffling they change Rapiers.
King. Part them, they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay, come again.
Osr. Look to the Queen there hoa.
Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is't my Lord?
Osr. How is't Laertes?
Laer. Why as a Woodcock
To my Sprindge, Osrick,
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the Queen?
King. She swounds to see them bleed.
Qu. No, no, the drink, the drink,
Oh my dear Hamlet, the drink, the drink,
I am poison'd.
Ham. Oh Villany! How? Let the door be lock'd:
Treachery, seek it out.
Laer. It is here Hamlet.
Hamlet, thou art slain,
No medicine in the world can do thee good.
In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous Instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd it self on me. Loe, here I lye,
Never to rise again: thy Mother's poison'd:
I can no more, the King, the King's to blame.
Ham. The point envenom'd too,
Then venom to thy work.
Hurts the King.
All. Treason, treason.
King. O yet defend me Friends, I am but hurt.
Ham. Here thou incestuous, murd'rous
Damned Dane,
Drink off this Potion: Is thy Union here?
Follow my Mother. King dyes.
Laer. He is justly serv'd.
It is a poison temp'red by himself:
Exchange forgiveness wih me, Noble Hamlet;
Mine and my Father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me. Dyes.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it, I follow thee.
I am dead Horatio, wretched Queen adieu,
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but Mutes or audience at this act:
Had I but time (as this fell Serjeant Death
Is strict in this Arrest) oh I could tell you,
But let it be: Horatio, I am dead,
Thou liv'st, report me and my causes right
To be unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it.
I am more an Antick Roman then a Dane:
Here's yet some Liquor left.
Ham. As th'art a man, give me the Cup,
Let go, by heaven I'le hav't.
Oh good Horatio, what a wounded name,
(Things standing thus unknown) shall live behind me.
If thou did'st ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicitie a while,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my Story.
March a far off, and shout within.
What warlike noise is this?

Enter Osrick.

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To th' Ambassadors of England gives this warlike volley.
Ham. O I dye Horatio:
The potent poison quite o're-crows my spirit,
I cannot live to hear the Newes from England.
But I do prophesie th'election lights
On Fortinbras, he has my dying voice,
So tell him with the occurents more and less,
Which have solicited. The rest is silence, O, o, o. Dies.
Hora. Now cracks a Noble heart:
Goodnight sweet Prince,
And flights of Angels sing thee to thy rest,
Why do's the Drumme come hither?

Enter Fortinbras & English Ambassador, with Drumme, Colours, and Attendants.

Fort. Where is the sight?
Hor. What is it you would see;
If ought of woe or wonder, cease your search.
For. His quarry cryes on Havock. Oh proud death,
What Feast is toward in thine eternall Cell,
That thou so many Princes at a shoot,
So bloudily hast strook.
Amb. The sight is dismal,
And our affairs from England come too late,
The eares are senseless that should give us hearing,
To tell him his command'ment is fulfill'd,

That

That Rosincroſs and Guildenſtar are dead:
Where ſhould we have our thanks?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th'ability of life to thank you:
He never gave command'ment for their death.
But ſince ſo jump upon this bloudy queſtion,
You from the Polack warres, and you from England
Are here arrived. Give order that theſe bodies
High on a Stage be placed to the view,
And let me ſpeak to th'yet unknowing world,
How theſe things came about. So ſhall you hear
Of carnal, bloudy, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgements, caſual ſlaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cauſe,
And in this upſhot, purpoſes miſtook,
Fal'n on the Inventor's heads. All this can I
Truly deliver.
For. Let us haſte to hear it,
And call the Nobleſt to the Audience.
For me, with ſorrow, I embrace my Fortune,
I have ſome Rites of memory in this Kingdome,
Which are to claim, my vantage doth
Invite me.
Hor. Of that I ſhall always cauſe to ſpeak
And from his mouth
Whoſe voice will draw on more:
But let this ſame be preſently perform'd,
Even whiles men's minds are wild,
Leſt more miſchance
On plots, and errours happen.
For. Let four Captaines
Bear Hamlet like a Souldier off the Stage,
For he was likely, had he been put on
To have prov'd moſt royally:
And for his paſſage,
The Souldiers Muſick, and the rites of War
Speak loudly for him.
Take up the body; Such a ſight as this,
Becomes the Field, but here ſhews much amiſs.
Goe, bid the Souldiers ſhoot.

Exeunt Marching: after which, a Peale of Ordnance are ſhot off.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of King LEAR.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Kent, Glouſter, and Edmond.

Kent.

I Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, then Cornwall.

Glou. It did alwayes ſeem to us: But now in the diviſion of the Kingdome, it appears not which of the Dukes he values moſt, for qualities are ſo weigh'd, that curioſity in neither, can make choiſe of eithers moity.

Kent. Is not this your Son, my Lord?

Glou. His breeding, Sir, hath been at my charge. I have ſo often bluſh'd to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd to't.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glou. Sir, this young Fellows Mother could; whereupon ſhe grew round womb'd, and had indeed (Sir) a Son for her Cradle, e're ſhe had a Husband for her Bed. Do you ſmell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wiſh the fault undone, the iſſue of it being ſo proper.

Glou. But I have a Son, Sir, by order of Law, ſome year elder then this; who, yet is no dearer in my account, though this Knave came ſomewhat ſawcily to the world before he was ſent for: yet was his Mother fair, there was good ſport at his making, and the whorſon muſt be acknowledged. Do you know this Nobleman, Edmond?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Glou. My Lord of Kent:
Remember him hereafter, as my honourable Friend.

Edm. My ſervices to your Lordſhip.

Kent. I muſt love you, and ſue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I ſhall ſtudy deſerving.

Glou. He hath been out nine yeares, and away he ſhall again. The King is coming.

Sennet. Enter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Cordelia, and attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France & Burgundy, Gloſter

Glou. I ſhall my Lord. Exit.

Lear. Mean time we ſhall expreſs our darker purpoſe.
Give me the Map here. Know, that we have divided
In three, our Kingdome: and 'tis our faſt intent,
To ſhake all cares and buſineſs from our Age,
Conferring them on younger ſtrengths, while we
Unburthen'd crawl toward death. Our ſon of Cornwall,
And you our no leſs loving ſon of Albany,
We have this hour a conſtant will to publiſh
Our Daughter's ſeveral Dowers, that future ſtrife
May be prevented now. The Prince, France & Burgundy,
Great Rivals in our younger Daughter's Love,
Long in our Court, have made their amorous ſojourn,
And here are to be anſwer'd. Tell my Daughters
(Since now we will diveſt us both of Rule,
Intereſt of Terority, Cares of State)
Which of you ſhall we ſay doth love us moſt,
That we, our largeſt bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge. Gonerill,
Our eldeſt born, ſpeak firſt.

Gon. Sir, I love you more then word can weild the matter,
Dearer then eye-ſight, ſpace, and liberty,
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare,
No leſs then life, with grace, health, beauty, honour:
As much as Child e're lov'd, or Father found.
A love that makes breath poor, and ſpeech unable,
Beyond all manner of ſo much I love you.

Cor. What ſhall Cordelia ſpeak? Love, and be ſilent.

Lear. Of all theſe bounds, even from this Line, to this,
With ſhadowy Forreſts, and with Champions rich'd
With plenteous Rivers, and wide-skirted Meads
We make the Lady. To thine and Albanie's iſſues
Be this perpetual. What ſayes our ſecond Daughter,
Our deareſt Regan, wife of Cornwall?

Reg. I am made of that ſelf-metal as my ſiſter,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart,
I find ſhe names my very deed of love:
Only ſhe comes too ſhort, that I profeſs
My ſelf an enemy to all other joyes,
Which the moſt precious ſquare of ſenſe profeſſes,
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear Highneſs love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia,
And yet not ſo, ſince I am ſure my love's
More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine hereditary ever:
Remain this ample third of our fair Kingdome,
No leſs in ſpace, validity, and pleaſure
Than that conferr'd on Gonerill. Now our Joy,
Although our laſt and leaſt; to whoſe young love,
The Vines of France, and Milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be intereſt. What can you ſay, to draw
A third, more opulent then your Siſters? ſpeak.

Cor. Nothing my Lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor

Cor. Nothing.
Lear. Nothing will come of nothing, ſpeak again.
Corn. Unhappy that I am, I cannot have
My heart into my mouth: I love your Majeſty
According to my bond, no more nor leſs.
Lear. How, how Cordelia? Mend your ſpeech a little,
Leſt you may marre your fortunes.
Cor. Good my Lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me.
I return thoſe duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, Love you, and moſt honour you.
Why have my Siſters husbands, if they ſay
They love you all? happily when I ſhall wed.
That Lord, whoſe hand muſt take my plight, ſhall carry
Half my Love with him, half my Care, and Duty,
Sure I ſhall never marry like my Siſters.
Lear. But goes thy heart with this?
Cor. I my good Lord.
Lear. So young, and ſo untender?
Cor. So young my Lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be ſo, the truth then be thy dowre:
For by the ſacred radiance of the Sun,
The myſteries of Hecate, and the night:
By all the operations of the Orbes,
From whom we do exiſt, and ceaſe to be,
Here I diſclaim all my Paternal care,
Propinquity and property of bloud,
And as a ſtranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his Generation Meſſes
To gorge his appetite, ſhall to my boſome
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my ſometime Daughter.
Kent. Good my Liege.
Lear. Peace Kent.
Come not between the Dragon and his wrath,
I lov'd her moſt, and thought to ſet my reſt
On her kind nurſery. Hence and avoid my ſight;
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her; call France, who ſtirs?
Call Burgundy, Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two Daughters Dowres, digeſt the third,
Let pride, which ſhe calls plainneſs, marry her:
I do inveſt you jointly with my power,
Preheminence, and all the large effects
That troop with Majeſty. Our ſelf by Monthly courſe
With reſervation of an hundred Knights,
By you to be ſuſtain'd, ſhall our abode
Make with you by due turn, only we ſhall retain
The name, and all th'addition to a King: the Sway,
Revenue, Execution of the reſt,
Beloved Sonnes be yours, which to confirm,
This Coronet part between you.
Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my King,
Love'd as my Father, as my Maſter follow'd,
As my Patron thought on in my prayers.
Lear. The Bow is bent and drawn, make from the ſhaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart, be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad, what wouldeſt thou do old man?
Think'ſt thou that duty ſhall have dread to ſpeak
When power to flattery bowes?
To plainneſs honour's bound,
When Majeſty fall to folly, reſerve thy ſtate,
And thy beſt conſideration check
This hideous raſhneſs, anſwer my life, my judgement:
Thy youngeſt Daughter do's not love thee leaſt,
Nor are thoſe empty hearted, whoſe low ſounds
Reverbe no hollowneſs.
Lear. Kent, on my life no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage againſt thine enemies, ne're fear to loſe it,
Thy ſafety being motive.
Lear. Out of my ſight.
Kent. See better Lear, and let me ſtill remain
The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now by Apollo.
Kent. Now by Apollo, King
Thou ſwear'ſt thy gods in vain.
Lear. O Vaſſal! Miſcreant.
Alb. Corn. Dear Sir forbear.
Kent. Kill thy Phyſician, and thy fee beſtow
Upon the foul diſeaſe, revoke the gift,
Or whil'ſt I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'le tell thee thou do'ſt evil.
Lear. Hear me recreant, on thine allegeance hear me;
That thou haſt ſought to make us break our vowes,
Which we durſt never yet; and with ſtrain'd pride,
To come betwixt our ſentence, and our power.
Which, nor our nature, nor our place can bear;
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five dayes we do allot thee for proviſion,
To ſhield thee from diſaſters of the world,
And on the ſixt to turn thy hated back
Upon our Kingdome; if the tenth day following,
Thy baniſht trunk be found in our Dominions,
The moment is thy death, away. By Jupiter
This ſhall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well King, ſith thus thou wilt appear,
Freedome lives hence, and baniſhment is here;
The gods to their dear ſhelter take thee Maid,
That juſtly think'ſt, and haſt moſt rightly ſaid:
And your large ſpeeches may your deeds approve,
That good effects may ſpring from words of love:
Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all adieu,
He'll ſhape his old courſe in a Countrey new. Exit.

Enter Gloſter with France, and Burgundy Attendants.

Cor. Here's France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord.
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We firſt addreſs toward you, who with this King
Hath rivall'd for our Daughter; what in the leaſt
Will you require in preſent Dower with her,
Or ceaſe your queſt of Love?
Bur. Moſt Royal Majeſty,
I crave no more then what your Higneſs offer'd
Nor will you tender leſs?
Lear. Right Noble Burgundy,
When ſhe was dear to us, we held her ſo,
But now her price is fall'n: Sir, there ſhe ſtands,
If ought within that little ſeeming ſubſtance,
Or all of it with our diſpleaſure piec'd,
And nothing more may fitly like your Grace;
Shee's there, and ſhe is yours.
Bur. I know no anſwer.
Lear. Will you with thoſe infirmities ſhe owes,
Unfriended, new adopted to our hate,
Dowr'd with our curſe, and ſtranger'd with our oath,
Take leave, or leave her.

Bur. Par-

Bur. Pardon me Royal Sir,
Election makes not up in ſuch conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, Sir, for by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth. For you great King,
I would not from your love make ſuch a ſtray,
To match you where I hate, therefore beſeech you
T'avert your liking a more worthier way,
Then on a wretch whom Nature is aſham'd
Almoſt t'acknowledge hers.
Fra. This is moſt ſtrange,
That ſhe who even but now, was your beſt object,
The argument of your praiſe, balm of your age,
The beſt, the deareſt, ſhould in this trice of time
Commit a thing ſo monſtrous, to diſmantle
So many folds of favour: ſure her offence
Muſt be of ſuch unnatural degree,
That monſters it: Or your fore-voucht affection
Fall into Taint; which to believe of her
Muſt be a faith, that reaſon without miracle
Should never plant in in me.
Cor. I yet beſeech your Majeſty,
If for I want that glib and oylie Art,
To ſpeak and purpoſe not, ſince what I will intend,
I'le do't before I ſpeak, that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murther, or foulneſs,
No unchaſte action, or diſhonoured ſtep
That hath depriv'd me of your Grace and favour,
But even for want of that, for which I am richer,
A ſtill ſoliciting eye, and ſuch a tongue,
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath loſt me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou had'ſt
Not been born, then not t'have pleas'd me better.
Fra. Is it but this? A tardineſs in nature,
Which often leaves the hiſtory unſpoke
That it intends to do; my Lord of Burgundy,
What ſay you to the Lady? Love's not love
When it is mingled with regards, that ſtands
Aloof from th'intire point, will you have her?
She is her ſelf a Dowry.
Bur. Royal King,
Give but that portion which your ſelf propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Dutcheis of Burgundy.
Lear. Nothing, I have ſworn, I am firm.
Bur. I am ſorry then you have ſo loſt a father.
That you muſt looſe a Husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy,
Since that reſpect and fortunes are his love,
I ſhall not be his wife.
Fra. Faireſt Cordelia, that art moſt rich being poor,
Moſt choice forſaken, and moſt lov'd deſpis'd,
Thee and thy Virtues here I ſeize upon,
Be it lawfull I take up what's caſt away,
Gods, gods! 'Tis ſtrange, that from their cold'ſt neglect
My love ſhould kindle to enflam'd reſpect.
Thy dowreleſs Daughter, King, thrown to my chance,
Is Queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the Dukes of watriſh Burgundy,
Can buy this unpriz'd precious Maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind,
Thou looſeſt here a better where to find.
Lear. Thou haſt her France, let her be thine, for we
Have no ſuch Daughter, nor ſhall ever ſee
That face of her's again, therefore be gone,
Without our Grace, our Love, our Benizon:
Come Noble Burgundy. Flouriſh. Exeunt.
Fra. Bid farewell to your Siſters.
Cor. The Jewels of our father, with waſh'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you, I know you what you are,
And like a Siſter am moſt loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Love well our Father:
To your profeſſed boſomes I commit him,
But yet alas, ſtood I within his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farewell to you both.
Reg. Preſcribe not us our duty.
Gon. Let your ſtudy
Be to content your Lord, who hath receiv'd you,
At fortunes almes, you have obedience ſcanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.
Cor. Time ſhall unfold what plighted cunning hides,
Who covers faults, at laſt with ſhame derides.
Well may you proſper.
Fra. Come my fair Cordelia. Exeunt France & Cor.
Gon. Siſter, it is not little I have to ſay,
Of what moſt nearly appertains to us both,
I think our father will hence to night. (with us.
Reg. That's moſt certain, and with you: next moneth
Gon. You ſee how full of changes his age is, the obſervation we have made of it hath been little: he alwayes lov'd our Siſter moſt, and with what poor judgement he hath now caſt her off, appears too too groſſely.
Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age, yet he hath ever but ſlenderly known himſelf.
Gon. The beſt and ſoundeſt of his time hath been but raſh, then muſt we look from his age, to receive not alone the imperfections of long engraffed condition, but therewithall the unruly waywardneſs, that infirm and cholerick years bring with them.
Reg. Such unconſtant ſtarts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's baniſhment.
Gon. There is further complement of leave-taking, between France and him, pray you let us ſit together, if our father carry authority with ſuch diſpoſition as he beares this laſt ſurrender of his will but offend us.
Reg. We ſhall further think of it.
Gon. We muſt do ſomething, and i'th'heat. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. Thou Nature art my Goddeſs, to thy Law
My ſervices are bound, wherefore ſhould I
Stand in the plague of cuſtome, and permit
The curioſity of Nations, to deprive me?
For that I am ſome twelve, or fourteen Moonſhines
Lag of a brother? Why Baſtard? Wherefore baſe?
When my Dimenſions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my ſhape as true
As honeſt Madam's iſſue? Why brand they us
With Baſe? With baſeneſs Baſtardy? Baſe, Baſe?
Who in the luſty ſtealth of Nature, take
More compoſition, and fierce quality,
Then doth within a dull ſtale tyred bed
Go the creating a whole tribe of Fops
Got 'tween a ſleep, and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I muſt have your land,
Our Father's love, is to the Baſtard Edmund,
As to th'legitimate: fine word: Legitimate.

Well, my Legitimate, if this Letter ſpeed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the baſe
Shall to th' Legitimate: I grow, I proſper:
Now gods, ſtand up for Baſtards,

Enter Glouceſter.

Glo. Kent baniſh'd thus? and France in choler parted?
And the King gone to night? Preſcrib'd his power,
Confin'd to exhibition? All this gone
Upon the gad? Edmund, how now? what newes?

Baſt. So pleaſe your Lordſhip, none.

Glo. Why ſo earneſtly ſeek you to put up that Letter?

Baſt. I know no news, my Lord.

Glo. What Paper were you reading?

Baſt. Nothing my Lord.

Glo. No? what needed then that terrible diſpatch of it into your Pocket? the quality of nothing, hath not ſuch need to hide it ſelf. Let's ſee: come, if it be nothing, I ſhall not need Spectacles.

Baſt. I beſeech you Sir, pardon me; it is a Letter from my Brother, that I have not all o're-read; and for ſo much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your o're-looking.

Glo. Give me the Letter, Sir.

Baſt. I ſhall offend, either to detain, or give it:
The Contents, as in part I underſtand them,
Are to blame.

Glo. Let's ſee, let's ſee.

Baſt. I hope for my brother's juſtification, he wrote this but as an eſſay, or taſte of my Virtue.

Glou. reads. This policy, and reverence of Age, makes the world bitter to beſt of our times: keeps our Fortunes from us, 'till our oldneſs cannot reliſh them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage, in the oppreſſion of aged tyranny, who ſwayes not as it hath power, but as it is ſuffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may ſpeak more. If our Father would ſleep till I wak'd him, you ſhould enjoy half his Revenue for ever, & live the beloved of your brother. Edgar. Hum? Conſpiracy? Sleep 'till I wake him, you ſhould enjoy half his Revenue: my Son Edgar, had he a hand to write this? A heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? who brought it?

Baſt. It was not brought me, my Lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the Caſement of my Cloſſet.

Glo. You know the character to be your Brother's?

Baſt. If the matter were good my Lord, I durſt ſwear it were his: but in reſpect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Baſt. It is his hand, my Lord: I hope his heart is not in the Contents.

Glo. Has he never before ſounded you in this buſineſs?

Baſt. Never my Lord. But I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit, that Sonnes at perfect age, and Fathers declin'd, the Father ſhould be as Ward to the Son, and the Son manage his Revenue.

Glo. O Villain, villain: his very opinion in the Letter. Abhorred Villain, unnatural, deteſted, bruitiſh Villain; worſe then bruitiſh: Go ſirrah, ſeek him: I'le apprehend him. Abhominable Villain, where is he?
